A. We would have called attention to any difference in interest and in interest accruals, because we were accruing—Missouri Pacific was accruing interest on its books and we were setting it up on our books. This morning I checked to see whether the interest agreed on both books, and it does.

Q. All you checked was the mechanical end of the game?

A. I had no reason to call attention to Mr. Johnson's decision on how to allocate this money. If he said to pay $500,000. on principal and apply $500,000. on interest, that is what I did.

Q. If he said to apply a certain amount on interest that is what you did?

A. Yes, only that the interest always agreed.

Q. You applied it on interest, you didn't apply it on principal; isn't that true? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. McConaughy raised some question because I assumed that those figures were correct. You have checked Comstock Exhibit 27, haven't you, or had it checked as to accuracy of the figures (handing exhibit to the witness)?

A. If there are no exceptions in that exhibit I filed then it is correct.

Q. I don't see any exceptions, Mr. Eckert. If I am in error in that I will be glad to have my attention called to it.

A. We checked this exhibit—I am not so sure that we did. Mr. Peet is there, he can say whether we checked it or not.

(Here ensued private colloquy between Mr. McConaughy and Mr. Biggs.)

Q. Mr. Eckert, this exhibit contains extracts of certain receipts and disbursements recorded in the New York and/or Cleveland Assistant Treasurer cash book A, during the period from April 1, 1925 to March 31, 1933, known as Comstock Exhibit 27.

In February, 1930—reading from said exhibit—the New York Treasurer of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company had on hand at the beginning of the month $13,565.35. During the month there was an advance of $260,000. There were miscellaneous receipts of $311.14. Total receipts $260,311.43, or a total available during the month of $273,876.49.

During the month the treasurer issued check No. 1481 for $259,575.75 drawn on Irving Trust Company, in payment of a dividend of 1-¾ per cent. on the N.O.T. & M. common stock.

Does not this entry show that the Missouri Pacific advanced to the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico $260,000. and that there was a dividend paid of $259,575.75?

Mr. McConaughy: You had better let Mr. Eckert look at the exhibit, Mr. Biggs. That was when?

Mr. Biggs: February, 1930.

A. Yes, that shows a dividend of 1-¾ per cent., $259,575.75—

Q. And an advance—

Mr. McConaughy: Let him answer, please.

The Witness: At least, it is shown here that way. The Irving Trust Company dividend account as a disbursement out of the New York Office.

Mr. Biggs: Q. It also shows an advance, doesn't it?

A. There was an advance of $260,000. That is at the beginning of the month, $13,565.35; miscellaneous receipts, $311.14, total receipts $260,311.43.

Q. As the result of the transactions set out, did not the Missouri Pacific receive a direct benefit of ninety-three and a fraction per cent. of the dividend paid?

A. I don't recall whether the amount of stock that the Missouri Pacific owned, amount of N.O.T. & M. stock that Missouri Pacific owned in February, 1930, was ninety-two or ninety-three per cent.; approximately that. So, they received a benefit of that ninety-three per cent. of the dividends.

Q. And they received a direct interest paying obligation of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company in the amount of $260,000.; is that true? A. Yes.

Q. What direct benefit did Tom Smith, or any other bondholder of the Missouri Pacific Serial 5¼% bonds, which were secured by ten shares of common stock of the N.O.T. & M. Railway Company, for each one thousand dollar bond, receive from this transaction?

A. I don't see that they received any benefit from it.

Mr. Biggs: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConaughy:

Q. Mr. Eckert, I show you Group Exhibit 32, which Mr. Wyer offered in evidence: Do you find that $260,000. advance that Mr. Biggs was just asking you about, on that Group Exhibit 32? A. Yes; February 28, 1930.

Q. At the time that advance was made what were the aggregate advances from Missouri Pacific to New Orleans, Texas & Mexico as compared with the aggregate additions and betterments since the last financing, as shown on that exhibit?

Mr. Biggs: I object to that question because, according to this exhibit, it shows the increase—

The Court: According to what exhibit?

Mr. Biggs: Exhibit 32. According to that exhibit it shows the increase in investment in the Gulf Coast Lines. It does not show the increase in investments in the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company.

Mr. McConaughy: He asked this witness if the stockholder was benefited in any way by this transaction and I am trying to point out whether or not he was benefited.

The Court: He may answer.

Mr. Biggs: Exception.

Mr. McConaughy: Q. State the two figures.

A. The accumulated amount of advances by the Missouri Pacific to the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico, at February 28, 1930, was $3,370,000. Cumulative increase in investment of Gulf Coast Lines, same date, $6,160,263.

Mr. McConaughy: That is all.

Mr. Biggs: That is all.

Mr. McConaughy: Have you closed your case?

Mr. Biggs: As far as evidence is concerned, yes.

Mr. McConaughy: Before we get away from this evidence portion of the case, in examining the transcript there may be some question about the admission of Group Exhibits 1 to 47. Just to make it absolutely clear, we offer Group Exhibits 1 to 47, inclusive, in evidence.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Biggs: And also, for the same reasons, I wish to offer Comstock Exhibits 1 to 136, inclusive, in evidence, except Exhibits 1 and 43.

(Group Exhibits 1 to 47, inclusive, last offered in evidence.)

(Comstock Exhibits 1 to 136, except Exhibits 1 and 43.)

The Court: Is there anything else?

Mr. Bigge: I have a motion to make.

Mr. Kitchel: Your Honor, if the Objector has closed his case, in behalf of the Group of Institutional Holders of the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage bonds, I now move that the Court overrule and dismiss Comstock Objection 19 and the related objections on the merits, in that he has failed to make a case, or even a prima facie case, and any such testimony as he has produced has been fully answered and rebutted.

I also, at this time, renew the motion made at the close of Objector's case in January, to-wit, that the said objections above mentioned be dismissed and overruled on the ground of laches.

I don't care to argue those motions now. I propose to do that in a brief.

The Court: You will file a written motion?

Mr. Kitchel: If Your Honor prefers it that way.

Mr. McCaffery: The Reconstruction Finance Corporation desires to join in the motion just made by Mr. Kitchel.

Mr. Bigge: Now, if Your Honor please, in regard to the question of the brief in this case: I am faced with this situation, that there are in my office Mr. Dunbar and Mr. Coburn and Mr. Stone just out of law school. Mr. Dunbar's health is not any too good; it is rather poor health. On account of other matters pending in the office I am the only one who has any time to devote to this Missouri Pacific situation.

There has been a tentative setting of our objection in regard to Allegheny for the 23d of April. It will be impossible for me to prepare that case and at the same time prepare a brief on this case just submitted. As I see it from a practical situation—assuming that Your Honor doesn't force me to try to do both things at the same time, there are three solutions, and Your Honor can determine which is the best one, so to speak. They are (a) a reasonably long continuation of the Alleghany case; (b) granting to me—assuming I have to file the first brief—say, seventy-five days, or (c) directing that counsel for the Investors Group, Institutional Group, file the first brief. As this matter involves the question of validity of the claim it is certainly logical that the proponent of the claim file the first brief, and if that is done and Mr. Kitchel is given forty-five days, for instance, to file the first brief, I could then be in a position within a reasonable time to file a reply brief.

Those are the three solutions, as I see it, assuming, of course, that Your Honor is not going to force me to do both of these things at the same time.

Mr. Kitchel: Your Honor, taking up the third suggested solution, that the Group file its brief first, this is a hearing on objections to the Plan. The Objector should file his brief first. As a matter of fact, in the Order of October 31, that was the procedure prescribed. The Objector was to file brief on a certain date and we had until January 2, to answer. The situation now is the same as it was then, the Objector should sustain his objections before we are obliged to reply.

As to the second solution, that he have seventy-five days: Your Honor will recall that in the January hearings we were delayed; the proceeding was delayed from time to time merely because the case had not been properly prepared, and as the witnesses were examined more papers were requested from Houston, and delays were occasioned. I am not accusing Mr. Biggs in that connection. In this hearing this week there have been delays which have not been Mr. Biggs' fault—I won't say anything about that, but in view of the protracted length of time that this proceeding has taken I should very strongly object to a further delay of seventy-five days for the filing of a brief. I think three weeks should be the limit.

Now, if the Alleghany hearing could be postponed so that Mr. Biggs would have his three weeks in which to prepare their brief, I think that would be a very good solution.

The Court: Is that agreeable to you?

Mr. McDonald: There are at least two additional solutions that have not been mentioned here. This matter was discussed with me in the recess, by both counsel, and has been discussed with Mr. Leisure and Mr. Lumbard. Our attitude is that we want to be reasonably reasonable, but we are not prepared, and we have so told counsel, to have our client shoved around if we can help it.

I think there are three solutions that have not been mentioned. One is that Mr. Brandwen's position in this case is not very clear. Mr. Biggs didn't mention Mr. Brandwen in stating what the problems were with reference to the next hearing. There is no withdrawal of Mr. Brandwen, that I know of, on the record, and we had a flat agreement with Mr. Brandwen that he would be ready to proceed on April 23d.

A second solution that has been mentioned is that if counsel is, as he said, and I am sure he is, extremely busy, there must be other counsel in St. Louis who could be retained as co-counsel with him, and who could assist in disposing of a very important matter as quickly as possible.

The third solution, that has not been mentioned, is to sustain the motion Mr. Leisure made to dismiss the objections directed to Alleghany, and in that connection, on the whole record before the Court at this time, the evidence offered in support of Comstock Objection 19 and the evidence contrary thereto, we wish to renew Mr. Leisure's motion on behalf of Alleghany that the matter be dismissed.

Mr. Biggs: If the Court please, I guess it is all right to state this on the record, but it doesn't have any real bearing on this case. I have a matter for Mr. Graham, who is in the Navy. I might also state that we have four of our partners, who are in the Navy and Army. We are trying to handle their business as well as our own work. I am handling one matter for Mr. Graham, which involves Navy and Marine negotiations in Washington. It had to be postponed on account of this trial, and I expect to go to Washington as soon as I have any free time. If I could have reasonable latitude, assuming Your Honor wants me to write the first brief—what I had in mind was going to Washington and taking care of that case, then going on to New York and going over the matter of the stipulation with counsel for Allegheny. Now, what will come out of that conference in regard to the stipulation Your Honor well knows is in the lap of the gods, so to speak, but I think there is reasonable probability of working out a stipulation which will result in very little testimony. I may be optimistic in regard to that, but I want to give Your Honor the full picture as much as I humanly can.

Mr. McDonald: We recognize the possibility of that. As a matter of fact, we have been working on the preparation of our part of the case for several weeks, and in connection with that there have been a good many exhibits that we would have prepared but which we have deferred preparing until we could discuss the stipulation. I think that conference might be very productive of saving a great deal of time of the Court.

Mr. Kitchel: Your Honor, in connection with this time for filing a brief, we are anxious to have this Plan progress in one way or the other. If Your Honor is going to approve it, or if he is going to disapprove it, we would like to have a decision as soon as possible. As you know, this reorganization has been hanging fire for some twelve years. We think that should be taken into consideration. We think that is perhaps a little more important than some of the engagements Mr. Biggs has mentioned, and I hope that Your Honor will prescribe that his brief should be filed in, say three weeks, and we would like to have the same time to reply.

Mr. Biggs: If Your Honor please, as I understand the record to date, this matter, if there is an appeal taken by Mr. Kitchel or by myself, as the result of Your Honor's decision, will go up on a separate record and separate appeal, and there is no reason why Your Honor in the intervening period can not go over the brief and record in this case and decide whether you want to affirm the plan or reject the plan. That was the purpose of Mr. Homire's suggestion. And the same thing pertains to Allegheny.

That is going to be a separate record, separate brief and separate appeal by either party after you have decided it. I have no desire to delay the matter.

The Court: I appreciate your difficulty, Mr. Biggs, about your partners being away, but here is a matter that has been in Court for twelve years.

I don't know what the situation is about Mr. Brandwen.

Mr. Biggs: He is no longer participating.

The Court: He is still attorney of record.

Mr. Biggs: Only as associated with me. I am the attorney of record and he is merely on the record as associate co-counsel.

The Court: I don't want to be inconsiderate. I realize your position. I do think it is important that this should be given first consideration.

How long will you be in Washington on the matter you are going on, and when are you going to Washington?

Mr. Biggs: It depends on what Your Honor decides to do. If I have to write the brief I can't go to Washington. If I have to write the brief in thirty days it is going to be a tremendous job.

The Court: Is the Washington matter a matter that can be postponed; what is the nature of it, re-negotiation?

Mr. Biggs: I am not saying I have to go to Washington at this particular time. The only reason I brought it up was that I could go from there to New York on the Alleghany matter.

The Court: I am in difficulty about giving another setting. Mr. Leisure suggested some date—I have forgotten what the date was, but it seems to me it was a few days earlier than the 23d. I asked about the 23d and he said that would be agreeable unless I heard from him to the contrary.

I wonder if it would not be better to let that setting stand at this time, and if possible I could give you some other setting—if I can arrange to give a setting about two or three weeks after, in the middle of May, would that be convenient to counsel?

Mr. Biggs: They are not interested in the Alleghany matter. Mr. McDonald is the only one interested in it.

Mr. Kitchel: We are not interested in that, Your Honor.

Mr. Biggs: It seems to me the simplest solution is to let Mr. Kitchel file the first brief.

Mr. Kitchel: That suggestion is entirely out of order. It is not orderly procedure.

Mr. Biggs: While it is not quite orderly procedure, I agree with Mr. Kitchel in that statement, but it is a very practical procedure—

The Court: Well, it is not going to be done.

Mr. Biggs: I was trying to be expeditious in making this suggestion.

Mr. McDonald: We will try to fit our schedule to anything the Court says, and if the middle of May is available, if it becomes available—

The Court: I am looking at my docket for the week.

Mr. Biggs: I might make this as a practical suggestion—

The Court: How many weeks will this next hearing take?

Mr. Biggs: That is what I was coming to right now. Just assume you are going to direct that I file the first brief within a reasonable period of time. As soon as I get through with that brief I will then take up—I will go to Washington, and see Mr. McDonald and after we have conferred in regard to the stipulation both of us can give you a much better opinion as to how long it is going to take. Let us assume perfection, as far as the stipulation, et al. is concerned. That is a pretty strong assumption.

The Court: I will let it go for the 23d, and you gentlemen can get together.

Mr. Biggs: I can conceive how this case could be tried in a day.

Mr. McDonald: I can't conceive that. But keep the setting as it is and hold it for later discussion.

The Court: There has not been any order made, but I made the statement to Mr. Leisure.

Mr. McDonald: Would the Court like an order on that? If it is all right, I will do that on Monday and mail it back.

Mr. Biggs: For the record, so there will be no misunderstanding, I am going to devote my time to the preparation of this brief.

The Court: How much time do you think you will need to write that brief?

Mr. Biggs: How much time I could use in writing the brief, I will say about six months, but a minimum of thirty days, as to how much time I need, the absolute minimum. I have to go through all these exhibits and work it out. It is a tremendous record to try to write any kind of a brief at this time.

Mr. Kitchel: Mr. Biggs has been active in this claim at least since October. He ought to be pretty familiar with the facts by this time. I think thirty days is a little too much.

The Court: He may have thirty days and you may have thirty days to answer, and if you can get together and assure me of a hearing in a day I will try—

Mr. Biggs: Understand, I am not going to work on the Alleghany case until after I get the brief out.

Mr. McDonald: On the 23d of April we will announce ready.

The Court: I expect to be advised ahead of time.

Mr. McDonald: Yes. At the present time, subject to what can be worked out by stipulation, we will be ready on the 23d to proceed.

The Court: The hearing is reset until April 23d.

Which was all of the proceedings had upon the hearing.

(Memorandum relating to Exhibits printed in a Separate Volume.)

There is printed in a separate volume all the exhibits filed by all parties to the hearings before the District Court held in January 1945 and thereafter on Objection No. 19 and related objections of Andrew W. Comstock to the Plan of Reorganization. Said separate volume is to be deemed as much of the Printed Record as if the matters contained therein were printed herein.

In the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri.

In the Matter of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.	In Proceedings for the Reorganization of a Railroad. No. 6935.

The matter of the approval of a plan of reorganizatio for the principal debtors, the Missouri Pacific Railroa Company, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Com pany and the International-Great Northern Railroad Com pany, and their various subsidiary companies (except th Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company) has been the subjec of two prior opinions of this Court. See "In the Matte of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company," 39 F. Supp. 43 and 50 F. Supp. 936. Since the date of the last opinion b this Court in July of 1943 this matter has been back to th Interstate Commerce Commission for further considera tion, and after hearings the Commission has forwarde its Supplemental Report and Order of July 4th, 1944, an its Third Supplemental Report and Order of October 9t

1944, containing a revised plan of reorganization. Subsequently, pursuant to directions of this Court, all parties in interest have been given the opportunity to file objections, and the following have availed themselves thereof:

(1) Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor;

(2) Protective Committee for holders of Common Stock of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company;

(3) Protective Committee for Missouri Pacific Preferred Stockholders;

(4) Group of individual owners and holders of 5½%, twenty-year Convertible Bonds, Class "A," of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company;

(5) John M. Balliet, as holder of Missouri Pacific 5½% Convertible Bonds and other securities;

(6) St. Louis Union Trust Company, Trustee for, and Roland C. Behrens, et al. as Committee for holders of Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company First Mortgage 4% Gold Bonds;

(7) Irving Trust Company, Trustee under the N. O. T. & M. Mortgage;

(8) Protective Committee for the holders of First Mortgage Bonds of International-Great Northern Railroad Company, a debtor herein;

(9) Missouri Pacific Railroad Company 5¼% Serial Bondholders' Committee; and

(10) Andrew W. Comstock, holder of 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company.

By the first of the above mentioned opinions (39 F. Supp. 436) a plan of reorganization certified in the Commission's Report and Order of January 10, 1940, and its Supplemental Report and Order of April 9, 1940, was approved by this Court. Appeals were thereafter taken to the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, but pending appeal the 1940 Plan was submitted to vote of creditors, which resulted in its rejection by five junior and senior classes of creditors. No appellate ruling was thereafter had on the merits, but, due to certain Supreme Court decisions, the appeals were remanded May 3, 1943. Further objections were filed and heard, and this Court then referred the matter to the Commission (50 F. Supp. 936) to allow its further consideration of the questions whether the Plan gave senior creditors complete compensation for their loss of seniority and whether, in view of changed conditions since that Plan's formulation, any alterations should be made. The Commission held hearings and ultimately approved, with slight modifications, a plan known as "the compromise plan." This compromise plan was jointly proposed to the Commission by the Protective Committee for the First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds of the Missouri Pacific; the Committee for the N. O. T. & M. First Mortgage and Income Bonds; the Protective Committee for the Missouri Pacific General Mortgage 4% Bonds; the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor; and the Alleghany Corporation, owning approximately one-fourth of the Missouri Pacific Convertible Bonds, some preferred stock and a large portion of the common stock. The Commission's Report further recites that the Plan also had the agreement of a bank syndicate holding a collateral security claim against the Missouri Pacific, and was generally supported by various other interests.

The plan approved by the Commission in its Order of October 9th, 1944, is essentially the "compromise plan," with certain alterations, and is still substantially the plan previously approved by this Court in 1941. The Commission has summarized its major modifications of the "compromise plan" as follows:

> "(a) The effective date is changed from January 1, 1940, to January 1, 1943, with provisions for change to a later date or dates under certain conditions.
> (b) There is distributed among senior classes of creditors the sum of $30,574,095 of cash, the greater part of which is allotted in compromise settlements of parts of their claims for accrued and unpaid interest. Optional offers of additional reorganization securities are provided for senior creditors not accepting the compromise cash offers.

(c) The parts of the claims of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and of J. P. Morgan and affiliated banks representing interest accrued and unpaid on their claims since the date of the filing by the debtors of their petitions in bankruptcy are settled with cash on a basis of a 4 percent per annum interest rate instead of 3½ percent as provided in the "compromise plan." The other compromise cash offers of the "compromise plan" are not changed.

(d) Provision is made for the distribution of cash among creditors prior to consummation of the plan.

(e) Warrants entitling the holders thereof, for a period of 10 years after consummation of the plan, to purchase new class-B no-par common stock at a price of $100 per share, are offered junior creditors (and stockholders of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company) in addition to the reorganization securities to which such creditors and stockholders are entitled under the plan. Provisions of the compromise plan for issue of warrants to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company preferred and common stockholders are not approved.

(f) The duration of the voting trust is decreased from 10 years, as in the Commission and compromise plans, to 5 years and the method of selection of the voting trustees in such plans is changed to provide that the court shall designate them.

(g) There are various other minor changes from the former Commission's and the compromise plans.

(h) The provisions of both plans for selection of the five reorganization managers, and the first board of directors of the reorganized company are changed."

The Commission Report contains the following comparative tables, which further amplify the alterations it has made:

In addition there will be issued warrants, exercisable for 10 years, for purchase of 494,699 shares of class-B no-par common stock at a price of $100 per share, plus such additional warrants as may be issued to holders of general unsecured claims.

(2) For purposes of comparison, amounts shown are those outstanding as of January 1, 1945, the effective date of the plan as modified, instead of January 1, 1940, the effective date of the plan approved in 1940. The difference is an increase of about $2,000,000.

In view of the present plan's similarity to the former Commission plan and the above summarization of new features, the Court does not deem it necessary to detail all its many provisions. Attached to the Commission's Supplemental Report as appendix "F" is a table showing the distribution of reorganization securities and cash, and it is hereby made a part of this opinion in further amplification. Disputed provisions of the Plan will appear in the following consideration of the various objections.

Objections of Missouri Pacific & Stockholders

Although separate objection have been filed by the Debtor, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, and the Protective Committees for the common and preferred stock of that railroad, essentially all three object to the Plan on the same grounds and are, therefore, considered together. Their basis of argument, which constitutes their only objection necessitating comment, arises from the Commission's finding that the stockholders have no equity and consequently must be excluded from participation. They argue, however, in the alternative, saying that the Commission erred either in not allocating them certain warrants or in not allowing a greater permissible capitalization permitting them some participation. The "compromise plan" as originally presented allocated Missouri Pacific stockholders 10-year warrants for the purchase at $100 a share of certain shares of Class "B" no-par common stock, but the Commission rejected this allocation.

The Court's attention is called to the fact that in previously referring this matter back to the Commission one of its stated reasons was to give an opportunity for reconsideration as to whether the valuations of the Debtor's properties should not be revised in view of recent earnings and possible enhanced value of the Road. At that time this Court had no intention of giving any directions to the Commission and was solely of the opinion that since the matter was to be remanded the question of possible revaluation should be called to its attention. The Commission has given particular and painstaking re-appraisal to valuation and capitalization and, in view of the Supreme Court's ruling that the determination of the Commission in regard to valuation and new capitalization is conclusive if supported by the evidence and made in accordance with legal standards, this Court is not disposed to go further into the matter. The report of July 4th, 1944, and the findings of the Commission show careful consideration and profound understanding of the problems of railroad capitalization, and the Court is completely satisfied that there has been no departure from legal standards or any disregard of proper evidence. In its brief the Debtor admits that "full opportunity fully availed of" was afforded to present evidence and that "the discussion of that evidence * * * shows that the Commission considered all of it." They object solely because the Commission did not apply proper legal tests. For this assertion the Court can find no support.

Regarding the rejection of the compromise plan's provision for warrants to stockholders, the Commission felt that although warrants were reasonable to junior creditors to give them further opportunity for recoupment, any provision for warrants to the stockholders when their equity was extinguished would result in an increase in allowable capitalization. Further, it felt that, in view of the impossibility of providing substantial satisfaction of junior creditors within proper capitalization, it would be inequitable to offer anything at all to stockholders. The Court is in full accord on this holding since it appears elementary and contrary to equity to give anything to stockholders so long as unsatisfied creditor claims exist. This reasoning is equally valid whether the proceeds of the warrants were to be used for any corporate purpose, as contemplated by the compromise plan, or allocated to retirement of indebtedness as is now proposed by the Debtor. The Commission's view that such warrants are unwise because they might have a material effect upon the control of the new company also appears to be a sound reason for their exclusion.

Objections of Holders of Missouri Pacific 5½% Convertible Bonds

exception generally to the treatment accorded them, to the $100 option price for common class "B" stock, to the fact that two directors and one reorganization manager are to be appointed by the Convertible Bondholders' trustee, and to the fact that the plan does not require a greater use of cash to reduce new indebtedness. They also object to the capitalization and to the voting trust, but these objections are considered elsewhere.

In the allocation made them, the Court can see no unfairness or inequity when it is considered that these Convertible Bonds are unsecured debentures and cannot be given the same class of stock as is given to securities prior in rank. They argue for an allotment of stock subject to no other common stock and yet disregard their status as unsecured debentures. Neither can the Court find any support whatever for their charge that the trustee of these bonds is dominated and unable to properly devote itself to the interests of the Convertible Bonds alone. There is no evidence in the record that since its appointment the Commercial National Bank & Trust Company of New York has in any way failed to represent impartially all holders of Convertible Bonds.

In regard to their objection that the Plan should provide further payments in cash to various creditors (and in particular for the River and Gulf Bonds) rather than granting allocations subject to the Court's making prior cash distributions, the Court finds no error in the Commission's action. The Commission desired to fix the capitalization at $560,000,000.00 and insure that amount as the maximum. It recognized that this Court might make cash distributions, but it further recognized that there might be an increase in equipment obligations resulting from future demand, which would result in total capitalization at the same as the maximum fixed by it. The question of whether various securities should be retired for cash is thus left to the Court, and the wisdom of such retirements can now be presented and will be disposed of by the Court at the proper time. The Court believes this provision to be a reasonable one and is not disposed to disturb it.

Finally, as to these Bondholders' objection that the option price of $100 for the new common Class "B" stock offered them under the Plan is too high, the Court is of the opinion that the Commission acted properly in fixing this value, and that the lower mean average market price between 1929 and 1933 for Debtor's stock (which is urged in support of a lower offering price) has no force. These warrants are to be given to allow some further opportunity for recoupment of investments should favorable conditions occur in the future, and are not, nor need not be, given with an absolute present intrinsic or market value. An allocation of securities of established value and an opportunity for recoupment are not one and the same thing by any means.

John M. Balliet's Objections

John M. Balliet is, he alleges, a large individual holder of Missouri Pacific Convertible, General, and First and Refunding Bonds, and also holds certain I.G.N. Adjustment 6's. His sole objection, in which he does not stand alone, is directed to the voting trust provisions in the Plan. The Plan provides that all preferred and common stock of the reorganized company, whether provided for in the Plan or thereafter issued, is to be deposited in a voting trust, which trust is to continue for 5 years from the date of consummation of the Plan or until available net income shall have been sufficient for a period of 3 consecutive calendar years, commencing not earlier than January 1st next to date of consummation of the Plan, to provide full interest and sinking fund requirements on all outstanding General-Mortgage Bonds, Series "A" and Series "B", plus the sum of $3,600,000 per year, whichever period shall be the shorter. The three voting trustees are to be designated by the Court, and one must be a citizen of Missouri and one a citizen of Texas. Thereafter vacancies will be filled by a majority of the remaining trustees. The compromise plan contained a 10-year voting trust, in which the Court was not given the sole appointive power, but the Commission changed it because it believed that the term should be of the shortest possible duration required to accomplish the purpose of its creation and that all three of the voting trustees should be designated by this Court.

Balliet urges that this trust is not authorized under the statute, that it is an unconstitutional deprivation of property, and that it is not fair and equitable. He points out that the Plan changes his position from that of creditor to owner, and that while he is given stock, or ownership, the principal power of stock is withheld.

That the Commission and this Court are empowered under the Act to provide for a voting trust, as created here, the Court does not doubt for a moment. Although it is true that the voting trust will prevent the stockholders from controlling the railroad by their votes for a period of years, and it is also true that the power to require a voting trust is not expressly granted by Section 77, it appears clear to this Court that those provisions of that law which state that a plan shall include provisions modifying or altering the rights of creditors generally, or any class of them, secured or unsecured, or of stockholders, either through the issuance of new securities of any character, or otherwise, and further stating that the plan shall provide adequate means for its execution, very clearly encompasses the right to create such a trust. The stated purpose of this voting trust is to afford adequate protection for any class or classes of creditors, or stockholders, and to assure a stable, experienced and impartial management while the new company is getting on its feet. All of the powers exercisable in the formulation of a plan are certainly not specifically and expressly set down, but the general powers to provide for the execution of the plan and to alter the rights of stockholders necessarily encompass the power to withhold from stock for a reasonable time the voting privilege where greater protection to the parties concerned is thus afforded and a greater probability of the plan's success is assured. The Commission places many terms and conditions on reorganization securities, and it is difficult for this Court to see what there is unreasonable in attaching a condition to the stock. If objector's rights have not been violated by the entire proceeding, why should one single condition attached to the stock constitute a deprivation of due process?

Objector assumes that he is in the position of one who has been given stock and then had its voting right withdrawn without just compensation. That is not the case. Actually, as a part of a fair and equitable allocation, he is to be allotted stock with no voting right up to five years. He further assumes that the removal of the voting power from stockholders is inequitable because the management will be persons not selected by the stockholders who may not make wise selections of the directors. He points out that the only qualifications of the trustees is that one be a citizen of Missouri and one of Texas, and from that argues that no assurance is afforded that the directors selected will act in the general interest without allegiance to any particular class of security holders, or will act in any manner other than in the selfish interest of those appointing them. It appears to the Court that objector overlooks the fact that all trustees will be initially selected by this Court. It would appear that there is far less probability of an allegiance-bound board of directors being produced through voting trustees chosen with care by this Court, than were the stockholders themselves allowed at the very inception of the Plan to choose a Board. Therefore, the Court rules the voting trust provision to be constitutional, within the powers conferred by the Act, and fair, equitable and reasonable in all respects.

Objections of Little Rock & Hot Springs Bondholders

The trustee and committee for the Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company bonds have filed objections to the treatment afforded them and to the provisions for judicial sale of the properties. After study of the same, the Court is of the opinion that these objections differ in no respect from those previously urged and overruled in 1940, and in view of the fact that these bondholders' position is improved in the new plan, these objections will be overruled for the reasons previously assigned.

Request of N.O.T. & M. 1st Mortgage Trustee

The Irving Trust Company, Trustee under the NOT&M first mortgage, has filed a request for clarification of parts of paragraph A of the Plan relating to cash distributions and a statement of position, from which document it appears that it is not now opposing the Plan. Inasmuch as an interpretation of the Plan and not an objection is here involved, the Court is of the opinion that this is not the proper time to dispose of the matter. Under the general power to construe given the Court, the questions raised by the Irving Trust may be considered at a later date.

I. G. N. 1st Mortgage Protective Committee Objections

Concerning the objections, 51 in number, filed by the Protective Committee for the holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of the International-Great Northern, said objections, although too numerous to detail, are principally directed against the capitalization of the new company and the treatment afforded to these bonds. Relative to the treatment of these bondholders, the Court is of the opinion that the allocation made them is in all respects fair and equitable, especially in light of the fact that their position is considerably improved over that afforded them by the Commission plan of 1940. Under the 1940 Plan these bondholders were given 29.5% of their claim in Series "A", General Mortgage, Cumulative Income Bonds of the par value of $11,471,000.00; 18.6% in Series "B", General Mortgage, Convertible Income Bonds in the principal amount of $7,217,000; 11% in Prior Preferred, $100 par value, 5 percent Stock in the principal amount of $4,256,000.00; 14.9% in Second Preferred Stock at a value of $4,779,000.00; and 26% in no Par Value Common Stock to be taken at $100.00 a share, or $10,089,500.00. The new plan makes the following provision of allocation to these bonds:

> "The holders of International first-mortgage bonds of the respective series shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, approximately the following:
> | | First-mortgage bonds Series C | General-mortgage bonds Series A | General-mortgage bonds Series B | Preferred stock | Common-stock class A (No. of shares) |
> |---|---|---|---|---|---|
> | Series A | $123 | $542 | $153 | $344 | 5.02 |
> | Series B | 116 | 512 | 145 | 324 | 4.73 |
> | Series C | 116 | 512 | 145 | 324 | 4.73 |

The holders of the said bonds of the respective series shall be entitled at their election to receive, in lieu of the common stock, class A, allocated to them as above set forth, cash per $1000 bonds as follows: Series A $130.49, series B $122.63, and Series C $122.63."

In light of the Court's previous approval of their treatment and the statements made in its 1941 opinion, the Court can see no profit in further discussion of these objections.

On the question of capitalization, these bondholders raise one question different from that already covered by this opinion. They point out that the Interstate Commerce Commission in its findings determined separately the following capitalizations for each of the three main railroads comprising the System; Missouri Pacific $463,000,000.00; N.O.T.&M., $67,000,000.00 and I.G.N., $50,000,000.00. The total of these three capitalizations would be $580,000,000.00, but the Commission set a System capitalization of $560,000,000.00, or $20,000,000.00 less than the aggregate. This, they allege and argue, constitutes a deprivation of $20,000,000.00 of property to the creditors and is in violation of the statute and of the Constitution.

The Commission, however, fully explained this elimination in its report when it said:

"One of the parties to the proceedings contends that the duplications do not affect the value of the properties and that the permissible capitalization for the system should equal the total of the separate capitalizations. If any one of the three operating groups of railroads were to be separately reorganized its ownership of valuable securities of one of the other two groups would be a recognizable asset, the value of the securities so owned being proper to add to the value which its other owned property otherwise would possess. Likewise, any income in the form of return on such securities of the other company so owned by the first group would increase the total income of the first group and its total permissible capitalization should be greater than if it did not own these securities. However, the total permissible capitalization of the second operating group of railroads whose securities were so owned would not be less by reason of any ownership of its securities by the first group. If, however, title to the entire owned properties of both groups were vested in a third new company, the securities of either of the former separate groups if transferred to the new company would represent no value to the new company additional to that which it would already possess by reason of the transfer to it of the titles to all of the other properties of the two groups. In the hands of the new company the securities of one of the former groups held by the other would be cancelled. They would add nothing to the earnings of the third new company and would constitute no basis for permitting a higher capitalization of the new company than should be allowed if such securities had not been transferred to it." (emphasis the Court's)

Certainly in an ordinary merger inter-company holdings would, under proper accounting procedure, result in cancellations, and this Court can see no material difference arising from the fact that capitalization is the question here. Capitalization is based on value, and where the inter-company holdings represent no value or asset on consolidation, their elimination from capitalization follows as a matter of course. The Court rules, therefore, that in law the Commission was correct on this point.

Comstock Objections

The most strongly urged objections are those filed by one Andrew W. Comstock, who alleges that he is the holder of $80,000 of 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds of the Missouri Pacific and that he files these objections on behalf of himself, of 14 owners of at least $90,000.00 additional of said bonds, and of all other owners and holders of said bonds. His objections are joined in and adopted by the Committee for the 5¼% Secured Bonds.

Comstock objects to the participation of the Alleghany Corporation in the reorganization on the ground that he charges the Alleghany Corporation for its benefit improperly utilized the Debtor Missouri Pacific contrary to the interests of said Debtor. This contention, contained in Comstock's objections 20 to 23, inclusive, cannot be decided at this time because the Court has ordered a separate hearing on the alleged facts and the permissibility of Alleghany's participation. That, however, will not delay a decision on the plan as a whole since the Commission has made provision in the Plan for the eventuality that Comstock might be upheld in excluding or subordinating Alleghany. The Commission said in its Report:

> "If, however, the court shall rule that Alleghany Corporation is not entitled to participate in this reorganization, we conclude and find that any new class B common stock and warrants to subscribe to such stock, which, by the allocations of new securities approved herein, would be distributed to Alleghany Corporation, should not be allotted to that corporation but should be redistributed so as to increase the allotments of class B common stock, and warrants receivable by the other unsecured creditors of the Missouri Pacific group, and by holders of its serial 5¼ per cent bonds, the increase in each case to be in the same proportion as that which the amount of such stock and warrants otherwise receivable by each such other unsecured creditor and each serial bondholder bears to the total amount of such class B common stock and warrants authorized herein to be issued to all such other Missouri Pacific unsecured creditors and the serial bondholders."

Therefore, no disposition will be made of these objections here.

Comstock alleges and argues that the Interstate Commerce Commission failed to exercise its independent judgment in the promulgation of the present plan, was unduly influenced by the fact that it was initiated and presented as a compromise plan, and was influenced to adopt, without consideration, a deal made by private negotiators, i.e., the proponents of the plan. He, therefore, urges that the Plan must be disapproved because of an alleged failure on the part of the Commission to fulfill its statutory duties independent of agreement. For this allegation the Court finds no basis. Although a compromise plan was presented, it must be noted that plan embodied most of the provisions that the Commission in its 1940 plan had already shown that it considered essential and unopen to alteration. Further, the compromise plan was not accepted by the Commission en toto, but several very material alterations were insisted upon by the Commission. The record sent up to this court from the Commission is loaded with examples of the Commission's painstaking consideration of all of the suggested provisions of the compromise plan, its findings and conclusions on each provision, its alterations of certain of those provisions, and its careful discharge of its statutory duty. This court does not believe that the mere existence and recognition of a compromise plan presented by important parties in interest is any evidence at all of a failure of the Commission to perform its function. In view of the extremely complicated and contentious nature of a railroad reorganization proceeding, and its tendency to drag on over the years, compromise plans are to be favored rather than criticised, when they tend to expedite reorganizations and allow greater participation by those not so securely situated.

Comstock next makes the point that the alternative offer of cash or securities to certain senior creditors is not feasible and will result in a higher capitalization than the Commission has held permissible. Stated as simply as possible, the Commission has held that the new company should be capitalized at not more than $560,000,000. It has further provided in its plan (which was suggested by the compromise plan) that certain senior security holders be given an option to take either securities or cash in lieu of securities (the cash offer representing a considerable reduction of claim). The Commission felt, and correctly so, that allocations of securities to full value of claims made the treatment of senior securities fair and equitable, and that the optional cash offer, which could be electively taken, although representing a reduction in total claims, was valid in light of the alternative provisions. It should be carefully noted that in this alternative cash offer lay the very heart of the compromise in the Plan, as it was the scaling down of senior claims by the alternative cash offers that produced greater participation for junior interests.

In order to carry out these provisions the Plan provides that available cash be used for paying security holders these cash options, or be used to purchase the new company's securities necessary to make the allocations if they elected instead to take securities. The securities to be allocated under the optional offers are all either general mortgage bonds, Series "B", or common stock, Class "A", and as to all or any of the senior security holders given an option and not electing to take cash, these Bonds and Stocks would be provided by purchases from allocations already made to others. No original issuance of these securities to meet contingent allocations will be made. The Plan provides specifically the method for putting these provisions into effect:

> "Creditors who are entitled to an election to receive securities of one class in lieu of securities of another class or cash in lieu of securities, shall make such election within such time (not earlier than the date upon which the plan is confirmed), and in such manner as the reorganization managers, subject to the approval of the court, shall determine.
> After confirmation of the plan, the trustee of the estates of the debtors shall upon request of the reorganization managers pay to them a sum in cash equal to the difference between (a) the maximum amount which would be payable to creditors under the alternative offers of cash or securities herein provided for and (b) the amount of cash theretofore distributed to such creditors which is to be credited against cash payable under the plan pursuant to Section A hereof. Said funds, together with any cash refunded to the reorganization managers by creditors who shall elect to take the alternative offer of securities, shall be deposited in a separate account to the credit of the reorganization managers and shall be used by them solely for the following purposes:
> (1) On consummation of the plan to pay to creditors who, under the alternative offer of cash or securities, shall have elected to receive cash, the amounts to which such creditors, respectively, are entitled, as set forth in this section T, and

(2) To acquire in the open market or at private sale, including purchases on a 'when issued' basis, a principal amount of general-mortgage bonds, series B, and a number of shares of common stock which shall not exceed the principal amount of general-mortgage bonds, series B, and the number of shares of common stock which are to be issued to creditors pursuant to their election to take such bonds and stock in lieu of cash."

Comstock argues that should these security holders elect to take securities, the capitalization of the new company would exceed $560,000,000, for the reason that that total capitalization can only be maintained where not a single security is issued the option holders or where securities can be purchased at the cash offer price. In other words, he argues that where a security holder elects to take security in lieu of cash, the reorganization managers are bound to purchase him a security in the market at the cash option price or issue additional securities.

After consideration, the Court has come to the conclusion that these arguments are not a valid attack on the Plan for two reasons. First, the Court is of the opinion that the possibility of the reorganization managers being able to buy securities at the option price is not as improbable as Comstock assumes. When he argues that the mere presence of the reorganization managers in the market will drive up the price, he overlooks the fact that the managers will not be pressed for time and can buy when the conditions are favorable. Further, he brushes aside the commitments made by parties in interest to sell to the managers sufficient of the required general-mortgage bonds at the option price to meet any elections. The Court has no fear that those commitments will fail to be forthcoming when the need arises. He further assumes a far higher market price for the Class "A" stock than seems probable to this court, in view of the prospective decreased earnings in the post-war period.

Second, the Commission's Report itself shows that the possibility of such an increased issuance of securities was inherent in the Plan and recognized by it, and that provision was made for such an eventuality. The Commission's anticipation of this is found in the provision that the reorganization managers fix the number of shares of each class to be authorized and to be originally issued. Comstock erroneously assumes, however, that if a greater number of shares are issued the capitalization would thereby be increased. His error lies in his failure to recognize that all computations as to this no-par value common stock are based on a purely assigned value of $100.00 per share and that, therefore, any further issue of such stock would not actually increase the total capitalization one whit. Further, any increased issue of common stock would not affect the compensation of those receiving common stock, as Comstock urges, because the Commission's finding of full compensation was definitely made in the light of their recognition of the possibility that a greater number of shares might be issued. Comstock further overlooks the fact that if the allotted cash cannot buy the required securities on the market, that it can then under supervision of this Court be applied to retirement of other debt, which will obviously work to keep down total capitalization.

The Court is quite favorably impressed with the entire scheme embodied in this alternative cash offer device and rather than disapproving it, as Comstock urges, is inclined toward it most favorably for the beneficial result it has had upon the treatment of junior interests. The Court notes with interest the fact that Comstock's voice among the many interested paries is now alone raised in opposition to this provision.

Comstock next attacks the provisions of the Plan which provide for the methods of designating voting trustees, directors and reorganization managers. He alleges that the method selected by the Commission, whereby the five reorganization managers are designated by representatives of major issues of securities, and a panel of directors is to be designated by similar groups (subject to ultimate selection by the voting trustees), is a delegation of control of the reorganized company to a small group not representative of the security-holders. He urges that the Plan should be altered to provide for the selection of directors and managers by direct vote of the security-holders themselves. The Court is not disposed to sustain this, for the reason that similar provisions for the selection of such officers have met the universal approval of the Commission and U. S. District Courts in other reorganizations. So far as this Court can determine, it has always been customary to authorize designations by responsible representatives of major issues. Further, under this Plan the voting trustees are to be selected by the Court itself and actions of the reorganization managers are to be subject to its approval. The Court believes that following this customary reorganization procedure and delegating authority to representatives who have regularly acted is in all respects warranted, and gives no basis for a fear of dominance by an entrenched group.

The Plan provides that the new first mortgage shall contain a provision which shall permit the new company, with the consent of holders of two-thirds, and in some cases three-fourths, of the new first mortgage bonds, to make various amendments and alterations to said mortgage. It further provides that the new general mortgage shall contain provisions permitting certain amendments to it. Comstock attacks these provisions, referring to them as "escape clauses", on the grounds that they constitute an attempt to circumvent the bankruptcy law by permitting future reorganizations out of court, and that they are contrary to public policy. He points out, apprehensively, the many changes that could be made in the Plan at a later date by the use of these "escape clauses". The Court, however, is not impressed by this objection and is of the opinion that these provisions are sound and wise. They are democratic in nature, allowing for voluntary alterations in the mortgages, as need arises, and provide a far less expensive and formal procedure than court action. Surely a provision that in a fair way prevents full-dress bankruptcy proceedings is desirable, rather than vicious as Comstock urges. There is nothing in the statute which prohibits such a device, and the Court is aware that not only have such clauses been approved in other reorganization proceedings but that they are very common today in non-reorganization indentures.

Finally, there is the so-called Comstock Objection No. 19, which was the subject of a separate hearing and upon which extensive evidence was presented. Objection No. 19 reads:

> "19. The Plan is unfair and inequitable by reason of the fact that it 'assumed' the validity of an alleged claim of MOP against NOTM for inter-company advances. The allocation of securities to the said 5-¼% Secured Bonds is expressly stated by the Commission to be based on the assumption of the validity of said claim. Any allocation of securities based on the validity of said claim is unfair and inequitable. The National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, requires a full judicial determination on the merits of the validity of said claim. There has been no such determination. The claim is invalid in all respects. It is based on advances purportedly made by MOP to a dominated subsidiary NOTM. Said advances were made in the interests of MOP and not of NOTM. They would not have been made if NOTM had had the benefit of independent management. Detailed objections to the claim of MOP against NOTM are contained in Schedule A annexed hereto and made a part hereof."

Briefly, the Comstock contention amounts to this: that the Missouri Pacific claim against the NOT&M is invalid and, if invalidated, the NOT&M stock, which secures the 5-¼% Bonds, would have a value greater than that assigned it by the Commission, which increased value should result in a more favorable treatment of these bonds.

The evidence presented at the hearing of this objection was voluminous and complicated, and cannot be here detailed without unduly prolonging this opinion. The Court has, however, carefully considered the entire record and is of the opinion that, everything considered, the evidence before it does not sustain Comstock's contentions of any [improperiety] on the part of officers and directors or of the invalidity of the inter-company claim. Railroad finance is, of necessity, of a most intricate nature, and after the passage of twenty years, and the death of most participants, doubt can be cast upon almost any financial transaction. This situation, however, does not amount to a positive showing of impropriety, but rather arises from the extremely intricate nature of the subject matter, which lends itself to strained interpretations when time has blurred the true picture.

Comstock's contentions of the milking of the NOT&M by Missouri Pacific cannot be reconciled with the great benefits conferred upon the Gulf Coast Lines by the Baldwin improvement program. It is not this Court's experience that a parent corporation, when engaged in the type of improper conduct alleged here, pours millions of dollars into the subsidiary to build it up to a position of strength far in excess of that at the date of acquisition. Further, the Court is impressed by the fact that almost all of the transactions of which Comstock complains were entered into only after notice to, and with the approval of, the Interstate Commerce Commission. No substantiation appears for Comstock's innuendo that the Commission was somehow derelict in its duty, or allowed itself to be hoodwinked.

The objector Comstock purchased the securities which gives him entree to this proceeding as a speculation in the latter part of 1942 and in the early part of 1943, and he did not become a party until September 30th, 1943. No facts have been shown that have not been available to all for many years; and Comstock's being a newcomer does not relieve him from the defense of laches. The bonds that he holds are subject to all of the infirmities which existed at the time he bought them. Looking to the entire record, and the dates upon which the information presented became available, the Court is brought to the conclusion that the contention urged, even were it possible to substantiate it, is stale beyond recall, and that there has been inexcusable delay in its presentation. This Court has confidence in its Trustee, and believes that he has fully performed his duties in relation to this intercompany claim. Time and again opportunity has been presented to various persons to come forward but with no result. Comstock cannot contend he is in the position of a person from whom the facts have been concealed. Rather, he has taken facts apparent to all and only at the twelfth hour has come forward.

Finally, the Court would like to note that the entire attempt by Comstock to disprove the validity of the intercompany claim is not an attack upon those whom he alleges perpetrated a wrong, but, rather, is an attempt to hold other creditors of the railroad responsible for the alleged actions of others. This feature, it appears to the Court, constitutes a basic difference between the alleged situation in this case and the so-called "Deep Rock" case, Taylor vs. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307, so heavily relied upon by Comstock. The other creditors whom Comstock's position would injure are certainly as innocent as he of any alleged malfeasance and those whom he attacks are no longer held to be in interest.

Therefore, the entire record considered, the Court is of the opinion that Objection No. 19 and related objections of Andrew W. Comstock to the Plan of Reorganization, and his objection to the claim of the Missouri Pacific against the NOT&M, should be overruled.

Having considered and disposed of all objections, the Court will next address itself to the criteria about which Section 77 (e) of the Act (11 U. S. C. 205) requires that the Judge satisfy himself, regardless of objections. The Court is of the opinion that the requirements of subsections 2 and 3 of said section are adequately provided for in the Plan by Paragraph T thereof, and since hearings on expenses and fees incident to the reorganization have already been held within maximum limits fixed by the Commission no omission is found there. As for the provisions of sub-paragraph 1, requiring that the court be satisfied that the Plan "complies with the provisions of sub-section B of Section 77, is fair and equitable, etc.", the very general accord now afforded the Plan is naturally influential in its favor. As a whole, the Court is of the opinion that the Plan meets all of the requirements of the Act. We are, of course, familiar with the prior approved plan, and have carefully studied all recent alterations as well as the actions taken by the Commission in regard to this Court's suggestions in its second opinion. The Court believes that the Commission has fully complied with the requirements of law and given satisfactory further consideration, and that the Plan now presented is in all respects just and satisfactory and holds forth high prospect for a soundly reorganized Missouri Pacific System.

The formulation of a workable reorganization for this huge system has been a long and difficult task, but the Court now believes that, with the approval of the present Plan, the end of the matter is in sight. Although, as the Commission has said, no plan can be drawn which will receive the unanimous approval of everyone, it appears to the Court that the present Plan achieves as near perfection as human fallibility can attain.

Therefore, all objections and claims for equitable treatment are hereby overruled and an order will be entered approving that Plan of Reorganization contained in the Third Supplemental Order of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Counsel is directed to submit draft of order on notice for approval and signature.

In the Matter of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.	In Proceedings for the Reorganization of a Railroad. No. 6935.

It Is Ordered by the Court, of its own motion, that the typewritten opinion of this Court approving the proposed Plan of Reorganization in the above styled matter, heretofore filed herein on the 21st day of December, 1945, and as amended on the 28th day of December, 1945, be and the same is hereby further amended by striking the sentence appearing on page 18 and beginning in line 5 of said page (page 23013, line 29 of the printed record of this proceeding), which reads:

> "No original issuance of these securities to meet contingent allocations will be made."

and inserting in lieu thereof a new sentence to read as follows:

> "No original issuance of these securities to meet contingent allocations is contemplated, and although such issuance is recognized as possible it is not considered probable."

and by further striking the sentences on page 19 and beginning in lines 19 and 22, respectively (page 23015, lines 22 and 26, respectively, of the printed record of this proceeding), which read:

> "Further, he brushes aside the commitments made by parties in interest to sell to the managers sufficient of the required general-mortgage bonds at the option price to meet any elections. The Court has no fear that those commitments will fail to be forthcoming when the need arises."

and by inserting in lieu thereof two new sentences to read as follows:

"Further, he brushes aside the assurances given by certain representatives of large holders of securities which will be exchangeable under the Plan for general-mortgage bonds, Series B, that these representatives would not, subject to the approval at the time of their directors, permit the development of a corner but would recommend to their respective boards of directors that sufficient of these bonds be placed upon the market within the required price limit to meet any need of the reorganization managers. Although the Court realizes that these assurances are in no way legally binding agreements, still the Court has no fear that these parties will fail to assist the reorganization managers in this regard."

It Is Further Ordered by the Court that the Clerk of this Court be and he is hereby directed to physically amend the original filed opinion herein in conformity with this Order.

Dated this 7th day of January, 1946.

GEO. H. MOORE,
United States District Judge.

(Opinion of District Court on Approval of Plan of Reorganization as Amended by Orders Nos. 2866-A and 2866-B.)

(Filed December 21, 1945.)

In the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri.

In the Matter of

Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

In Proceedings for the Reorganization of a Railroad. No. 6935.

The matter of the approval of a plan of reorganization for the principal debtors, the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company and the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, and their various subsidiary companies (except the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company) has been the subject of two prior opinions of this Court. See "In the Matter of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company," 39 F. Supp. 436 and 50 F. Supp. 936. Since the date of the last opinion by this Court in July of 1943 this matter has been back to the Interstate Commerce Commission for further consideration, and after hearings the Commission has forwarded its Supplemental Report and Order of July 4th, 1944, and its Third Supplemental Report and Order of October 9th, 1944, containing a revised plan of reorganization. Subsequently, pursuant to direction of this Court, all parties in interest have been given the opportunity to file objections, and the following have availed themselves thereof:

(1) Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor;

(2) Protective Committee for holders of Common Stock of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company;

(3) Protective Committee for Missouri Pacific Preferred Stockholders;

(4) Group of individual owners and holders of 5½%, twenty-year Convertible Bonds, Class "A," of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company;

(5) John M. Balliet, as holder of Missouri Pacific 5½% Convertible Bonds and other securities;

(6) St. Louis Union Trust Company, Trustee for, and Roland C. Behrens, et al. as Committee for holders of Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company First Mortgage 4% Gold Bonds;

(7) Irving Trust Company, Trustee under the N. O. T. & M. Mortgage;

(8) Protective Committee for the holders of First Mortgage Bonds of International-Great Northern Railroad Company, a debtor herein;

(9) Missouri Pacific Railroad Company 5¼% Serial Bondholders' Committee; and

(10) Andrew W. Comstock, holder of 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company.

By the first of the above mentioned opinions (39 F. Supp. 436) a plan of reorganization certified in the Commission's Report and Order of January 10, 1940, and its Supplemental Report and Order of April 9, 1940, was approved by this Court. Appeals were thereafter taken to the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, but pending appeal the 1940 Plan was submitted to vote of creditors, which resulted in its rejection by five junior and senior classes of creditors. No appellate ruling was thereafter had on the merits, but, due to certain Supreme Court decisions, the appeals were remanded May 8, 1943. Further objections were filed and heard, and this Court then referred the matter to the Commission (50 F. Supp. 936) to allow its further consideration of the questions whether the Plan gave senior creditors complete compensation for their loss of seniority and whether, in view of changed conditions since that Plan's formulation, any alterations should be made. The Commission held hearings and ultimately approved, with slight modifications, a plan known as "the compromise plan." This compromise plan was jointly proposed to the Commission by the Protective Committee for the First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds of the Missouri Pacific; the Committee for the N. O. T. & M. First Mortgage and Income Bonds; the Protective Committee for the Missouri Pacific General Mortgage 4% Bonds; the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor; and the Alleghany Corporation, owning approximately one-fourth of the Missouri Pacific Convertible Bonds, some preferred stock and a large portion of the common stock. The Commission's Report further recites that the Plan also had the agreement of a bank syndicate holding a collateral security claim against the Missouri Pacific, and was generally supported by various other interests.

The plan approved by the Commission in its Order of October 9th, 1944, is essentially the "compromise plan," with certain alterations, and is still substantially the plan previously approved by this Court in 1941. The Commission has summarized its major modifications of the "compromise plan" as follows:

"(a) The effective date is changed from January 1, 1940, to January 1, 1943, with provisions for change to a later date or dates under certain conditions.

(b) There is distributed among senior classes of creditors the sum of $30,574,095 of cash, the greater part of which is allotted in compromise settlements of parts of their claims for accrued and unpaid interest. Optional offers of additional reorganization securities are provided for senior creditors not accepting the compromise cash offers.

(c) The parts of the claims of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and of J. P. Morgan and affiliated banks representing interest accrued and unpaid on their claims since the date of the filing by the debtors of their petitions in bankruptcy are settled with cash on a basis of a 4 percent per annum interest rate instead of 3½ percent as provided in the 'compromise plan.' The other compromise cash offers of the 'compromise plan' are not changed.

(d) Provision is made for the distribution of cash among creditors prior to consummation of the plan.

(e) Warrants entitling the holders thereof, for a period of 10 years after consummation of the plan, to purchase new class-B no-par common stock at a price of $100 per share, are offered junior creditors

(and stockholders of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company) in addition to the reorganization securities to which such creditors and stockholders are entitled under the plan. Provisions of the compromise plan for issue of warrants to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company preferred and common stockholders are not approved.

(f) The duration of the voting trust is decreased from 10 years, as in the Commission and compromise plans, to 5 years and the method of selection of the voting trustees in such plans is changed to provide that the court shall designate them.

(g) There are various other minor changes from the former Commission's and the compromise plans.

(h) The provisions of both plans for selection of the five reorganization managers, and the first board of directors of the reorganized company are changed."

The Commission Report contains the following comparative tables, which further amplify the alterations it has made:

Capitalization

(1) Plus such amount of common stock as may be allotted in satisfaction of general unsecured claims. In addition there will be issued warrants, exercisable for 10 years, for purchase of 494,699 shares of class-B no-par common stock at a price of $100 per share, plus such additional warrants as may be issued to holders of general unsecured claims.

(2) For purposes of comparison, amounts shown are those outstanding as of January 1, 1943, the effective date of the plan as modified, instead of January 1, 1940, the effective date of the plan approved in 1940. The difference is an increase of about $2,000,000.

In view of the present plan's similarity to the former Commission plan and the above summarization of new features, the Court does not deem it necessary to detail all its many provisions. Attached to the Commission's Supplemental Report as appendix "F" is a table showing the distribution of reorganization securities and cash, and it is hereby made a part of this opinion in further amplification. Disputed provisions of the Plan will appear in the following consideration of the various objections.

Objections of Missouri Pacific & Stockholders.

Although separate objections have been filed by the Debtor, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, and the Protective Committees for the common and preferred stock of that railroad, essentially all three object to the Plan on the same grounds and are, therefore, considered together. Their basis of argument, which constitutes their only objection necessitating comment, arises from the Commission's finding that the stockholders have no equity and consequently must be excluded from participation. They argue, however, in the alternative, saying that the Commission erred either in not allocating them certain warrants or in not allowing a greater permissible capitalization permitting them some participation. The "compromise plan" as originally presented allocated Missouri Pacific stockholders 10-year warrants for the purchase at $100 a share of certain shares of Class "B" no-par common stock, but the Commission rejected this allocation.

The Court's attention is called to the fact that in previously referring this matter back to the Commission one of its stated reasons was to give an opportunity for reconsideration as to whether the valuations of the Debtor's properties should not be revised in view of recent earnings and possible enhanced value of the Road. At that time this Court had no intention of giving any directions to the Commission and was solely of the opinion that since the matter was to be remanded the question of possible revaluation should be called to its attention. The Commission has given particular and painstaking reappraisal to valuation and capitalization and, in view of the Supreme Court's ruling that the determination of the Commission in regard to revaluation and new capitalization is conclusive if supported by the evidence and made in accordance with legal standards, this Court is not disposed to go further into the matter. The report of July 4th, 1944, and the findings of the Commission show careful consideration and profound understanding of the problems of railroad capitalization, and the Court is completely satisfied that there has been no departure from legal standards or any disregard of proper evidence. In its brief the Debtor admits that "full opportunity fully availed of" was afforded to present evidence and that "the discussion of that evidence * * * shows that the Commission considered all of it". They object solely because the Commission did not apply proper legal tests. For this assertion the Court can find no support.

Regarding the rejection of the compromise plan's provision for warrants to stockholders, the Commission felt that although warrants were reasonable to junior creditors to give them further opportunity for recoupment, any provision for warrants to the stockholders when their equity was extinguished would result in an increase in allowable capitalization. Further, it felt that, in view of the impossibility of providing substantial satisfaction of junior creditors within proper capitalization, it would be inequitable to offer anything at all to stockholders. The Court is in full accord on this holding since it appears elementary and contrary to equity to give anything to stockholders so long as unsatisfied creditor claims exist. This reasoning is equally valid whether the proceeds of the warrants were to be used for any corporate purpose, as contemplated by the compromise plan, or allocated to retirement of indebtedness as is now proposed by the Debtor. The Commission's view that such warrants are unwise because they might have a material effect upon the control of the new company also appears to be a sound reason for their exclusion.

Objections of Holders of Missouri Pacific 5½% Convertible Bonds.

A group of individual owners of 5½%, 20-year, Convertible Bonds, Class "A", of the Missouri Pacific take exception generally to the treatment accorded them, to the $100 option price for common class "B" stock, to the fact that two directors and one reorganization manager are to be appointed by the Convertible Bondholders' trustee, and to the fact that the plan does not require a greater use of cash to reduce new indebtedness. They also object to the capitalization and to the voting trust, but these objections are considered elsewhere.

In the allocation made them, the Court can see no unfairness or inequity when it is considered that these Convertible Bonds are unsecured debentures and cannot be given the same class of stock as is given to securities prior in rank. They argue for an allotment of stock subject to no other common stock and yet disregard their status as unsecured debentures. Neither can the Court find any support whatever for their charge that the trustee of these bonds is dominated and unable to properly devote itself to the interests of the Convertible Bonds alone. There is no evidence in the record that since its appointment Commercial National Bank & Trust Company of New York has in any way failed to represent impartially all holders of Convertible Bonds.

In regard to their objection that the Plan should provide further payments in cash to various creditors (and in particular for the River and Gulf Bonds) rather than granting allocations subject to the Court's making prior cash distributions, the Court finds no error in the Commission's action. The Commission desired to fix the capitalization at $560,000,000.00 and insure that amount as the maximum. It recognized that this Court might make cash distributions, but it further recognized that there might be an increase in equipment obligations resulting from future demand, which would result in total capitalization at the same as the maximum fixed by it. The question of whether various securities should be retired for cash is thus left to the Court, and the wisdom of such retirements can now be presented and will be disposed of by the Court at the proper time. The Court believes this provision to be a reasonable one and is not disposed to disturb it.

Finally, as to these Bondholders' objection that the option price of $100 for the new common Class "B" stock offered them under the Plan is too high, the Court is of the opinion that the Commission acted properly in fixing this value, and that the lower mean average market price between 1929 and 1933 for Debtor's stock (which is urged in support of a lower offering price) has no force. These warrants are to be given to allow some further opportunity for recoupment of investments should favorable conditions occur in the future, and are not, nor need not be, given with an absolute present intrinsic or market value. An allocation of securities of established value and an opportunity for recoupment are not one and the same thing by any means.

John M. Balliet's Objections.

John M. Balliet is, he alleges, a large individual holder of Missouri Pacific Convertible, General, and First and Refunding Bonds, and also holds certain I. G. N. Adjustment 6's. His sole objection, in which he does not stand alone, is directed to the voting trust provisions in the Plan. The Plan provides that all preferred and common stock of the reorganized company, whether provided for in the Plan or thereafter issued, is to be deposited in a voting trust, which trust is to continue for 5 years from the date of consummation of the Plan or until available net income shall have been sufficient for a period of 3 consecutive calendar years, commencing not earlier than January 1st next to date of consummation of the Plan, to provide full interest and sinking fund requirements on all outstanding General-Mortgage Bonds, Series "A" and Series "B", plus the sum of $3,600,000 per year, whichever period shall be the shorter. The three voting trustees are to be designated by the Court, and one must be a citizen of Missouri and one a citizen of Texas. Thereafter vacancies will be filled by a majority of the remaining trustees. The compromise plan contained a 10-year voting trust, in which the Court was not given the sole appointive power, but the Commission changed it because it believed that the term should be of the shortest possible duration required to accomplish the purpose of its creation and that all three of the voting trustees should be designated by this Court.

Balliet urges that this trust is not authorized under the statute, that it is an unconstitutional deprivation of property, and that it is not fair and equitable. He points out that the Plan changes his position from that of creditor to owner, and that while he is given stock, or ownership, the principal power of stock is withheld.

That the Commission and this Court are empowered under the Act to provide for a voting trust, as created here, the Court does not doubt for a moment. Although it is true that the voting trust will prevent the stockholders from controlling the railroad by their votes for a period of years, and it is also true that the power to require a voting trust is not expressly granted by Section 77, it appears clear to this Court that those provisions of that law which state that a plan shall include provisions modifying or altering the rights of creditors generally, or any class of them, secured or unsecured, or of stockholders, either through the issuance of new securities of any character, or otherwise, and further stating that the plan shall provide adequate means for its execution, very clearly encompasses the right to create such a trust. The stated purpose of this voting trust is to afford adequate protection for any class or classes of creditors, or stockholders, and to assure a stable, experienced and impartial management while the new company is getting on its feet. All of the powers exercisable in the formulation of a plan are certainly not specifically and expressly set down, but the general powers to provide for the execution of the plan and to alter the rights of stockholders necessarily encompass the power to withhold from stock for a reasonable time the voting privilege where greater protection to the parties concerned is thus afforded and a greater probability of the plan's success is assured. The Commission places many terms and conditions on reorganization securities, and it is difficult for this Court to see what there is unreasonable in attaching a condition to the stock. If objector's rights have not been violated by the entire proceeding, why should one single condition attached to the stock constitute a deprivation of due process?

Objector assumes that he is in the position of one who has been given stock and then had its voting right withdrawn without just compensation. That is not the case. Actually, as a part of a fair and equitable allocation, he is to be allotted stock with no voting right up to five years. He further assumes that the removal of the voting power from stockholders is inequitable because the management will be persons not selected by the stockholders who may not make wise selections of the directors. He points out that the only qualifications of the trustees is that one be a citizen of Missouri and one of Texas, and from that argues that no assurance is afforded that the directors selected will act in the general interest without allegiance to any particular class of security holders, or will act in any manner other than in the selfish interest of those appointing them. It appears to the Court that objector overlooks the fact that all trustees will be initially selected by this Court. It would appear that there is far less probability of an allegiance-bound board of directors being produced through voting trustees chosen with care by this Court, than were the stockholders themselves allowed at the very inception of the Plan to choose a Board. Therefore, the Court rules the voting trust provision to be constitutional, within the powers conferred by the Act, and fair, equitable and reasonable in all respects.

Objections of Little Rock & Hot Springs Bondholders.

The trustee and committee for the Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company bonds have filed objections to the treatment afforded them and to the provisions for judicial sale of the properties. After study of the same, the Court is of the opinion that these objections differ in no respect from those previously urged and overruled in 1940, and in view of the fact that these bondholders' position is improved in the new plan, these objections will be overruled for the reasons previously assigned.

Request of N. O. T. & M. 1st Mortgage Trustee.

The Irving Trust Company, Trustee under the NOT&M first mortgage, has filed a request for clarification of parts of paragraph A of the Plan relating to cash distributions and a statement of position, from which document it appears that it is not now opposing the Plan. Inasmuch as an interpretation of the Plan and not an objection is here involved, the Court is of the opinion that this is not the proper time to dispose of the matter. Under the general power to construe given the Court, the questions raised by the Irving Trust may be considered at a later date.

I. G. N. 1st Mortgage Protective Committee Objections.

Concerning the objections, 51 in number, filed by the Protective Committee for the holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of the International-Great Northern, said objections, although too numerous to detail, are principally directed against the capitalization of the new company and the treatment afforded to these bonds. Relative to the treatment of these bondholders, the Court is of the opinion that the allocation made them is in all respects fair and equitable, especially in light of the fact that their position is considerably improved over that afforded them by the Commission plan of 1940. Under the 1940 Plan these bondholders were given 29.5% of their claim in Series "A", General Mortgage, Cumulative Income Bonds of the par value of $11,471,000.00; 18.6% in Series "B", General Mortgage, Convertible Income Bonds in the principal amount of $7,217,000; 11% in Prior Preferred, $100 par value, 5 percent Stock in the principal amount of $4,256,000.00; 14.9% in Second Preferred Stock at a value of $4,779,000.00; and 26% in no Par Value Common Stock to be taken at $100.00 a share, or $10,089,500.00. The new plan makes the following provision of allocation to these bonds:

> "The holders of International first-mortgage bonds of the respective series shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, approximately the following:

	First-mortgage bonds Series C	General-mortgage bonds Series A	General-mortgage bonds Series B	Preferred stock	Common stock class A (No. of shares)
Series A	$123	$542	$153	$244	5.03
Series B	116	512	145	231	4.73
Series C	116	512	145	231	4.73

> The holders of the said bonds of the respective series shall be entitled at their election to receive, in lieu of the common stock, class A, allocated to them as above set forth, cash per $1000 bonds as follows: Series A $130.49, series B $122.63, and Series C $122.63."

In light of the Court's previous approval of their treatment and the statements made in its 1941 opinion, the Court can see no profit in further discussion of these objections.

On the question of capitalization, these bondholders raise one question different from that already covered by this opinion. They point out that the Interstate Commerce Commission in its findings determined separately the following capitalizations for each of the three main railroads comprising the System; Missouri Pacific $463,000,000.00; N. O. T. & M., $67,000,000.00 and I. G. N., $50,000,000.00. The total of these three capitalizations would be $580,000,000.00, but the Commission set a System capitalization of $560,000,000.00, or $20,000,000.00 less than the aggregate. This, they allege and argue, constitutes a deprivation of $20,000,000.00 of property to the creditors and is in violation of the statute and of the Constitution.

The Commission, however, fully explained this elimination in its report when it said:

> "One of the parties to the proceedings contends that the duplications do not affect the value of the properties and that the permissible capitalization for the system should equal the total of the separate capitalizations. If any one of the three operating groups of railroads were to be separately reorganized its ownership of valuable securities of one of the other two groups would be a recognizable asset, the value of the securities so owned being proper to add to the value which its other owned property otherwise would possess. Likewise, any income in the form of return on such securities of the other company so owned by the first group would increase the total income of the first group and its total permissible capitalization should be greater than if it did not own those securities. However, the total permissible capitalization of the second operating group of railroads whose securities were so owned would not be less by reason of any ownership of its securities by the first group. If, however, title to the entire owned properties of both groups were vested in a third new company, the securities of either of the former separate groups if transferred to the new company would represent no value to the new company additional to that which it would already possess by reason of the transfer to it of the titles to all of the other properties of the two groups. In the hands of the new company the securities of one of the former groups held by the other would be cancelled. They would add nothing to the earnings of the third new company and would constitute no basis for permitting a higher capitalization of the new company than should be allowed if such securities had not been transferred to it." (emphasis the Court's)

Certainly in an ordinary merger inter-company holdings would, under proper accounting procedure, result in cancellations, and this Court can see no material difference arising from the fact that capitalization is the question here. Capitalization is based on value, and where the inter-company holdings represent no value or asset on consolidation their elimination from capitalization follows as a matter of course. The Court rules, therefore, that in law the Commission was correct on this point.

Comstock Objections.

The most strongly urged objections are those filed by one Andrew W. Comstock, who alleges that he is the holder of $80,000 of 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds of the Missouri Pacific and that he files these objections on behalf of himself, of 14 owners of at least $90,000.00 additional of said bonds, and of all other owners and holders of said bonds. His objections are joined in and adopted by the Committee for the 5¼% Secured Bonds.

Comstock objects to the participation of the Alleghany Corporation in the reorganization on the ground that he charges the Alleghany Corporation for its benefit improperly utilized the Debtor Missouri Pacific contrary to the interests of said Debtor. This contention, contained in Comstock's objections 20 to 23, inclusive, cannot be decided at this time because the Court has ordered a separate hearing on the alleged facts and the permissibility of Alleghany's participation. That, however, will not delay a decision on the plan as a whole since the Commission has made provision in the Plan for the eventuality that Comstock might be upheld in excluding or subordinating Alleghany. The Commission said in its Report:

> "If, however, the court shall rule that Alleghany Corporation is not entitled to participate in this reorganization, we conclude and find that any new class B common stock and warrants to subscribe to such stock, which, by the allocations of new securities approved herein, would be distributed to Alleghany Corporation, should not be allotted to that corporation but should be redistributed so as to increase the allotments of class B common stock, and warrants receivable by the other unsecured creditors of the Missouri Pacific group, and by holders of its serial 5¼ per cent bonds, the increase in each case to be in the same proportion as that which the amount of such stock and warrants otherwise receivable by each such other unsecured creditor and each serial bondholder bears to the total amount of such class-B common stock and warrants authorized herein to be issued to all such other Missouri Pacific unsecured creditors and the serial bondholders."

Therefore, no disposition will be made of these objections here.

Comstock alleges and argues that the Interstate Commerce Commission failed to exercise its independent judgment in the promulgation of the present plan, was unduly influenced by the fact that it was initiated and presented as a compromise plan, and was influenced to adopt, without consideration, a deal made by private negotiators, i. e., the proponents of the plan. He, therefore, urges that the Plan must be disapproved because of an alleged failure on the part of the Commission to fulfill its statutory duties independent of agreement. For this allegation the Court finds no basis. Although a compromise plan was presented, it must be noted that plan embodied most of the provisions that the Commission in its 1940 plan had already shown that it considered essential and unopen to alteration. Further, the compromise plan was not accepted by the Commission en toto, but several very material alterations were insisted upon by the Commission. The record sent up to this court from the Commission is loaded with examples of the Commission's painstaking consideration of all of the suggested provisions of the compromise plan, its findings and conclusions on each provision, its alterations of certain of those provisions, and its careful discharge of its statutory duty. This court does not believe that the mere existence and recognition of a compromise plan presented by important parties in interest is any evidence at all of a failure of the Commission to perform its function. In view of the extremely complicated and contentious nature of a railroad reorganization proceeding, and its tendency to drag on over the years, compromise plans are to be favored rather than criticized, when they tend to expedite reorganaziations and allow greater participation by those not so securely situated.

Comstock next makes the point that the alternative offer of cash or securities to certain senior creditors is not feasible and will result in a higher capitalization than the Commission has held permissible. Stated as simply as possible, the Commission has held that the new company should be capitalized at not more than $560,000,000. It has further provided in its plan (which was suggested by the compromise plan) that certain senior security holders be given an option to take either securities or cash in lieu of securities (the cash offer representing a considerable reduction of claim). The Commission felt, and correctly so, that allocations of securities to full value of claims made the treatment of senior securities fair and equitable, and that the optional cash offer, which could be electively taken, although representing a reduction in total claims, was valid in light of the alternative provisions. It should be carefully noted that in this alternative cash offer lay the very heart of the compromise in the Plan, as it was the scaling down of senior claims by the alternative cash offers that produced greater participation for junior interests.

In order to carry out these provisions the Plan provides that available cash be used for paying security holders these cash options, or be used to purchase the new company's securities necessary to make the allocations if they elected instead to take securities. The securities to be allocated under the optional offers are all either general mortgage bonds, Series "B", or common stock, Class "A", and as to all or any of the senior security holders given an option and not electing to take cash, these Bonds and Stocks would be provided by purchases from allocations already made to others. No original issuance of these securities to meet contingent allocations is contemplated, and although such issuance is recognized as possible it is not considered probable. The Plan provides specifically the method for putting these provisions into effect:

"Creditors who are entitled to an election to receive securities of one class in lieu of securities of another class or cash in lieu of securities, shall make such election within such time (not earlier than the date upon which the plan is confirmed), and in such manner as the reorganization managers, subject to the approval of the court, shall determine.

After confirmation of the plan, the trustee of the estates of the debtors shall upon request of the reorganization managers pay to them a sum in cash equal to the difference betwen (a) the maximum amount which would be payable to creditors under the alternative offers of cash or securities herein provided for and (b) the amount of cash theretofore distributed to such creditors which is to be credited against cash payable under the plan pursuant to Section A hereof. Said funds, together with any cash refunded to the reorganization managers by creditors who shall elect to take the alternative offer of securities, shall be deposited in a separate account to the credit of the reorganization managers and shall be used by them solely for the following purposes:

(1) On consummation of the plan to pay to creditors who, under the alternative offer of cash or securities, shall have elected to receive cash, the amounts to which such creditors, respectively, are entitled, as [seth] forth in this section T, and to take securities, the capitalization of the new company would exceed $560,000,000, for the reason that that total capitalization can only be maintained where not a single security is issued the option holders or where securities can be purchased at the cash offer price. In other words, he argues that where a security holder elects to take security in lieu of cash, the reorganization managers are bound to purchase him a security in the market at the cash option price or issue additional securities.

(2) To acquire in the open market or at private sale, including purchases on a "when issued" basis a principal amount of general-mortgage bonds, series B, and a number of shares of common stock which shall not exceed the principal amount of general-mortgage bonds, series B, and the number of shares of common stock which are to be issued to creditors pursuant to their election to take such bonds and stock in lieu of cash."

After consideration, the Court has come to the conclusion that these arguments are not a valid attack on the Plan for two reasons. First, the Court is of the opinion that the possibility of the reorganization managers being able to buy securities at the option price is not as improbable as Comstock assumes. When he argues that the mere presence of the reorganization managers in the market will drive up the price, he overlooks the fact that the managers will not be pressed for time and can buy when the conditions are favorable. Further, he brushes aside the assurances given by certain representatives of large holders of securities which will be exchangeable under the Plan for general-mortgage bonds, Series B, that these representatives would not, subject to the approval at the time of their directors, permit the development of a corner but would recommend to their respective boards of directors that sufficient of these bonds be placed upon the market within the required price limit to meet any need of the reorganization managers. Although the Court realizes that these assurances are in no way legally binding agreements, still the Court has no fear that these parties will fail to assist the reorganization managers in this regard. He further assumes a far higher market price for the Class "A" stock than seems probable to this court, in view of the prospective decreased earnings in the post-war period.

Second, the Commission's Report itself shows that the possibility of such an increased issuance of securities was inherent in the plan and recognized by it and that provision was made for such an eventuality. The Commission's anticipation of this is found in the provision that the reorganization managers fix the number of shares of each class to be authorized and to be originally issued. Comstock erroneously assumes, however, that if a greater number of shares are issued the capitalization would thereby be increased. His error lies in his failure to recognize that all computations as to this no-par value common stock are based on a purely assigned value of $100.00 per share and that, therefore, any further issue of such stock would not actually increase the total capitalization one whit. Further, any increased issue of common stock would not affect the compensation of those receiving common stock, as Comstock urges, because the Commission's finding of full compensation was definitely made in the light of their recognition of the possibility that a greater number of shares might be issued. Comstock further overlooks the fact that if the allotted cash cannot buy the required securities on the market, that it can then under supervision of this Court be applied to retirement of other debt, which will obviously work to keep down total capitalization.

The Court is quite favorably impressed with the entire scheme embodied in this alternative cash offer device and rather than disapproving it, as Comstock urges, is inclined toward it most favorably for the beneficial result it has had upon the treatment of junior interests. The Court notes with interest the fact that Comstock's voice among the many interested parties is now alone raised in opposition to this provision.

Comstock next attacks the provisions of the Plan which provide for the methods of designating voting trustees, directors and reorganization managers. He alleges that the method selected by the Commission, whereby the five reorganization managers are designated by representatives of major issues of securities, and a panel of directors, is to be designated by similar groups (subject to ultimate selection by the voting trustees), is a delegation of control of the reorganized company to a small group not representative of the security-holders. He urges that the Plan should be altered to provide for the selection of directors and managers by direct vote of the security-holders themselves. The Court is not disposed to sustain this, for the reason that similar provisions for the selection of such officers have met the universal approval of the Commission and U. S. District Courts in other reorganizations. So far as this Court can determine, it has always been customary to authorize designations by responsible representatives of major issues. Further, under this Plan the voting trustees are to be selected by the Court itself and actions of the reorganization managers are to be subject to its approval. The Court believes that following this customary reorganization procedure and delegating authority to representatives who have regularly acted is in all respects warranted, and gives no basis for a fear of dominance by an entrenched group.

The Plan provides that the new first mortgage shall contain a provision which shall permit the new company, with the consent of holders of two-thirds, and in some cases three-fourths, of the new first mortgage bonds, to make various amendments and alterations to said mortgage. It further provides that the new general mortgage shall contain provisions permitting certain amendments to it. Comstock attacks these provisions, referring to them as "escape clauses", on the grounds that they constitute an attempt to circumvent the bankruptcy law by permitting future reorganizations out of court, and that they are contrary to public policy. He points out, apprehensively, the many changes that could be made in the Plan at a later date by the use of these "escape clauses". The Court, however, is not impressed by this objection and is of the opinion that these provisions are sound and wise. They are democratic in nature, allowing for voluntary alterations in the mortgages, as need arises, and provide a far less expensive and formal procedure than court action. Surely a provision that in a fair way prevents full-dress bankruptcy proceedings is desirable, rather than vicious as Comstock urges. There is nothing in the statute which prohibits such a device, and the Court is aware that not only have such clauses been approved in other reorganization proceedings but that they are very common today in non-reorganization indentures.

Finally, there is the so-called Comstock Objection No. 19, which was the subject of a separate hearing and upon which extensive evidence was presented. Objection No. 19 reads:

> "19. The Plan is unfair and inequitable by reason of the fact that it 'assumed' the validity of an alleged claim of MOP against NOTM for inter-company advances. The allocation of securities to the said 5¼% Secured Bonds is expressly stated by the Commission to be based on the assumption of the validity of said claim. Any allocation of securities based on the validty of said claim is unfair and inequitable. The National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, requires a full judicial determination on the merits of the validity of said claim. There has been no such determination. The claim is invalid in all respects. It is based on advances purportedly made by MOP to a dominated subsidiary NOTM. Said advances were made in the interests of MOP and not of NOTM. They would not have been made if NOTM had had the benefit of independent management. Detailed objections to the claim of MOP against NOTM are contained in Schedule A annexed hereto and made a part hereof."

Briefly, the Comstock contention amounts to this: that the Missouri Pacific claim against the NOT&M is invalid and, if invalidated, the NOT&M stock, which secures the 5¼% Bonds, would have a value greater than that assigned it by the Commission, which increased value should result in a more favorable treatment of these bonds.

The evidence presented at the hearing of this objection was voluminous and complicated, and cannot be here detailed without unduly prolonging this opinion. The Court has, however, carefully considered the entire record and is of the opinion that, everything considered, the evidence before it does not sustain Comstock's contentions of any [improperiety] on the part of officers and directors or of the invalidity of the inter-company claim. Railroad finance is, of necessity, of a most intricate nature, and after the passage of twenty years, and the death of most participants, doubt can be cast upon almost any financial transaction. This situation, however, does not amount to a positive showing of impropriety, but rather arises from the extremely intricate nature of the subject matter, which lends itself to strained interpretations when time has blurred the true picture.

Comstock's contentions of the milking of the NOT&M by Missouri Pacific cannot be reconciled with the great benefits conferred upon the Gulf Coast Lines by the Baldwin improvement program. It is not this Court's experience that a parent corporation, when engaged in the type of improper conduct alleged here, pours millions of dollars into the subsidiary to build it up to a position of strength far in excess of that at the date of acquisition. Further, the Court is impressed by the fact that almost all of the transactions of which Comstock complains were entered into only after notice to, and with the approval of, the Interstate Commerce Commission. No substantiation appears for Comstock's innuendo that the Commission was somehow derelict in its duty, or allowed itself to be hoodwinked.

The objector Comstock purchased the securities which gives him entree to this proceeding as a speculation in the latter part of 1942 and in the early part of 1943, and he did not become a party until September 30th, 1943. No facts have been shown that have not been available to all for many years; and Comstock's being a newcomer does not relieve him from the defense of laches. The bonds that he holds are subject to all of the infirmities which existed at the time he bought them. Looking to the entire record, and the dates upon which the information presented became available, the Court is brought to the conclusion that the contention urged, even were it possible to substantiate it, is stale beyond recall, and that there has been inexcusable delay in its presentation. This Court has confidence in its Trustee, and believes that he has fully performed his duties in relation to this inter-company claim. Time and again opportunity has been presented to various persons to come forward but with no result. Comstock cannot contend he is in the position of a person from whom the facts have been concealed. Rather, he has taken facts apparent to all and only at the twelfth hour has come forward.

Finally, the Court would like to note that the entire attempt by Comstock to disprove the validity of the inter-company claim is not an attack upon those whom he alleges perpetrated a wrong, but, rather, is an attempt to hold other creditors of the railroad responsible for the alleged actions of others. This feature, it appears to the Court, constitutes a basic difference between the alleged situation in this case and the so-called "Deep Rock" case, Taylor vs. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307, so heavily relied upon by Comstock. The other creditors whom Comstock's position would injure are certainly as innocent as he of any alleged malfeasance and those whom he attacks are no longer held to be in interest.

Therefore, the entire record considered, the Court is of the opinion that Objection No. 19 and related objections of Andrew W. Comstock to the Plan of Reorganization, and his objection to the claim of the Missouri Pacific against the NOT&M, should be overruled.

Having considered and disposed of all objections, the Court will next address itself to the criteria about which Section 77 (e) of the Act (11 U. S. C. 205) requires that the Judge satisfy himself, regardless of objections. The Court is of the opinion that the requirements of sub-sections 2 and 3 of said section are adequately provided for in the Plan by Paragraph T thereof, and since hearings on expenses and fees incident to the reorganization have already been held within maximum limits fixed by the Commission no omission is found there. As for the provisions of sub-paragraph 1, requiring that the court be satisfied that the Plan "complies with the provisions of sub-section B of Section 77, is fair and equitable, etc.," the very general accord now afforded the Plan is naturally influential in its favor. As a whole, the Court is of the opinion that the Plan meets all of the requirements of the Act. We are, of course, familiar with the prior approved plan, and have carefully studied all recent alterations as well as the actions taken by the Commission in regard to this Court's suggestions in its second opinion. The Court believes that the Commission has fully complied with the requirements of law and given satisfactory further consideration, and that the Plan now presented is in all respects just and satisfactory and holds forth high prospect for a soundly reorganized Missouri Pacific System.

The formulation of a workable reorganization for this huge system has been a long and difficult task, but the Court now believes that, with the approval of the present Plan, the end of the matter is in sight. Although, as the Commission has said, no plan can be drawn which will receive the unanimous approval of everyone, it appears to the Court that the present Plan achieves as near perfection as human fallibility can attain.

Therefore, there will be entered a separate order overruling Objection No. 19 of Andrew W. Comstock, in accordance with the prior order of this Court as to said Objection, and there will be entered an order overruling all other Objections and Claims for equitable treatment and approving that Plan of Reorganization contained in the Third Supplemental Order of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Counsel is directed to submit draft of said orders on notice for approval and signature.

We wish to call the attention of the Court to a point which arises out of a statement in the Court's Opinion approving the Plan as follows:

"Further, he brushes aside the assurances given by certain representatives of large holders of securities which will be exchangeable under the Plan for general-mortgage bonds, Series B, that these representatives would not, subject to the approval at the time of their Directors, permit the development of a corner but will recommend to their respective Boards of Directors that sufficient of these bonds be placed upon the market within the required price limit to meet any need of the Reorganization Managers. Although the court realizes that these assurances are in no way legally binding agreements, still the court has no fear that these parties will fail to assist the Reorganization Managers in this regard."

The above quoted portion of the Court's opinion refers to the following statement which appeared at pages 10-12 of the Group's Brief dated March 3, 1945 in support of the Plan:

"The foregoing discussion has dealt only with the alternative offer of cash or common stock, class A. What we have said in this connection is equally applicable to the provisions of the Plan for an alternative of cash or General Mortgage Bonds, Series B, the only exception being that the reorganization managers must devote the fund placed in their hands for the purpose of acquiring new General Mortgage Bonds, Series B, to the purchase of bonds of that class.

"In this connection some comment appears desirable concerning the slanderous insinuations made on page 13 of the brief with respect to the so-called 'agreement' concerning General Mortgage Income B Bonds, which agreement is referred to by the Commission in its Report as follows:

"'As to the General Mortgage Bonds, an agreement has been secured by the proponents of the Plan from certain of the parties to this proceeding who will be entitled to receive such bonds under the terms of the Plan, to sell to the Reorganization Managers, if necessary, a sufficient amount of the bonds at the maximum price.' (R. 20771)

"This statement by the Commission appears open to misconstruction. A more accurate statement was made on this point in the brief filed by the First and Refunding Protective Committee on December 1, 1943, with the Interstate Commerce Commission, in which it was said on page 16:

"'* * * certain representatives of large holders of securities which will be exchangeable under the Plan for General Mortgage Bonds Series B have given such assurances as they are legally permitted to give, to the effect that they will tender to the Reorganization Managers the necessary amounts of Series B Bonds within the required price limit, thus providing a safeguard against the only possible danger, i. e., a corner on the supply of Income Bs.'

"This would seem to be sufficiently clear but, in order to avoid any further misconstruction, we can elaborate this statement as follows: At the time the so-called assurances were given, the only possible danger that appeared to exist in connection with the acquisition of the General Mortgage B Bonds was the possibility that the reorganization managers might be unable to acquire a sufficient amount of these bonds if they were deliberately withheld from the market. The assurances which were given were given only against this possibility, i. e., representatives of certain of the insurance companies who on the basis of their holdings at that time would receive substantial blocks of the Series B Income Bonds stated that they would recommend to their respective boards of directors that their Series B Income Bonds be placed upon the market if it was found otherwise impossible to meet the requirements of the reorganization managers under the Plan. As under the laws governing the investments of such insurance companies it would be impossible for them to make any binding agreement for the future disposition of their property except pursuant to definite contracts of sale for definite amounts of securities at definite prices, all approved by their boards of directors, the assurances were not agreements to sell but were representations that the managements of the companies involved would not, subject to the approval at the time of their directors, permit the development of a corner. There has never been anything secret about this 'agreement,' although there appears to have been some confusion as to the nature of 'such assurances as they are legally permitted to give' on the part of persons who have not participated in the negotiations and who failed to read the record carefully."

"This would seem to be sufficiently clear but, in order to avoid any further misconstruction, we can elaborate this statement as follows: At the time the so-called assurances were given, the only possible danger that appeared to exist in connection with the acquisition of the General Mortgage B Bonds was the possibility that the reorganization managers might be unable to acquire a sufficient amount of these bonds if they were deliberately withheld from the market. There has never been anything secret about this 'agreement,' although there appears to have been some confusion as to the nature of 'such assurances as they are legally permitted to give' on the part of persons who have not

In the summer of 1943 when these assurances were given it was the general expectation that the compromise plan thereby made possible would result in the consummation of the reorganization within a reasonably short time. In view of market conditions at that time, the only risk which appeared likely, before the Plan could be consummated, was the possible inability of the Reorganization Managers to acquire enough General Mortgage Bonds Series B to meet Plan requirements without running up the price far beyond intrinsic value.

As a result of hotly contested litigation, consummation of the Plan has been delayed long beyond the expectation of the parties to the compromise. The probability of further appeals will result in further delays. In the meantime there has been a substantial change in conditions. The very large earnings due to the War with the resultant substantial retirement of senior debt and the general rise in the market value of securities have brought about an increase in the intrinsic and probable market values of the new General Mortgage Bonds Series B to a point far beyond what was considered possible at the time the assurances were given. The representatives of the companies who gave the assurances intend to fulfill their undertaking by making the recommendations to their respective boards of directors, with every expectation that if their approval is possible under then existing conditions, it will be forthcoming. Nevertheless these representatives deem it only fair to call the Court's attention to the fact that those boards of directors cannot sell securities at prices substantially below their actual values at the time without violation both of their statutory duty and their fiduciary duty to policyholders. In view of present market conditions and of the enhanced intrinsic position of the General Mortgage Bonds Series B it appears quite possible that they may be selling at prices substantially in excess of the option price at the time of consummation of the Plan. Under these circumstances, fulfillment of the "assurances" might be delayed or might even be permanently impossible.

Furthermore the statutes governing the investments of these companies require that all assets held as reserves against the companies' respective liabilities to their policyholders be at all times subject to the control of their respective boards of directors. This being so, it is quite possible that the directors may feel it their duty, if the market prices for the First and Refunding Bonds should go higher, to liquidate all or part of their holdings. In such an event, it would obviously be impossible for these companies to furnish the required General Mortgage Bonds Series B.

The foregoing statement is not intended to suggest any lack of confidence in the Plan or that the provisions of the Plan with respect to the alternative offers of cash or General Mortgage Bonds Series B are in any way impaired. If the cash options are not exercised the Reorganization Managers will have approximately $3,600,000 with which to purchase a maximum of about $5,800,000 principal amount of General Mortgage Bonds Series B. It is not essential that these funds be used immediately upon consummation to purchase the Series B Bonds. The Reorganization Managers may wait until market conditions permit such purchases. Indeed the situation is not greatly different from that presented by the alternative offers of cash or stock.

District Court of the United States, Eastern Division, Eastern Judicial District of Missouri.

In the Matter of	In Proceedings for the Reorganization of a Railroad. No. 6935.
Missouri Pacific Railroad Company,
Debtor.

The Interstate Commerce Commission (hereinafter called the "Commission") certified to this Court the Plan of Reorganization, as embodied in the Commission's Third Supplemental Order dated October 9, 1944, of the Debtor and subsidiary debtors, parties to these proceedings (excepting the subsidiary debtor Missouri Illinois Railroad Company), together with a transcript of the proceedings before the Commission. All parties in interest have been given due opportunity to file their objections in writing to said plan and their claims for equitable treatment, and have been heard or given an opportunity to be heard thereon at a hearing duly noticed pursuant to an Order of this Court, No. 2604 (R. 21031). The Court having heard all of the testimony given at said hearing and having considered all of the evidence, including the exhibits, and having considered the record certified to the Court by the Commission, the briefs and arguments of counsel and the entire record in these proceedings, and being fully advised in the premises, and having filed its opinion herein on December 21, 1945 (which opinion was amended by orders entered herein on December 28, 1945 and January 8, 1946) and proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law and order having been presented upon due and legal notice as provided in said opinion

The Court Finds

1. That the plan as contained in said Third Supplemental Order of the Commission dated October 9, 1944 (hereinafter called the "Plan")

(a) includes provisions modifying and altering the rights of creditors of the Debtor and subsidiary debtors, other than Missouri Illinois Railroad Company, (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Debtors");

(b) provides for fixed charges (including fixed interest on funded debt, interest on unfunded debt, amortization of discount or funded debt, and rent for leased railroads) in such an amount that after due consideration of the probable prospective earnings of the property in light of its earnings experience and all other relevant facts, there will be adequate coverage of such fixed charges by the probable earnings available for the payment thereof;

(c) provides adequate means for the execution of the Plan; and

(d) in all other respects complies with the provisions of sub-section (b) of Section 77.

2. That the Plan is predicated upon findings by the Commission which are supported by material evidence and are in accordance with legal standards and on the basis of said findings it

(a) is fair and equitable;

(b) affords due recognition to the rights of each class of creditors and stockholders;

(c) does not discriminate unfairly in favor of any class of creditors or stockholders;

(d) will conform to the requirements of the law of the land regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders.

3. That the approximate amounts to be paid by the Debtors, or by any corporation or corporations acquiring the Debtors' assets, for expenses and fees incident to the reorganization, have been fully disclosed so far as they can be ascertained at the date of said hearing, are no more than reasonable and are within such maximum limits as are fixed by the Commission. Such additional amounts as may be required to be paid out of the estates of the Debtors, or by the reorganized Debtors or by any corporation or corporations acquiring the Debtors' assets, for services performed and expenses and fees incurred since January 8, 1945 in connection with the proceedings and Plan will, when such services, expenses and fees have been ascertained, be subject to the approval of this Court within such maximum limits as are fixed hereafter by the Commission.

4. That the Plan provides for the payment of all costs of administration and all other allowances made or to be made by this Court.

5. That the Plan provides for the payment of all claims of the United States for taxes, and that the United States is not a creditor on any claims for customs duties.

6. The foregoing findings shall be taken and deemed to be findings of fact, and in addition, to the extent appropriate, conclusions of law.

It Is Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed:

I.

That all objections heretofore filed herein to the Plan and all claims heretofore filed herein for equitable treatment other than that provided by the Plan are hereby severally overruled and denied with the following exceptions:

(2) Andrew W. Comstock's Objections 20, 21, 22 and 23 and his claim for equitable treatment based thereon,

VI.

That the finding of the Commission that claims under certain guaranties and agreements executed in connection with contracts as described in the proofs of claim enumerated in Paragraph T of the Plan, whereby the Debtors or their predecessors or the trustee of the estates of the Debtors acquired certain rights with respect to terminal operations, are not adversely and materially affected by the Plan, is hereby affirmed.

This Order directed that the Trustee shall have an additional period of six months, beginning April 1, 1946, within which to consider and determine which of the leases, contracts and arrangements between the debtors, or any of them, and any other parties, should be adopted or should be renounced or disaffirmed.

Petition

Of Trustee For Advice and Directions With Respect to Compromise and Settlement of the Claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation Against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

Petition No. 2928.

(Filed April 25, 1946.)

District Court of the United States, Eastern Division, Eastern Judicial District of Missouri.

In the Matter of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.	In Proceedings for the Reorganization of a Railroad. No. 6935.

Comes now Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and respectfully states to the Court:

1. That periodically during the last several years, Trustee has given consideration to the advantages which might accrue to the estate of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and its creditors from a satisfactory settlement of the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (hereinafter called the R. F. C.) against said Debtor Estate, should the cash position of the trust estate be such as to warrant and permit retirement of said indebtedness. Under date of November 21, 1945, the R. F. C. addressed a letter to Trustee, stating that in the opinion of the Directors of said Corporation, their claim against Debtor Estate should be paid and offering to accept in full settlement and discharge of said claim "a cash payment equal to the principal amount of said loans, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing said loans at the rate expressed in said notes to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933) and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of payment of said claim, less cash payments heretofore credited by this Corporation to interest on said loans, upon condition that said payment shall be made within sixty days from the date of this letter."

2. That after some preliminary correspondence and after Trustee had again carefully reviewed the matter, he reached the conclusion that in view of the improvement of earnings of the trust estate during recent years, the resulting accumulation of cash, the interest saving incident thereto and other advantages which would come to the trust estate from the settlement of said claim, it should be compromised and settled if the R. F. C. would agree to such action on fair terms and conditions and if within the legal or equitable powers of Trustee so to do.

3. Trustee further states that on Friday, January 18, 1946, he conferred with the Hon. Charles B. Henderson, Chairman of the Board of the R. F. C. at his office in Washington, D. C., on the question of settlement of said claim at which conference Trustee advised Chairman Henderson that recently and before receiving his letter of November 21, 1945, he had reached the conclusion that his funds were sufficient to warrant retirement of the claim of the R. F. C. and that he would undertake to carry out a settlement of the claim if fair and reasonable terms could be agreed upon; that after receipt of Chairman Henderson's letter proposing settlement of the claim, Trustee had communicated with representatives of the Institutional Group representing holders of Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds to ascertain whether they would offer opposition to such a settlement and had been advised by them that they would oppose a settlement thereof on the ground that it would constitute a preference; that the Trustee thereupon submitted the question to his counsel, Russell L. Dearmont, and also to Thos. T. Railey, Assistant to Counsel for Trustee, who in a joint opinion dated January 15, 1946, advised Trustee that it was their conclusion that substantially all of the cash held by the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, was subject to an equitable lien on behalf of the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage Bondholders and that the use of such cash to discharge the claim of the R. F. C. would constitute a preference; that if counsel for the R. F. C. did not agree with the opinion of his counsel or doubted the correctness of the conclusions reached therein and the R. F. C. desired to have the Court pass upon the issue, Trustee would be willing to file a Petition asking the Court for advice and directions in the premises, provided the R. F. C. would accept in full discharge of its claim the principal amount thereof with interest at the rate of 6% per annum to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933), 4% to the effective date of the Modified Plan of Reorganization (January 1, 1943), and 3½% thereafter to the date of payment, less the amount of payments already made to the R. F. C. representing income from collateral held by it as security for said claim; that this proposal was based upon the treatment of the R. F. C. claim in the Modified Plan of Reorganization which the Corporation had stated was acceptable to it; that Chairman Henderson requested that the aforesaid proposal be submitted to the R. F. C. in writing for its further consideration; that at the conclusion of the conference, Trustee further suggested that the R. F. C. give very serious consideration to modifying its offer of settlement by reducing the rate of interest charge from the date of bankruptcy to the date of settlement to 2½% per annum, or in any event, not in excess of 3% per annum, and suggested that such a proposal would mean a substantial saving to the trust estate and might conceivably remove opposition which might otherwise be encountered; that under date of January 21, 1946, Trustee addressed a letter to Chairman Henderson of the R. F. C. setting forth the terms of Trustee's oral proposal made at the aforesaid conference; that thereafter, on February 27, 1946, Trustee received a letter from Chairman Henderson, dated February 21, [1945], advising that the proposal of payment in said letter had been carefully considered by the Directors of the R. F. C. and that they had concluded they would not be warranted in accepting settlement of the claim on any basis less favorable than that set forth in their letter of November 21, 1945, and that the sixty-day limitation stated in said letter having expired, the offer of settlement set forth therein was withdrawn and cancelled; that on April 1, 1946, Trustee again conferred with Chairman Henderson of the R. F. C. at his office in Washington, D. C., on the subject of settlement of said claim, and thereafter, on April 15, 1946, received a letter, dated April 11, 1946, from the Chairman renewing the R. F. C.'s offer to settle said claim on the same terms as submitted by their offer of November 21, 1945, and upon the further condition that Trustee advise the R. F. C. within twenty days that he was willing to accept said offer subject to the obtaining of the necessary Court approval and subject to such approval being obtained and such settlement being made not later than ninety days from date; that Chairman Henderson, by subsequent letter of date April 16, 1946, expressed willingness that the aforesaid twenty and ninety day limitations should begin April 15, 1946; that counsel for the R. F. C. is of the opinion that, despite the aforesaid joint opinion of Trustee's counsel and assistant counsel, dated January 15, 1946, and without taking issue with the conclusions of said opinion, the question of the payment of the R. F. C.'s aforesaid loans to the Missouri Pacific should be considered as an administrative matter to be decided by this Honorable Court in its discretion, and that since the R. F. C.'s loans to the Missouri Pacific have a security position clearly superior to the publicly held First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds it would be entirely proper for the District Court in its discretion to approve the payment of the R. F. C. loans.

4. Under date of February 29, 1936, R. F. C. duly filed in these proceedings its Proof of Claim No. 502 (Rec. p. 3693), in the principal sum of $23,134,800.00, evidenced by six promissory notes, all bearing interest from date at the rate of 6% per annum, as follows:

5. That the total interest accrued on said loan to June 30, 1946, figured at the contract rate of 6% per annum amounts to $19,486,912.00; that to date, R. F. C. has received payments, primarily through the application of dividends and interest collected on pledged collateral, in the sum of $10,454,119.00, leaving interest accrued and unpaid at June 30, 1946, amounting to $9,031,793.00; that under the offer of settlement contained in the aforesaid letter of R. F. C., dated April 11, 1946, the amount of unpaid interest at June 30, 1946, will amount to $2,898,585.00; that this sum, added to the principal amount of said debt, $23,134,800.00, would make the amount to be paid if said offer is accepted and the transaction closed on said date, $26,033,385.00.

6. Under the Plan of Reorganization set forth in the Supplemental Report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, dated July 4, 1944, and the Third Supplemental Report and Third Supplemental Order of the Commission, dated October 9, 1944, approved by an Order of this Court duly entered January 22, 1946, the claim of the R. F. C. is allotted cash and new securities in the following amounts:

Series A 3½% 15-Yr. First Mortgage Bonds, Or Series B 3¾% 25-Yr. First Mortgage Bonds	23,134,800.00
Total Cash and New Securities	$28,464,042.00

The aforesaid cash payment allotted to the R. F. C. represented payment in cash of unpaid interest at 6% to the date of bankruptcy and 4% thereafter to January 1, 1943, the effective date of said Plan.

Paragraph A of said Plan of Reorganization as set forth in said Order of the Commission (Rec. p. 20894) provides, among other things, that "cash in the treasuries of the debtors available for distribution may be disributed to creditors from time to time, pending the consummation of the plan, as the court may from time to time direct." In its Third Supplemental Report, the Commission discussed the possibility of further cash distributions at the direction of the Court, and, among other things, said:

"In determining cash distributions as well as fixing total capitalization as stated in our report, we recognized that the cash position of the debtor's trustee would vary in the future and that 'surplus cash' might either exceed or fall short of our estimates. We believed and are still of the opinion, that the court, in the light of current conditions, should determine any amounts of cash available and not authorized by the plan, which might be so distributed, within the framework of the plan, from time to time up to the date of consummation of the plan. In fixing the amount of capitalization and in approving the provision of the plan authorizing cash distributions upon order of the court prior to consummation, we recognized the possibility that as of the date of consummation the system capitalization might be somewhat less than the $560,000,000 approved by us. We contemplated, however, insuring that amount as the maximum. Even if the collateral-trust notes are not issued, an increase in equipment obligations resulting from a future demand for, and availability of, additional equipment prior to the date of consummation of the plan may result in total capitalization as of that time being about the same as the maximum fixed by us." (Rec. p. 20887).

7. Trustee further states that his estimated cash and cash equivalent at June 30, 1946, after meeting the requirements for distribution under the Modified Plan of Reorganization, including cash to be paid bondholders and interest on the new securities from the proposed effective date of said Plan, January 1, 1943 to June 30, 1946, and after deducting $15,000,000.00 for working fund and contingencies, all taxes accrued and unpaid and estimated Federal Income and Excess Profit tax liability at June 30, 1946, estimated reorganization expenses of $2,000,000.00, reserve for deferred maintenance of $3,730,000.00 and reserve for land grant deductions of $5,350,000.00, amounts to $24,857,320.00, to which should be added $2,623,730.00 representing an adjustment on account of the elimination of said claim from the requirements of said Plan of Reorganization. Giving effect to this adjustment, the estimated cash or cash equivalent available for payment of said R. F. C. claim at June 30, 1946, would be $27,481,050.00.

8. Trustee further states that settlement of said claim at June 30, 1946, for $26,033,385.00 as proposed by the R. F. C. would be $6,133,208.00 less than the full amount of the principal and accrued interest due on said claim at said date; that said settlement would result in an annual interest saving, based on the contract rate, of $1,388,088.00; that it would release collateral held by the R. F. C. as security for said loan, the value of which, taken at the current market price thereof or where no market price is available at a reasonable estimated value, is $43,858,025.00, subject only to the lien of the Railroad Credit Corporation for the payment of a loan amounting at June 30, 1946, to $1,934,507.00; that Trustee has advised the R. F. C. that he is willing to accept its aforesaid offer of settlement if this Court will advise and direct him so to do.

9. That on June 7, 1933, Trustees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage filed their Petition No. 44 (Rec. p. 269), in these proceedings, asserting the claim of the bonds secured by said Mortgage against said trust estate and praying, among other things, that all tolls, incomes, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the mortgaged property be impounded, segregated and sequestered for the benefit of said petitioners, as Trustees, and of the holders of said First and Refunding Bonds; that on April 24, 1936, the Corporate Trustee under the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company General Mortgage filed its Proof of Claim No. 504 (Rec. p. 3707), in behalf of the bonds secured by said Mortgage which is a lien on all security pledged under said First and Refunding Mortgage, subject only to the prior lien thereon of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and which is in substantially the same terms and form as said first and refunding Mortgage; that substantially all of the funds now held by Trustee in behalf of said trust estate have come from the operation of the railroad properties which are subject to the liens of the aforementioned Mortgages; that if and to the extent that the terms of said Mortgages and the claims filed by said Mortgage Trustees herein create and establish liens upon all or any part of the funds proposed to be used in said compromise and settlement of the claim of the R. F. C., said mortgage creditors may be entitled to be subrogated to the extent of the funds so used, to any rights and liens held by the R. F. C. in said pledged collateral.

Wherefore, the premises considered, Trustee respectfully prays that an Order be duly entered herein:

(1) Advising and directing Trustee whether he shall compromise, settle and pay the aforesaid claim of the R. F. C. against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, upon the terms aforesaid proposed by the R. F. C., to-wit, pay the R. F. C. within ninety days from April 15, 1946, the principal amount of said loans, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing said loans at the rate expressed in said notes (6%) to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933), and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of settlement, less the amount of payments made to the R. F. C. representing income from collateral held by it as security for its said claim;

(2) If the Court shall advise and direct Trustee to make such settlement, that Trustee be authorized upon making said settlement to cancel the notes evidencing said debt and to receive and hold all collateral held by the R. F. C. as security therefor, subject to the lien, if any, of The Railroad Credit Corporation, and subject to such lien, if any, as the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds and the holders of Missouri Pacific General Mortgage Bonds may have or be entitled to by reason of the lien, if any, which they may have upon the cash of the trust estate used to retire said indebtedness;

(3) And for such further or other authority or direction as to the Court may seem meet or proper in the premises.

Trustee.

Answer of Secured Banks to the Petition of the Trustee for Advice in Respect of the Compromise and Settlement of the Claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation Against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

(Filed May 9, 1946.)

Now comes J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated, acting for itself, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Guaranty Trust Company of New York, its associates, as secured creditors of the Debtor above mentioned (J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated and its associates are hereinafter called "respondents"), and, in the answer to the petition of the Trustee for advice and directions with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, (herein called Missouri Pacific) respectfully allege:

1. Upon information and belief, respondents admit the allegations contained in paragraphs of the said petition marked 1, 2, 3 and 4 except so much of the allegations contained in said paragraph 4 as recite alleged market and estimated values attributed to the securities pledged to secure payment of the notes of the Missouri Pacific held by Reconstruction Finance Corporation and, in respect of said securities, respondents allege that the market value of such of said securities as are traded in on the securities markets vary from day to day and that the market values stated in said paragraph 4 of said petition are approximately correct as of the date of said petition; and, in respect of such of said securities as are not traded in on the securities markets, respondents are without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the values thereof alleged by petitioner.

2. Respondents admit the allegations contained in the paragraphs of the said petition marked 5 and 6.

3. Respondents deny knowledge or information, except as hereinafter alleged, sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in the paragraphs of the said petition marked 7 and 8.

4. Respondents admit the allegations contained in the paragraph of the said petition marked 9.

Further Answering the Said Petition Respondents Respectfully Allege:

5. Prior to the institution of these proceedings on March 31, 1933, J. P. Morgan & Co., a partnership engaged in the business of investment banking, made loans (in which its associates, Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Guaranty Trust Company of New York participated) to the Missouri Pacific evidenced by nine promissory notes of various dates, and bearing interest at the rate of 6% per annum. The participations of Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Guaranty Trust Company of New York in said notes amounted in each case to $1,462,500. The collateral, hereinafter described, securing the same was left in the possession of J. P. Morgan & Co. The participation in the said loan of Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. has been further participated.

The foregoing facts are set forth in the proof of claim herein, designated Proof of Claim No. 503, dated April 21, 1936, filed by J. P. Morgan & Co. on behalf of itself, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Guaranty Trust Company of New York and in Proof of Claim No. 524 filed herein by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. dated April 22, 1936 (Proof of Claim No. 503 at Vol. 8, Record p. 3703; Proof of Claim No. 524 at Vol. 9 Record p. 3855).

6. Thereafter, and in March, 1940, J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated, was incorporated under the Banking Law of the State of New York and is now a corporation, with publicly held stock, organized and existing under the laws of said State. On or about the 1st day of April, 1940, the notes held by J. P. Morgan & Co., as evidenced by said proof of claim No. 503 and said collateral were assigned to, and are now held by, J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated.

7. Respondents are the holders of undisputed claims against the Missouri Pacific in the principal sum of $5,850,000 bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum from January 1, 1933. No part of the said claims has been paid by Missouri Pacific, except that, by reason of the payment of dividends and interest on the securities hereinafter described, pledged as collateral for the said debt, the sum of $2,568,625. has been paid and applied on account of accrued interest. See Orders for payment of interest on First and Refunding Bonds, viz: Order 828, Vol. 14, Record p. 6589, Order 1917, Vol. 30 Record p. 15873, Order 2049 Vol. 32, Record pp. 16807, 16809, Order 2186 Vol. 34, Record p. 17855, Order 2370, Vol. 36, Record p. 19111, Order 2577, Vol. 40, Record p. 20975, Order 2789, Vol. 42, Record p. 22545 and Orders as to dividends on Texas and Pacific stock, viz: Order 2230, Vol. 34, Record p. 18069, Order 2423, Vol. 37 Record, p. 19361, Order 2605, Vol. 40, Record p. 21049, Order 2854, Vol. 43, Record p. 22929. (See also Plan, Sec. "T", Third Supplemental Order of Commission of October 9, 1944; Vol. 39, Record, pp. 20948, 20949, 20954 and App. "E" attached to Supplemental Report of Commission of July 4, 1944, id. p.

20879). The amount of the said claims with interest from January 1, 1933 to June 30, 1946, at six per cent per annum is as follows:

Aggregate Principal Amount of nine promissory notes of the Missouri Pacific now outstanding		$5,850,000.
Interest thereon at 6% to June 30, 1946	$4,738,500.
Less payments received and applied to interest to date	2,568,625.
Balance of interest unpaid	$2,169,875.	2,169,875.
Total due to June 30, 1946		$8,019,875.

8. For the security of the said indebtedness with the interest thereon the Missouri Pacific as set forth in said Proof of Claim No. 503 (Vol. 8, Record pp. 3703, 3705) has pledged with J. P. Morgan & Co., and respondent J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated now has possession of, the following collateral:

114,750 shares of common stock of Texas & Pacific Railway Company;

$7,750,000 principal amount of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding mortgage 5 per cent Gold Bonds Series "I".

On information and belief said securities had, as of May 1, 1946, and now have, approximate market values as follows:

114,750 shares Texas & Pacific Railway Company common stock at 51½ per share	$ 5,909,625.
$7,750,000 Missouri Pacific Railway Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds Series "I" at 95½	$ 7,401,250.
	$13,310,875.

9. On or about the 26th day of September 1934, Order No. 234 was entered herein tentatively classifying stockholders and creditors of the Debtor. (Vol. 4 Record p. 1659.) Said order created, among others, the following separate classes of creditors (id at Record p. 1662):

> "Class 24. Claims evidenced by Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. secured notes issued to Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
> Class 25. Claims evidenced by Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. secured notes issued to Railroad Credit Corporation.
> Class 26. Claims evidenced by Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. secured notes issued to J. P. Morgan & Co."

Motions for the modification of said tentative classifications were filed by the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific, by Reconstruction Finance Corporation and others, praying among other things, that the claims of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Railroad Credit Corporation, and of respondents be classified in a single class. (Vol. 4 Record p. 1807; and id. p. 1823). Said petitions were referred to the Honorable Marion C. Early, Special Master, to hear and make recommendations regarding classification of creditors and the Report of the said Special Master recommended that each of the three creditors mentioned above be classified in a separate class. (Order of Reference, Vol. 4 Record p. 1835; Report 234-A, Vol. 6, Record p. 2633.)

10. Thereafter, upon exceptions to said Report of the Special Master (Vol. 6 Record pp. 2643, 2647), this Court by Supplemental Order 234-A of December 27, 1935, overruled the recommendations of the Special Master and directed that the claims of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and of respondents be classified in a single class, designated as Class No. 17 (Opinion, Vol. 7 Record p. 3135 et seq; Supplemental Order, Vol. 7, Record p. 3145).

11. Thereafter, on August 7, 1936, upon appeal taken on behalf of respondents the said Supplemental Order 234-A was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. (Opinion, Vol. 10 Record p. 4451).

12. Thereafter, by motion No. 1763, (Vol. 28, Record p. 14381) the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific moved this Court for a reclassification of stockholders and creditors. In its petition on said motion the Trustee classed, as Class No. 10, the secured notes held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and associates. Thereafter, and in view of the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals above mentioned, this Court made its Order 1763-A of April 11, 1943 classifying the said creditors as follows (Vol. 28 Record pp. 14483, 14485):

> "Class Ten: Secured notes held by (a) Reconstruction Finance Corporation, (b) Railroad Credit Corporation, and (c) J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and their associates."

13. In view of the value of the collateral pledged to secure them, the plan of reorganization approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the Debtor on January 10, 1940 provided similar treatment for the claims of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and of respondents. (Report, Vol. 24, Record, pp. 12154, 12192) The said Plan was approved by this Court in its Opinion No. 1494 of June 20, 1941 (Vol. 29, p. 14959) and by Findings, Conclusions and Decree No. 1494 of July 12, 1941 (Vol. 29, Record, p. 15175). Thereafter, appeals having been taken from said decree to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, and circumstances relating to the said Plan and the Missouri Pacific having, in the meantime, changed, the said plan was remanded to this Court for further reference in its discretion to the Interstate Commerce Commission, by mandate of said Circuit Court, No. 2313, dated May 18, 1943, entered upon agreement of appellants and appellees on the appeals. (Mandate 2313, Vol. 35, Record p. 18591).

14. In the Supplemental Report of the Interstate Commerce Commission of July 4, 1944, approving a revised compromise plan of reorganization for the Missouri Pacific, the Commission again provided for a similar treatment of the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and that of respondents (Report Vol. 39, Record pp. 20723, 20850). In view of the nature and value of collateral pledged to secure the said claims, the approved plan allots to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and to respondents, cash in an amount sufficient to pay the interest due upon such claims (at the rate of six per cent per annum to the date of filing of the debtor's petition in this proceeding and at four per cent per annum to the effective date of the plan) and, for the principal of said claims, said plan allots new First Mortgage Bonds (Vol. 39, Record p. 20846, 20850). The latter are to be secured by a first lien upon the entire Missouri Pacific system. Reconstruction Finance Corporation and respondents have an option to take Series A First Mortgage Bonds maturing in 15 years from the date of the plan and bearing interest at the rate of 3-½% per annum or Series B Bonds maturing 25 years from said date and bearing interest at 3-¾% per annum. In making such determination the Commission finds, Supplemental Report; (Vol. 39 Record, p. 20850):

"J. P. Morgan & Company and affiliated banks are, from the nature and value of the collateral security for their loans, entitled to treatment at least equivalent to that accorded the Finance Corporation. Although the banks have signified that they would accept the terms of the compromise plan, we are of the opinion and find that, to avoid unfair discrimination in view of the above improvement in the treatment accorded the Finance Corporation, these bank creditors should receive an increase of $321,510 in their cash allotment, the resulting total being $1,480,382.

These loans from the Finance Corporation and the banks were made to aid the debtor in emergencies, the proceeds were used in part at least, to permit interest payments to continue to be made on the obligations of the debtors, and the securities for the loans are of a different nature from the mortgage liens of the senior creditors of the Missouri Pacific, New Orleans, and International. In our opinion these increases in cash payments to the Finance Corporation and J. P. Morgan & Company and associates, can be met out of excess cash in the Missouri Pacific treasury not required for other purposes. We find that the above allocations of cash and new securities to these two creditors represent the fair equivalent of the value of their claims, will not discriminate unfairly against the senior mortgage creditors and should be approved."

15. Under the compromise offered in the said plan, interest is computed at 6% upon the claim of respondents to March 31, 1933, the date of institution of this proceeding and at 4% thereafter to January 1, 1948, the effective date of the plan. Such reduced interest, less the payments made upon pledged collateral and applied to interest to said effective date amounts to $1,480,382. Interest at 6% upon said claim to said effective date less the said payments amounts to $2,622,174. The compromise in the plan thus provides a saving in interest amounting to $1,141,792.

16. The said plan of reorganization was approved in the opinion of this Court No. 2606 dated December 21, 1945 as amended (Vol. 43 Record p. 23031) and by Order No. 2604 B of January 22, 1946 (Vol. 43 Record p. 23203). Respondents are informed and believe that the said plan of reorganization has not been submitted to any creditors for their acceptance or rejection, and has not yet been confirmed.

17. In the event that said plan shall not become finally binding on all parties in interest, purchase of the claim of respondents on the same basis of reduction in interest as that offered to Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will provide a saving to the estate amounting to $1,550,250 computed thus:

Interest on respondents' claim at 6% to June 30, 1946	$4,937,500
Less payments received and applied to interest to date	2,568,625
Balance of interest at 6% unpaid	2,169,875
Interest on respondents' claim at 6% to March 31, 1933 and at 4% thereafter to June 30, 1946.	3,188,250
Less payments received and applied to interest to date	2,568,625
Balance of interest on settlement and compromise of claim	$ 619,625
Balance of interest at 6% unpaid		$2,169,875
Balance of interest on settlement and compromise		619,625
Interest saved through compromise		$1,550,250

Settlement and compromise of the claim of respondents will also permit the acquisition by the estate of the said collateral having a market value of $13,310,875.

18. If the plan is accepted and confirmed, and the claim of respondents is purchased upon the same basis as that offered Reconstruction Finance Corporation in said petition, it will be possible to eliminate the $5,850,000 in Series A or B First Mortgage Bonds allocable to the claim of respondents thus eliminating said Bonds as a fixed charge and providing a saving in fixed charges payable by the reorganized Missouri Pacific amounting, if Series B First Mortgage Bonds with interest at the rate of 3-¾% are chosen by respondents, of approximately $4,350,645 over the remaining life of the bonds.

19. On information and belief, respondent alleges that the petitioner's Report of Assets and Liabilities of the bankruptcy estate filed on March 20, 1946 discloses that petitioner had on hand, as of January 31, 1946, cash and other current assets amounting to $127,517,723.50, and that on said date current liabilities were $53,852,876.98 (File No. 2904 at Vol. 44, Record, p. 23391). Respondents believe and, therefore, allege that the ratio of petitioner's current assets to his current liabilities is now at least as favorable to petitioner as it was on January 31, 1946.

20. Respondents believe and therefore allege, that there is sufficient cash and other current funds in possession of said estate to purchase the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the collateral pledged to secure it upon the terms acceptable to Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as stated in said petition, and to purchase the claim of respondents on the same terms as those proposed in said petition for settlement of the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and to purchase the claim of Railroad Credit Corporation on the terms set forth in Petitioner's petition filed concurrently in these proceedings dealing with the settlement of Railroad Credit Corporation's claim against Missouri Pacific. Respondents believe and therefore allege that the acquisition of the claim of respondents by purchase of said claim and the collateral pledged to secure it will be advantageous to the estate.

21. Respondents beg leave to incorporate herein each of the orders, petitions and other documents in this proceeding referred to in this answer, and to make them a part of this answer as if they were set forth herein at length.

Wherefore, respondents respectfully pray:

(1) That the Petitioner, as Trustee of the property of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, be instructed not only to purchase all notes of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company held by Reconstruction Finance Corporation, together with the collateral securing the same and all the notes of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company held by Railroad Credit Corporation and the collateral securing the same, upon the terms proposed by petitioner in his petition and the one concurrently filed with respect to settlement of the claims of Railroad Credit Corporation, but that he is also instructed to purchase, concurrently, the notes of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company held by respondents, together with the collateral securing them upon such terms and conditions as may be fair and equitable to the holders of said notes without discrimination against the latter and without preference in favor of the holders of other notes classified in the same class in these proceedings; and

(2) For such other and further relief as to this Court may seem just and proper in the premises.

(Answer of Reconstruction Finance Corporation to Petition No. 2928 of Trustee for Advice and Directions, etc., and Request for Affirmative Relief.)

(Filed May 9, 1946)

Comes now Reconstruction Finance Corporation (hereinafter referred to as RFC) and for answer to petition No. 2928, filed herein by the Trustee of the Debtor and verified April 24, 1946, respectfully shows:

1. The RFC admits the allegations of Paragraphs 1, 2, 3, and 6 of said petition;

2. The RFC admits the allegations of Paragraphs 4 and 8 of said petition, except for the facts (a) that there is an omission of $20,000.00 of cash collateral from the list of the collateral set forth in said Paragraph 4, and (b) that RFC believes that the value of the collateral securing its loans to the Debtor is approximately $49,650,000.00;

3. The RFC admits the allegations of Paragraphs 5 and 8 of said petition, with the exception that the figure as to the amount of accrued and unpaid interest at June 30, 1946, as stated in the petition, is $1000.00 too low and with the understanding that the sum of $10,454,119.00 the amount of interest alleged to have been heretofore paid, includes the sum of $85,500.00 ordered paid by this Court on the 26th day of July, 1945, which said order was appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, where said order was affirmed, and the payment of said sum of $85,500.00, if made, has not, to the best of our knowledge, information and belief, as yet been received or credited on the books of the RFC.

4. The RFC is without sufficient information or knowledge with respect to Paragraphs 7 and 9 of said petition and neither admits nor denies the allegations of said paragraphs.

In addition the RFC, as and for a prayer for affirmative relief, respectfully shows that payment of the RFC's claim on the basis referred to in paragraph 1 of the prayer of said petition will (a) simplify the corporate structure of the Debtor; (b) facilitate the reorganization of the Debtor; (c) be fair and equitable; and (d) be in accordance with the law of the land.

Wherefore, the RFC prays that this Court enter an Order authorizing and directing the Trustee of the Debtor to compromise, settle and pay the claim of the RFC against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, represented by its loans in the aggregate principal amount of $23,134,800 to said Debtor, by paying to RFC, within ninety (90) days from April 15, 1946 an amount equal to the aggregate principal amount of said loans, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing said loans at the rate expressed in said notes (6% per annum) to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933) and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of payment of said claim, less the total amount of payments heretofore credited by the RFC to interest on said loans, and for such further orders as to the Court may seem meet and proper.

Answer of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company to Petition of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, with respect to payment of debt due the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by it.

(Filed May 9, 1946.)

Comes now Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor in the above entitled proceedings and for its answer to petition No. 2928 of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, respectfully shows to the Court that:

1. It admits allegations contained in paragraphs numbered 4, 5, 6, 8 and 9 of said petition.

2. It believes to be true and therefore upon information and belief, admits the allegations of fact contained in paragraphs numbered 2 and 3 of said petition.

3. Being without sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief it neither admits nor denies the allegations contained in paragraphs numbered 1 and 7 of said petition.

4. The compromise settlement and payment of this claim would and will be to the best interest of and will benefit the Trust Estate and its Creditors and will be in the public interest.

5. The Trustee has recently been authorized to make very substantial wage increases to his employees, retroactive to January 1st, 1946; the level of revenue paying traffic over the railroad of the Trust Estate has been and is sharply down. The reduction in interest charges and expenses which would result from the settlement and payment, if made, would to that extent protect the net earnings of the Trust Estate.

6. This claim has heretofore been classified by this Court as a specially preferred claim in its opinion In Re Missouri Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Fed. Sup. 936, lc 942.

7. If precedents are necessary to effectuate the proposed settlement and payment of this claim they are found in this Court's Orders Nos. 2374 to 2378, inclusive, duly entered in these proceedings on September 18, 1943 and in Order No. 2794 duly entered in these proceedings July 26th, 1945.

8. Among the powers vested in this Trustee under the applicable Bankruptcy Statutes and the General Orders in Bankruptcy, particularly General Order No. 28, is the power, when it is for the benefit of the estate and is approved by the Court, to redeem and discharge any mortgage, pledge, deposit, or lien upon any property, real or personal, of the estate. The petition states facts showing the compromise payment to be in the interest of the estate. It is within the Court's discretion to order the Trustee to take this action beneficial to the estate. The loan, as the petition shows, is highly collateralized. To compromise it would not constitute an undue preference. In order to constitute an undue preference there must be a payment, the effect of which will enable a creditor to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than some other creditor of the same or of a higher class.

Wherefore Missouri Pacific Railroad Company prays that this Court authorize and direct Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee, to compromise, settle and pay this claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation upon the terms stated in said Petition; to cancel the notes evidencing the claim and debt and to repossess and retain all the collateral held by Reconstruction Finance Corporation as security for said notes, claim and debt.

Respectfully submitted,

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY,

Answer of Protective Committee for Holders of Common Stock of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, to Petition of Trustee for Advice and Directions With Respect to the Compromise and Settlement of the Claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation Against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

(Filed May 9, 1946.)

Now come Charles H. Thornton and A. J. Sevin, Constituting a Protective Committee for the Holders of Common Stock of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and present this their answer to the petition of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, for advice and directions with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, being Petition No. 2928, stating as follows:

1. Said Protective Committee has no knowledge as to the allegations in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of said petition and therefore neither admits nor denies said allegations.

2. Said Protective Committee admits the allegations in paragraphs 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 of said petition.

3. It is to the best interests of the creditors of the Debtor's estate, of the Debtor's estate, and of the Debtor's stockholders, and in the public interest that the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be compromised, settled and paid upon the terms proposed by said Reconstruction Finance Corporation, thus saving the further payment of interest thereon.

Wherefore, said Protective Committee prays that an order may be entered authorizing and directing Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, to compromise, settle, and pay the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by paying to it within ninety days from April 15, 1946, the principal amount of said loans, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing said loans at the rate expressed in said notes (6%) to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933), and at the rate of 4% per annum from said date of bankruptcy to the date of settlement, less the amount of payments made to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation representing income from collateral held by it as security for its said claim, to cancel the notes evidencing said debt and to receive and hold subject to the further order of this Court all collateral held by said Reconstruction Finance Corporation as security therefor, and for such other and further relief in the premises as may to the Court seem necessary.

CHARLES H. THORNTON and
A. J. SEVIN,
Constituting a Protective Committee for the Holders of Common Stock of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company,

By LUTHER M. WALTER,
Attorney for Said Committee.

Order

With Respect to Compromise Purchase of Claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation Against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

This matter having come on to be heard on the 9th day of May, 1946, upon the Petition of the Trustee of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, No. 2928, requesting the advice and directions of the Court with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (hereinafter called "R. F. C."), against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor (hereinafter called "Debtor Company"), and the Court having heard and considered such Petition, the

Answers filed by various parties in interest, the evidence adduced in regard thereto and the statements and arguments of Counsel for Trustee and interested parties, and it appearing to the Court that due notice of the time and place of the hearing on said Petition has been given as directed by Assignment of Hearing No. 2928, duly entered herein on April 25, 1946, the Court Finds:

1. That the cash resources of the Trust Estate are amply sufficient to justify and safely permit the proposed compromise and settlement of the claim of the R. F. C.

2. That the fair market value of the collateral pledged as security for said claim is substantially in excess of the amount proposed to be paid R. F. C. in compromise and settlement of its claim.

3. That the compromise and settlement of said claim on the terms offered by the R. F. C. as set forth in Trustee's said Petition will be in the public interest and in the best interest of said trust estate.

4. That such compromise and settlement of the claim of the R. F. C. will also be in the best interest of the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage creditors, and all other mortgage creditors claiming a lien on the funds of the Trust Estate to be used in effecting said compromise and settlement.

5. That such compromise and settlement of said claim will also be to the best interest of the Secured Bank creditors.

Wherefore, It Is Ordered:

(1) That Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, be and he hereby is authorized and directed to purchase the claim of the R. F. C. against said Debtor Company, or its estate, namely, the six notes of said Debtor Company in the principal sum of $23,134,800, and the collateral presently securing the same, and to pay therefor, from any funds now or hereafter coming into his hands as Trustee of said Debtor Company, the full principal of said notes, together with interest thereon from their respective dates to April 1, 1933, at the contract rate of 6% per annum, and with interest from April 1, 1933, to the date of consummation of said purchase at the rate of 4% per annum, less the sum of $10,454,119 heretofore received and applied by R. F. C. on said claim and less any amounts that shall have been received by R. F. C. on account of its said collateral after the date of this Order and prior to the consummation of such purchase, such sum to be paid in cash by the Trustee to R. F. C. against delivery by R. F. C. of said notes and said collateral.

The Court expressly reserves the right, with or without notice to the parties in interest to these proceedings, to hereafter direct that said notes be cancelled and marked paid, should the Court hereafter determine that such action will be to the best interest of said Trust Estate.

(2) That the notes and collateral so acquired from R. F. C. shall be held by Trustee for the benefit of the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds outstanding, and for the benefit of any other creditors of said Debtor Company, to the extent of their respective interests, if any, in the cash used in the purchase of said notes and collateral as the same may appear or may be hereafter determined by the Court or any Reorganization Plan, such holders or other creditors being hereby subrogated to the interest, rights, liens, and benefits of the R. F. C. under its said claim and in and to such notes and the collateral pledged as security therefor, to the end that their respective rights and interests may be fully protected in any marshaling of the assets of the Debtor Company or under the terms of any Plan of Reorganization that may be finally confirmed in these proceedings; and the Court hereby expressly reserves jurisdiction to make from time to time such further order or orders as may be deemed necessary or appropriate to protect and enforce the rights and equities of said bondholders and such other creditors in the premises.

(3) Debtor Trustee shall report to the Court any action taken under and pursuant to this Order.

(4) If the purchase herein authorized shall not be consummated neither the R. F. C. nor any bondholder nor any other creditor to these proceedings shall be prejudiced by this Order or said Petition of the Trustee, or by any recital or provision in either, in respect of any issue arising under said claim of R. F. C.

Petition

Of Trustee for Advice and Directions With Respect to Payment of Debt Due The Railroad Credit Corporation by Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

Comes now Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and represents to the Court:

1. That as more fully appears from Proof of Claim No. 525 (Rec. p. 3867), said Debtor Railroad entered into a contract, effective January 1, 1932, with The Railroad Credit Corporation (hereinafter called R.C.C.) and certain other carriers by rail, by which it became a participant in the Marshalling and Distributing Plan, a copy of which is attached to the original Proof of Claim, Special Master's No. 2153.

2. Thereafter, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company borrowed certain monies from the R.C.C. evidenced by three notes, to-wit:

One note, dated August 30, 1932, for the principal sum of $3,000,000.00;

One note, dated October 31, 1932, for the principal sum of $600,000.00;

One note, dated November 30, 1932, for the principal sum of $200,000.00.

The following securities are pledged as security for the payment of said notes, to-wit:

	Par Value	Book Value
Capital Stock:
Arkansas & Memphis Ry. Br. & Term. Co. Pfd.	$ 550,000	$ 550,000

Totals	$ 6,673,300	$16,779,948

Trustee is advised and therefore states that the present value of the securities listed above is approximately $5,000,000.00; and that said notes are further secured by Debtor's distributive share in the fund established under the aforesaid Marshalling and Distrib ting Plan and by a pledge of the equity of said Debtor Company in and to any and all securities deposited as security with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, all as more fully appears from said Proof of Claim No. 525.

3. That from time to time since their execution, substantial sums have been credited against the principal and interest accruing on said notes representing income from the collateral securing same, including said Debtor Company's share in certain distributions made under the aforesaid Marshalling and Distributing Plan, and at June 30, 1946, there will be due on said notes, principal and interest amounting to $1,934,507.00.

4. Petitioner further states that the Interstate Commerce Commission by its Order of October 9, 1944, duly filed in these proceedings on October 13, 1944 (Rec. p. 20892), proposed a Modified Plan of Reorganization for Debtor Railroads herein, which was approved by an Order of this Court duly entered January 22, 1946; that in its Report of July 4, 1944, which has been duly filed in these proceedings (Rec. p. 20731), in referring to the claim of The Railroad Credit Corporation, the Commission, among other things, stated:

> "In our opinion, the security for the loans is sufficient to warrant their payment in full in cash or its equivalent * * *".

Under said proposed Plan of Reorganization, the R.C.C. is given full treatment on its claim for principal and interest, to-wit: Approximately $2,103.00 in cash, and the balance, at its election, in either Series "A" or Series "B" First Mortgage Bonds. Paragraph A of said Modified Plan of Reorganization, as set forth in said Order of the Commission (Rec. p. 20894), provides, among other things, that "cash in the treasuries of the debtors available for distribution may be distributed to creditors from time to time, pending the consummation of the plan, as the court may from time to time direct." In its Third Supplemental Report, dated October 9, 1944, the Commission discussed the possibility of further cash distributions at the direction of the Court, and, among other things, said:

> "In determining cash distributions as well as fixing total capitalization as stated in our report, we recognized that the cash position of the debtor's trustee would vary in the future and that 'surplus cash' might either exceed or fall short of our estimates. We believed and are still of the opinion, that the court, in the light of current conditions, should determine any amounts of cash available and not authorized by the plan, which might be so distributed, within the framework of the plan, from time to time up to the date of consummation of the plan. In fixing the amount of capitalization and in approving the provision of the plan authorizing cash distributions upon order of the court prior to consummation, we recognized the possibility that as of the date of consummation the system capitalization might be somewhat less than the $560,000,000 approved by us. We contemplated, however, insuring that amount as the maximum. Even if the collateral-trust notes are not issued, an increase in equipment obligations resulting from a future demand for, and availability of, additional equipment prior to the date of consummation of the plan may result in total capitalization as of that time being about the same as the maximum fixed by us." (Rec. p. 20687).

5. Petitioner further states that, in his opinion, the available funds of said Debtor Estate are amply sufficient to meet the cash requirements of said proposed Plan of Reorganization, and in addition, to retire at this time the principal and interest due the R.C.C. on the notes of the aforesaid Debtor, that said notes are currently bearing interest at the rate of One per cent (1%) per annum and that credits are being made upon said notes currently from time to time, representing income from collateral.

Petitioner is advised and therefore states that the R.C.C. has liquidated the major portion of its business and that payment of the notes of said Debtor will enable said Corporation to close its operations at an early date.

Petitioner is further of the opinion that said indebtedness may be retired, within the framework of the Plan and under the provisions thereof, and that such retirement will result in an annual interest saving of approximately $19,345.00.

6. That on June 7, 1933, Trustees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage filed their Petition No. 44 (Rec. p. 269), in these proceedings, asserting the claim of the bonds secured by said Mortgage against said trust estate and praying, among other things, that all tolls, incomes, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the mortgaged property be impounded, segregated and sequestered for the benefit of said petitioners, as Trustees, and of the holders of said First and Refunding Bonds; that on April 24, 1936, the Corporate Trustee under the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company General Mortgage filed its Proof of Claim No. 504 (Rec. p. 3707), in behalf of the bonds secured by said Mortgage which is a lien on all security pledged under said First and Refunding Mortgage, subject only to the prior lien thereon of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and which is in substantially the same terms and form as said First and Refunding Mortgage; that substantially all of the funds now held by Trustee in behalf of said trust estate have come from the operation of the railroad properties which are subject to the liens of the aforementioned Mortgages; that if and to the extent that the terms of said Mortgages and the claims filed by said Mortgage Trustees herein create and establish liens upon all or any part of the funds proposed to be used in said payment of the claim of the R.C.C., said mortgage creditors may be entitled to be subrogated to the extent of the funds so used, to any rights and liens held by the R.C.C. in said pledged collateral.

Wherefore, the premises considered, Trustee respectfully prays that an Order be duly entered herein:

(1) Advising and directing Trustee whether he shall pay in full and final settlement of the said claim of the R.C.C. the full unpaid principal thereof with accrued interest to the date of payment, amounting at June 30, 1946, to $1,934,507.00.

(2) If the Court shall advise and direct Trustee to make such payment, that Trustee be authorized upon making said payment to cancel the notes evidencing said debt and to receive and hold all collateral held by the R.C.C. as security therefor, subject to such lien, if any, as the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds and the holders of Missouri Pacific General Mortgage Bonds may have or be entitled to by reason of the lien, if any, which they may have upon the cash of the trust estate used to retire said indebtedness.

(3) And for such further or other authority or direction as to the Court may seem meet or proper in the premises.

Trustee.

Order With Respect to Retirement of Debt Due The Railroad Credit Corporation by Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

(Filed May 29, 1946.)

This matter having come on to be heard on the 9th day of May, 1946, upon the Petition of the Trustee of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, No. 2929, requesting the advice and directions of the Court with respect to the retirement of the claim of The Railroad Credit Corporation (hereinafter called "R. C. C."), against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor (hereinafter called "Debtor Company"), and the Court having heard and considered such Petition, the Answers filed by various parties in interest, the evidence adduced in regard thereto and the statements and arguments of Counsel for Trustee and interested parties, and it appearing to the Court that due notice of the time and place of the hearing on said Petition has been given as directed by Assignment of Hearing No. 2929, duly entered herein on April 25, 1946, the Court Finds:

1. That the cash resources of the Trust Estate are amply sufficient to justify and safely permit the proposed retirement of the claim of the R. C. C.

2. That the fair market value of the collateral pledged as security for said claim is substantially in excess of the amount proposed to be paid R. C. C. in retirement of its claim.

3. That the retirement of said claim on the terms set forth in Trustee's said Petition will be in the public interest and in the best interest of said Trust Estate.

4. That the retirement of such claim of the R. C. C. will also be in the best interest of the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage creditors, and all other mortgage creditors claiming a lien on the funds of the Trust Estate to be used in the retirement of said claim.

5. That the retirement of said claim will also be to the best interest of the Secured Bank creditors.

Wherefore, It Is Ordered:

(1) That Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, be and he hereby is authorized and directed to purchase the claim of the R. C. C. against said Debtor Company, or its estate, namely, the three notes of said Debtor Company for the total original principal sum of $3,800,000 and the collateral presently securing the same, and to pay therefor, from any funds now or hereafter coming into his hands as Trustee of said Debtor Company, the balance due on the principal of said notes amounting to $1,929,629, together with interest thereon amounting at June 30, 1946, to $4,878.00, and with interest on the unpaid principal amount of said notes from June 30, 1946, to the date of consummation of said purchase at the rate of 1% per annum, less any amounts that shall have been received by R. C. C. on account of its said collateral after the date of this Order and prior to the consummation of such purchase, such sum to be paid in cash by the Trustee to R. C. C. against delivery by R. C. C. of said notes and said collateral.

The Court expressly reserves the right, with or without notice to the parties in interest to these proceedings, to hereafter direct that said notes be cancelled and marked paid, should the Court hereafter determine that such action will be to the best interest of said Trust Estate.

(2) That the notes and collateral so acquired from R. C. C. shall be held by Trustee for the benefit of the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds outstanding, and for the benefit of any other creditors of said Debtor Company, to the extent of their respective interests, if any, in the cash used in the purchase of said notes and collateral as the same may appear or may be hereafter determined by the Court or any Reorganization Plan, such holders or other creditors being hereby subrogated to the interest, rights, liens, and benefits of the R. C. C. under its said claim and in and to such notes and the collateral pledged as security therefor, to the end that their respective rights and interests may be fully protected in any marshaling of the assets of the Debtor Company or under the terms of any Plan of Reorganization that may be finally confirmed in these proceedings; and the Court hereby expressly reserves jurisdiction to make from time to time such further order or orders as may be deemed necessary or appropriate to protect and enforce the rights and equities of said bondholders and such other creditors in the premises.

(3) Debtor Trustee shall report to the Court any action taken under and pursuant to this Order.

(4) If the purchase herein authorized shall not be consummated neither the R. C. C. nor any bondholder nor any other creditor to these proceedings shall be prejudiced by this Order or said Petition of the Trustee, or by any recital or provision in either, in respect of any issue arising under said claim of R. C. C.

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Dearmont: If Your Honor please, the Trustee is ready to proceed. I might state that there are six or seven counsel here from out of the city, who are interested in this matter. As Your Honor knows, in these days it is difficult to get railroad transportation, but I understand they have transportation back on an early train, leaving here at about half-past one this afternoon. If it is consistent, we hope that you may be able to take the matter up this morning.

Mr. Evans: I should like to present to the Court Mr. W. Meade Fletcher, Chief Railroad Counsel for the R. F. C., who is interested in the matter.

Mr. Dearmont: If the Court please, there are three Petitions which were filed by the Trustee, two in his capacity as Trustee for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and one in his capacity as Trustee for the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, Debtor. The Petitions are numbered 2928, 2929 and 2930.

I think I may save time here by omitting any very extensive statement as to the matters presented by these Petitions, but may I say that the first Petition, No. 2928, is a petition filed by Mr. Thompson, as Trustee of the Missouri Pacific, for advice and directions with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

I might also say that it will develop that considerable negotiations have been carried on by the Trustee with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, culminating recently in a renewed offer by the R. F. C. to accept settlement of their claim, evidenced by six promissory notes, in the principal sum of $23,134,800., for $26,033,385. That represents, if Your Honor please, the principal of the debt with interest at a reduced rate—

The Court: Pardon me a moment.

(At this point the jury returned in to Court its verdict in another case.)

Mr. Dearmont: If the Court please, I had stated that the first petition has to do with the debt of the Missouri Pacific to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which is evidenced by six notes—I believe all dated in 1932—prior to the bankruptcy. Principal sum is $23,134,800.

Those notes by their terms bore interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from their date. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation now has offered to accept in settlement of their claim, evidenced by these six notes, a sum equal to the principal of said notes, together with interest at six per cent. from their date to April 1, 1933—

The Court: To when?

Mr. Dearmont: April 1, 1933, which was the date these reorganization proceedings began, and four per cent. thereafter to the date of settlement. The full amount which would be due, if this offer is accepted, will be $26,033,385.

The second petition proposes settlement of the claim of The Railroad Credit Corporation against the Missouri Pacific, and the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific asks for advice and directions of the Court as to whether that claim should be settled, the full principal and interest to June 30, 1946, amounting to $1,934,507. That was the date for which I gave you the amount due to the R. F. C.

The third petition filed by Mr. Thompson, as Trustee of the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, is for advice and directions of the Court as to whether as Trustee of the International-Great Northern he should pay the claim of The Railroad Credit Corporation against the International-Great Northern. The amount due at June 30, 1946, is $397,556.

I should like to file at this time Proof of Notice, given in accordance with the terms of the Assignment of Hearing, numbers 2928, 2929 and 2930, entered by Your Honor on April 25, 1946. I think I will make no further statement; it will probably be best to produce witnesses and present this matter to the Court.

Perhaps Your Honor would like to have copies of these Motions (handing documents to the Court).

It may speed this matter up a bit if we can have a common record on these three Motions, instead of taking them up one at a time. Much of the basic testimony can be presented and it will be pertinent to all of them; as a matter of fact, the first two are almost necessarily identical one with the other.

If there is no objection, may it be understood and agreed that the record made here may be used, to the extent it is pertinent, on each of these Petitions?

The Court: Very well.

And thereupon the Trustee, to sustain the issues on his behalf, offered the following evidence:

C. D. Peet,

a witness of lawful age, being duly produced, sworn and examined, testified on behalf of the Trustee as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Dearmont:

Q. Mr. Peet, will you please state your name and official position with the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and its Trustee?

A. My name is C. D. Peet; I am Chief Accounting and Financial Officer for Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of the Missouri Pacific and subsidiary companies.

Q. Including the International-Great Northern Railroad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peet, are you familiar generally with the terms of the Trustee's three petitions now before the Court, numbers 2928, 2929 and 2930? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you prepared certain exhibits from the records in your office, concerning the matters presented by these petitions? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Dearmont: I believe, in view of the fact that the financial position of these trust estates is quite pertinent to the issue which will be presented here by these petitions, and in view of the fact that the group of exhibits have been distributed to counsel, I will refer to the exhibits in the order in which they appear in this group of exhibits.

I will hand Your Honor a copy (handing exhibits to the Court).

Q. Mr. Peet, have you and other officers of the Trustee prepared a cash forecast for the Missouri Pacific Lines to June 30, 1946? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the cash and cash equivalent as of April 30, 1946, for the Missouri Pacific as shown there?

A. That amount is $90,976,574.

Q. You have set forth estimated gross receipts for May and June, 1946, have you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that amounts to what? A. $32,450,000.

Q. Or a total of estimated cash and cash equivalent at June 30, 1946, of what amount? A. $129,425,574.

Q. After deducting from that figure the estimated gross disbursements for the months of May and June, what amount of cash or cash equivalent is estimated will be on hand for the Missouri Pacific as of June 30, 1946?

A. That amount is estimated at $84,804,574.

Q. What is the corresponding figure to the last figure given for the International-Great Northern?

A. That amount of cash and cash equivalent is estimated as of June 30, 1946, for the International-Great Northern, $12,008,100.

Q. You have an exhibit, I believe, setting forth the facts as to which you have just testified. This is the exhibit, is it (indicating document)? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Dearmont: I will ask that this be marked Trustee's Exhibit 1.

(The exhibit last indicated was marked Trustee's Exhibit 1.)

Q. I ask you now, Mr. Peet, if you have prepared, or if there has been prepared in your office, under your direction, an exhibit showing generally an estimate of cash available and requirements for reorganization at June 30, 1946, under the Modified Plan of Reorganization approved by this Court by an order dated January 22, 1946.

A. I have prepared such an exhibit.

Q. I will ask you to explain this exhibit and in doing so will you state, dealing with the Missouri Pacific alone, whether the first figure in the first column on this exhibit was taken from Exhibit No. 1, as to which you have just testified. A. It is.

Q. You have added to that cash figure of $84,804,000. the amount on deposit with various Trustees, which you note are, under the Plan, to be returned to the reorganized company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is $9,229,000.? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next two items represent estimated reserves, do they not, at June 30, 1946, and the amounts stated following those headings have been set up in reserve on the books of the company, have they?

A. Yes, sir; they represent actual cash reserves.

Q. The total for the Missouri Pacific, as shown by this exhibit, at June 30, 1946 is $102,893,000., is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have next set forth the requirements under the Modified Plan of Reorganization, have you not? A. Yes.

Q. Totaling what amount? A. $71,281,180.

Q. And the next group of items sets forth the interest payments that have been made to bondholders since 1944, does it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they total what amount?

A. That totals $41,680,500.

Q. Leaving net unpaid requirements under the Plan amounting to what figure? A. $29,600,680.

Q. Now, the cash balance, after deducting these requirements, amounts to what figure, as shown by this exhibit?

A. $73,292,320.

Q. Next there follows a statement of certain reserves to be taken care of. Will you refer to each one of those items that deal with the Missouri Pacific in the first column and briefly state what they are, and any basis for these estimates that you may care to give?

A. The first item in that group is "Working Fund and Contingencies" amounting to $15,000,000. That amount is estimated to be the working cash which should be available to the company, in the bank, as of date of reorganization.

Q. How is that figure arrived at?

A. That figure was arrived at in consultation with other officers of the company and it represents the best judgment of the Executive Officers.

Q. The next item?

A. The next item represents taxes, other than Federal Income and Excess Profits Taxes which we estimate will be due at June 30th, and following that is an estimate of Federal Income and Excess Profits Tax liability at June 30, which includes the balance unpaid on 1945 tax liability. That figure is subject to considerable change, depending upon the results of operation for the six months of the year, but it represents our best judgment at this time.

The next figure represents reorganization expenses which we anticipate will be required in the event the reorganization is consummated, in the amount of $2,000,000.

Following that are the two reserve items, one for Deferred Maintenance and one for Land Grant Deductions, these two latter items being the same amount as the amounts shown above, which have been added to cash at the top of the statement.

Q. The last figure in that column, the balance, is in what amount?

A. The total of these reserves amounts to $47,460,000.

Q. Leaving a balance of cash estimated to be on hand at June 30, 1946, after eliminating gross requirements under the Plan, net requirements under the Plan, and the reserve you described, of $25,832,320.? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That figure is subject to adjustment, is it not? If the Court should order the payment of the claim of the R. F. C., or the purchase, as suggested by some, due to the fact of retirement of that claim, that might or would affect the requirements under the Plan perhaps, would it not?

A. Yes, sir; if this claim were settled on the basis proposed in the Petition the requirements under the Plan would be reduced by $2,623,730.

Q. That would then leave an amount of estimated cash available at June 30, 1946, of what figure?

A. Approximately $28,455,000.

Q. In the third column of this same exhibit the same information for the International-Great Northern is stated, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The final figure representing the balance, free balance, that is estimated to be on hand at June 30, 1946, is in what amount? A. $5,341,067.

Q. Is that also subject to adjustment?

A. Yes, sir; I believe in the amount of about—

Q. It would be very small? A. As I recall, it is $22,000.

Mr. Dearmont: I will ask that this exhibit be marked Trustee's Exhibit 2, the exhibit that the witness has just identified.

Q. That last figure, $22,600., that would be added to this balance shown on Exhibit No. 2, for the International-Great Northern, at June 30, 1946? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Peet, have you prepared an exhibit showing the amount required to settle loans of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at June 30, 1946, based upon payment of interest at six per cent. from date of bankruptcy, April 1, 1933, and four per cent. thereafter to June 30, 1946?

A. I have prepared such an exhibit.

Q. Is this the exhibit (indicating)? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Dearmont: I will ask that it be marked Trustee's Exhibit No. 3.

(The exhibit last indicated was marked Trustee's Exhibit 3.)

Q. On this exhibit, Mr. Peet, it is shown that the total amount required to acquire or settle the Reconstruction Finance Corporation notes, at June 30, 1946, would be what amount?

A. The total amount required to settle on the basis indicated, would amount to $26,033,385.

Q. Mr. Peet, I will show you another exhibit headed "List of Collateral Pledged with Reconstruction Finance Corporation as Security for Loans": Was that prepared by you, or in your office under your direction? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Dearmont: I ask that that be marked Trustee's Exhibit No. 4.

(The exhibit last indicated was marked Trustee's Exhibit No. 4.)

Q. On this Exhibit No. 4, Mr. Peet, there is set forth a statement showing stock, bonds, and notes pledged as collateral security for these notes of the Missouri Pacific payable to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In addition to showing the various items pledged, you have also entered in various columns, first, the par value of these securities and notes; second, the book value; then, under the general heading "Estimated Value," you have shown "Market Quotation," "Market Value" and "Estimated or Book Value."

In the first place, I should like to ask you if all of the collateral pledged as security for these R.F.C. loans are correctly listed in this exhibit.

A. All of the collateral excepting the cash item of $20,000., which represents payment made under the Prescott and Northwestern bonds last year, so there is an item of $20,000. on deposit as collateral with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in addition to the securities which are shown on this statement.

Q. Otherwise, the statement correctly sets forth all of the collateral that is pledged as security for the loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peet, under "Estimated Value", the general heading, you have "Market Quotation": It seems that in each instance where a market quotation is given it is given as of April 12th, except in one case of Texas & Pacific common stock, where the date is April 11th. Did you check these quotations yourself?

A. I had them checked in my office, yes.

Q. And the next column is "Market Value" which is based upon the market quotation listed in the preceding column, is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the "Estimated or Book Value" given for several of the items, which appears in the next column, represents whose judgment?

A. They represent my judgment.

Q. I note that as to the last two items that appear it says, "No estimated value included in total": Is that due to the fact that this claim, inter-company claim, as we generally refer to it, is in controversy and the amount to be allocable is unknown? You didn't mean to indicate that there was no value in those notes?

A. No, sir; I didn't intend to indicate that, but your first remark is correct.

The Court: First what?

The Witness: First remark; there is no value shown because this inter-company claim is now in litigation.

Mr. Dearmont: Q. Eliminating the two notes, what is the total estimated value of this collateral, as shown by the exhibit? A. The total is $43,858,025.

Q. And to that should be added $20,000. cash?

A. $20,000. in cash.

Q. Which I understand is on deposit with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation? A. That is correct.

The Court: I don't know whether I know how to read a statement like this. Take that first item: American Refrigerator Transit Company, number of shares 927, par value $92,700., estimated book value $1,854,000.: I don't understand that.

The Witness: It represents an estimate of the value of those shares at this time, Your Honor.

The Court: In that other column under "Book Value" you put down $92,700.

The Witness: That is the value at which the shares were carried on the books of the Missouri Pacific, $92,700.

Mr. Dearmont: That estimate that appears on this exhibit is low. It is rather a complicated situation.

The Court: This book value—that is what it is carried at on the books of the Missouri Pacific?

The Witness: That is correct.

Mr. Dearmont: Q. It is your judgment that the value, the actual market value, of this stock listed is approximately $1,854,000. at that time?

A. Yes, which is at the rate of two thousand dollars per share.

Mr. Dearmont: I might state—I think it probably is not too important, whether this exhibit is a bit conservative or not, in view of the fact that we were only interested in showing that the collateral behind this loan was substantially in excess of the principal and interest.

The Court: I was trying to find out how to read the exhibit. I didn't understand it.

Mr. Dearmont: There may be a very serious technical question with reference to the stock of the ART—whether the stock itself represents the full value of interest of the Missouri Pacific may be subject to considerable question. I think those are all the exhibits directed to the first petition.

Mr. Dearmont: I next take up the two exhibits dealing with the debt of the Missouri Pacific to The Railroad Credit Corporation.

I will ask that this first exhibit be marked Trustee's Exhibit 5.

(The exhibit last indicated was marked Trustee's Exhibit 5.)

Q. I show you what has been marked Trustee's Exhibit 5, and ask you if it was prepared by you or in your office under your direction. A. Yes, it was.

Q. That is a statement, is it not, showing the amount required to settle loans of The Railroad Credit Corporation, at June 30, 1946, and has to do with the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It shows the total amount due of $1,934,507. at June 30, 1946? A. That is right.

Q. And that is the full principal and full unpaid interest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The interest on that debt is currently being charged at the rate of one per cent. per annum? A. Yes.

Mr. Dearmont: I will ask that the next exhibit be marked Trustee's Exhibit 6.

(The exhibit last indicated was marked Trustee's Exhibit 6.)

Q. Was this Exhibit No. 6 also prepared by you or in your office under your direction? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It shows a list of collateral pledged with The Railroad Credit Corporation as security for its loans to the Missouri Pacific, does it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the note at the bottom of that exhibit—

The Court: What exhibit is this?

Mr. Dearmont: That is Exhibit No. 6. I want to call attention to the note at the bottom of this exhibit which says, "The securities pledged with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are also repledged with The Railroad Credit Corporation subject always to the lien of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation". That appears from the notes and the claim filed here.

Q. You know that to be a fact, Mr. Peet? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Dearmont: I ask that the last two be marked Trustee's Exhibits 7 and 8.

(The exhibits last indicated were marked Trustee's Exhibits 7 and 8.)

Q. I ask you whether these last two exhibits were prepared by you or in your office under your direction?

A. They were.

Q. The first exhibit, marked Exhibit No. 7, shows the amount required to settle or acquire the claim of The Railroad Credit Corporation against International-Great Northern Railroad Company, Debtor, at June 30, 1946, amounting to $397,556.; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Exhibit No. 8 sets forth a list of collateral pledged with The Railroad Credit Corporation as security for the loans; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that includes an estimated value which is largely made up of the market value of $822,300.—par value, International-Great Northern Adjustment Bonds, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The total estimated value of this collateral is $420,220., as shown by the exhibit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that figure, in your opinion, represent the fair estimated value of this collateral? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Dearmont: Now, Your Honor, I should like to offer in evidence these eight exhibits which have been identified by the witness, Mr. Peet.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Dearmont: Q. Mr. Peet, in connection with Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2, which are a cash forecast and estimate of cash available at June 30, 1946, in the two Debtor estates, the Missouri Pacific and the International-Great Northern, I should like to ask you whether it is true, as stated in the Petitions, that substantially all of the cash which will be on hand in the hands of the Trustee and his officers at June 30, 1946, has been derived from the operation of property subject to the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company's First and Refunding Mortgage and General Mortgage of the Missouri Pacific.

A. A very substantial part of it, yes; just three small segments of lines covered by mortgages superior in lien to the First and Refunding Mortgage.

Q. You refer to the Central Branch Union Pacific First Mortgage? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Little Rock, Hot Springs and Cairo & Thebes First Mortgage? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The total principal amount of all those mortgages added together is not much in excess, if any, of six million dollars, is it? A. It is less than that.

Q. Can you give roughly your estimate?

A. Including the pledged bonds of the Central Branch Union Pacific, I believe approximately four million two.

Mr. Dearmont: I believe that is all I care to offer for Mr. Peet.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Biggs:

Q. Mr. Peet, in your exhibit showing the collateral deposited to secure the Railroad Credit loans the last item is advances to The Railroad Credit Corporation, $114,029. Why can not that amount be offset against the Missouri Pacific liability to The Railroad Credit Corporation?

A. That represents the remaining portion of the Missouri Pacific contribution under the Marshalling and Distributing Plan, which I believe was established back in 1931 or 1932, and the amounts are available only as the distributions are made by The Railroad Credit Corporation to the various railroads who contributed these amounts in those years. As distributions are made by

The Railroad Credit Corporation the amount of this advance is credited on our loan. Originally, that was very substantially in excess of the $114,000. which is shown on this statement.

Q. Now we are going to pay off the R. F. C., if the Court so orders, but we can't use the—

A. Only to the extent that distributions are made to all railroad companies who have a share in this fund.

Q. Let me see if I understand right: If the Court orders payment to the Railroad Credit Corporation as requested in the Petition, then sometime in the future you will get payment on account of this $114,000. back from the R. C. C.?

A. To the extent that the amount is still due us, yes. If between now and the time of payment there might be another distribution by The Railroad Credit Corporation this amount would be reduced.

The Court: After payment—

The Witness: After payment we would receive whatever would still be due us.

Mr. Dearmont: May I suggest that Mr. Buckland, representing The Railroad Credit Corporation, is here and he will take the stand?

Mr. Biggs: I didn't understand it. It seemed to me that that could be offset.

Mr. Dearmont: I might state, off the record, for counsel's information.

Mr. Chasnoff: I should like to ask Mr. Peet one question, while he is on the stand.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Chasnoff:

Q. In the Trustee's petition it is stated, on page 8, that the settlement of the claim "would result in an annual interest saving, based on the contract rate, of $1,388,088.". This is intended to represent a gross interest saving without taking into account other items that will lessen that amount as a net saving to the estate, isn't it? I have in mind particularly that this doesn't take into account any tax saving, any tax payments that are made on account of payment of interest? When you reduce the rate of interest you increase your tax to an extent?

A. That is correct; that has not been taken into account.

Mr. Dearmont: No further questions. That is all for Mr. Peet.

Mr. Dearmont: I think it may be well to have an understanding that all matters of record in this reorganization proceeding, which may be pertinent to matters raised by the three Petitions now being presented to the Court, may be considered in the record without taking the time to specifically offer the various things that may be pertinent.

I think that is true without any such statement by me, but I thought perhaps that understanding should be noted.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Dearmont: I particularly would like to offer for the record the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage, dated April 2, 1917, which has heretofore been filed of record in this proceeding;

Also, the Missouri Pacific General Mortgage, the International-Great Northern First Mortgage, International-Great Northern Adjustment Mortgage;

I should also like to offer and particularly note for the record Petition No. 44, appearing in Missouri [Pacific] Printed Record at page 269, which is the petition of the Guaranty Trust Company, as Trustee under the First and Refunding Mortgage, asking leave to intervene, and setting forth the claim against the estate;

The Proof of Claim 495, appearing in the Printed Record at page 3629, which is the formal Proof of Claim of the First and Refunding Mortgage, later filed by the successor trustee, Manufacturers Trust Company and Benjamin F. Edwards, who was then individual trustee;

Proof of Claim of J. P. Morgan Company, evidenced by nine promissory notes of the Debtor, in the aggregate principal amount of $5,850,000., which appears in Printed Record at page 3703;

Also Proof of Claim No. 504, claim of Bankers Trust Company and Benjamin F. Edwards, as Trustees, under the General Mortgage of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, dated April 2, 1917, appearing in Printed Record at page 3707;

Proof of Claim 524, appearing in Printed Record at page 3855, being Proof of Claim of Kuhn, Loeb Company, evidenced by eight promissory notes of the Missouri Pacific Company, as set forth therein;

Also Proof of Claim 525 of Railroad Credit Corporation against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company;

Proof of Claim 526, Record page 3877, Railroad Credit Corporation against International-Great Northern Railroad Company, and perhaps, because the Petition quotes from that, I should also refer particularly, in this offer, to the first Plan of Reorganization, submitted to this Court by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which begins with page 12001 of the Printed Record, and includes the Report of the Commission of January 10, 1940; Supplemental Report of the Commission of April 9, 1940, and Supplemental Order of the Commission of April 9, 1940; and also to the Modified Plan of Reorganization and Further Findings of the Commission, beginning at page 20723 of the Printed Record.

I should have said that Proof of Claim 525 appears on page 3867 of the Printed Record.

I should now like to call Mr. Thompson, Trustee of the Debtor Company.

GUY A. THOMPSON,

a witness of lawful age, being duly produced, sworn and examined, testified on behalf of the Trustee as follows:

Direct Examination,

By Mr. Dearmont:

Q. Mr. Thompson, state your full name and your connection with the Missouri Pacific Lines, including the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, Debtor.

A. My name is Guy A. Thompson. I am Trustee, under Section 77, of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and International-Great Northern Railroad Company.

Q. You are familiar with the three Petitions now being presented to the Court, which I believe you signed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your Petition No. 2928, which asks for the advice and direction of the Court with reference to the payment or retirement of the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation against the Missouri Pacific, you state that during the last several years you have given consideration to the advantages which might accrue to the estate of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and its creditors from a satisfactory settlement of that claim. I will ask you simply to present to the Court the facts with reference to your consideration of this matter, your contact with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and any other facts bearing on this matter, which led to the filing of the Petition now under consideration by the Court.

A. I had from time to time considered the possibility and the advisability of making a settlement of the R.F.C. claim if that could be done on a reasonable basis.

Your Honor will remember that in 1942, I think it was, the Debtor filed a petition in this matter asking that Your Honor would direct him to settle the R.F.C. claim, and that we had a hearing on that petition. I opposed the requested payment on several grounds at that time and one of those grounds was that the financial situation was not such as would make it prudent to pay the R.F.C., and Your Honor denied that application.

It did not become a prudent thing to do, to pay the

R.F.C. if I could settle with the R.F.C. on a proper basis, until, I think it was 1944. At that time, as I recall, the cash would have been adequate had I not gotten orders of Court authorizing the payment of interest. I may be wrong as to the years, and I have asked counsel that he correct me, if I am, and call my attention to it.

Mr. Dearmont: I think you are probably referring to 1943, when you paid off the underliers and ten million on the River and Gulf. perhaps.

The Witness: Perhaps it was in 1943. In that year I thought it wise, and I think there was no dissent to that, although I am not sure, unless Mr. Quisenberry dissented, and I don't remember definitely—to pay the underliers. By those I mean the old Missouri Pacific mortages on the line between St. Louis and Kansas City, amounting to approximately fourteen million dollars, and to make a ten million dollar principal payment ratably to the holders of the River and Gulf bonds. Doing that did not leave adequate money in 1943 to have made settlement with the R. F. C. and provide for the reserves that were necessary.

In 1944, as I remember, I made, with Your Honor's permission and direction, substantial interest payments to the First and Refunding bondholders and to the holders of N.O.T. & M. First Mortgage and Income bonds. Had I not made those interest payments I would probably have had enough to make it prudent to settle with the R. F. C., but, making those interest payments, I did not have, and I thought it fair and just and reasonable that these bondholders should have some interest.

In that connection, I might state parenthetically that the total amount of interest paid to the First and Refunding bonds during this entire reorganization amounts to a fraction less than an average of two per cent. on their debt. That is all they have gotton during these thirteen years.

Then when it came down to the year 1945, during the autumn of that year, it seemed to me that I would certainly have enough to make settlement with the R.F.C. I took the matter up with my counsel and told him it was my desire to do what had been my desire to do all along, as soon as it could conveniently and legally be done, and we went into the matter very carefully—I mean, so far as the propriety of paying and the ability to pay, if I could make a satisfactory settlement. I had reached the conclusion that if I could do so, and the Court would approve, I would take up this R.F.C. claim.

About that time, but after I had reached this conclusion and given much thought to this matter, I received from Senator Henderson, Chairman of the R.F.C., a letter dated November 21, 1945, which I received on November 23d, I think, and which I think I might read. It is one of the few letters I have and it gives this chain of developments at that time. He says:

"The $23,134,800. of loans made in 1932 and 1933 by this Corporation to the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company were, by their terms, short term loans, but no part of the principal thereof has ever been repaid, despite the fact that they are fully and adequately secured. It is noted from the monthly report of selected income and balance sheet items that the Missouri Pacific System had $28,997,277. in cash and $136,953,000. of temporary cash investments as of July 31, 1945.

"In view of the above mentioned factors and the long continuance of the reorganization proceedings, our Directors are of the opinion that payment of this Corporation's claim ought to be made at the present time.

"This will advise that this Corporation will accept in full discharge of its claim against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company a cash payment equal to the principal amount of said loans, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing said loans at the rate expressed in said notes to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933) and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of payment of said claim, less cash payments heretofore credited by this Corporation to interest on said loans, upon condition that said payment shall be made within sixty days from the date of this letter.

"You will appreciate that this offer represents a substantial concession on the part of this Corporation.

"You are hereby requested to file with the District Court a petition for authority to pay this Corporation's claim on the basis hereinabove set forth.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES B. HENDERSON."

On receipt of the letter I acknowledged it and told Senator Henderson that he would hear more fully from me later.

On the 26th of November, three days later, I addressed a joint letter to Mr. W. Lloyd Kitchel, of New York, representing the First and Refunding Insurance Group, of which Mr. Stedman is Chairman; Mr. Leonard D. Adkins, Counsel for the Committee of the N.O.T. & M.; Mr. Sanford H. E. Freund, Counsel for Holders of the General Mortgage 4's of the Missouri Pacific; Mr. Marion B. Pierce, Counsel for the Debtor, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company; Mr. Carl O. Hoffmann, Counsel for the Continental Bank and Trust Company, Mortgage Trustee under the General Mortgage; Mr. Hugh L. M. Cole, Counsel for the Mortgage Trustee of the International-Great Northern First Mortgage, and Mr. Arthur M. Anderson, of J. P. Morgan & Company and representatives of the Bankers' Group. This letter was a joint letter, as I have stated, reading:

"I enclose herewith copy of letter of the 21st instant from Mr. Charles B. Henderson, Chairman of the Board, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to me, requesting payment of that Corporation's claim against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. I enclose also copy of my acknowledgment of receipt of said letter.

Sincerely yours."

I received acknowledgments from some of these gentlemen; one or two others said nothing. Mr. Pierce acknowledged the letter, Mr. Anderson's secretary acknowledged the letter (Mr. Anderson being out of the city), and I received this acknowledgment from Mr. Kitchel:

"November 29, 1945

"I have your letter of the 26th instant enclosing copy of letter of the 21st instant from Mr. Charles B. Henderson of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation requesting payment of that Corporation's claim against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, together with a copy of your reply thereto.

"I note that they have put a sixty-day time limit on their offer and I hope that before taking any definite action in connection with this claim you will let us have an opportunity of discussing the matter with you. I understand from Mr. Baldwin's secretary that you are planning to be in New York next week and we can then talk the matter over.

"With kind regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

WLK/T W. LLOYD KITCHEL."

I will state in that connection, because before I get through I may refer to this again, that Mrs. Thompson and I had planned a trip to New York for personal reasons of our own and business reasons of mine, since early in November, and for the early part of December, and this last sentence in the letter refering to Mr. Baldwin's secretary refers to this, that Mr. Baldwin was in New York, evidently about this matter, and Mr. Kitchel learned from Mr. Baldwin's secretary that I was planning soon to be in New York, and hence he added this sentence, "I understand from Baldwin's secretary that you are planning to be in New York next week and we can then talk the matter over". I may refer to that in another connection, before I get through. At any rate, on November 29th I wrote Mr. Henderson a rather long letter, figuring out various bases of possible settlement; setting forth what I understood to be his proposition and what that would mean in total amount to be paid, and then I figured interest at various rates and showed how that would figure out—one at 6% to date of bankruptcy and 3-½% thereafter; one at 6% per annum to date of bankruptcy and 3-¾% thereafter; one at 6% to date of bankruptcy, 4% to the effective date of the Plan and 3-½% thereafter, and another one at 3-¾% thereafter.

I asked him to let me know particularly whether I had correctly construed what his offer meant, and stated further, in the letter to him:

> "For your information I enclose herewith 'Missouri Pacific Railroad Company—Estimate of Cash Available and Requirements for Reorganization at December 31, 1945, under Modified I.C.C. Plan of July 4, 1944', the same being based on securities of the new company being issued as of January 1, 1943, and interest accruing thereon from that date, with appropriate allowance for interest paid. You will observe that after the necessary reserves shown thereon are taken care of, it is estimated that there will be a cash balance at December 31, 1945, of $21,994,587. If I should settle with you, there should be an adjustment on account of the elimination of your claim from the Plan requirements of $2,562,327., which, added to the $21,994,587., would give me as Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company as of January 1st available cash of $24,556,914.
> "If my figures are correct, settlement with you on the basis of I. above would require $25,659,992.; under II., $24,183,802.; under III., $24,921,897.; under IV., $25,310,435.; and under V., $25,486,324.
>
> "I would have you bear in mind the Missouri Pacific's indebtedness of approximately $2,000,000. to the R.C.C. and of $5,850,000. (principal amount only) to J. P. Morgan & Co. and associates.
> "I will be in New York next week, arriving there Monday next, December 3rd, and will stay at the Biltmore Hotel. Will you please communicate with me there as soon as you can conveniently do so."

I received a wire from Senator Henderson while I was there verifying these figures, and concluding:

> "Our directors are unwilling to consider any basis of settlment less favorable to this Corporation than said offer."

That really disturbed me, because I had in my mind carrying on negotiations that would result in a substantial reduction of interest charges, so I called up Senator Henderson from New York and asked him "whether I was to understand his wire as intending to shut the door against any further negotiating with him. He said, 'No'." I am reading from a memorandum I made at the time, on Biltmore stationery: "That if I had anything to propose he would be glad to receive it but that the wire was intended to express the position of the Board as presently advised."

I said, "All right", that I was uncertain how to construe the last sentence of his wire, and I added that the purpose of my letter was merely to see whether we were in agreement on figures; that there are important considerations I have to bear in mind, which might affect his Board's conclusion, and that I would like him to see this matter from my standpoint. He said he would be glad to hear again from me. That was on December 5th.

I don't know what the date or the place was, but, at any rate, it was on the same occasion while I was in New York, that I had lunch with Mr. Kitchel, Mr. Stedman and Mr. McConaughy, of Mr. Kitchel's office (now a partner of Mr. Kitchel), at Mr. Kitchel's invitation, and after lunch they brought up the subject of this letter which I had sent them and asked me if I had reached any conclusion. I told them that I had, that I was definitely in favor of paying off or settling with the R.F.C. if I could make a reasonable settlement. They said that they were sorry to hear that, that they did not believe I could properly use the funds that were on hand to make that settlement. Mr. Kitchel said that their position was that they had a lien on that cash as substantially all of it represented the earnings from the property owned by the First and Refunding Mortgage as a first lien, and it would constitute a preference for me to use that cash to pay the R. F. C.

They said that they had thought of an alternative, which involved a substantial interest payment in which the R.F.C., as pledgee of the First and Refunding bonds, would share a substantial amount; that they had not worked it out definitely, but they outlined it in the rough, which I did not, I am frank to say, understand clearly. The conversation lasted some time and at its conclusion I took issue with Mr. Kitchel to this extent: I just did not believe—I could not believe—that, considering the value of the collateral that was back of the R.F.C. claim, if I took up that claim and the Court would subrogate that to the lien of the R.F.C. on that collateral, as I thought it would do, if they had any lien—it didn't strike me that that would constitute any preference, and I was certain that it was in the best interest of the trust estate that that debt be paid. I was anxious to pay it and had been anxious for some time, unless there was some legal obstacle in the way. It has always seemed to me that you never hurt yourself by paying off debts when you have the money to do so.

At the conclusion I asked them what I might expect; whether, if I filed a petition to pay the R.F.C. they would oppose it. Mr. Stedman said that they were not in a position to answer that at the moment, because it was necessary for him to take the matter up with the members of his Group, but that they would do that and he would let me know definitely. I told him that I would like to know definitely as I had this time limit, and also that they should send me promptly, in writing, this alternative suggestion which they had made to me. They said they would do that.

That is substantially all that occurred during that conversation.

I believe it was on the 7th of January—I am quite sure it was in the first week in January—Mr. Kitchel and Mr. Stedman came here to St. Louis and we had a long conference. They gave me their final answer as to their attitude toward my paying the R.F.C., which was that they were opposed to it, that they would oppose a petition on my part to pay the R.F.C., and that they would appeal from the order if the Court should grant it. They were quite definite on that. They had promised to give me a definite answer as to that, and they proposed, as an alternative plan, that I pay to the First and Refunding bondholders seven coupons, which would amount to something like forty-five million dollars, and explained quite fully why they made that proposal. They had figures all made out showing the benefit that would accrue to the R. F. C. of some five million and odd dollars—

The Court: How much?

The Witness: $5,643,750. that the R.F.C. would have gotten, and I could afford to do that on the assumption that under the Plan, if the Plan went through—the present market conditions, the cash would not be taken but the bondholders were offered the option of taking cash or taking stock. They had considered the matter carefully and it was a very strong presentation of an alternative plan.

At the conclusion of our conference I told Mr. Stedman and Mr. Kitchel that I would not accept their plan; that I was still of the opinion that the best interests of the estate required my asking the Court for leave to pay the R.F.C. if I could make a satisfactory settlement.

Mr. Kitchel, at this conference, left with me a memorandum, I think—at any rate, he argued again that, since the First and Refunding Mortgage had a lien on this cash, a first equitable lien, that I could not properly use that cash to take up the debt of another creditor. He was so strong in his argument on that, that I asked Senator Dearmont, my counsel, and Mr. Railey, Assistant Counsel of the Trustee, to take up that matter very seriously and go into it very throughly; to go into it separately, without consultation, and see whether they would reach the same conclusion, which they did. I started to work on it.

Meanwhile, I was to be in Philadelphia before the Securities Exchange Commission and on the 16th day of January I telephoned Senator Henderson and asked for an appointment at his office. He was out and his secretary was uncertain, so that I went on to Washington and got there on the 17th day of January.

I had asked Senator Dearmont to meet me there and to bring with him the conclusion which he and Mr. Railey might reach on this question of the right to use the cash. I did not know until I met him there in Washington, what their conclusions were. I went to Washington for the definite purpose of seeing Senator Henderson and seeing if I couldn't get him to come down in his interest charges. I wanted to settle the claim; I was very anxious to do it, but I was also very anxious to settle it on as good a basis as possible. It seemed to me that the Board of the R. F.

C. might very well, for cash, agree to take a lower rate of interest.

I met Senator Dearmont in Washington and he then presented me with the opinion which he and Mr. Railey had jointly signed, in which they both reached the same conclusion, which was that the First and Refunding would have an equitable lien on this cash and that for me to use the cash to pay the R. F. C. would constitute a preference. That was a great disappointment to me; for the moment, at least, it stunned me. I thought the matter over that day.

Meanwhile, an appointment had been made for the following day, the 18th, with Senator Henderson, and it occurred to me that the best thing for me to do was to see Senator Henderson and tell him of my counsel's opinion and to say that, despite my counsel's opinion, if he would accept what the R. F. C. got under the Plan, which was six per cent. to date of bankruptcy; four per cent. to the effective date of the Plan, and the option of taking either 3½ or 3¾ per cent. bonds—the 3½% bonds were early maturity bonds, fifteen-year bonds, I believe—I assumed that they would be the bonds they would take, and if counsel for the R. F. C. did not agree with Senator Dearmont, or thought that there was some doubt about his opinion, I would come in to Court and place the matter before the Court and ask for instructions, as I was anxious to pay that debt.

He asked me if I would put that in writing when I got home and I told him I would be glad to do so, which I did. I wrote him a letter on January 21, 1946, the day I got back home. He told me to put it in the form of an answer to his letter of November 21, in which he made his proposal. On January 21st I wrote him this:

> "Answering your letter of November 21st last in which you requested that I file with the District Court a petition for authority to pay the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's claim against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company on the basis set forth in your said letter, permit me to repeat what I said to you last Friday afternoon in our conference in your office, at which were present also Senator Dearmont, my counsel, Mr. Fletcher, counsel for the R. F. C., and Mr. Sullivan, viz:

"That I have been advised by my said counsel, Senator Dearmont, in an opinion concurred in by Mr. Railey, assistant to counsel for trustee, (copy of which opinion, at your request, I left with Mr. Fletcher) that the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage bondholders have an equitable lien on substantially all of the cash which I hold as trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and that, therefore, for me to use such cash to discharge your claim would constitute a preference; that if Mr. Fletcher, after considering this opinion and the authorities therein set forth, does not agree with it or thinks there is serious doubt about the correctness of the conclusion therein reached and you desire the Court to pass upon the issue thus raised, I would be willing to file a petition asking the Court for advice and directions with respect to said issue, provided that you are agreeable to accepting in full discharge of your claim the principal amount with interest at six per cent. to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933), four per cent. to the effective date of the Plan (January 1, 1943) and three and one-half per cent. thereafter less the amount of the payments received by you from collateral."

I might say that in this conference with Senator Henderson, at which were present Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Sullivan, both of whom are here, and Senator Dearmont and myself, I stressed the point, I thought, that it seemed to me that the R. F. C. would be doing a very reasonable thing if by making cash settlement with me they got what they would get under the plan that they had agreed to, which was six per cent. from date of bankruptcy, four per cent. to the effective date of the Plan, and either three and a half or three and three-quarters per cent. thereafter, to the date of settlement, depending upon which bonds they would take under the Plan. That seemed to me to be quite reasonable and I thought it should appeal to the R. F. C.

However, I told Senator Henderson of the opposition of the First and Refunding group, the insurance group. I told him that I had taken the matter up and discussed it with Mr. Stedman and Mr. Kitchel, and that they were very much opposed to this use of the cash, and I told him that they would appeal from any order authorizing such use of the cash; that, while I was willing to do what I suggested—which was to take three and a half per cent. from the effective date of the Plan, with four per cent. prior to that and six per cent. to date of bankruptcy—to present the matter to the Court if Mr. Fletcher thought there was some doubt about the conclusion of my counsel. I wished that they would give serious consideration to settling on a lower interest basis rate and I suggested that if they would take, two, two and a half or three per cent. that the saving to the trust estate would be so much that it might allay opposition which otherwise might arise. I urged that strongly, hoping that we could induce the R. F. C. to take a lower rate of interest than proposed by Senator Henderson.

So, that is the way I left the matter Senator Henderson, that he would consider the matter with his Board, and meanwhile for me to put in the form of a letter what I had suggested, and I have read Your Honor the letter of January 21, 1946.

I got no response from that letter until February 27th, when I received a letter from Senator Henderson dated February 21st, but I received it on February the 27th, in which he says:

> "This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 21, 1946.
>
> "Your proposal contained therein has been carefully considered by our Directors, who have concluded that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would not be warranted in accepting settlement of its claim against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company on any basis less favorable than that set forth in our letter of November 21, 1945 to you.
> "The sixty day limitation stated in our letter of November 21 has expired and this Corporation's offer set forth in said letter is hereby withdrawn and cancelled."

I received that letter on the 27th day of February, 1946. Later, on March 7th, I wrote Senator Henderson an answer:

"Yours of the 21st of February was received by me February 27th.

"In the light of Senator Wheeler's Report No. 925 to the Senate, third paragraph on page 34, is there no possibility that your Board will reconsider this matter? I wish very much that it would and that it would make me a proposition in conformity with the suggestion in said paragraph, namely, a settlement on the basis of two to two and one-half per cent.

"Would you not also be good enough to tell me, or ask Mr. Fletcher to tell me, what his conclusions are with respect to my counsel's opinion that I left with you.

"Though I have no reason to believe that your Board contemplates any foreclosure of Missouri Pacific collateral (for I think you would surely not attempt to do that without prior notice to me and order of Court), I deem it proper to direct your attention to the fact that early in these proceedings the Court entered an order restraining and enjoining all persons, firms and corporations from enforcing liens upon the estate property."

I was very hopeful that the Board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would reconsider the matter, but I heard nothing in answer to that prior to my going again to Washington. I was very anxious to make a settlement of this matter with the R. F. C. I wired Senator Henderson if he would not see me; he told me he could, and I went to Washington—

(At this point the Court was interrupted by other matters not relating to this hearing.)

The Court: Proceed.

The Witness: On the 1st day of April, after first making an appointment with Senator Henderson's secretary, I called on Senator Henderson and again took this matter up with him, and told him that I was very much disappointed that my suggestion had not met with the approval of the Board. I said that, "I would like to know whether it is final or not, because if it is, and there is no chance of my settling with the R. F. C., then I am going to give attention to the further payment of interest and I can not pay a large amount of interest and settle with the R. F. C., too; I must know one way or the other whether they are going to settle".

I again entered into a discussion with him as to the reasonableness of our proposal; I reviewed our prior conference with him, and his letter turning down my letter, and I recall Senator Henderson then suggesting something that gave me hope, saying, "Well, we are right back now to where we started. Let us begin again".

The Court: Is that what gave you hope?

The Witness: It gave me some hope. I went on and told him—I again stressed the desirability from my standpoint of disposing of this claim of the R. F. C. and I thought the R. F. C. was asking too much interest, and I wished very much that they could see their way clear to renewing this offer, but at a lower rate of interest. And I again called attention to that paragraph in that report to the Senate of the Wheeler Committee, in which it commented on the interest that the R. F. C. was exacting and suggesting that it might be a lower rate.

Senator Henderson was very gracious and we had a pleasant conference. He told me he would let me hear from him definitely the following week, and that ended the conference.

I then called on Mr. Fletcher before leaving Washington. It developed in my conversation with Mr. Fletcher that Senator Henderson had written to me the prior week. I subsequently learned that the letter to me of March 28, came while I was in Washington. I did not know of its existence at the time I talked with Senator Henderson. In this letter of March 28th, which I found on my desk when I came home, it is stated in substance, that the Board saw no good reason for—I will read that paragraph:

"We see no good reason for settling our Missouri

Pacific loans on a lower interest basis than that applicable on other railroad and business loans, particularly since our Missouri Pacific loans are so very well secured and you hold as Trustee such a large amount of cash.

"With respect to the third paragraph of your letter, there is enclosed a copy of a memorandum of March 18, 1946, by Meade Fletcher, our Chief Railroad Counsel, from which you will note that he is of the opinion that it would be proper for the District Court, in its discretion, to approve the payment of our loans to the Missouri Pacific."

Then he says that he had no idea of foreclosing the collateral without first taking the matter up with me and the Court.

I did not know how to construe this letter when I got it, but, at any rate, according to his promise to let me hear from him, the following week I heard from Senator Henderson in a letter dated April 11, written by him, in which he says:

"You are hereby advised that this Corporation, subject to the conditions stated in the next paragraph hereof, will accept, in full settlement of its loans to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, a cash payment equal to the principal amount of said loans, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing said loans at the rate expressed in said notes to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933) and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of this Corporation's receipt of said payment, less cash payments heretofore credited by this Corporation to interest on said loans.

"The foregoing offer of this Corporation is subject to the conditions (1) that you advise us, within the next twenty days, that you are willing to accept such offer, subject to the obtaining of the necessary Court approval, and (2) that such approval be obtained and such payment be made not later than ninety days from the present date."

That was April 11th. I wrote Senator Henderson on the 15th:

"This will acknowledge receipt of yours of the 11th instant. I will give you my answer within the twenty days specified, though since your letter was not delivered until this morning, perhaps you would be willing to have both the twenty and the ninety day limitations begin today. The twenty day limitation is not so important, but the ninety days may be."

He wrote me on April 16th, in answer to that, stating:

"I note that my letter was not delivered until the morning of the 15th and you ask if I would be willing to have both the twenty and the ninety day limitations begin on that day. I see no reason why both of these limitations should not begin on April 15 and you may consider this letter as modifying my letter of April 11 in that respect."

On April 24, I wrote to Senator Henderson:

"In compliance with your condition (1) in yours of the 11th instant, permit me to advise you that I am willing to make settlement of your claim against the Missouri Pacific on the terms set forth in your said letter if the Court will so advise and direct, and that my counsel is now preparing and I hope to file tomorrow my petition as Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, asking the Court's advice and directions.

"I will send you a copy of the petition as soon as it is completed."

The Court: Was that the last letter?

The Witness: That is adhering to the same position, yes, renewing the offer. My efforts were utterly unavailable in the direction of securing a lower interest rate. It was explained to me by Mr. Fletcher that that was the rate that the R. F. C. charged, the rate that they had when they settled the claims against the Milwaukee and the Rock Island, and if they settled with me on a lower basis there would be great displeasure among those sources, and, besides, it was their policy to charge that rate on all loans and they always adhere to it.

I have forgotten whether I have covered the whole matter or not.

Mr. Dearmont: I think you have covered very fully the negotiations with Senator Henderson.

The Witness: There is one thing that I believe I want to refer to. In the hearings before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, on what was originally the Mahaffie Bill, now commonly referred to as the Wheeler Bill, Senator Wheeler at least three times when witnesses were testifying referred to the fact that the Missouri Pacific had not paid, or to this offer of the R. F. C. to the Missouri Pacific, and on each occasion, plainly in an effort to make it appear that I was a prejudiced trustee, unmindful in that respect of my duty and subservient to the direction of the insurance group, said, on February 28th, when Mr. Young, President of the Alleghany was testifying:

> "In November of last year I objected to the failure to pay the R. F. C. about $23,000,000. owing from Missouri Pacific. Thereupon R. F. C. wrote the trustee, Guy A. Thompson, and asked for payment. The newspapers stated at the time that the trustee went to New York to confer with the insurance group on this subject. They told him not to pay. He did not pay."

Again, when another witness was testifying on March the 4th, Senator Wheeler said:

> "In addition, there is a belief that the trustees who represent only certain creditor classes will have greater influence before the Commission"—that is, if the Plan should go back—"I call attention to the fact that R. F. C. asked Missouri Pacific for payment of its loan. The first thing we knew of newspapers carried the story that Mr. Thompson immediately got on the train and went to New York to talk with the insurance companies back there to see what he could do about paying."

On March 7th, in the hearing before Senator Wheeler's Committee, Mr. Purcell, Vice-President of Alleghany, having stated that these trustees are under the influence of and in fact represent senior creditors, Mr. Wheeler said:

> "In the case of the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific the story is to the effect that the R. F. C. asked them to pay, and the way the story came out in the press, the Trustee went to New York to consult the institutional holders. Whether he took their advice or not I do not know. At any rate, he did not comply with the R. F. C.'s request."

In reporting this Wheeler Bill, reported by the Committee on April 11th, that Committee on Interstate Commerce, submitted the following report, and in that report it is stated, on page 52:

> "Even if the institutional bondholders were entitled to the chief value they receive in current reorganizations, the control of the railroads which are being reorganized, they do not get much less pending the completion of reorganization, since theirs has been the principal influence in the court proceedings to the present time, and there are no signs that it has diminished."

Now, Foot-note 9: "On that subject, the following may be quoted from the hearings on S. 1253," which is the last quotation which I have just read to Your Honor, and which is repeated again in the report from Senator Wheeler in submitting this bill to the Senate.

I have called attention to the fact that upon receipt of this offer from Senator Henderson I sent a joint letter to all of the parties that I named a while ago in my testimony, who were representing major interests and trustees in this reorganization. I received from Mr. Kitchel, who was one of those to whom I sent the letter, an acknowledgment of its receipt, and stating that he notes "that they have put a sixty-day time limit on their offer and I hope that before taking any definite action in connection with this claim you will let us have an opportunity of discussing the matter with you."

I have stated the circumstances under which I went to New York, and have told Your Honor in substance of my conference in New York with Mr. Kitchel and Mr. Stedman, and of my endeavor to have them not oppose my payment, or motion to pay the R. F. C., if I should file it following the making of a satisfactory agreement of settlement with them.

When Senator Wheeler made the statement which I first quoted to Your Honor, on February 28 of this year, I had had this meeting with Mr. Stedman and Mr. Kitchel in St. Louis. They came out to see me, as I stated a while ago, and on the 7th day of January gave me a final answer as to what their attitude would be with respect to payment to the R. F. C., and proposed an alternative plan and urged it strongly.

I had turned that plan down. Of course, Mr. Wheeler didn't know anything about that. I had gone to Washington and had this conference on January the 18th with Senator Henderson, in an effort to reach an understanding with him. Meanwhile, the day before, having received this opinion from my counsel that I couldn't use the funds in this fashion, that it would constitute a preference, nevertheless, despite that advice of my counsel, as I have stated, I proposed to Senator Henderson that if he would take this amount of money in settlement of the claim, six per cent. from date of bankruptcy, four per cent. to the effective date and three and a half per cent. thereafter, that if his counsel did not agree with my counsel, and that there might be some question about the correctness of my conclusion, I would, nevertheless, present this matter to the Court, because I was very anxious to dispose of this matter. That was on the 22d of January, I think.

This first quotation from Senator Wheeler was on February 28th, the intent of which plainly was to make it appear that I was a trustee who, if not acting by direction of the insurance group, was at least unfavorably subject to its influence.

On the very day before Senator Wheeler made that statement on February 28, I had received a letter from Senator Henderson declining my proposal and withdrawing his original proposal.

I think that I have shown I have striven diligently. It has been my desire for some time to take up this claim, provided that I could take it up on a reasonable basis, and I have striven diligently to that end, and I have had certainly not the assistance toward that end of the insurance group up to this time. I don't know what position they would take before the Court today.

The Court: The advice of your counsel then was the same as now?

The Witness: I beg your pardon?

The Court: The advice of Mr. Dearmont and Mr. Railey has not changed?

The Witness: No, sir; I don't think they have—I don't think they have.

The Court: Have you made any independent investigation of it yourself, Mr. Thompson?

The Witness: Not in the way of going to the books and looking it up, Your Honor, but I just have the feeling that it is one instance where my client and I have not been in agreement. I have felt that if this money were used to take up the claim of the R. F. C. and the First and Refunding were subrogated, provided it has a lien—assuming that the First and Refunding and General Mortgage, Little Rock, Hot Springs and Western—to the extent that any creditors of the estate have a lien upon the cash that is used to take up this claim of the R. F. C., to the extent that they have an interest in a lien on that cash they would be subrogated and if they were subrogated to the collateral that secures that debt of the R. F. C., that collateral being worth what it is today, vastly more than the money that is used in the taking up of this claim, buying the claim, I just can't understand how that is a preference. It seems to me that if it is in the interest of the estate that that be done that it should be done, and all parties, to the extent that they have liens on the money which is used in buying this claim, would be subrogated to the extent of their liens, to the lien of the R. F. C. in the collateral which is back of the debt.

The Court: You stated you are not in accord with your clients: You mean your counsel?

The Witness: I meant my counsel.

Mr. Sunderland is here; I don't know whether his answer has been filed or will be filed. At any rate, we have the bank claim here. I have forgotten the exact amount, but I have the figures here—in excess of five million dollars.

Mr. Sunderland: $5,850,000.

The Witness: Which is also abundantly secured with collateral, I think with perhaps twice as much, and it is in exactly the same class as the R. F. C.; in fact, it was classified with the R. F. C. in the classification of claims, and I think that, despite my counsel's opinion, it is advisable that that claim be taken up. If I had known at the time the petition was filed to take up the claim of the R. F. C. that it would be possible to take up the bank debt on the same basis that Your Honor would approve taking up the R. F. C. debt, I probably would have filed a petition to do so, but I had reason to believe that that was not desirable at that time.

I will say this: I believe if Your Honor would enter an order authorizing and directing me to purchase this claim of the First and Refunding on the basis proposed by the R. F. C., if you think that is a reasonable basis, if you authorized that I would make a pretty close review of my cash situation with a view of coming back with another petition asking leave to take up the bank claim on the same basis, because I think the bank debts should be treated just as the R. F. C. is treated.

That is my attitude toward that.

Mr. Dearmont: I have no further questions.

The Court: Has any other counsel any questions?

Cross Examination

By Mr. Biggs:

Q. Mr. Thompson, on January 7th, when Mr. Kitchel and Mr. Stedman were conferring with you with regard to this matter that you testified about, did they submit any memorandum to you in connection with their plan of paying seven coupons—

The Court: Doing what?

Mr. Biggs: Paying seven coupons on the First and Refunding bonds?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Kitchel submitted a memorandum opinion on this preference question—it may be that Senator Dearmont has that. You mean, as to figures?

Q. Yes.

A. I know there were a lot of figures; they had a lot of tables which we went over, but I don't think I have those.

Mr. Biggs: That is all.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Chasnoff:

Q. Mr. Thompson, in your statement that you had called the attention of Senator Henderson to various statements of the Committee investigating trusteeships, and so on, you did not mention it, but I would like to know whether you called his attention to the statement on page 34 of Report No. 929 in which it was said,

"In arranging for the payment of R. F. C. loans, a change in the rate of interest would seem to be not inappropriate. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been charging the railroads 4% on its loans. At the same time, the Government has been, in recent years, paying from 2 to 2½% for the long-term money it borrows and less than 2% on all its borrowings. The Government did not make loans, whether to industries or to individuals for the purpose of making a profit. It would appear to be appropriate to charge borrowers simply the rate of interest which the Government itself must pay for money, plus a sufficient amount to take care of administrative expenses and to set up reserves for any losses which the Government might have to take on loans still outstanding. If this policy be followed, it is obvious that the R. F. C. would be charging the railroads less than 4% per year. As a matter of fact, the Government has already been making substantial loans in other fields at rates considerably less than 4%"?

The Court: What is that from?

Mr. Chasnoff: From Report 929, United States Senate, 79th Congress, dated February 7th, 1946.

A. Yes, I think I read my letter to Senator Henderson in which I referred him to page—

Mr. Chasnoff: Q. That was the particular matter which you referred to at that time? A. Yes, on page 33.

Q. The only other thing I want to ask about is, have you made a computation to determine whether your funds are sufficient to pay both the bank claims and the R. F. C. on the basis now proposed?

The Court: He stated he would make a survey; he has not—

A. I haven't with the care that I propose to exercise now that I believe the bank would be willing to settle on the same basis as the R. F. C. If that is the situation then I will take another look at my cash situation. I have a feeling that I can do it.

Mr. Chasnoff: Q. That you might be able to do it? A. Yes.

Q. But you agree that paying off the R. F. C. on that basis and refusing to do it for the banks would constitute a preference? A. No.

Q. You said they are in the same class.

A. They are different debts.

Q. But they are the same class of debt. If they can be settled on the same basis, would it not be preferring one creditor— A. If I made a different kind of settlement—

The Court: One at a time.

The Witness: I think the bank would be treated exactly as the R. F. C.

Mr. Chasnoff: Q. If you make it with one and don't make it with the other you would be preferring one of the creditors? A. I think that is a different situation.

Q. How much better is this—

The Witness: If I settled with both and made a settlement on a different basis I don't think that would be—

Q. But if you undertook to settle with one and refused to settle with the other because you didn't have enough money for both. How much better—

The Court: He doesn't specialize in bankruptcy.

The Witness: I would not say so, no.

Mr. Chasnoff: Q. How much better is this proposed offer of the R. F. C. than what they would get if the Plan goes through? You offer—

The Witness: It is one-half—

Q. The R. F. C. is getting a better deal on that than they would on the Plan?

A. I think it would figure this way: This is assuming they took the three and a half per cent. bonds, they would get one-half per cent. more from the effective date of the Plan.

Q. They are getting a better cash settlement than what they would get under the Plan?

A. To that extent, one-half of one per cent. for that period.

Mr. Chasnoff: That is all.

The Court: Does any other counsel desire to question Mr. Thompson?

(No response to the Court's inquiry.)

The Court: How much more is there?

Mr. Dearmont: As far as I am concerned, I have nothing further to offer.

The Court: I have in mind the fact that counsel are here from New York and have reservations. If they are going to be able to make those trains and want to go home—

Mr. Shepley: I don't know how other counsel from other parts of the country are situated, but Mr. Sunderland is able to get a reservation on a plane to leave later. The car leaves downtown for the airport at 2:55, 3:55 daylight saving.

The Court: Do you desire to go ahead with the hearing now or complete it later?

(Here ensued discussion among Court and counsel.)

The Court: Announce a five-minute recess.

(After a five-minute recess the hearing was resumed.)

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Dearmont: If the Court please, I think that we have offered everything we care to offer on these motions. I do have here a telegram from Mr. Hughes, and a letter, which he asks that in his absence I read to the Court. Mr. Hughes is a member of the firm of Chadbourne, Wallace, Parke & Whiteside, and represents the Manufacturers Trust Company. If you would like to have it read at this time I will read this letter.

The Court: I want to do everything to expedite the matter.

Mr. Dearmont: If these gentlemen are ready to proceed, I am ready to proceed. I do have this letter from Mr. Hughes, which he asks that I read.

Mr. Chasnoff: I suggest that it be read, so that we will know what their attitude is.

Mr. Dearmont (reading):

"May 7, 1946.

Mr. Russell L. Dearmont,
Missouri Pacific Office Building,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Senator Dearmont:

We are in receipt of the following:

1. Petition of Trustee for advice and directions with respect to payment of debt due the Railroad Credit Corporation by International-Great Northern Railroad Company, Debtor.

2. Petition of Trustee for advice and directions with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of Reconstruction Finance Corporation against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

3. Petition of Trustee for advice and directions with respect to payment of debt due the Railroad Credit Corporation by Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

We have given consideration to these petitions and have discussed them with Mr. Lober of the Manufacturers Trust Company, Corporate Trustee under the First and Refunding Mortgage. As it is not possible for anybody from our office to be in St. Louis at the hearing, I am writing you this letter to express our views on the above-mentioned petitions and to request that you present a copy of this letter to the Court in connection with the consideration of the petitions.

Manufacturers Trust Company, as Trustee under the First and Refunding Mortgage, does not make any objection to the repayment of the I. G. N. indebtedness to the Railroad Credit Corporation as it does not appear that the funds which will be utilized for this payment represent funds from the operation of railroad properties which are subject primarily to the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage of the Missouri Pacific.

The petition of Mr. Thompson, as Trustee for the Missouri Pacific, relating to the payment of the R. F. C. loan contains the following statement:

> 'that substantially all of the funds now held by Trustee in behalf of said trust estate have come from the operation of the railroad properties which are subject to the liens of the aforementioned Mortgages; that if and to the extent that the terms of said Mortgages and the claims filed by said Mortgage Trustees herein create and establish liens upon all or any part of the funds proposed to be used in said compromise and settlement of the claim of the R. F. C., said mortgage creditors may be entitled to be subrogated to the extent of the funds so used, to any rights and liens held by the R. F. C. in said pledged collateral.'

The reports which the Trustee has made from time to time indicate that the most substantial part of these funds now held by the Trustee arise from operations of the property which are subject to the First and Refunding Mortgage of the Missouri Pacific as a prior lien, and that, consequently, a prior lien on these funds exists in favor of the First and Refunding Mortgage Bondholders. Payment from such funds, therefore, of the claim of the R. F. C. and similarly, the purchase of the R. F. C. claim—which might be the more desirable of the two alternatives—would constitute a preferential payment to the R. F. C. which would seem to be justified only if the terms of payment or of purchase of the R. F. C. Claim were so advantageous to the trust estate and to the First and Refunding Mortgage Bondholders that the legal objections to such preferential payment or purchase may be eliminated in the light of definite and certain advantages to the trust estate and to the First and Refunding Mortgage Bondholders. Certainly, if the Trustee's funds, arising from the operation of property subject to the prior lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage, are to be utilized to pay or acquire the R. F. C. claim, the formula of payment or acquisition should involve the preservation, in favor of the First and Refunding Mortgage, of a subrogated right in the claim and in the collateral thereto, whether such subrogation arise by payment [of] purchase. The considerations above mentioned in this paragraph are legal considerations which, it seems to us, should require, in view of the possible future of the reorganization, the continued preservation in favor of the First and Refunding Mortgage Bondholders of the present accumulated earnings of the properties which are subject to the lien of their Mortgage.

Aside from the legal desirability of retaining for the First and Refunding Mortgage bondholders the equivalent of the funds which will be diverted if payment or purchase of the R. F. C. claim is made, there are certain practical considerations which should be taken into account. One of these, of course, will be the possible depletion of cash since the date of the petitions or in the future, arising from the present coal strike and increased wage claims. All reports of railroads, which I have seen, for the first three months of this year are discouraging and, even if the coal strike is not longer continued, the reports for several succeeding months will, undoubtedly, make pretty sour reading. Another practical consideration which should be taken into account—if the R. F. C. claim is paid or purchased—is the non-desirability of making such payment or such purchase on the basis of the interest rate contemplated by the petition, namely, 6% to April 1, 1933 and 4% thereafter. These rates are substantially in excess of the interest rates applicable to the securities which the Plan of Reorganization contemplated the R. F. C. should receive and are substantially in excess of the coupon rate on railroad bonds recently offered and, as I recall, are in excess of interest rates on at least one bond issue which the R. F. C. agreed to purchase or underwrite several years ago when it forced a reduction in interest rate from an underwriting house. If the R. F. C. claim is to be paid or purchased, it would seem appropriate that it be done at a substantially lower rate of interest, as the R. F. C. would not be taking any risk on future interest or principal but at the time of such payment or purchase would receive all accumulated interest at the rate of settlement and therefore could afford to make a substantial concession. It is my recollection that the R. F. C. has accepted the latest plan of reorganization. Whether this plan is consummated or fails, it is improbable that the R. F. C. will ever be permitted to sell out its collateral. If pending [legislature] should change the picture with respect to the method or basis of reorganization, it is also probable that security holders junior to the First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds, would find it to their advantage to provide for the payment of the R. F. C. loan and prevent an increase in the Railroad's outstanding obligations and the Railroad's interest in the collateral pledged to secure the R. F. C. loan, by financing the payment of the R. F. C. loan by a method not prejudicial to the holders of the First Refunding and Mortgage Bonds.

The same legal considerations apply with respect to the third petition, which relates to the payment or purchase of the claim of the Railroad Credit Corporation against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. However, in connection with this petition, the amount involved is small compared with the amount involved in the R. F. C. claim and the current interest rate on the notes to the R. C. C. is a modest one. From a practical viewpoint, therefore, both as to the amount involved in respect of payment of principal and in respect of interest rate, the payment of the R. C. C. claim is much less objectionable and some legal concessions may be made to practical considerations.

In view of the above considerations, we do not believe that the Corporate Trustee of the First and Refunding Mortgage should support or consent to the payment or purchase of either the R. F. C. claim or the R. C. C. claim. It is possible, of course, that the future action of the Corporate Trustee can be more appropriately determined when we have had an opportunity to examine a transcript of the proceedings on the hearing of the petitions, and I would therefore appreciate it very much if you would request the stenographer to send to us, at our expense, a transcript of the hearings on the above-mentioned petitions.

Very truly yours,

C. B. HUGHES."

Mr. Sunderland: If Your Honor please, as I have already indicated when I asked leave to file the Answer of those for whom I am speaking, the so-called bank secured loan group, J. P. Morgan & Company, Kuhn, Loeb and Company and Guaranty Trust Company of New York, I support the application of the Trustee in which he asks for instructions from Your Honor as to dealing with the loans of the R.F.C. and R.C.C., which loans, as I have stated, are part of Class 10 of the classification made by Your Honor.

My position is that equal treatment, if Your Honor should grant the application to deal with these loans, should be available to those for whom I speak, as members of that class.

In order to expedite the presentation of this matter I have in my Answers referred to the record where facts dealing with the classification are set forth. Reference are made to the record, which, as I understand from Senator Dearmont's statement in the disposition of the matter this morning, is before Your Honor in this proceeding, and Senator Dearmont specifically referred to certain orders, and among those are certain of the orders that I refer to, to the extent necessary. By that I mean to the extent that he has not referred specifically to them my Answers to refer to those orders.

Just a preliminary word about the showing of these Answers and then I come to what I conceive to be the subject which may be of most help to Your Honor. My Answers not only bring the record before you specifically, but I think they show that our claims are undisputed. The character of the claims, the purpose for which the money was borrowed, and the general similarity of the claims of my clients to those of the R.F.C. and the R.C.C. is clearly shown specifically in the Supplemental Report of the Commission in Finance Docket 9919, in the Report of December 4, 1944, and I have in the Answer quoted from that Report of the Commission, which Report was the basis of their order, which order has been confirmed by this Court, and the plan therein set forth has been confirmed. I don't think it is necessary to take the time to repeat what is said there, but I submit it shows clearly that we are on exactly the same basis.

I have gone further in the Answer and I have shown the amount, the principal amount, of the total indebtedness, $5,850,000.; in Paragraph 17, I have shown the amount of interest at 6%, the amount to the date of bankruptcy, and the amount of interest at 4% from that date to June 30, 1946. I have done that because that is the proposal that is before Your Honor, that has been made by the R.F.C.

On that basis, the saving to the estate would be, if Your Honor should accord the treatment to the bank loan group that may be accorded to the R.F.C. and the R.C.C., would be one million four hundred thousand odd dollars.

The Answers have in them all of the necessary practical material to enable Your Honor, should you reach the view that these claimants must be legally, as we contend, treated on the same basis as the other members of their class, so that the Trustee could concurrently deal with these claims—

The Court: Would it be a preference, in your opinion, if the R.F.C. were paid and you were not?

Mr. Sunderland: It would.

The Court: There is no question of that in your mind?

Mr. Sunderland: No question at all.

Now I come to this question of the power of the Court on this showing of benefit to the trust estate in saving a substantial amount in the settlement of interest as against the six per cent. rate which the notes bear, and other very definite advantages.

I agree that it is necessary in this Court of equity to find advantages to the trust estate. I also agree that this money that is going to be used is money that has been impounded under the First and Refunding loan, but I believe that an impounding order of that kind must necessarily, and really does, take into account the necessary requirements of the estate, not only in the administration but in the dealing with the whole group of rights that are presented in a bankruptcy proceeding which looks ultimately to reorganization promptly and wisely and fairly, with due regard to the rights of the parties, but also with due regard to the public interest.

I have had some similar nice questions to deal with. Indeed, Your Honor will recall that I was active in the Frisco case, where we felt that the impounded income, by reason of the benefits accruing of the two characters I refer to, the private and public, and the benefit to the estate, could properly be used as they were used in making that settlement. I cover that situation, which is particularly well-known to Your Honor, in a memorandum that I file and I file the memorandum primarily for that purpose, to call that case specifically to Your Honor's attention.

In that memorandum is set forth the exercise of this general power; true, in an equity receivership, but in fundamental legal principle I make no distinction between that procedure and that under the Bankruptcy Act. There we had, as I say in my memorandum, a situation where it was clearly a question of the use of the impounded funds in paying interest to the creditors and a public interest of having the property reorganized and gotten out of the jurisdiction of the Court. It became necessary to acquire receivers' certificates and to deal with Equipment Trust Certificates, and indeed to acquire a divisional lien. And I refer to the Seaboard case. There we had a situation of general principle similar to the one here, and the Court did order there, on his finding that there were these benefits that have been referred to, the use of the money to acquire these debts.

It seems to me that what happens here is a very simple subordination. You acquire their notes and the collateral. The Trustee substitutes cash against which are the liens as the result of cash coming from the mortgage lien—he uses that cash to acquire the notes and the collateral. Up to that point, aside from the question of the wisdom of substituting a security for cash, there is no change in the rights of those whose property provided the cash. Their prior lien under the impounding order, if we have one, immediately attaches to the notes and collateral which were acquired with the funds.

So I submit, Your Honor, provided you find, as we believe you should find, that the estate benefits in connection with the acquisition of these secured loans, that you have the power, that you have the legal right in your administration of this property to instruct your trustee to acquire the notes, buy them—not pay them—and the collateral.

Now, I am not going to quarrel with the Trustee's exhibit here. We have great confidence in your Trustee and I think he has been very helpful and forthright—much more so than I have observed in some other cases—in setting before you the whole picture of his cash situation. It is a difficult thing for a trustee to say under uncertain conditions such as we face, whether he has the cash. I wouldn't pretend to quarrel with him about his figures, nor, perhaps, since I know his fair-mindedness, with the subsequent review of the matter. But if we are to have as the result of Your Honor's disposition of this matter a treatment, let us say on the basis of the treatment that the R.F.C. and R.C.C. are prepared to accept, in view of the payments that have been made and in view of recalculating the interest on the basis of the R.F.C. and R.C.C.

proposals, it would only require some $6,469,625. to deal with our claims. I referred some time ago to the saving to the estate. We all appreciate the saving of interest and saving in connection with this plan so far as the distribution of securities and the effect on the amount of securities. Senator Dearmont brought that out—on his Exhibit 2 he has taken that into account. The adjustment with respect to the R.F.C. and R.C.C. shows the amount in the first column, dealing only with the Missouri Pacific, is increased from twenty-five million to twenty-eight million.

I think the Trustee quite properly—in relating this matter to the Missouri Pacific, has dealt with the requirements of the confirmed plan, but if the plan is carried out and the consolidations and mergers and everything is done that the Plan proposes to be done, we might well cast our eyes to the total system cash situation, which shows forty-two million plus the two million dollars that would result from adjustment of R.F.C., plus an additional amount that would result upon treating the claims on the same basis.

I also am hopeful that the Trustee in his statement that he might wish to reconsider his cash situation, that he might take into consideration—I don't quarrel with the working capital of fifteen million, but I do think that amount is affected by the reserves for deferred maintenance, land grant deductions, and so forth.

There is another little item in here. We don't know what the railroad situation is going to be; it certainly is very uncertain at the moment, but those figures take into account the payment, under the Plan, of a dividend on the preferred stock. So far as the Missouri Pacific is concerned it is $8,800,000. and the total is $10,000,000. I don't pretend to quarrel with any of these figures, but I hope that the Trustee will reconsider his cash situation. I hope that he will adhere to what I believe to be the correct position, particularly in the history of the development of our transportation. That has been twice confirmed with the Commission, twice dealt with by the Commission, and twice by this Court—that it ought not to be a matter of any great doubt that whatever treatment is given to one member of a class must be given to the others, and I think that his counsel and he might well consider this question. I believe it to exist, and I submit that you have a problem. If you can prove that there are substantial benefits, as I think the record shows, you have the power to purchase, to use the impounded money, and that can be done without doing any inequity to any other creditor.

The Court: ————————?

Mr. Sunderland: That is an important element in your consideration of the benefits. There is no doubt about that.

All I am saying to you is that I have had occasion to deal with this matter on the basis of the proposal as to the amount that the R.F.C. and R.C.C. say they are willing to accept. I think that is a very important question.

The Court: ————————?

Mr. Sunderland: That gets into the field of policy on the part of the R.F.C.

Your Honor is going to deal with this matter on a fair and equitable basis, having the whole record before you. I am saying to Your Honor that if you should conclude that there will be benefits, that the bank creditors should be included in the treatment accorded any other members of the class.

Thank you.

GUY A. THOMPSON,

having been heretofore duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified as follows:

Mr. Thompson: I am not sure that I said it before, but I feel sure that had I known when I filed this Petition that those owning the bank debt felt about this as Mr. Sunderland has now explained to Your Honor, that I would also at the same time have filed a petition to pay the bank claim, because I—

The Court: I believe you made it plain in your statement.

Mr. Thompson (continuing): —think it could safely be done. That is my belief.

The Court: What about the statement that this payment of interest to the R. F. C. under the suggestion contemplated would be more than they would get under the Plan?

Mr. Thompson: All I can say, Your Honor, is that I felt very strongly that it should not be. I argued that as well as I could, but Mr. Henderson and Mr. Fletcher—Mr. Fletcher is here—I just was unable to shake Senator Henderson from that position.

Mr. Fletcher can explain to you better than I can why the R. F. C. feels that it should adhere to this proposal, even though it is slightly more than they would get under the Plan.

By taking up the R. F. C. debt that bears six per cent. interest, that is the contract rate—a million and some odd thousand dollars a year—it doesn't mean that much, but it does mean a substantial saving to get rid of it.

I personally feel that it is in the interest of the entire estate to take it up even at this figure if it is absolutely necessary.

Mr. Bean: What does one-half of one per cent. amount to, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson: I haven't figured it.

Mr. Dearmont: It is in the Petition. It is about $175,000, as I recall, on each quarter of one per cent. for the period. I believe that is about right. In other words, I think they have the option to accept either 5-½% bonds, securities bearing five and a half per cent. interest, or three and a half or three and three-quarters per cent. I think with three and a half it amounts to something over $300,000.—possibly $150,000. or $160,000. * * *. You can understand that the debt is paid off, whereas if they take what they get under the Plan they take bonds that go on for years in the future and interest charges would rest against the reorganized company.

Mr. McDonald: I want to have Mr. Buckland testify to one or two things.

EDWARD G. BUCKLAND,

a witness of lawful age, being duly produced, sworn and examined, testified on behalf of The Railroad Credit Corporation as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. McDonald:

Q. State your name, residence, and official connection with The Railroad Credit Corporation.

A. My name is Edward G. Buckland. I live in New Haven, Connecticut. I am President of The Railroad Credit Corporation.

Q. In connection with the motion before the Court this morning, is there some slight error in the description of the collateral with respect to the International-Great Northern?

A. Yes, sir. In the petition for the direction of payment by the Missouri Pacific there is omitted a statement which I think should be there, on page 2 of the Petition:

> "The Trustee is advised and therefore states that the present value of the securities listed above is approximately $5,000,000.; and that said notes are further secured by Debtor's distributive share in the fund established under the aforesaid Marshalling and Distributing Plan."

That is not true as stated that way. It is true you put in there, subject to the prior pledge with the I. G. N.—it is quite a substantial amount, as I shall show when I come to the I. G. N. In other words, the International-Great Northern obtained from the Missouri Pacific and from the N. O. T. & M. their distributive part of the collateral for the I. G. N. loan. Now, that is shown—if it is necessary, it is shown in the printed Proof of Claim of the R. C. C. against the Missouri Pacific, on page 3875, in which occurs this language:

> "Pledge of said defendant's distributive shares in the Fund shall be established under the Marshalling and Distributing Plan, 1931, as the same may be, at any time, and from time to time, determined, subject to pledge with said claimant as part security for the loan to International-Great Northern Railroad Company", and, again, in Proof of Claim of R. C. C. against the I. G. N. occurs this language, on page 3881 of the Printed Record:

"Pledge of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company's distributive shares in the Fund (also pledged as part security for loans to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company) established under the Marshalling and Distributing Plan, 1931, as the same may be, at any time, and from time to time, determined."

To that extent, Your Honor—

Q. Take Exhibits 6 and 7.

A. Exhibit 6: This is the list of collateral pledged with the Railroad Credit Corporation, the security for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company loans. In the lower right-hand corner occurs the figure $89,029. That is not pledged as security for the Missouri Pacific loan excepting as the equity in that is pledged, and inasmuch as the I. G. N. loan will take all of that it should not be there, and should be deducted. So that, the total amount which is made up by adding in that $89,000. should be deducted from the figure $4,985,602., leaving a total amount of security of $4,896,573. as the real collateral value of the collateral pledged for one million, nine, or whatever it is for the Missouri Pacific.

Q. Now Exhibit 7.

A. No; in Exhibit 8 a statement is made under the heading "Par Value Advances made by Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. $114,029", with an asterisk "Subject to prior pledge as security for Missouri Pacific Railroad Company loans". That is incorrect. That figure $114,000. which is here should not be—that should be carried out. Apparently the value of the other two pieces of collateral are carried out, in the next to the last column, but this is not carried out. It should be carried out and that figure which I deducted from the Missouri Pacific of $89,000. should be added in there making—this is important—making the total collateral pledged to secure the I. G. N. considerably in excess of the amount of the loan.

Now one thing more—I don't know whether it is pertinent, but there will be coming due, I feel confident, from these distributions so pledged a total of $92,209.11, distributed as follows: $74,445.01 Missouri Pacific; $15,595.73 I. G. N., and $2,168.37 N. O. T. & M., a total of $92,209.11, which I am confident is going to be returned in cash in the very early future if these amounts are paid, and in any event will eventually be paid, and I feel so confident of that that I am perfectly willing to deduct that $92,209.11 from the total of $397,556., and if I can receive cash from the Trustee of the remainder, $305,346.86 and retain the right to those distributive shares as they come in, he can have the rest of the collateral. I will reduce that indebtedness. Furthermore, if and when these undistributive balances exceed this amount I will give the rest of it back to him in cash. I don't want to make a profit on it, but I am anxious to liquidate it.

We started in with the idea of going five years; our charter was limited to 1937. At that time we loaned seventy-three and a half million to fifty-four railroads and have been able to save thirty-five, and we couldn't save nineteen, and this is one of them.

We are down to about three million dollars, and these are two of the railroads that constitute all but about $700,000. I really want to liquidate and get out. We only charge one per cent. interest—I am offering argument rather than testimony. There is ample security in all of this and I want to get it down where we can liquidate and be relieved of anything further with this loan.

I am ready for cross examination.

Mr. Dearmont: No questions.

At this point Mr. Pierce called the Court's attention to the Answers that he had filed on behalf of the Debtor, stating that they support the Trustee's petition and asking that he be directed to buy these claims. He also stated that he was filing the same Answers on behalf of the Protective Committee for the holders of common stock.

to pledge with said claimant as part security for the loan to International-Great Northern Railroad Company", and, again, in Proof of Claim of R. C. C. against the I. G. N. occurs this language, on page 3881 of the Printed Record:

"Pledge of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company's distributive shares in the Fund (also pledged as part security for loans to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company) established under the Marshalling and Distributing Plan, 1931, as the same may be, at any time, and from time to time, determined."

To that extent, Your Honor—

Q. Take Exhibits 6 and 7.

A. Exhibit 6: This is the list of collateral pledged with the Railroad Credit Corporation, the security for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company loans. In the lower right-hand corner occurs the figure $89,029. That is not pledged as security for the Missouri Pacific loan excepting as the equity in that is pledged, and inasmuch as the I. G. N. loan will take all of that it should not be there, and should be deducted. So that, the total amount which is made up by adding in that $89,000. should be deducted from the figure $4,985,602., leaving a total amount of security of $4,896,573. as the real collateral value of the collateral pledged for one million, nine, or whatever it is for the Missouri Pacific.

Q. Now Exhibit 7.

A. No; in Exhibit 8 a statement is made under the heading "Par Value Advances made by Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. $114,029", with an asterisk "Subject to prior pledge as security for Missouri Pacific Railroad Company loans". That is incorrect. That figure $114,000. which is here should not be—that should be carried out. Apparently the value of the other two pieces of collateral are carried out, in the next to the last column, but this is not carried out. It should be carried out and that figure which I deducted from the Missouri Pacific of $89,000. should be added in there making—this is important—making the total collateral pledged to secure the I. G. N. considerably in excess of the amount of the loan.

Now one thing more—I don't know whether it is pertinent, but there will be coming due, I feel confident, from these distributions so pledged a total of $92,209.11, distributed as follows: $74,445.01 Missouri Pacific; $15,595.73 I. G. N., and $2,168.37 N. O. T. & M., a total of $92,209.11, which I am confident is going to be returned in cash in the very early future if these amounts are paid, and in any event will eventually be paid, and I feel so confident of that that I am perfectly willing to deduct that $92,209.11 from the total of $397,556., and if I can receive cash from the Trustee of the remainder, $305,346.86 and retain the right to those distributive shares as they come in, he can have the rest of the collateral. I will reduce that indebtedness. Furthermore, if and when these undistributive balances exceed this amount I will give the rest of it back to him in cash. I don't want to make a profit on it, but I am anxious to liquidate it.

We started in with the idea of going five years; our charter was limited to 1937. At that time we loaned seventy-three and a half million to fifty-four railroads and have been able to save thirty-five, and we couldn't save nineteen, and this is one of them.

We are down to about three million dollars, and these are two of the railroads that constitute all but about $700,000. I really want to liquidate and get out. We only charge one per cent. interest—I am offering argument rather than testimony. There is ample security in all of this and I want to get it down where we can liquidate and be relieved of anything further with this loan.

I am ready for cross examination.

Mr. Dearmont: No questions.

At this point Mr. Pierce called the Court's attention to the Answers that he had filed on behalf of the Debtor, stating that they support the Trustee's petition and asking that he be directed to buy these claims. He also stated that he was filing the same Answers on behalf of the Protective Committee for the holders of common stock.

Mr. Thompson: Will Your Honor let me take the stand again for a moment?

The Court: Very well.

GUY A. THOMPSON,

having been heretofore duly sworn, resumed the witness stand and testified as follows:

The Witness: Mr. Sunderland is anxious to get away, and before he goes I would like to understand this: It is not clear to me whether Mr. Sunderland is objecting to Your Honor directing me, under the Petition that was filed, to make settlement with the R. F. C. unless at the same time Your Honor directs me to make settlement with the banks. I don't know whether that is precisely Mr. Sunderland's position.

Mr. Sunderland: I think I may have been at fault in not making it clear. I thought I had. I drew the prayer very carefully of my Answer, which Mr. Thompson has not had a chance to read.

The Witness: I haven't read Mr. Sunderland's Answer.

Mr. Sunderland: I believe that shows, and my statement shows, that I am not objecting to the payment of the R. F. C. and R. C. C. on the basis that this Court may authorize you to deal with them. I say, because of my being classified with them I am legally entitled to receive the same treatment. Have I made it clear?

(The last preceding statement by Mr. Sunderland was read to the witness.)

Mr. Dearmont: If the Court please, I want to suggest, although whatever pleases the Court and these other gentlemen is satisfactory to me, but the hour is 1:30 and there apparently are three or four others to be heard on this matter. I believe Mr. Chasnoff has some testimony to offer. It seems to me we ought to have a recess before we conclude.

The Court: I didn't want to take a recess if that was going to keep counsel from getting away.

Mr. Chasnoff: The only matter in the form of testimony that I want to offer is a compilation relation to United States Government bonds issued in the years 1933 to 1945, inclusive, and maturing in 1946 and thereafter; subsequent maturities being the earliest obtainable from the issues of the year in which offered. It shows rates of interest on bids.

This table was taken from authentic sources. I should like to offer it as an exhibit. The amount at which they were offered originally is probably a matter of judicial knowledge, anyhow, but I think it is helpful to have it in this form.

(The table last offered in evidence was marked Group of Institutional Holders' Exhibit A.)

Mr. Griffin: I would like to ask Mr. Buckland a question.

EDWARD G. BUCKLAND,

having been heretofore duly sworn, resumed the witness stand and testified as follows:

Cross Examination

By Mr. Griffin:

Q. Mr. Buckland, your claim and what you are asking the Court to order paid is the full amount of the principal and full amount of interest— A. It is.

Q. In your case there is no compromise or reduction as in the case of the R. F. C.?

A. No, there is no question of that sort at all. The interest is so low that I didn't suppose there would be.

Mr. Griffin: That is all.

The Court: We will take a recess at this time. Announce a recess until half-past two o'clock.

At this point, at 1:40 o'clock P. M., a recess was taken until 2:30 o'clock P. M.

After recess, on May 9, 1946, at 2:30 o'clock P. M., the hearing was resumed as follows:

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Dearmont: I thought it might be helpful, in view of the fact that reference has been made here, and is made in the Petition, to an opinion of counsel for the Trustee, if I made a brief statement now. I should like first, however, since the question seems important and Your Honor has evidenced considerable interest in the question raised by Mr. Sunderland, and at the risk of finding myself in disagreement with everybody, the Trustee and counsel as well, to briefly discuss the issue as to whether the fact that the claims of the R. F. C., The Railroad Credit Corporation and the banks have been by order of this Court placed in the same classification, necessarily requires that if one is retired or purchased the other should be retired or purchased. I seriously question whether that is true. I think the misunderstanding or disagreement over that would be because we disagree upon what this classification amounted to.

The Act as it now stands provides with reference to classification—Section 77 (7) (c), "After Notice and Hearing, the division of creditors and stockholders into classes according to the nature of their respective claims and interests."

In other words, it simply directs that they shall be classified according to the nature of their respective claims and interests. Now, in view of what Mr. Sunderland states in his Answer and has stated, I believe, in his discussion of the subject to the Court, I want to refer to Judge Faris' opinion on that issue, which appears in Volume 7 of the Record of the Proceedings, beginning at page 3135, it being Opinion No. 234A, record page 3135. I don't want to read the whole opinion, but I thought I might briefly read excerpts from it.

"With the above contention I am constrained to agree"—that is, the original classification placed all of these claims, I believe, in separate classifications, and I believe the R. F. C. contended it was error—that they should have been put into a single class. Judge Faris stated:

"With the above contention I am constrained to agree. At the time of making the provisional classification the statute provided that the administrative judge should 'determine * * * the division of creditors and stockholders into classes according to the nature of their respective claims and interests.'

"The word 'interests' in the quoted statute would seem to have immediate reference to stockholders and not to creditors. A stockholder has an interest in a corporation, even though entitled to no specific part of it, but can hardly be said to have a claim against it; while a creditor has a claim against the corporation but can hardly be said to have an interest in it.

"So, we have left in the statute nothing as to claims when it comes to a classification, except to determine whether the claim (that is, debt, for the statute so defines a claim) of one creditor differs in its nature from the claim of another. The word 'nature' is used in no technical sense in law, if indeed it has any, but is used in its ordinary, common, vernacular, dictionary sense, wherein it means 'kind, sort, species, character' (29 Cyc. 283).

"So, if the question were asked of the R. F. C. and of Morgan and Company, 'What kind or sort of claim have you against the Debtor?' the answer must inevitably be the same from each of them, and that answer would be 'a claim or debt evidenced by short-term promissory notes, secured by pledges of collateral, which collateral consists of bonds of the Debtor and others, and of stocks of other corporations.' The fact that under the collateral in one case there are unsecured demand notes of a subsidiary of debtor, can not materially vary the answer, when the legal similarity of a note and a bond is regarded. Moreover, I think the decisive point here is not the precise kind of collateral pledged, but the fact that all of the collateral put up as a pledge is personal property, namely, commercial paper and so-called securities. Obviously, differences in the rates of interest, in their amounts, in dates of maturity, in the names of payees, and such other minor details, can not affect the 'nature,' that is, the kind of claim; otherwise, a separate class must be provided for well-nigh every secured promissory note, which would be an unthinkable calamity, when the object and aim of the statute is regarded."

In other words, in finally approving classification here Judge Faris goes on in his opinion to say that nothing in the classification should be construed as indicating that one class has a preference over another class, for example, It is primarily, in this case, a classification for the purpose of enabling a vote to be taken upon the Plan. Under Judge Faris' interpretation, classification was made so that each similar class of creditor or creditors having the same nature of claim should be placed in the same class.

I will be glad to supply you with a memorandum, because I think the classification is entirely different from administering an estate where class 1 must be paid first, class 2 must be paid second, and class 3 third. I think it is a different question; at least, that is my personal view and I just wanted to have that in.

Mr. Sunderland apparently wants to make some comment.

Mr. Sunderland: Your Honor, one reason why I have noted in my Answer, and I only briefly refer to it in order not to take up the time of the Court, the language of the Supplemental Order of the Commission is to show that not only were these claims, over our objection and sustained on appeal by the Circuit Court, classified with the R. F. C. and R. C. C., but every action in this long proceeding looking to reorganization has been taken with the recognition, not only as a matter of technical classification, but the actual character of the claims and their security.

May I emphasize what I am saying by reading this from my Answer:

> "J. P. Morgan and Company and affiliated banks (this is the last Report of the Commission) are, from the nature and value of the collateral security for their loans, entitled to treatment at least equivalent to that accorded to the Finance Corporation. Although the banks have signified that they would accept the terms of the compromise plan, we are of opinion and find that, to avoid unfair discrimination in view of the above improvement in the treatment accorded the Finance Corporation, these bank creditors should receive an increase of $321,510 in their cash allotment, the resulting total being $1,480,382."

I interpolate: This whole action of the Commission was so sensitive to the fact that these bank claims were to be treated the same way that the R. F. C. and R. C. C. were that when they made an adjustment that didn't apply to the banks they leaned over backwards and said, "We must bring them up to the cash treatment given the R. F. C. and R. C. C.," and here is the reason for it:

"These loans from the Finance Corporation and the banks were made to aid the Debtor in emergencies, the proceeds were used in part at least to permit interest payments to continue to be made on the obligations of the Debtors, and the securities for the loans are of a different nature from the mortgage liens of the senior creditors of the Missouri Pacific, New Orleans, Texas and International. In our opinion these increases in cash payments to the Finance Corporation and J. P. Morgan and Company and associates, can be met out of excess cash," and so forth.

Now, that classification is given effect in the first plan. It has been acted upon throughout. There never has been any question before the Commission, and the results of the Commission's action have been approved by this Court on the basis not only of being technically, under the Bankruptcy Act, placed in the same classification, but on the basis that in every respect these claims are so similar that they were entitled to at least the same treatment accorded to the R. F. C.

The Court: In your Answer you are specifically requesting that you be accorded the same treatment?

Mr. Sunderland: Exactly.

The Court: Suppose the Court should determine that is a proper treatment, you couldn't make such an order under the notice—

Mr. Sunderland: I submit, in that connection, we can well consider the record we have here. These petitions are petitions of Your Honor's Trustee for instructions. You have directed that notice thereof be given to all parties in interest. This hearing is had as a result of the fullest notice. Every party comes into the proceeding at this time; if they are not here, they should be here.

The reason for my filing these Answers in the definitive form that I have was to enable this Court to have before it at this time—because there is no dispute about the claims; there is no dispute about the classification; there is no dispute about the treatment as directed by the Commission and by the Court. It seems to me that you today have as sufficient power as you need in order to issue instructions to your Trustee. I submit that you have.

Mr. Dearmont: I am sure that Mr. Sunderland and the Court understand that what I said with reference to the question of classification had no reference to the dignity of the claims of the banks. It is conceded here, or perfectly clear from the record, that the bank claims as well as the claim of the R. F. C. are abundantly secured and they are very similar in nature. But I want to point out that my conclusion is that you might pay one and not pay the other without being guilty of a preference in this instance, because you are not using their money with which to pay. The money that you are using is money that, in my opinion, is subject to the equitable lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage and you are using their money to pay one or both, or either of these—

The Court: You don't think I have a right to use that money?

Mr. Dearmont: I will get into that. I think there is a grave question there, Your Honor, but I think perhaps you may, and I would like to tell you why I think that.

I want to point out that the R. F. C. has one set of collateral back of its notes; the banks have another set of collateral back of their notes. If you pay off the banks and don't pay the R. F. C. I don't think the R. F. C. has any complaint. The only possible complainant, I think, is the creditor whose money you are using to pay that off, and it is not their money. Take the R. F. C.: They would have come here and torn down the court-house if you had taken ten million dollars that has been earned on the collateral behind the R. F. C. debt and paid it on some other debt. A creditor naturally wants to see that the income from the collateral securing its claim is not paid over to someone else.

My point is simply this: That, as far as the classification is concerned, it is not a determinative factor on this question, and I do not see that the holders have a right to complain because you take moneys of the estate produced by the property covered by the First and Refunding Mortgage to pay off one and don't pay off the other. I believe they have no complaint because you do not disturb their collateral. They still have collateral abundantly secured. Neither am I arguing that Your Honor should not pay them both. Perhaps if you have power to pay one you have power to pay both. I am not particularly nervous at this stage of the game as to whether or not there is cash to pay them both.

Now reverting just briefly to the opinion which was given to the Trustee under date of January 15, 1946, by his counsel, Mr. Railey and myself. It is true that under that date we did give him a written opinion in which we concluded, after reviewing authorities—I will be very glad to supply Your Honor with a copy of this opinion—that the bondholders secured by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage have an equitable lien upon the net income from the operation of the mortgaged property, and we advised the Trustee that substantially all of the cash which he held as Trustee of such debtor company represents income derived from the operation of said mortgaged property, and therefore it necessarily follows that any application of said funds to retirement of the claim of the R. F. C. as proposed would constitute a preference.

The term "preference" probably is a pretty strong term to use there; probably it would have been better to have said it would be unwarranted or would not be justified. However, in view of the fact that this issue had been raised, both Mr. Railey and I have given considerable consideration to this question, and I think, speaking for myself, and perhaps for Mr. Bailey, although he is able to express himself much better than I would be able to express it, it is our feeling that if you do direct the payment of either of these very highly secured claims, and you do so by using funds upon which we believe the First and Refunding bondholders have an equitable lien, it is subject to objection by them and if they do object Your Honor is faced, in my opinion, with a very serious question.

At this hearing it appears that no one comes forward able to speak for all the First and Refunding bondholders, perhaps, because the Institutional Group speaks only today for a relatively small percentage of the bonds, thirty-five or forty million dollars out of probably one-sixth of the bonds. In view of the fact that these bondholders are not before Your Honor, perhaps the duty rests upon Your Honor's shoulders to take care of the interest of those First and Refunding bondholders. I think it does. I think upon a proper finding by Your Honor you would be justified and probably legally to use these funds. I think you can do it only if you find it is not only in the interest of the estate, I think you must find, if you do enter such an order, that it is in the interest of the First and Refunding Mortgage bonds. I think perhaps there is a basis for Your Honor in so doing.

In order to be helpful, I might review briefly the reasons I have for coming to that conclusion. In other words, what we are doing here is really protecting an equity of redemption, and there is no doubt that in an ordinary bankruptcy proceeding the Trustee, under the safeguards of General Order No. 28, is permitted to use general creditors' cash to retire a mortgage lien and protect the equity of redemption.

For the convenient reference of the Court, we will analyze the source of this power in an ordinary liquidating bankruptcy proceeding, and then attempt to show by analogy that the same reasoning must apply in a railroad reorganization under Section 77 of the Act.

Prior to the general amendment of the Bankruptcy Laws June 22, 1938, there was no specific provision conferring upon the Bankruptcy Court the power to sell property of the bankrupt free from encumbrances. Discussing this in Van Huffel vs. Harkelrods, 284 U. S. 225, 227, the Court said:

"The present Bankruptcy Act, * * * unlike the Act of 1867, contains no provision which in terms confers upon Bankruptcy Courts the power to sell property of the bankrupt free from encumbrances. We think it clear that the power was granted by implication. Like powers had long been exercised by Federal Courts sitting in equity when ordering sales by receivers or on foreclosure."

Section 70 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended in 1938, forms the basis for the present implied authority to protect equities of redemption.

Section 70(a) provides that a Trustee shall in turn be vested by operation of law with title to the property of the bankrupt, and shall have the powers which the bankrupt might have exercised for his own benefit. Subdivision (f) of the same Section contains specific provision for the appraisal and sale of property of the bankrupt. These two provisions read together form the basis for the implied power to protect equities of redemption. Discussing this implied power, Collier, in his work on bankruptcy, Sections 70.991 (Vol. 4, p. 1619) states:

"It has been demonstrated in previous discussions that for the purpose of converting the estate into money, the Trustee or Receiver may, under direction of the Court, sell the assets of the estate either subject to or clear of liens and encumbrances. * * * As a kind of counter-part to these powers, and occasionally as a very valuable means to improve the prospects of a future disposition, the Trustee or Receiver, subject to the Court's approval, also has the power to discharge any existing mortgage, pledge, lien, or other encumbrance on property belonging to the estate. The exercise of this power of redemption, which is in essence, merely the equitable power of the bankrupt himself as transferred ex lege to a bankruptcy officer, presupposes the availability of funds."

The Trustee's right to redeem property and the Bankruptcy Court's power to authorize such redemption is recognized in General Order 28, which prescribes the procedure that must be followed. Such power, however, is not predicated upon General Order 28, but is implied from the general provisions of the statute. It is therefore of no consequence that General Order 28 is not applicable to a Section 77 proceeding.

In determining whether this implied power to protect equities of redemption, or in other words, pay off underlying mortgages for the benefit of the trust estate, is available in railroad reorganizations, we find the following language in Section 77 (1), Title 11, U. S. Code, Section 205:

> "In proceedings under this Section and consistent with the provisions thereof, the jurisdiction and powers of the Court, the duties of the Debtor, and the rights and liabilities of creditors, and of all persons with respect to the Debtor and its property, shall be the same as if a voluntary petition for adjudication had been filed and a decree of adjudication had been entered on the day when the Debtor's petition was filed."

Construing this language in the recent case of Smith, Trustee, Hoboken Manufacturers R. R. Co. vs. Hoboken R. R. etc. Co., 14 Law Week, 4333, decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, April 29, 1946, the Court held that Section 70 (b) of the Bankruptcy Act is applicable to a reorganization under Section 77.

Section 77 contains substantially similar provisions to the provisions of Section 70 on which the implied power to protect equities of redemption is predicated. Section 77 (c) (2) in part provides:

> "The Trustee or Trustees so appointed upon filing such bond, shall have all the title and shall exercise, subject to the control of the Judge and consistent with the provisions of this Section, all of the powers of the Trustee appointed pursuant to Section 44 of this Act, or of any other Section of this Act, and, to the extent not inconsistent with this section, if authorized by the Judge, the powers of a receiver in an equity proceeding."

Section 77 (c) (3) authorizes the issuance of Trustee's certificates of indebtedness, and Subdivision (o), which authorizes the Court in its discretion to authorize or direct sale of any part of the trust estate, corresponds to Section 70 (f) hereinabove referred to.

It therefore seems apparent that if in an ordinary bankruptcy proceeding the Trustee may be authorized to retire mortgages and to protect the equity of redemption, the same implied power exists in a 77 proceeding.

If it is conceded here that the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding bondholders have a lien upon substantially all the cash proposed to be used in the retirement of the R. F. C. debt against the estate, it is nevertheless our opinion that the Court may lawfully authorize the Trustee to retire this secured debt in order to protect the equity of redemption in the collateral which supports the R. F. C. debt, for the benefit of the trust estate if the Court finds that such action is in the interest of the trust estate generally and further finds that such action will be to the best interest of the holders of First and Refunding bonds or any other creditors having a lien upon the funds so used.

I think you may find that it is to the interest of the First and Refunding bonds to pay off the R. F. C., because I call your attention to the fact that the most valuable collateral pledged behind that mortgage is, I believe $32,750,000. First and Refunding bonds.

These proceedings have gone on now for more than thirteen years. It is conceivable that if Your Honor does not authorize and direct the payment of the claim of the R. F. C.—I don't want to put any notions in their mind at all—but it is quite conceivable, and the Trustee and his counsel are quite conscious of the possibility of the R. F. C. asking to be relieved from any restriction on the sale of the collateral, and Your Honor may find it somewhat difficult, although I would be here opposing it—you might find it difficult to avoid the entry of such an order. If such an order were entered and that collateral was sold—$32,750,000. of First and Refunding bonds was sold, plus ing it in the hands of the public, it would clearly dilute the collateral back of the First and Refunding Mortgage probably to a much greater extent than they may feel they are being imposed upon in the use of what they call their cash in the payment of some claim other than their own.

Therefore, if the Court is convinced that it is in the interest of the estate and that it is in the interest of the First and Refunding bonds it is my judgment at this time that Your Honor may lawfully so direct the Trustee.

Mr. Bailey may have more power to elucidate, or clear himself from the onus of the opinion that we jointly have given. Probably I must accept the major responsibility for it.

Mr. Dearmont: Mr. Sunderland has asked me if I overlooked the fact that their debt had $7,750,000. of First and Refunding bonds pledged and that is true, and the same argument that I have offered as an indication that it might be very much more to the interest of the First and Refunding to have these claims retired rather than have the collateral placed in the hands of the public applies to the debt of the R. F. C.

I think I have nothing further. I tried to make it as clear as possible, not only for the benefit of the Court but for counsel who are in this problem and might be curious as to what the views of the Trustee might be.

Mr. McPheeters: I am appearing on behalf of the Mortgage Trustee of the Committee for the Protection of the Little Rock, Hot Springs and Western bonds.

My client's position on this question of payment of the R. F. C. is in accord with that expressed by the Debtor's Trustee. We feel that from a practical standpoint, for the practical benefit of the estate, if payment is authorized on reasonable terms it will be beneficial.

We have this in mind in connection with the form of any order which might be entered—

The Court: That applies to Mr. Sunderland's claim, also?

Mr. McPheeters: I think so.

In connection with the form of any order that might be entered we are concerned with the problem of possible subrogation. The Little Rock, Hot Springs and Western is one of the three lines mentioned by Mr. Thompson this morning that has a first mortgage lien against the Debtor. We take the position that our bond issue covers earnings, and how they are to be determined would probably have to be by an accounting and to the extent of those earnings we are entitled to subrogation along with the First and Refunding and any other issues that have a first mortgage lien.

As far as the record is concerned, I should like to have it understood that the Proof of Claim of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, Trustee, is considered part of the record, of this record, and also the deed of trust.

The Court: Does anyone else desire to be heard?

Mr. Chasnoff: I represent primarily the Group of Institutional Holders of First and Refunding bonds, but also, on this particular matter that is up today, the Committee of the General Mortgage, First Mortgage.

We have not filed or thought it necessary to file an answer to the Trustee's application for instructions on this motion, for the reason that, so far as the factual statements contained in that motion are concerned, we don't controvert those. That being so, we deem a pleading to the motion unnecessary and have not filed any, but I have been asked by these two interests to communicate to the Court their views—and in part I want to use the views stated by other counsel on this, although I don't concur in the views stated—on the proposal which the Trustee presents to the Court in the motion papers with reference to a settlement of the R. F. C. claim and not a proposal with respect to the settlement of any other claim. This one motion, the R. F. C. claim, and the one involving the First and Refunding Mortgage, is the principal motion that has been discussed here.

There is no notice in this motion of the Trustee of any consideration to a proposition to pay other claims, such as the bankers' claims. I therefore, don't agree with Mr. Sunderland's view—although I haven't discussed this with other counsel—that at this time the Court could consider, with binding effect on those who are not here and those who are here for another purpose, the question of the payment of the Morgan claim, the bank claims, because there has been no proper notice given of that.

The Court: That question raised itself in my mind.

Mr. Chasnoff: I do think this, that in considering the question of whether the Court should instruct the Trustee to settle the R. F. C. claim on the ground that has been suggested it ought to take into account the fact that it will be authorizing a settlement with one of a class of creditors and not with creditors similarly situated with respect to the nature of their claim. I agree with Senator Dearmont that that may be a matter, for instance, which Morgan and Company and the banks could not have much to say about if we were using only First and Refunding moneys for the purpose, in which they were not interested. It happens in this particular case, however, that part of their collateral consists of First and Refunding Mortgage bonds and therefore if you propose payment of the R. F. C. without a similar offer being made to them I think they are in a position, because of the lien on the First and Refunding Mortgage bonds, to urge the preference or discrimination argument as an argument against granting the Trustee's relief that he has prayed for, or suggested.

The Court: You think that would be a preference?

Mr. Chasnoff: Yes, I do. I think the claims are exactly of the same nature. They are secured by different collateral, but some collateral in each case is the same. Whether you call it a technical preference or discrimination, or a thing that the Court logically wouldn't do, doesn't make any difference. It seems to be unfair to us that the R. F. C. should tell the Court to use money and pay them off, and here is another fellow that is adequately secured, but we don't want you to pay him anything. It seems if I were a Court I wouldn't do it.

The proposal that has been made I think should be contrasted with the plan which is before the Court and under which the R. F. C. has indicated that it would accept the provisions of the Plan and in which, instead of getting cash for their entire interest they are to get certain definite securities and cash in part. I think in determining whether it is a wise thing to do to make this settlement, we ought to consider what we are giving up to make the settlement and see whether we get enough benefit out of the settlement to justify us in giving up what we do for settling with the R. F. C., which is part cash and part bonds.

Now the R. F. C. says, "Give us all cash in an amount greater than the amount under the Plan". It seems to me in view of the situation and the expense to which we have gone with respect to the Plan that has been before the Court, that the R. F. C. is asking too much for the settlement and it is a bad settlement from that standpoint. Even if they were agreeing to take all cash on the basis of six, four, and three and a half—there still would be a difference between cash and securities. Certainly, a creditor would rather have his cash and know he is paid and out of the proceeding.

Therefore, it seems to me in all fairness that if the R. F. C. wants to make a settlement of the claim they ought to make it on a fair basis, and in so doing consideration should be given to the fact that they are a semi-public institution, organized for the purpose of helping out these railroads. They have done some of that, but now when it comes to making a profit on the interest I think the Government agency ought to be satisfied with the current rate of interest that it can borrow money for, adding some small percentage to take care of losses that might result from this investment.

It is conceded in the motion papers that substantially all of the cash available for settlement of the R. F. C. claim was derived from property subject to the prior lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage. It is the view of counsel for the Group that the use of First and Refunding moneys for settlement of the R. F. C. claim constitutes a preferential payment, which is illegal.

As has been indicated, that view was shared in by Senator Dearmont and Mr. Railey, but as I understand it now there is a qualification to that in this respect, that it can not be done without the consent of the First and Refunding bondholders, but that the Court can step in and say, "I think it is better for them and I am going to make them take it, because I think it would be better for them to take that". I believe the Court should not do it. I think the Court should consult with a substantial group of holders of those bonds * * *. I think the Court should pay some attention to what a substantial group of holders think of a matter of this kind about their money with respect to which they have a lien.

So far, there has been no question raised about the lien, but I assume there will be, and since some of counsel have been pointing to specific portions of the record, I would like to point out that there was a petition filed requesting sequestration of revenues—

Mr. Dearmont: I offered that.

Mr. Dearmont: Yes.

Mr. Chasnoff: Your Honor also entered an order directing the keeping of appropriate records with respect to the determination of income. Record page 309 has probably also been offered, but as a matter of precaution I want to make sure it is in the record. I can not conceive that there is at this time, and in view of the state of the case, any question about the equitable lien. I have seen no denial in papers that were served on me this morning.

The Court: I do not believe we have had any discussion on that.

Mr. Chasnoff: I will not address myself to that proposition unless it is raised.

The view of the Group, and also Mr. who can not be here, is that four per cent interest from the date of the bankruptcy to the date of payment is too high. I think that my clients would probably be willing to give their consent to a settlement of the R. F. C.; I don't think they are inherently opposed to getting the claim out of the way. I believe their opposition in this particular instance is due to the fact that with current rates, what would seem to be a fair and just rate—

Mr. Chasnoff: I think it has been stated by Mr. Thompson, when on the stand, that the R. F. C. has made the statement that they have been charging four per cent. and don't want to discriminate among the various railroads.

Our view is that the payment in full in cash of more than they would get under the Plan doesn't give us a sufficient advantage to justify us in going along, and there is a difference between cash and having securities outstanding. If First and Refunding moneys are to be used to settle the R. F. C. claim there should be some substantial off-setting advantage.

It is urged, however, that we will be subrogated to the rights of the R. F. C. on the collateral which they have. It is our view that subrogation to that collateral is not a sufficient advantage and doesn't give us sufficient protection to justify us in consenting to the proposed settlement. If the Plan is approved that subrogation would have only a minor and indirect effect on the First and Refunding bonds. If the Plan should fail, the advantage which said bonds would derive from such subrogation is not a satisfactory substitute for cash, in the opinion of this Group.

It is said that at the present time the collateral has a market value largely in excess of the amount required to satisfy the claim. I have no doubt but that is so, but there is no likelihood that the present market values will ever be actually realized, because the collateral is not for sale. I feel sure that this Court will not allow it to be sold, in view of the pendency of the Plan. Much of the collateral is of a highly speculative nature and is not to be compared with the cash which would be required to discharge the R. F. C. claim.

It is urged that the alleged benefits to be derived from such subrogation is simply to say that the R. F. C. collateral should be acquired as a speculation. It is the position of the Group that the use of moneys for such a purpose is improper. Whatever saving would be effected by the proposed settlement would be accomplished at the expense of the First and Refundings and the largest benefits of the settlement would accrue to the junior interests. Those who have heretofore advocated payment of the R. F. C. loan have suggested that the estate or its creditors are under some kind of moral obligation to the R. F. C. because of what it has done in a period of stress. We think that is untenable. There is no such provision, and the absence of such provision is a clear indication that Congress did not intend to prefer the R. F. C. over mortgage creditors. That was decided in United States vs. Guaranty Trust Company, 280 U. S. 478. I think this Court, in connection with the approval of the Plan and in analogous matters, has ruled that the advance of moneys by the R. F. C. did not put it in a position ahead of the First and Refunding bonds in this case.

Now, here are the First and Refunding bonds in a prior position. It is not proper, in our judgment, to use the moneys on which they have a lien, on the basis of the plan which is proposed. It is conceivable that the R. F. C. can change its views and offer a plan of settlement in which it would be decidedly to our interest to accept the plan. I am not authorized to say for the Group that they would accept it, but personally I feel that if the rate were somewhere around two and a half or three per cent. instead of four from date of bankruptcy there might be good ground for working out a settlement, and I should like to see this Court, in turning down this proposition if you think you should do that, indicate that if a proper rate were agreed upon in settlement, that in all likelihood there would be no difficulty with bondholders, and there would not be objections or threats of appeal, and the matter could be handled.

Mr. McDonald: You have spoken of your objection to the R.F.C. but not the R.C.C.—

Mr. Chasnoff: The rate of interest which the R.C.C. has been charging is so low that it is the opinion of the Group that it would not be reasonable to ask them to make further concessions, and therefore I think we are not going to object to settlement with the R.C.C. We have no particular interest, since it is not our money that is being used on the third motion and we are not opposing that.

Mr. Pettus: If Your Honor please, I represent the Trustee of the International-Great Northern First Mortgage. Much that I might say as to the first two is neutral, but much that Mr. Chasnoff has said as to the lien, and so forth, and much that Senator Dearmont has said, would apply equally to our first mortgage.

As to the first lien on the property of the International-Great Northern the position we take is that that lien attaches to funds and revenue which have arisen from that property. The proposal in this case is to pay off the R.C.C. out of those funds. To do so would be to take the money over which we have a lien and use it to pay another creditor. We believe that constitutes a preference.

I should like to emphasize the difference in our case from the two cases Mr. Chasnoff covered. In our case, the collateral to which we would be relegated is clearly of no value to us. If Your Honor will look at the Petition numbered 2930, the last one, on page 1, you will see that the collateral behind the R.C.C. claim is the International-Great Northern Adjustment Bonds. Those bonds are junior to our bonds, so they couldn't add anything at all to what we now have. It means that we would be giving $390,000. over which we have a lien and in return therefor would get possibly $90,000. out of this Marshalling and Distributing distribution, and the remainder, or about $300,000., we would lose our lien on.

So, it is clearly a preference in our case and we oppose it for that reason.

Mr. Griffin: May it please the Court, I am appearing in these proceedings as counsel for William Carnegie Ewen, as Chairman, Leon D. Sterling, as Secretary, Edmund Wright and Peter B. Kassler, as a Protective Committee of International-Great Northern Railroad Company First Mortgage Bondholders. Associated with me are Mr. Edward F. Colladay of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Kenneth McEwen of New York City. They are not, however, present in Court today.

Three petitions filed by the trustee are before the Court.

The first petition, No. 2928, asks the advice and direction of the Court with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation against the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

The second petition, No. 2929, requests the advice and direction of the Court with respect to the payment of debt due The Railroad Credit Corporation by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

The third petition, No. 2930, requests the advice and direction of the Court with respect to payment of debt due The Railroad Credit Corporation by International-Great Northern Railroad Company, Debtor.

The Court has heard the arguments made by able counsel as to the first two petitions, Nos. 2928 and 2929, and I shall therefore confine my suggestions principally to the third petition, No. 2930, relating to the debt due The Railroad Credit Corporation by the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, Debtor.

At the outset, however, I wish to point out to the Court that there is a factual difference presented by the petition for the payment of the R.F.C. debt due by the Missouri Pacific and the payment of the R.C.C. debt due by the International-Great Northern Railroad Company.

The petition No. 2928 is a petition that requests the Court for advice on a compromise settlement of the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation against the Missouri Pacific. The Petition No. 2930 is a petition asking the advice of the Court as to the payment in full of the R.C.C. debt due by the International-Great Northern Railroad Company.

I also call the attention of the Court to the fact that the R.F.C. debt due by the Missouri Pacific is secured by First and Refunding bonds which are the highest type of Mortgage bonds outstanding at the present time against the Missouri Pacific and that these bonds are now and have for a long time been selling at or near par so that said

First and Refunding Mortgage bonds are not only worth greatly in excess of the proposed settlement but are first liens against all of the property of the Missouri Pacific.

The counsel for the Trustee of the First Mortgage bonds of the International-Great Northern Railroad Company has presented to the Court his reasons in opposition to the payment of the R.C.C. debt by the International-Great Northern Railroad. I desire to add our suggestions to the Court as to why the payment of the R.C.C. debt by the International-Great Northern Railroad Company as proposed in the Petition No. 2930 should not be made.

We do not object, Your Honor, to the payment of the R.C.C. debt but we suggest to the Court that the method and manner of payment as proposed in the petition filed by the Trustee is not valid or lawful. The request for the payment of the R.C.C. debt is a request for payment in full with the full amount of interest and is in no sense a compromise settlement. It is also an attempt to create a preference as the I-G.N. First Mortgage bonds have a lien on the cash proposed to be used to pay the R.C.C. debt which is superior to and comes ahead of any claim that the R.C.C. may have. The R.C.C. has in fact no lien whatever upon this cash, whereas the First Mortgage bonds have a prior and practically first lien thereon under the impounding order of the Court and practically all of that cash has come from the operation of the I-G.N. property upon which our mortgage is a first lien. To take it out from under the security afforded by the impounding order in favor of the first lienor, and give it to a party having no lien thereon whatever would seem to be an unlawful preference which we must oppose.

If it is contended that the Trustee would be subrogated to the security held by the R.C.C. our answer is that by subrogation the Trustee would receive nothing superior or even compensatory to our First Mortgage estate in lieu of or in exchange for this cash. This would constitute an additional reason why the payment would be a preference against the First Mortgage bonds since the I-G.N. Adjustment bonds in the R.C.C. hands are a class junior to us and therefore legally could not be deemed to be compensatory.

It is quite a different thing to pay the R.F.C debt and return to the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific First Mortgage bonds held as collateral to giving to the Trustee, as proposed in No. 2930, only I-G.N. Adjustment bonds junior to our First Mortgage bonds as a substitute for the cash on which our First Mortgage Bonds have a first lien.

We submit further:

"Bearing in mind the general rule, that there can be no lien upon personal property without the possession thereof", it may be held that the R.C.C. has no lien surviving bankruptcy upon the collateral in the R.F.C's possession by virtue of the anterior agreement described at the end of Paragraph 2 on page 2 of the petition in No. 2929 as "a pledge of the equity of said Debtor Company (Missouri Pacific) in and to any and all securities deposited as security with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation".

Indeed, if the Trustee's proposal as to subrogation were adopted, it might even be held that the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Indenture Trustee came ahead of the R.C.C. in respect of the R.F.C.—held collateral to the amount of or equivalent to the payments made by the Missouri Pacific estate in settlement of the R.F.C. debt.

We offer therefore to the Court our suggestions that it would be unlawful for the Court to order the payment of the R.C.C. debt as proposed in No. 2930. We reiterate that we would like to see the R.C.C. debt paid but not at the expense of our first lien on the cash proposed to be used nor by creating a preference.

Mr. Biggs: If Your Honor please, I have a short statement I would like to make.

On behalf of Andrew W. Comstock, a holder of 5¼% Secured bonds, I urge the Court to approve payment of the claims of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. upon the terms outlined in their offer to the Trustee. We have urged such payment for a long time. If our plea had been heeded in the first instance and our request had not met with such severe opposition, Missouri Pacific would have been able to save more than a million dollars in interest charges.

We also urge the Court to discharge the bank creditors upon the same terms as those employed in effecting a settlement of the R. F. C. claim. This differs from the proposal made this morning by Mr. Sunderland in which, in effect, he asked that his clients receive a "[——]" covering their claim upon the same terms as those employed in settling the R. F. C. claim. As a failure to discharge the bank creditors on the identical terms and at the identical time as the R. F. C. claim could conceivably in certain circumstances operate to offend the bank creditors, a preference which Mr. Sunderland today seeks to be secured against, the practical resolution of the matter is, of course, for this Court to enter an appropriate order to direct the Trustee to discharge the claim of the banks coincidentally with the discharge of the R. F. C. and upon the same terms. We are entirely in agreement with Mr. Sunderland that ample funds are available for this purpose.

Under the circumstances we urge that payment be made at once and without any further delay.

We do not attempt at this time a full statement of the many points of issue raised by the Trustee's petition for payment of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. claims, but we do wish to note one or two things in order to avoid adding error to error. The petition of the Trustee seems to suggest that some kind of a lien be granted to the holders of the First and Refunding Bonds as a result of the proposed payment to the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. whose collateral has a value greatly in excess of their respective claims. We wish to note that it is altogether unnecessary at this time for the Court to pass upon any of the complicated questions of fact or law which are raised by the attempt to subrogate the First and Refunding bonds to the position of the R. F. C. It is important to note that even if the First and Refunding Bondholders were entitled to any subrogation whatever, they would have the burden of affirmatively showing both the facts and the law requisite to any such conclusion. That burden they can not discharge without elaborate hearings upon the facts and a careful analysis of the legal questions. In such attempt proof of the facts and consideration of the law would inevitably postpone payment of the claims of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. upon the terms proposed to this Court. Therefore, we urge in the paramount interest of having such payment made at the earliest possible opportunity that this Court not enter upon an attempt to determine any such question of subrogation which may be raised by or on behalf of the First and Refunding Bondholders.

In this connection we may briefly note that in no event are the First and Refunding Bonds entitled to a lien upon all of the collateral held by the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. Indeed, the Trustee seems to recognize this fact and apparently suggests that the lien, if such there be, of the First and Refunding Bonds extends only to a portion of the Missouri Pacific cash which will be used to make payment to the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. In other words, since the fair market value of the collateral stated by the Trustee in his petition is approximately $18,000,000. in excess of the payment to be made to the R. F. C.—and this is without attributing any value to the alleged claim of MOP against the NOTM—there is no reason why the First and Refunding Bondholders should be subrogated to the position of the R. F. C. with regard to the intercompany claim of MOP against NOTM for the nearly two million of NOTM bonds which the MOP has pledged with the R. F. C. in connection with a pledge of the intercompany claim. The doctrine of marshalling which would have been available in the case of R. F. C. in any event, is most assuredly pertinent in the case of the First and Refunding Bondholders whose lien, as to which we make no admission, would not extend to more than the equivalent of a portion of the cash to be used for the proposed payment.

It is unnecessary at this time further to consider the question of the existence of the First and Refunding lien or the appropriate right of subrogation. It is sufficient for the time being and for the purpose of passing upon the petition of the Trustee to hold any question with regard to the status of the First and Refunding Bonds in abeyance until such time as there may be a full hearing on the facts and complete argument on the law. In any event the administration of the Missouri Pacific and the other debtors in these proceedings continue under the jurisdiction of this Court, which is empowered to render from time to time such orders as may be proper in the premises.

For the First and Refunding Bonds to insist at this time upon a determination of any appropriate right of subrogation, is the equivalent of their opposition to any payment of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. claim. We believe it to be of the utmost importance in the administration of bankruptcy of these debtors to discharge whenever a favorable opportunity is available the outstanding indebtedness through the use of the vast amount of surplus cash available in the hands of the Trustee.

The fact that the Court in bankruptcy may hold in abeyance chancellery questions while passing upon the crucial question before the Court has just received the commendation of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, which, in an opinion, handed down on May 2nd, held, in the case of reorganization of U. S. Realty & Improvement Co. under the reorganization provisions of the bankruptcy act that the District Court is fully authorized and acted wisely in directing the payment of a very substantial claim in order that the reorganization be expedited, and the District Court at the same time reserved any jurisdiction it might then have or thereafter possess with respect to the matter. The Circuit Court of Appeals commented that such reservation of jurisdiction was most appropriate and fully justified by the Bankruptcy Act. It is, therefore, all the more true in the situation which confronts Your Honor today that this Court may order the Trustee to pay the claims of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. and reserve the question raised about the appropriate lien or the alleged right of subrogation on the part of the First and Refunding Bondholders.

Much more might indeed be said upon this subject, but in the interest of preserving for the vast numbers of public security holders their value in these debtors, we strongly urge this Court that the action of the Trustee in recommending payment of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. claims be approved without delay. To do otherwise would penalize Missouri Pacific and all debtor's public security holders at a time when all other railroads have been enabled substantially to reduce their debt and to reduce their annual interest charges. Bankruptcy administration should afford to public security holders no less protection than is available to them from the operation of railroads under private ownership.

Mr. Bean: If the Court please, I will be very brief * * *. What the Trustee is trying to do is for the best interest of the Debtor's estate and it is not unlawful. This controversy must come to an end sometime. Can there be any question but what it is to the best interest of the estate? I think not. There has been nothing shown here today to the contrary. It is for the benefit of everybody. It is for the benefit of the First Bondholders. Why should they complain? I think there is no ground for their complaint and I hope Your Honor will grant Mr. Thompson the authority which he asks.

Mr. McCaffery: If the Court please, I represent the Chemical Bank and Trust Company, Trustee under the Indenture securing Missouri Pacific Secured Serial bonds. As Your Honor knows, in addition to being a substantial creditor of the Missouri Pacific we hold in pledge over eighty per cent. of the stock of the N. O. T. & M., or a substantial part of the collateral which the R. F. C. has.

We support the position taken by the Bankruptcy Trustee here, that the R. F. C. loan should be paid and discharged by settlement upon reasonable terms. As has been suggested here, there may be cogent reasons why the R. F. C. should accept less than the six and four per cent. interest rates which have been offered by it. On the other hand, counsel for the R. F. C. will doubtless explain to Your Honor cogent reasons why it should not accept less than that amount. If a settlement on better terms can be arranged, we would be delighted. If, however, the R. F. C. should stand upon the offer which it has made, we are willing to go along with the judgment of the Bankruptcy Trustee, who, as we understand him, has concluded that it is financially desirable, if better terms can not be obtained, to settle upon this basis. We have no doubt of the power of this Court to authorize such a settlement, granting a reservation for equitable protection of the rights of anyone who can show that the cash that he has a lien on has been taken for the purpose. But whatever may be the lien of the First and Refunding or other interested parties in the cash, whatever protection should be given them in the form of equitable compensation, we can not believe that they were entitled to take * * * saying that, notwithstanding the needs of this estate, you can not take our money.

In that connection, I refer to the case of Van Schaick vs. McCarthy, 116 Fed. (2d) 987—

The Court: Will you give me a memorandum of that?

Mr. McCaffery: I shall be glad to make a memorandum of the citation.

In that case, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, over the strong objection of mortgage creditors, held that funds derived from particular mortgage districts could be taken and used to install automatic block signals and make an improvement on a line of railroad on which their mortgage was not a lien, and which was owned by a subsidiary corporation whose stock was pledged to another creditor.

The Court can use the funds and assets which it has for the benefit of the estate, making equitable compensation to anyone who has a lien upon particular cash, in recompense for having used it for that purpose. That general principle has been applied to the payment of claims in a great many cases, which I shall refer to. So, we have no doubt about the power of the Court to make such a payment, reserving general authority to make equitable compensation to anyone who can establish that his money has been used.

The petition of the Bankruptcy Trustee requests that:

> "If the Court shall advise and direct Trustee to make such settlement, that Trustee be authorized upon making said settlement to cancel the notes evidencing said debt and to receive and hold all collateral held by the R. F. C. as security therefor, subject to the lien, if any, of The Railroad Credit Corporation, and subject to such lien, if any, as the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage bonds and the holders of Missouri Pacific General Mortgage bonds may have or be entitled to by reason of the lien, if any, which they may have upon the cash of the trust estate used to retire said indebtedness."

A reservation in that form or appropriate form to take * * * the Central Branch Union Pacific or Little Rock, Hot Springs and Western would be satisfactory to us.

We do strongly oppose the suggestion by Mr. Sunderland, which I understand has some other support here, that the transaction shall be cast in the form of a purchase. We do oppose the suggestion that this Court should at this time attempt to define and detail the equitable compensation which is to be made. We believe that what should be done at present is to reserve the right to make it, either in the form prayed for by the Trustee, or in some proper form. I understand that general position is supported by Mr. Dearmont, according to the statement which he made a little while ago. We feel that to adopt the suggestion of a purchase is contrary to the general method of procedure in such matters, and has been referred to by the only appellate court that has considered it, as an ineffective substitute. We also feel that in the particular case of the Missouri Pacific it would lead to wholly unnecessary complications.

In the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad the District Court ordered the payment, not the purchase, of the claim of The Railroad Credit Corporation.

In the Rock Island case, over objections of mortgage interests that had a lien upon the cash involved, the District Court ordered the payment, not purchase, and in the Milwaukee case the claim of the R. F. C. was paid, not purchased.

In the Missouri Pacific Your Honor has ordered the payment, not the purchase, of the underlying issues of the Iron Mountain.

In the Denver and Rio Grande there was also a proposal made that the Rio Grande Junction bonds should be retired and upon the hearing of that application representation was made that it might in some manner be better if the transaction were cast in the form of a purchase rather than an actual payment and discharge of those Junction bonds, and the Court did cast the transaction in that form. The matter went to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and In re Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company, 150 Fed. (2d) 38, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit said:

> "The Court treated the transaction as a purchase of securities rather than a payment of a debt. This is a play upon words, and, in any event, is immaterial to the issue."

I want to mention one other case, Your Honor. Mr. Sunderland referred this morning to the fact that in the Frisco Your Honor had authorized the purchase of claims of the R. F. C. and R. C. C., but I think Mr. Sunderland overlooked two things. [Frist] in the Frisco proceeding Your Honor authorized payment of the Birmingham bonds, with a general subrogation provision in the order. What was ordered as to the Birmingham bonds, which was Order No. 347, was the payment, and not the purchase of the Birmingham bonds. He overlooked also that the claims of the R. F. C. and R. C. C. in the Frisco were of a very peculiar character. That was not a situation such as there is in the case of the R. F. C. collateral here and as there usually is, tangible security or a tangible piece of railroad line which could be turned over to somebody else in which they can be given an equitable right. R. F. C. claimed an alleged right of certain security which they didn't have and their right was bound up in the manner in which their claims had arisen and the nature of those claims, so that the only way to be sure that whatever the R. F. C. and R. C. C. got—so that somebody could get a possible redistribution of those securities, was to purchase those claims. Some of their rights got mixed up with the claims themselves, and that distinguishes, I think, the Frisco case to which Mr. Sunderland referred.

I should like to point out a few complications which would arise if the suggestion were followed in this present Missouri Pacific case. In the first place, Your Honor, the proposal of retiring the R. F. C. and R. C. C. claims has been before the Court in one way or another for some time, and it was before the Interstate Commerce Commission at the time it rendered its most recent plan. The Interstate Commerce Commission plan contemplates the possibility of additional cash payment during the period before the plan becomes effective, and it says in effect that if more cash is distributed than one would get under the plan it should be applied to reducing the most senior class of new securities issued and the aggregate amount of such new securities actually issued under the plan shall be correspondingly reduced.

That is not what would happen on purchase. If we have a retirement the plan says that the securities shall be reduced, but apparently counsel feels that something different should happen.

This plan is something which was proposed largely as a compromise plan by the First and Refunding interests themselves, and it seems to me that the plan does not directly contemplate that anybody is going to transfer notes around or purchase them. The plan contemplates retirement of certain collateral and what shall happen in that situation. How could that be applied to a purchase such as is suggested is not entirely clear, and I don't believe that any such transaction was in the mind of the Commission. Secondly, there would be some question, it seems to me, as to who was purchasing, because counsel talked about this as though the public holders of the First and Refunding bonds were entitled to all of this cash, and as though the public holders were acquiring the cash that was being used for this acquisition. Actually, the collateral of the R. F. C. includes $32,250,000. of First and Refunding bonds and they are as much entitled to part of their cash as any other holder of First and Refunding bonds. To that extent it is not the cash of public holders which is being used; it is the cash of the bonds pledged with the R. F. C., and in that sense the R. F. C. is paying off itself. How that could be worked out in terms of a purchase if this Court should make a definite order defining everybody's rights at this time, I don't know.

In the third place, it seems to me that we have an opportunity to make progress. We have a long line of fine print notes with various provisions in them about the rights of the R. F. C., and we have an opportunity to substitute for that a broad equitable reservation of Your Honor's right to give people justice for what money has been taken.

It seems to me that would facilitate the further conduct of this proceeding much more than any effort to preserve the technical fine print terms of an R. F. C. fine print note.

Your Honor may wish to take action with regard to some particular portion or item of collateral with regard to the bonds, or some of the N. O. T. & M. collateral, something will need to be done, and it may well prove that can be done much more easily with entire fairness to all parties if they would have the broad equitable reservation of the jurisdiction of Your Honor rather than the terms of some note which was made for some entirely different purpose.

We don't feel that it is the function of this Court to move the indebtedness of the estate from one creditor to another. We feel that what this Court would like to have done is to get some of the claims against the estate discharged and paid, and get the financial rehabilitation of this debtor ahead. We feel that there is now an opportunity, by the broad reservation of the right to give equitable compensation to anyone who can prove his cash has been taken, that all parties can have their rights protected, and we favor doing so.

Mr. Fletcher: If the Court please, the R.F.C. has filed its Answer to Petition 2928, requesting that Your Honor authorize and direct the Trustee of the Debtor to make the payment on the compromise basis which has been explained in this Petition.

As stated in Interstate Commerce Commission Report of January 10, 1940, 239 I.C.C., the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to the Debtor were made under special circumstances to aid the Debtor in emergencies. The Reports of the Commission have recognized—

The Court: Where is that, in an exhibit?

Mr. Fletcher: No, Your Honor; I didn't file any such exhibit. It is in the Commission's Report and I will be glad to send the paragraph in.

The Reports of the Commission have recognized that. The R.F.C. holds $23,134,800. of the Debtor's notes which by their terms bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and the R.F.C. total claim against the Debtor, including full principal and interest, will be $32,167,593. as of June 30, 1946. As security for the payment of this * * * of the present value, as estimated by our Railroad Division, of $49,053,506.

The compromise to which the R.F.C. has agreed, as referred to in Paragraphs 1 and 3 of Petition No. 2928, involves the concession by the R.F.C. of interest in the amount of six million dollars. That is a very substantial concession.

The result from payment of the R.F.C. claim on a compromise basis will be of great benefit to the bankrupt estate. Furthermore, the payment of the R.F.C. claim will simplify the Debtor's corporate structure * * * enjoys a better position than the outstanding publicly held First and Refunding Mortgage bonds. As a result of this simplification the reorganization of the Debtor would be facilitated. Finally, the payment of the R.F.C. claim because of its senior security position will be fair and equitable and in accordance with the law of the land.

Reference is made to this interest rate of four per cent. which we are applying from April 1, 1933. The four per cent. interest rate is applicable to railroad loans of the R. F. C. It is applicable to business loans, to drainage and irrigation loans, for national defense, and I am informed it is generally applicable to loans to public bodies, and that has been standard for quite a few years.

As a matter of fact, when we offered to make this four per cent. rate applicable as far back as April 1, 1933—I believe we did not reduce our interest rate to four per cent. until the latter part of 1933. That has been our standard practice in these other compromises where we have—

The Court: Under this offer you have made, is that not under the plan?

Mr. Fletcher: I would not think so, Your Honor. The R.F.C. will be given a chance under the plan to elect to take the principal of this loan, a like principal amount, of twenty-five year 3-¾% bonds. Under present conditions bonds of that class, I believe, would be worth in excess of their face amount, judging from prices of the last several months on the issues of bonds that have been brought out.

As far back as the fall of 1943, at the hearing before the Commission, it was stated that the R.F.C. would be willing as a compromise and on condition that the reorganization be completed with reasonable promptitude, to accept in satisfaction of its claim * * * the principal amount of its claim for cash in a like amount, plus a cash compromise of its unpaid interest computed at the four per cent. rate from date of bankruptcy. That was the same position taken for the past several years.

This loan is fully secured, of course, and this concession is in the amount of six million dollars.

I don't know that the R.F.C. has had it up repeatedly, but Mr. Thompson has been—I think he has been to Washington at least three times on the matter and I think he has written five or six letters over a period of five months on the subject. It has received very thorough consideration there, and what we have offered Mr. Thompson is just like we have treated everybody else. It is not different from these other reorganization settlements, where we are fully secured.

With respect to the approval of payment in this case, it is, of course,—in the various 77 reorganization proceedings there have been various cases of approval of senior claims. The R.F.C. was paid off in the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, and in the Denver Rio Grande and Western proceeding they approved the payment of the Rio Grande Junction bonds. And there have been various other cases of that nature. In all of the cases where the railroad settled we have settled on the same basis which we offered to Mr. Thompson here.

In the Frisco I am informed that certain underlying bonds had been paid off from time to time. I was looking at the Printed Record in the Frisco proceeding and noticed that just about a year ago Your Honor approved the dissolution of an injunction which was claimed by a secured noteholder and Your Honor's dissolving of that injunction had the same result of approving payment.

Mr. McDonald: The Railroad Credit Corporation concurs in the recommendation of the Trustee. We think in passing upon the matter Your Honor can take into consideration the nature of the R.C.C. and its need of receiving prompt liquidation. It seems to me that in the case of the R.C.C. there is a substantial benefit to the Trust Estate by reason of paying it off. It is now drawing only one per cent. interest and it seems to me that that is a substantial saving to the estate.

The Court: The matter is taken as submitted. You may file a memorandum, gentlemen.

Mr. Dearmont: I think that probably some date should be fixed, so there won't be too much time lost—

The Court: What time would you suggest?

Mr. Dearmont: I think not in excess of a week.

(Here ensued discussion among the Court and counsel.)

Mr. Dearmont: The suggestion is made that no one wants to file any.

The Court: Mr. Sunderland did file a brief.

Mr. Pierce: My argument is in my Answer.

The Court: Very well; it will be taken as submitted.

Which were all of the proceedings had upon the hearing.

(Filed June 3, 1946.)

Comes now Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and respectfully states to the Court:

1. That as more fully appears from Proof of Claim No. 503 (Rec. p. 3703), duly filed in these proceedings on April 22, 1936, by J. P. Morgan & Co., on behalf of itself, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and Proof of Claim No. 524 (Rec. p. 3855), duly filed in these proceedings on May 13, 1936, by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., certain advancements were made to Debtor Company between the months of March and October, 1931, by J. P. Morgan & Co.; that pursuant to an agreement dated October 1, 1932, said loan was extended for one year to October 1, 1933, and evidenced by nine notes, payable to J. P. Morgan & Co. for the total aggregate principal amount of $5,850,000; that said loan was participated in by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Guaranty Trust Company of New York to the extent of $1,462,500 each; that said nine notes bear interest at the rate of 6% per annum from date and are secured by the pledge of the following collateral, to-wit:

	Market Value
114,750 shares of the Common Stock of The Texas & Pacific Railway Company	$ 7,401,375.00
$7,750,000 principal amount of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds, Series I	7,517,500.00
Total Market Value	$14,918,875.00

that the amount of said claim, with interest from January 1, 1933, to June 30, 1946, at the contract rate of 6% per annum is as follows:

Aggregate principal amount of said nine promissory notes		$5,850,000.00
Interest thereon @ 6% to June 30, 1946	$4,739,942.00
Less: Payments received from income on collateral to date	2,568,625.00
Balance of interest unpaid		2,171,317.00
Total Due at June 30, 1946		$8,021,317.00

2. Trustee is advised and therefore states that on or about March, 1940, J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated, was duly incorporated under the banking laws of the State of New York and is now a corporation, with [publically] held stock; that on or about the 1st day of April, 1940, the aforesaid notes held by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the collateral securing same were assigned to, and are now held by J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated.

3. That Trustee has received an offer from J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated, on behalf of itself and its associates holding a participating interest in said loan, to settle and compromise the aforesaid claim on the following terms, to-wit: For the principal amount of said loan, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing same at the contract rate of 6% per annum from their date to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933), and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of settlement, less the amount of payments made to the holders thereof representing income from collateral held by them as security for said notes; that under said offer of settlement, the amount of unpaid interest at June 30, 1946, will amount to $620,185.00, which added to the principal amount of said debt, $5,850,000.00, makes the amount to be paid if said offer of settlement is accepted and the transaction closed on said date, $6,470,185.00.

4. Trustee further states that settlement of said claim at June 30, 1946, for $6,470,185.00, as proposed, would be $1,551,132.00 less than the full amount of the principal and accrued interest due on said claim at said date; that said settlement would result in an annual interest saving, based on the contract rate, of $351,000.00; that it would release collateral held by claimants as security for said loan, the value of which, taken at the current market price thereof, is $14,918,875.00.

5. Trustee further states that his estimated cash and cash equivalent, after meeting the requirements for distribution under the Modified Plan of Reorganization and after deducting the amount required to acquire the claims of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and The Railroad Credit Corporation, as directed by Orders No. 2928 and No. 2929 heretofore entered in these proceedings on May 29, 1946, are sufficient in the opinion of Trustee to permit the retirement and settlement of the claim of the Secured Banks upon the terms of their proposal as herein set forth.

6. That on June 7, 1933, Trustees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage filed their Petition No. 44 (Rec. p. 269), in these proceedings, asserting the claim of the bonds secured by said Mortgage against said trust estate and praying, among other things, that all tolls, incomes, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the mortgaged property be impounded, segregated and sequestered for the benefit of said petitioners, as Trustees, and of the holders of said First and Refunding Bonds; that on April 24, 1936, the Corporate Trustee under the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company General Mortgage filed its Proof of Claim No. 504 (Rec. p. 3707), in behalf of the bonds secured by said Mortgage which is a lien on all security pledged under said First and Refunding Mortgage, subject only to the prior lien thereon of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and which is in substantially the same terms and form as said First and Refunding Mortgage; that substantially all of the funds now held by Trustee in behalf of said trust estate have come from the operation of the railroad properties which are subject to the liens of the aforementioned Mortgages; that if and to the extent that the terms of said Mortgages and the claims filed by said Mortgage Trustees herein create and establish liens upon all or any part of the funds proposed to be used in said compromise and settlement of the claim of the Secured Banks, said mortgage creditors may be entitled to be subrogated to the extent of the funds so used, to any rights and liens held by the Secured Banks in said pledged collateral.

Wherefore, the premises considered, Trustee respectfully prays that an Order be duly entered herein:

(1) Advising and directing Trustee whether he shall compromise, settle and purchase the aforesaid claim of the Secured Banks against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, upon the following terms, to-wit: For the principal amount of said loan, plus interest accrued on the notes evidencing same at the contract rate of 6% per annum from their date to the date of bankruptcy (April 1, 1933), and at the rate of 4% per annum from the date of bankruptcy to the date of settlement, less the amount of payments made to the holders thereof representing income from collateral held by them as security for said notes.

(2) That if the Court shall advise and direct Trustee to make such settlement and purchase said notes, Trustee be authorized thereupon to receive and hold said notes and all collateral pledged as security therefor, subject to the liens, if any, of the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds or any other mortgage creditors of said estate which they may have upon the cash of the trust estate used to compromise and settle said claim.

(3) And for such further or other authority or direction as to the Court may seem meet or proper in the premises.

Order

With Respect to Compromise and Settlement of Claim of the Secured Banks against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

(Filed June 21, 1946.)

This matter having come on to be heard on this 21st day of June, 1946, upon the Petition of the Trustee of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, No. 2946, requesting the advice and directions of the Court with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of the Secured Banks (J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated and associates) against Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, and the Court having heard and considered such Petition, the Answers filed by various parties in interest, the evidence adduced in regard thereto and the statements and arguments of Counsel for Trustee and interested parties, and it appearing to the Court that due notice of the time and place of the hearing on said Petition has been given as directed by Assignment of Hearing No. 2946, duly entered herein on June 3, 1946, the Court Finds:

1. That the cash resources of the Trust Estate are amply sufficient to justify and safely permit the proposed compromise and settlement of the claim of the Secured Banks.

2. That the fair market value of the collateral pledged as security for said claim is substantially in excess of the amount proposed to be paid the Secured Banks in compromise and settlement of their claim.

3. That the compromise and settlement of said claim on the terms offered by the Secured Banks as set forth in Trustee's said Petition will be in the public interest and in the best interest of said trust estate.

4. That such compromise and settlement of the claim of the Secured Banks will also be in the best interest of the Missouri Pacific First and Refunding Mortgage creditors, and all other mortgage creditors claiming a lien on the funds of the Trust Estate to be used in effecting said compromise and settlement.

Wherefore, it is ordered:

(1) That Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, be and he hereby is authorized and directed to purchase the claim of the Secured Banks against said Debtor Company, or its estate, namely, the nine notes of said Debtor Company in the principal sum of $5,850,000.00, and the collateral presently securing the same, and to pay therefor, from any funds now or hereafter coming into his hands as Trustee of said Debtor Company, the full principal of said notes, together with interest thereon from their date to April 1, 1933, at the contract rate of 6% per annum, and with interest from April 1, 1933, to the date of consummation of said purchase at the rate of 4% per annum, less the sum of $2,568,625.00 heretofore received and applied by the Secured Banks on said claim and less any amounts that shall have been received by said Secured Banks on account of their said collateral after the date of this Order and prior to the consummation of such purchase, such sum to be paid in cash by the Trustee to J. P. Morgan & Co. Incorporated, on behalf of itself and its associates holding a participating interest in said claim, against delivery by said Secured Banks of said notes endorsed without recourse, and said collateral.

The Court expressly reserves the right to hereafter direct that said notes be cancelled and marked paid, should the Court hereafter determine that such action will be to the best interest of said Trust Estate.

(2) That the notes and collateral so acquired from the Secured Banks shall be held by Trustee for the benefit of the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds outstanding, and for the benefit of any other creditors of said Debtor Company, to the extent of their respective interests, if any, in the cash used in the purchase of said notes and collateral as the same may appear or may be hereafter determined by the Court or any Reorganization Plan, such holders or other creditors being hereby subrogated to the interest, rights, liens, and benefits of the Secured Banks under their said claim and in and to such notes and the collateral pledged as security therefor, to the end that their respective rights and interests may be fully protected in any marshalling of the assets of the Debtor Company or under the terms of any Plan of Reorganization that may be finally confirmed in these proceedings: and the Court hereby expressly reserves jurisdiction to make from time to time such further order or orders as may be deemed necessary or appropriate to protect and enforce the rights and equities of said bondholders and such other creditors in the premises.

(3) Debtor Trustee shall report to the Court any action taken under and pursuant to this Order.

(4) If the purchase herein authorized shall not be consummated neither the Secured Banks nor any bondholder nor any other creditor to these proceedings shall be prejudiced by this Order or said Petition of the Trustee, or by any recital or provision in either, in respect of any issue arising under said claim of the Secured Banks.

Mr. Dearmont: If Your Honor please, I should like first to take up Petition No. 2946 of Mr. Thompson, as Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, in which he requests advice and directions with respect to the compromise and settlement of the claim of J. P. Morgan Company, Incorporated, and associated banks, against the Missouri Pacific.

I should like first to offer the Proof of Notice given in accordance with the order assigning this matter for hearing, with the proof of publication attached.

If Your Honor please, as stated, this is a petition for advice and direction. The debt of the Secured Banks is represented by nine promissory notes for the total principal amount of $5,850,000. These notes were executed in 1932, by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, payable to J. P. Morgan Company and its associates, Kuhn, Loeb Company, I believe, and the Guaranty Trust Company. On their face they bore interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and they are secured by $7,750,000. par value of Missouri Pacific First and Refunding bonds and by $11,475,000. of par value—

The Court: How much?

Mr. Dearmont: $11,475,000. par value, Texas & Pacific Railway Company common stock. In other words, the par value of the collateral was $19,225,000.

Your Honor will recall that in May you considered the motion of the Trustee for advice and direction with reference to the payment of the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation against Debtor Company, and on May 29 an order was entered directing the Trustee to acquire or purchase on a compromise basis the claim—the notes and collateral securing same—the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation against the Missouri Pacific. This is substantially in the same situation; in other words, the Trustee asks whether he shall settle this claim of the Secured Banks according to the same formula that was used in working out a settlement of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which, briefly stated, was payment of the full principal amount of the debt, with interest from the date of the notes to March 31, 1933, the beginning of the bankruptcy period, at the contract rate of six per cent. per annum, and thereafter, to the date of settlement, at four per cent, per annum.

On the Secured Bank claims, as I stated, the principal amount of loan is $5,850,000. The interest at six per cent, on these notes, from their date to March 31, 1933, amounts to $175,018. Interest from April 1, 1933, the beginning of these proceedings, to June 30, 1946, at four per cent. amounts to $3,102,263. Those two total interest, under this formula, to June 30, 1946, amounting to $3,277,281.

There was a small amount of interest paid prior to bankruptcy and other interest credits had been entered on this claim representing interest and dividends on the pledged securities. The total amount of these payments which had been credited to interest is $2,657,096., leaving a balance of unpaid interest on this proposed compromise basis of $620,185., which, when added to the full principal of this debt, makes the total amount at which the Secured Banks are willing to settle and compromise their claim and sell same to the Trustee, at June 30, 1946, $6,470,185.

There was some quite extensive testimony given on the R.F.C. claim matter. Petition No. 2928, dealing with the financial position of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, requirements under the Plan that there had to be working capital, and other testimony with reference to the financial picture, and it has been suggested by counsel here interested in the matter now before the Court, that to the extent that it may be pertinent to the issues presented on this Motion, that it may be stipulated and agreed that any of the testimony offered at the hearing on Trustee's Petition No. 2928 might be considered as having been offered in this case.

Mr. Homire: We so stipulate on behalf of the Secured Banks.

Mr. Chasnoff: That is satisfactory to the Group.

Mr. Pierce: And to the Debtor.

Mr. Dearmont: I should like to call Mr. Peet.

C. D. PEET,

a witness of lawful age, being duly produced, sworn and examined, testified on behalf of the Trustee as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Dearmont:

Q. Mr. Peet, will you please state your name and your connection with the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, your official position?

A. My name is C. D. Peet; I am Chief Accounting and Financial Officer for Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

Q. Mr. Peet, I have just handed you a paper, which I will ask the reporter to mark as Trustee's Exhibit 1, which is entitled "Estimate of Cash Available and Requirements for Reorganization at June 30, 1946, under Modified I. C. C. Plan", and I will ask you whether that exhibit was prepared by you or under your direction.

A. It was prepared under my direction.

Q. Does it correctly set forth the facts with reference to the estimated cash and cash equivalent on hand in the hands of the Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, at June 30, 1946?

A. Yes; based on our estimate.

Q. Does it correctly set forth the requirements under the I. C. C. plan of reorganization for Debtor Company, heretofore approved by this Court?

A. Yes, as we interpret the Plan.

Q. And does it also set forth interest that has been paid upon the Debtor Company's bonds which are credited against the requirements under the Plan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It also sets out, does it not, certain reserves for working fund and taxes and other items listed at the bottom of the exhibit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peet, at the bottom of the first column, the last figure designated as "Balance" is $25,832,320: Does that represent free cash after meeting the requirements as you interpret the Plan and reserves as set forth near the bottom of the exhibit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This exhibit was initially prepared prior to the presentation to the Court of Trustee's Motion No. 2928, relative to the purchase of the claim of the R. F. C. against Debtor estate, and Petition No. 2929 of the Trustee for authority to purchase the claim of the Railroad Credit Corporation against the Missouri Pacific; is that not true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This exhibit, then, has not been reconciled to show the estimated cash balance that would be on hand after the payment of those two claims if they are ultimately paid, does it? A. No, sir.

Q. Of course, if they are paid the total amount that will be paid out will be approximately $27,967,892., will it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as a result of that payment the requirement under the Plan, as set forth on this exhibit, would be necessarily reduced; is that not true? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the Court should authorize and direct the Trustee to acquire or purchase the claim of the Secured Banks and that claim was purchased on the terms set forth in Trustee's Motion No. 2946, there would be a further reduction of the requirements under the Plan, due to the fact that certain securities and cash coming to the Secured Banks claimants would not have to be paid out of the estate; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Can you tell me how much would be added to the balance figure on the first column of this exhibit in the event that the claims of the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. against the Missouri Pacific estate are purchased, as directed by recent orders of the Court?

A. There would be added to the balance as shown on the last line of that exhibit, $2,684,000.

Q. And if the Court should direct the purchase of the claim of the Secured Banks on the compromise basis set forth in Trustee's motion which is now before the Court, there would be a further sum added to that balance, would there not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would that be? A. Approximately $569,320.

Q. Then if all three of these claims are purchased, the claim of the R. F. C., Railroad Credit Corporation and the claim of the Secured Banks, what is the total amount that would be added to this balance figure on Exhibit 1?

A. The additional amount would be $3,253,728.

Q. Now, in further reference to this exhibit as it appears here, I believe you stated it showed in the Missouri Pacific account, after requirements and reserves, a balance of something in excess of twenty-five million dollars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Included in here as a reserve, I believe, for 1943 Federal Income Taxes, is a sizable reserve, is there not?

A. Yes, something over four million dollars.

Q. And that is a reserve to take care of any additional assessment of taxes over and above that shown by the return which was filed for that year; is that not true?

A. Yes, sir. Returns for 1943 have not been audited by the Internal Revenue Department.

Q. In other words, there is no certainty that that four million dollars will have to be applied to the payment of taxes for that year?

A. No, sir; not until our return has been examined.

Q. On the basis of the return as filed, none of it would be used if it should be approved? A. That is correct.

Q. There is an item of reserve of fifteen million dollars for working fund, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is an item of two million dollars for reorganization expenses, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That two million dollars reserve will not have to be paid out at this time? A. No, sir.

Q. It is placed there to meet the reorganization expenses that may be charged against the estate subsequently at the close of the proceeding; is that correct?

A. Yes, and it is purely an estimate. I might say there is one other item in this statement that should be called attention to at this time and that is the Sinking Fund requirement on the new First Mortgage bonds to be issued under the Plan. That amounts to $1,069,000., and I am not sure in my mind that, if the Plan is consummated, that that requirement is necessary. In reading the Plan, it provides for the requirement in advance of consummation of the Plan that certain prior obligations would be applied to sinking fund requirements under the Plan and I assume in view of payment of the River and Gulf Divisions First Mortgage, that we have met the sinking fund provision for First Mortgage bonds provided in the Plan, so I have not been able to clear up that point. I put it in here as a requirement, but I am not sure that it is necessary. That is a legal question.

Q. But there is the possibility?

A. We may have overstated our requirements by that $1,069,000.

Q. It is also true that in the requirements you have stated a certain sum as representing dividends on preferred stock of the new company, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of course, they will not be paid unless declared by the Board of Directors of the new company; is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So it is possible that the statement of requirements—it is possible that that might not be as large in any future year, which you could determine at this time?

A. We have endeavored in this statement to reflect all actual, as well as contingent, liabilities.

Q. I have handed you a paper marked Trustee's Exhibit No. 2, which is entitled, "Statement showing amount required to settle Claim of Secured Banks at June 30, 1946, with Interest at 6% to date of Bankruptcy, April 1, 1933, and 4% thereafter and List of Collateral Pledged": Did you prepare, or have this exhibit prepared under your direction? A. Yes, sir; prepared under my direction.

Q. And it sets forth the amount necessary to purchase or settle the claim of the Secured Banks at June 30, 1946, on the basis of six per cent. interest to March 31, 1933, and four per cent. thereafter, to June 30, 1946; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the total amount due after giving credit to all interest heretofore paid and applied to interest on this claim?

A. The total amount of principal and interest due after application of payments heretofore made, as of June 30, 1946, is $6,470,185.

Q. On the right-hand bottom corner of this exhibit under "Estimated Value" you have "Market Quotation" and "Market Value" opposite the two types of collateral pledged behind this loan, one, Missouri Pacific First and Refunding bonds and the other Texas & Pacific Railway Company Common Stock: Will you just state how you got these market values?

A. It was either reported in the Wall Street Journal or the Financial Chronicle.

Q. As of May 29? A. As of those dates.

Q. The market value on that date of the collateral held back of these notes is in what amount?

A. On the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding bonds, quoted at 97 on May 29, total amount, $7,517,500.

On the Texas & Pacific Railway Company Common Stock, quoted at 64½ on the same date, the value was $7,401,375., a total of $14,918,875.

Mr. Dearmont: I think that is all.

Mr. Homire: No cross examination, Your Honor.

Mr. Chasnoff: No cross examination.

Mr. Dearmont: I think I have nothing further to offer, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Thompson: Just a moment.

(Here ensued private colloquy between Mr. Thompson and Mr. Dearmont.)

Mr. Dearmont: I will call the Trustee, Mr. Thompson.

GUY A. THOMPSON,

a witness of lawful age, being duly produced, sworn and examined, testified on behalf of the Trustee as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Dearmont:

Q. Please state your name and official position with the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

A. Guy A. Thompson; Trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor.

Q. Mr. Thompson, you are familiar with Petition No. 2496 now being considered by the Court? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It asks advice and direction of the Court with reference to the purchase of the claim evidenced by notes secured by collateral held by J. P. Morgan, Incorporated, and associates?

A. I didn't get the first part of your question.

(Question read to the witness.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before the filing of this petition did you contact representatives of the Secured Banks in an attempt to secure an offer of settlement of this claim from them?

A. I did.

Q. I think you might just state in your own words what you did in attempting to secure a satisfactory compromise offer of settlement of this claim through purchase.

A. I think it was the day that His Honor entered the order authorizing settlement of the R. F. C. claim—

Q. May 29, 1946?

A. It was either that day or the day that His Honor called you and asked you to prepare an order—I can't recall which day it was— that I talked to Mr. Sunderland, Mr. Edwin S. S. Sunderland, a member of the firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland and Kiendl of New York, who represented the bank debt, and told him either that His Honor had entered the order to pay the R. F. C., or had instructed the preparation of the order, and that I would be interested to know what kind of settlement I could make with the banks. He said that he would take it up with the banks and would let me hear from him. Later, he did let me hear from him and told me that the banks would—I had expressed in my talk with him the hope that the banks would take less and settle on a lower interest basis than the R. F. C. When Mr. Sunderland called me he told me that the banks would be agreeable to settling on the same basis as the R. F. C.; that they did not feel that they should, or that it would be wise for them to settle on a lesser basis of interest, and that they were legally entitled, in his judgment, to be treated precisely the same as the R. F. C. was treated, and I told him that I would file a petition asking for the advice and direction of the Court as to settlement on that basis. I at once asked you to draft the petition which is now before the Court.

Q. You have no question in your mind about the fact that the market value of the collateral behind this claim is substantially in excess of the amount which they offered to sell it to you at?

A. No. I think the value is at least the value testified to by Mr. Peet—perhaps a little more than that at present —approximately fifteen million dollars. Furthermore, this means a saving of interest of a certain amount, which I don't know whether you specified or not.

Q. I think it is set out in the Petition. I wrote it some time ago.

A. That bears six per cent., and at June 1st the interest would be one and a half million dollars.

Q. This difference between the contract rate of six per cent. and four per cent. is approximately one and a half million dollars?

A. Saving in interest of one and a half million and the acquisition of these securities worth fifteen million it seems to me is greatly in the interest of the Trust Estate, of the First and Refunding bonds, if they have a lien on the cash that is used to settle.

Q. Have you any question as to the financial ability of the Trust Estate to expend the sum of $6,470,185. in acquiring this claim and collateral securing same?

A. No, I haven't. I think the Trust Estate is amply able to pay both the R. F. C. and the bank claim.

Mr. Dearmont: I think that is all, unless you have some other statement you would like to make.

The Witness: I have not.

Mr. Dearmont: I might ask you one other question. I think since we put in the record of the hearing on the motion with respect to the R. F. C. claim it is probably in, but it is a fact, is it not, that prior to filing the motion for advice and direction relative to the settlement of the R. F. C. claim you did negotiate with the Secured Banks for a compromise and settlement of their claim also?

A. Yes, I did. Before I filed my petition in the R. F. C. matter and before negotiations closed with the R. F. C., I got in touch with Mr. Arthur Anderson, of J. P. Morgan and Company, and told him of my negotiations with the R. F. C., and that I would like him to take up with his associate banks the matter of settling the bank claim and to make me a proposition. He told me that he would be glad to do that, which he did do and later called me and told me that they felt, in view of the fact that I should—in my conversation with Mr. Anderson I told him of the opinion that I had from you and Mr. Railey, that it would be a preference for me to use the cash on hand to pay the R. F. C., and I said, "Of course, the opinion would be the same with respect to the bank claims and I will have to lay that opinion before the Court, with my own statement that I don't approve of it" and "I don't know what the Court will do with it, of course".

So, Mr. Anderson, when he called me back, said that in view of the fact that there is no certainty of its legal situation they were very hesitant and, in fact, didn't want to make a proposition to me, fearing that possibly the Court might hold that I had no right to settle with the banks, and if the plan came back from the Commission again, the fact that they had made a certain proposition might prejudice them in the consideration of allocation of securities under a new plan.

So, that was all there was to that, and I went ahead with the petition with respect to the R. F. C. and said nothing further to the banks until the conversation that I testified to a while ago, that I had with Mr. Sunderland, following the Court's conclusion with respect to the R. F. C. claim.

Mr. Dearmont: I should like to offer Trustee's Exhibits 1 and 2, identified by Mr. Peet.

The Court: Is there anything else?

Mr. Homire: In the Stipulation with reference to that part of the record of the R. F. C. hearing that is to be incorporated as part of this record, I assume that includes the Petition, the various Answers that were filed, and the Order which Your Honor entered on that Petition?

(To Mr. Dearmont) Is that agreeable?

Mr. Dearmont: Yes, that is agreeable. As a matter of fact, I think it is all part of the record of this proceeding, but I agree with you that it should include those.

Mr. Homire: I ask simply for information.

Mr. Pierce: The Debtor asks that the Trustee be advised and instructed to make the settlement.

Mr. Homire: The position of the Secured Banks is set forth in its Answer which has been filed herein, and also in a memorandum which I have filed with the Court. I think that that is all that we need to say on the subject; our position is fully set forth therein. Unless something further develops, I think that is all I have to say.

Mr. Bean: If the Court please, on behalf of the Convertible Bondholders' Group, represented by Mr. Kirshbaum and myself, we think the Motion should be sustained as in the best interest of the Estate.

Mr. Chasnoff: On behalf of the Group of Institutional Holders of First and Refunding bonds, I am instructed by Mr. Kitchel, who is New York counsel, to make the objection that the proposed compromise constitutes a preference in that First and Refunding moneys are used to effect the payment; the testimony given on the prior hearing shows that the moneys used are moneys that fall within the claimed lien of the First and Refunding bonds, and on the basis of the request for sequestration and the order that was entered in that connection.

The Court: Is there anything else?

(No response.)

Mr. Dearmont: I have prepared an order which is substantially the same as the order entered on the R. F. C. claim.

Mr. Homire: Is this matter concluded?

The Court: Yes, this matter is concluded. I have signed the order.

(Excerpts from Hearing before Interstate Commerce Commission at Brooklyn, New York, on October 21, 1943.)

Exam. Jewel: Mr. Biggs, it is not clear in my mind as to the identity and extent of the interests that you represent. Would you mind repeating that for the record, even if you have already stated it?

Mr. Biggs: I represent Mr. Andrew W. Comstock, who is the owner and holder of $80,000 secured Serial 5¼ bonds; I represent Mr. Fred T. Wilson, who is the owner and holder of $150,000 General 4 Per Cent Mortgage Bonds, and I represent Mrs. Helen J. Comstock, who is the owner of, I believe, 39 shares of the Common Capital Stock of the NOT&M.

Exam. Jewel: Was your intervention granted on the basis of those representations?

Mr. Biggs: That is correct; there are three separate interventions, not one.

Mr. Teitelbaum: Would it be fair to inquire when the security holdings were acquired by the clients of Mr. Biggs?

Director Sweet: You can inquire if you wish.

Mr. Teitelbaum: May I ask that question, Mr. Biggs?

Mr. Biggs: Frankly, I do not know.

Mr. Teitelbaum: I believe Mr. Comstock is here.

Mr. Comstock: I acquired my bonds after the bankruptcy, the same as Mr. Walker, Chairman of the Gulf Coast—

Mr. Adkins: I object to that statement; there is no evidence of that in the record.

Mr. Teitelbaum: Can we swear the witness and have him testify as to that, Mr. Director?

ANDREW W. COMSTOCK

was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) Mr. Comstock, where do you make your home? A. [Evanstown], Illinois.

Q. What Missouri Pacific securities do you now own?

Mr. Biggs: I object to that question. The witness can testify as to the $80,000. That is all that is before the Court here. He is only claiming $80,000 Secured Serial 5¼s.

Mr. Teitelbaum: The Witness hasn't testified to anything as yet. Mr. Biggs purported to make a statement. I am now examining Mr. Comstock under oath.

Director Sweet: It seems to me that the question is proper. He may answer it.

The Witness: The Serial 5¼s—

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) In what principal amount?

A. $80,000.

Q. Do you own any other Missouri Pacific securities?

A. Yes, Missouri Pacific General 4s.

Q. In what amount? A. $10,000.

Q. Any other Missouri Pacific securities?

A. I own 1000 shares of Missouri Pacific Old Preferred.

Q. Stock? A. That is correct.

Q. Who represents you as a holder of your $10,000 principal amount of General Mortgage Bonds?

A. You mean what attorney?

Q. Yes. A. There is no attorney that represents me.

Q. You are not represented here as a holder of General Mortgage Bonds? A. That is correct.

Q. Are you represented as a holder of your Preferred Stock? A. No, sir.

Q. Your representation here through Mr. Biggs is entirely for your holdings in Series A Notes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Five and a quarter Series Notes? A. That is right.

Q. Are you the beneficial owner of these Notes?

A. What do you mean by that?

Q. Did you pay for them and are they yours, or do you hold them for someone else?

A. Some of them I own myself; some of them my wife owns.

Q. Does anyone besides you and your wife own them?

A. No.

Q. How many do you own, and how many does your wife own? A. I own $10,000 and my wife has $70,000.

Q. Did you state, or didn't your counsel state in a petition to intervene here. that you were the owner of the $80,000? A. Owner and holder.

Q. Are you the owner and holder of the $80,000 principal amount? A. I hold the entire $80,000 in Notes.

Q. Are you the owner of the $80,000 principal amount?

A. I am not the owner of the $80,000.

Q. Your petition for intervention states that you were the owner and holder of $80,000. A. It did.

Q. You want to correct that statement in your petition for intervention?

Director Sweet: Maybe it is for counsel to [day] whether he wants to correct it or not. Maybe counsel can answer your question.

Mr. Biggs: The record speaks for itself. He states that he is holder of the $80,000.

Mr. Teitelbaum: His testimony states that he is the owner of $10,000 in bonds.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) I ask you whether you want to change the record to conform with the proof?

Mr. Biggs: If you want the record changed to show that his wife is owner of $70,000 of the $80,000, it is perfectly all right with me.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) Then you are represented here by Mr. Biggs as the holder and owner of $10,000 of Serial 5-¼s; is that true?

A. Well, the holder and owner of $80,000 par value.

Q. You do not own $80,000, as I understand it, according to your testimony; do you? A. I own ten.

Q. Then you do not own eighty? A. No. I hold seventy.

Q. When did you acquire your $10,000 par value—

Mr. Biggs: I object to that as irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Teitelbaum: I submit that it is not irrelevant. It goes to the question of good faith in making this extended offer of proof which this gentleman proposes to make and keep us all here waiting while he makes it.

Director Sweet: The witness volunteered the statement awhile ago. I think he may answer it.

The Witness: I acquired my ten bonds early in 1943, I believe.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) What month, would you say?

A. January.

Q. From whom did you acquire them?

A. You mean from whom I bought them?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Farwell, Chapman & Company.

Q. What did you pay for them? A. I don't recall.

Q. You must know generally what you paid for them.

A. Around 10, I would say.

Q. So your investment in those $10,000 par value bonds would be about $1000? A. Correct.

Q. When did your wife acquire her $70,000 of bonds?

A. She acquired some of hers in the latter part of 1942 and early in 1943.

Q. And was the price also at about $10?

A. About the same.

Q. What is your business, Mr. Comstock?

A. Looking after my own interests.

Q. Well, that is a business we all have, sir. However, more particularly, in what business do you make your livelihood?

A. Well, I was in the investment business for a good many years.

Q. Are you in the investment business now?

A. Well, in a way I am, yes.

Q. What was your firm connection?

A. Blake Brothers and Company.

Q. Where are they located?

A. They retired from business in 1938.

Q. Is that when you retired? A. Yes.

Q. Who were the members of the firm of Blake Brothers & Company?

A. Mr. Edward Blagden, Lawrence Howe, Howland S. Davis, T. D. Quisenberry, and there were some other partners in Boston, a Mr. Harris and a Mr. Blake in Boston.

Q. Is Mr. Quisenberry a holder of Serial 5-¼s?

A. I don't know.

Q. What caused you to take an active interest in this proceeding, Mr. Comstock?

A. Well, I speculated in other situations that looked favorable to me. This looked like a situation that was earning considerable money.

Q. As a speculation, did you feel that you could, by taking an active part in these proceedings and engaging counsel, make a profit after paying your expenses, with an investment of $1000? A. That's possible.

Q. You felt that there was possible profit there?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, how high did you think the price of Serial 5-¼s could go so as to show you a net profit after expenses for counsel fees?

A. I don't know; it was in the laps of the Gods. Nobody can answer that question.

Q. Well, we have some close ideas. What is your idea?

A. I had no idea.

Q. You just thought it would go high?

A. I thought I was buying value, the same as when you buy any other security, you figure the intrinsic value.

Q. In your speculations, and in the business of taking care of yourself, do you engage counsel in every matter in which you make an investment? A. No.

Q. What was your purpose in engaging counsel in this case?

A. I thought the Serial 5-¼s had a clear-cut position in this picture and that they were worth considerably more than what they were selling for at the time I bought them.

Q. What are they selling for now?

A. I haven't had a market on them since I left Chicago; I couldn't tell you.

Mr. Teitelbaum: I have no further questions.

Mr. Biggs: No questions.

Director Sweet: You have some friends who are in the situation about as you are?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Director Sweet: And you have been considering forming a group for yourself and the others, to represent your interests, have you not?

The Witness: I represent the group.

Director Sweet: We raised some question about your right to solicit the right to represent anybody else, did we not?

Mr. Biggs: There has been no solicitation.

The Witness: No solicitation.

Director Sweet: We raised some question about your rights and, therefore, in your petition it was limited to your right to intervene personally instead of granting a right for you to intervene on behalf of others, wasn't it?

Mr. Biggs: That is right.

Mr. Homire: May I inquire of the witness, Mr. Director?

Director Sweet: Yes.

Cross Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Homire) Have you named all of the other associates, Mr. Comstock? You said you had some friends that were in this group. Who were they?

A. Those papers were all sent to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Biggs: They were all filed with the ICC.

Director Sweet: We would not permit him to intervene in behalf of anybody but himself, so I suppose the other parties are not represented here.

Q. (By Mr. Homire) Have you taken an appeal from the decree of the District Court of the United States, sitting in St. Louis, that authorized the interest payments in September, I think? A. Yes.

Q. You have taken an appeal to hold up those interest payments? A. Yes.

Director Sweet: Are there any other questions of the witness?

(No response.)

Director Sweet: That seems to be all.

(Witness excused.)

Director Sweet: Have we any other witnesses?

Mr. Smith: I have one witness, Mr. Director.

Director Sweet: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon, a short recess was taken.)

After Recess.

Director Sweet: Come to order, gentlemen.

Mr. Teitelbaum: I would like to recall Mr. Comstock, Mr. Director.

Director Sweet: All right.

ANDREW W. COMSTOCK

was recalled, and testified further as follows:

Redirect Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) Mr. Comstock, who is Helen J. Comstock? A. My wife.

Q. She is the owner of 43 shares of NOT&M stock according to her petition to intervene, made in her behalf by Mr. Biggs, is that true? A. That is right.

Q. When did she acquire her stock?

A. I believe she bought that stock in the latter part of 1942.

Q. What month, would you say?

A. In the last quarter of the year.

Q. Somewhere between October and December?

A. Something like that.

Q. What did she pay for that stock?

A. Around five or six dollars a share.

Q. From whom, or through whom, did she buy it?

A. She bought it through Farwell, Chapman & Company, Members of the New York Stock Exchange, in Chicago.

Q. Who is Fred Wilson?

A. Fred Wilson is a business man formerly of Chicago. He lives on a farm down in Illinois.

Q. He lives in Plainfield, Illinois?

A. I don't know much about him, except that he has a very fine record as a business man. He formerly ran the Mapes Company for a number of years.

That was a very successful concern. He is in the paper business, or was in the paper business. He is an elderly man.

Q. Was he ever in the security business, in which you were engaged some years ago?

A. You mean connected with me?

Q. Well, was he in the security business in any form?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was he ever connected with you? A. No.

Q. Do you know that he is represented here by Mr. Biggs, who filed a petition to intervene for him?

A. Yes, I know of that.

Q. How do you know of that? A. Well—

Mr. Biggs: You have been advised by me, haven't you?

Mr. Teitelbaum: I will question the witness, please.

The Witness: I admit I know Mr. Wilson. I saw Mr. Wilson last week. He told me.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) What securities did he say he held? A. The General 4s.

Q. When did he say he bought those? A. He did not say.

Q. Do you know when he bought those? A. I do not.

Q. Did you recommend Mr. Biggs to him as counsel?

A. Will you repeat that?

Q. Did you recommend Mr. Biggs to him as counsel?

A. I spoke very highly of Mr. Biggs to Mr. Wilson.

Q. Has Mr. Biggs been your lawyer for any length of time?

A. Since 1942, back in May, I believe it was, or April.

Q. Does he represent you in other matters besides your holdings of Missouri Pacific securities?

Director Sweet: I don't know that that is very material. I think we have gone about as far as we need to on that.

Mr. Teitelbaum: I was interested in ascertaining how the authorization was procured in view of the language of the statute, Mr. Director.

Director Sweet: I believe a man has a right to employ an attorney if he wants to and when he wants to.

Mr. Teitelbaum: I think he has. There is a question of solicitation, though, is there not?

Director Sweet: Not so far as I know. We have acted on the petition on the theory that there is no solicitation there, and it is represented that there is none. As far as we are concerned, that is cleared up.

Mr. Teitelbaum: May I ask one or two questions more?

Director Sweet: You are not going to inquire into the relation of the attorney and his client here, I suppose?

Mr. Teitelbaum: If you prefer that I should not, I will not.

Director Sweet: I prefer you should not.

Mr. Teitelbaum: Then I have no further questions.

Q. (By Mr. Homire) In connection with your appeal from the order of Judge Moore, directing the payment of interest on the First and Refunding Bonds and the other issues that are involved in that hearing that was held last month, are you going to attempt to stay the carrying out of that order? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you required to, file any bond, or have you been advised as to whether you have to file a bond in order to stay the payment of that interest?

A. No, I have not been advised.

Mr. Homire: That is all I have.

Q. (By Mr. Teitelbaum) Do you think that the restraint of the payment of those millions of dollars of interest to other security holders is a necessary protection to your investment?

A. I believe that money can be utilized to get rid of a lot of debt of the Missouri Pacific.

Mr. Biggs: If your Honor please, this is utterly irrelevant.

Mr. Teitelbaum: It is directly to the question of good faith.

Director Sweet: The witness has answered, has he not?

Mr. Teitelbaum: I believe so.

Director Sweet: Are there any other questions?

(No response.)

Director Sweet: I guess that is all, Mr. Comstock.

(Witness excused.)

No. 13,379

Appeals from the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

To the Honorable E. E. Koch, Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit:

Pursuant to an Order of this Court entered in the above entitled appeals on August 31, 1946, the Group of Institutional Investors holding First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, one of the appellees herein, hereby designates for inclusion in the printed record on appeal in the above entitled appeals the following additional portions of the record in said appeals, to wit:

1. The appellants' and appellees' designations of the portions of the record, proceedings and evidence to be contained in the record on appeal in the above entitled appeals. (Not their designations of matters to be included in the printed record.)

2. The Order of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, entered on May 8, 1943, in Causes Nos. 12130-12136, inclusive, which Order remanded said Causes to the District Court for the purpose of holding a hearing on confirmation of the Plan of Reorganization.

3. All of the exhibits, whether offered in evidence or marked only for identification, at the hearings before the United States District Court for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri in proceedings entitled "In the Matter of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor, No. 6935," held in January and March, 1945, on Objection 19 and related objections of Andrew W. Comstock to the Plan of Reorganization. Said exhibits may be printed in a separate volume.

This appellee hereby objects to the inclusion of any of the following matters in the printed record in these appeals for the reasons hereinafter stated:

1. The statement proposed in Item 7 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the reason that said statement is incorrect.

2. The statement proposed in Item 11 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the reason that this appellee is advised that said statement is incorrect.

3. The statement proposed in Item 22 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the reason that said statement is incomplete.

4. The statement proposed in Item 27 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the following reasons:

(a) The designations of the contents of the record on appeal herein included only portions of the Supplemental Report dated July 4, 1944 and the Third Supplemental Report dated October 9, 1944 of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and failed to designate the Third Supplemental Order of October 9, 1944 of the Interstate Commerce Commission or any part thereof, and

(b) Any portions of said Supplemental Reports and Order upon which the appellants are entitled to rely in these appeals ought to be included in the printed record on appeal.

5. The matters specified in Item 26 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the reason that neither the transcript of testimony nor exhibits received in evidence at the hearing in Brooklyn, New York, on October 19, 20 and 21, 1943 before the Interstate Commerce Commission were designated as a part of the record on appeal in these appeals.

6. The statement proposed in Item 44 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the reason that the Order referred to in said proposed statement was entered after the entry of Order No. 2604-A from which the above entitled appeals are taken.

7. The matters specified in Item 45 of the appellants' designation of matters to be included in the printed record, for the following reasons:

(a) The petitions, answers, hearings and orders therein specified occurred after the entry of Order No. 2604-A from which the above entitled appeals are taken;

(b) The petition of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, for authority to pay the claims of the secured banks, the answer to said petition and the hearings upon said petition were not designated as matters to be included in the record in the above entitled appeals; and

(c) Said Item 45 is incomplete in that it omits the Order of the District Court entered upon said petition for authority to pay the claims of the secured banks.

This appellee hereby further objects to the failure of the appellants herein to designate the whole of the Supplemental Report of the Interstate Commerce Commission dated July 4, 1944, the Third Supplemental Report of the Interstate Commerce Commission dated October 9, 1944 and the Supplemental Order of the Interstate Commerce Commission dated October 9, 1944, and to include the whole of said Reports and Order in the printed record on appeal as required by Rule 10 (b) of the Rules of this Court.

This appellee hereby reserves the right to make each and every of the aforesaid objections upon the hearing of the above entitled appeals.

Yours, etc.,

W. LLOYD KITCHEL,
CHARLES W. McCONAUGHY,
Attorneys for the Group of Institutional Investors holding First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, one of the above named appellees.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY
REORGANIZATION

SUMMARY OF SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT

July 4, 1944.

This report approves extensive modifications of the plan of reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company approved by the Commission on January 10, 1940, as modified on April 9, 1940.

The plan as herein approved substantially adopts, although with some exceptions and with some changes, the provisions of the so-called "compromise plan" introduced in evidence at the further hearing in this proceeding in October, 1943.

The major modifications of the Commission's plan of 1940, are:

(a) The effective date is changed from January 1, 1940, to January 1, 1943, with provisions for change to a later date or dates under certain conditions.

(b) There is distributed among senior classes of creditors the sum of $30,574,095 of cash, the greater part of which is allotted in compromise settlements of parts of their claims for accrued and unpaid interest. Optional offers of additional reorganization securities are provided for senior creditors not accepting the compromise cash offers.

(c) The parts of the claims of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and of J. P. Morgan and affiliated banks representing interest accrued and unpaid on their claims since the date of the filing by the debtors of their petitions in bankruptcy are settled with cash on a basis of a 4 percent per annum interest rate instead of 3½ percent as provided in the "compromise plan". The other compromise cash offers of the "compromise plan" are not changed.

(d) Provision is made for the distribution of cash among creditors prior to consummation of the plan.

(e) Warrants entitling the holders thereof, for a period of 10 years after consummation of the plan, to purchase new class-B no-par common stock at a price of $100 per share, are offered junior creditors (and stockholders of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company) in addition to the reorganization securities to which such creditors and stockholders are entitled under the plan. Provisions of the compromise plan for issue of warrants to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company preferred and common stockholders are not approved.

(f) The duration of the voting trust is decreased from 10 years, as in the Commission and compromise plans, to 5 years and the method of selection of the voting trustees in such plans is changed to provide that the court shall designate them.

(g) There are various other minor changes from the former Commission's and the compromise plans.

(h) The provisions of both plans for selection of the five reorganization managers, and the first board of directors of the reorganized company are changed.

Following are comparisons of the capitalization and annual charges under the plan as modified by this supplemental report and as approved by the Commission on April 9, 1940.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT OF THE COMMISSION

By the Commission:

By our report and order of January 10, 1940, 239 I. C. C. 7, we approved, pursuant to the provisions of section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, U. S. Code Title 11, sec. 205, a plan of reorganization for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, hereinafter called the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company, hereinafter called the New Orleans, the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, hereinafter called the International, and their subsidiary railroad companies, except the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company as to which debtor we refused approval of any plan of reorganization without prejudice to a continuation of these proceedings for its later reorganization. A certified copy of the report and order was filed on January 19, 1940, in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri, in which court proceedings for the reorganization of the debtors herein are pending. By supplemental report and order of April 9, 1940, 240 I. C. C. 15, upon petitions filed by various parties in interest, we modified the order of January 10, 1940, supra, in certain particulars and, on April 22, 1940, filed in the court a certified copy of the supplemental report and order. Thereafter, hearings were held before the court on objections to the plan. The judge rendered a decision dated July 12, 1941, approving the plan and overruling all objections thereto. The dissatisfied interests thereupon took appeals to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. On October 9, 1941, we ordered the plan submitted to a vote as contemplated by subsection (e) of section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act. On March 28, 1942, we certified to the district court the results of the balloting, showing that, of the 16 classes of claimants voting, the approved plan was rejected by 5 junior classes of creditors and 1 class of senior creditors, the latter comprising the holders of $1,140,000, principal amount, of first-mortgage bonds of the Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company.

Appeals were argued and briefs submitted to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals aforesaid but no ruling on the merits of the objections was made by that court. During the pendency of this proceeding in the circuit court, the United States Supreme Court, on March 15, 1943, handed down its decisions in two railroad reorganization cases, viz., Ecker, et al., Constituting Institutional Bondholders Committee v. Western Pacific Railroad Corporation, et al., 318 U. S. 448, and Group of Institutional Investors, et al., v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Company, 318 U. S. 523. These cases will hereinafter be referred to, respectively, as the Western Pacific and Milwaukee cases.

Thereafter, the aforesaid United States Circuit Court, by its order of May 8, 1943, remanded the appeals to the district court, hereinafter referred to as the court. Further specific objections were then filed in the court and a hearing on the objections was held on July 16, 1943. After this hearing the court by its order of July 29, 1943, referred the case back to us, pursuant to subsection (e) of section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, for further proceedings in accordance with the applicable provisions of said section 77, including the consideration of modifications of the plan or the proposal of new plans.

In his opinion accompanying the order, the judge stated two reasons for his action: First, that we had not given consideration to the question of whether senior creditors would receive compensation under the plan for the loss of their seniority rights, the necessity for a consideration of this matter being a point stressed by the United States Supreme Court in the Milwaukee case, and, second, to provide us with a further opportunity to consider whether, in view of the changed conditions arising since the formulation of the plan, the plan can now be improved. In his memorandum the judge further expressed the opinion that we should give consideration to the matter of whether the valuation of the properties of the debtors should not be revised since "recent earnings together with the enhanced value of the road, might justify a higher valuation of the property, and at the same time be compatible with the public interest." The judge also stated that it would be well for us to fix another effective date of a reorganization plan when one is certified, regardless of what other changes we might make in the approved plan and expressed the opinion that cash which has accumulated in the treasuries of the debtors might be used to liquidate some or all of certain preferred claims, referring particularly to five underlying mortgages, the claim of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the claims of J. P. Morgan & Co. and associates for loans made to the debtors.

By five orders, all entered September 18, 1943, the court directed the trustee of the debtor to pay out of cash on hand on or before November 1, 1943, the principal of, and unpaid interest to, that date, on bonds constituting the entire issues outstanding under the underlying mortgages referred to above, these being:

Missouri Pacific Railway Company 3rd mortgage.

Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) St. Louis City real estate renewal mortgage.

Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) Carondelet Branch 1st mortgage.

Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) 2nd mortgage.

Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) 1st mortgage.

The total cash required to meet these payments is $15,021,009.[2]

By order of the same date the court also directed the payment on or before November 1, 1943, of 30 percent of the principal amount of the bonds outstanding under the St. Louis, Iron Mt. & Southern Ry. Co. River & Gulf divisions first mortgage, hereinafter called the River and Gulf bonds, together with interest to that date on all bonds outstanding under the mortgage. The sum of the cash payments on this mortgage is $11,058,560.[3]

Three other orders entered simultaneously with those referred to directed the payment of two 6-month interest accumulations amounting to $13,159,525 on all outstanding Missouri Pacific first and refunding mort-

[2] As of March 31, 1944, all but $172,500, principal amount, of these bonds had been redeemed.

[3] As of March 31, 1944, the holders of all but $352,000, principal amount, of these bonds had received the 30-percent payment of principal.

gage bonds (except those held by Western Coal & Mining Company), three 6-month interest accumulations amounting to $3,425,025 on all New Orleans first mortgage and income bonds, and two 6-month interest accumulations amounting to $1,610,000 on International first-mortgage bonds, the total of all such interest payments being $18,194,550.

In the case of all three of these interest payments the court's orders directed that, in any plan of reorganization which may be finally approved and confirmed, the reorganization managers should, with the court's approval, cause the cash payments to be applied, first, as a credit against cash payments, if any, to be made to the present security holders, secondly, any balance remaining should be applied as a credit upon interest accrued to the latest maturity date on the new bonds which the present bondholders would receive under the terms of any such plan in the order of their priority or, third, in such manner as may be appropriate in the light of the terms of any such plan. If no plan is finally approved and confirmed then the payments are to be credited as payments of interest on the respective bonds, except that, as to the New Orleans first-mortgage bonds and Missouri Pacific first and refunding bonds pledged with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, hereinafter called the Finance Corporation, and as to the first and refunding bonds pledged with J. P. Morgan & Co. and associates, the payments are to be applied upon the notes held by those creditors, which are secured in part by such bonds.

The total of all cash payments to be made pursuant to all nine orders of the court is $44,274,119. Under the plan, satisfaction of the portions of the several claims represented by these cash payments would have been made substantially in their entireties by new securities issuable upon reorganization.

We assigned the reorganization proceeding for further hearing. At the hearing before us on October 19, 1943, a plan of reorganization, dated September 27, 1943, was received in evidence, offered jointly by the protective committee representing holders of approximately $64,133,500 out of a total of $223,190,500, principal amount, of first and refunding mortgage 5-percent gold bonds of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, hereinafter referred to as the first and refunding committee, the committee representing $6,047,000 of a total of $40,615,900 (excluding $1,900,000 pledged with the Finance Corporation) of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company first-mortgage and income bonds, hereinafter referred to as the New Orleans committee, the protective committee representing holders of general-mortgage 4-percent bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, hereinafter referred to as the general-mortgage committee, the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, debtor, and Alleghany Corporation, owner of $11,152,000 of a total of $45,493,000 of Missouri Pacific convertible bonds (excluding $899,000 pledged with the Finance Corporation), $4,410,000 par value of Missouri Pacific preferred stock of a total issue of $70,190,100 and $52,290,000 par value of common stock of a total outstanding issue of $81,314,343, par value. Also agreeing to this plan is the bank syndicate holding a collaterally secured claim of about $8,472,000 against the Missouri Pacific. Substantially all the evidence received at the further hearing was in support of, or in opposition to this plan. Subsequent to the close of the further hearing, briefs were submitted. The plan approved by us on April 9, 1940 will be hereinafter referred to as the Commission plan and that introduced in evidence at the further hearing as the compromise plan.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES WITH RESPECT TO THE COMPROMISE PLAN

In addition to the proponents of the compromise plan, its provisions are generally supported (on the condition that they be approved by us without substantial change,—a proviso in which the proponents also join) by the trustee under International's first mortgage, by Savings Banks Trust Company, representing $1,190,000 of New Orleans first-mortgage bonds, and by the protective committee representing $12,318,000 of a total of $34,508,000, principal amount, (excluding $40,000 owned by Western Coal & Mining Company) of River and Gulf bonds. This latter committee expresses no opinion as to the compromise plan as a whole but is willing to accept its provisions in so far as the interests of the bondholders whom it represents are concerned. The trustees under the trust indenture securing the Missouri Pacific 5¼-percent secured serial gold bonds and under the mortgages securing Missouri Pacific 5½-percent convertible gold bonds, and New Orleans first-mortgage bonds have expressed the intention of not opposing the compromise plan. Objections to the compromise plan generally or to one or more of its provisions are advanced by the protective committee for Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company first-mortgage bonds and by the trustee under that mortgage, by the successor trustee under the Central Branch Union Pacific Railway Company first mortgage and by holders of $313,000, principal amount, of the bonds issued thereunder, by a protective committee representing approximately $3,000,000, principal amount, of $28,750,000, principal amount, of International first-mortgage bonds, by a group of owners of about $50,000, principal amount, of Missouri Pacific convertible bonds, by The Railroad Credit Corporation, by the Finance Corporation, by several individuals owning miscellaneous bonds and stocks of the debtors, and by a protective committee for Missouri Pacific common stockholders. The Railway Labor Executives Association seeks the inclusion in the compromise plan or in any other plan which we may approve of certain provisions affecting the debtor's employees.

It will be seen that while there is very substantial support of the compromise plan the opposition to it or to certain of its provisions is not negligible.[4] These objections will be referred to later in our discussion of the terms of the compromise plan.

RECENT AND PROSPECTIVE EARNINGS

Following are the operating results, as reported by the trustee of the debtors, for each of the years 1939-1942, inclusive, and for the period January-September

[4] In his opinion of July 29, 1943, the judge stated: "However, it is readily conceded that if substantial agreement can be had, a more desirable end will have been reached (i. e., than by confirmation of a plan over its veto by some of the creditors, even if constituting a large group, or by dismissal of the reorganization proceeding). * * * It is alleged by certain of the parties appearing here that a compromise plan has been contrived which will meet the approval of substantially all the parties. Other interest(s) have taken exception to this statement. Nevertheless, if a close approach to unanimity among the groups can be had on the compromise plan, and if the Commission finds that the public interest will be served by such a plan, unquestionably that would offer the best solution to the problem."

1943, inclusive, separately for the Missouri Pacific, New Orleans and International groups and for the system. Earnings prior to 1939 are stated in our original report of January 10, 1940, supra.

For the first 9 months, January-September, inclusive, 1943, total railway operating revenues of the Missouri Pacific were $166,597,722, New Orleans $30,663,927, International $22,032,196, and system $219,293,845, total railway operating expenses of the Missouri Pacific $90,091,369, New Orleans $15,023,428, International $13,429,934, and system $118,544,731, operating ratio Missouri Pacific 54.1 percent, New Orleans 49 percent, International 61 percent, and system 54.1 percent, income available to the Missouri Pacific for payment of interest $32,058,508, New Orleans $4,732,481, and International $3,351,423, net income of the Missouri Pacific $16,464,381, New Orleans $2,642,388, and International $1,263,324. Compared with the same period in 1942, total railway operating revenues for the later period are greater than in the former but the amounts available for payment of interest and net income are considerably less, except in the case of the International where the disparity is relatively small.

No system statements for 1943 of income available for payment of interest and net income are of record for any period subsequent to the first 7 months January-July, inclusive, the system amount at the end of that period being $32,514,678 and net income $17,581,670.

For the 5-year period 1938-1942, inclusive, the yearly average amount available for payment of interest for the Missouri Pacific was $20,368,882, New Orleans $3,971,089, International $1,332,128, and system $25,601,287. These compare with the trustee's forecast for a normal year as stated in our report of January 10, 1940, supra, of $17,644,718 for the Missouri Pacific, $2,118,032 for the New Orleans, $1,494,354 for the International (these separate amounts for each of the three groups being before certain rather minor adjustments), and $22,059,052 for the system (after such adjustments and excluding intercompany items).

For the entire year 1943 with 8 months' operating results known, the trustee of the debtors estimates that the amount available to the Missouri Pacific for payment of interest will be $40,804,000, New Orleans $6,090,000, International $3,968,000, and system $50,862,000. These earnings represent decreases from the earnings experienced in 1942, but increases in about the same proportions over the results of operation in 1941.

The trustee of the debtor furnished an income estimate for the year 1944 for each of the three groups and for the entire system, predicated on the assumptions (1) that, as to freight revenues, a two-ocean war will be progressed on an intensified scale throughout 1943 and 1944, resulting in a continued movement of a large volume of military equipment and supplies, that during 1944 there will be a reduction in oil, gasoline and construction materials on all lines and that the May 15, 1943 level of freight rates will continue through 1944, (2) that, as to passenger revenues, the heavy movement of military personnel will continue throughout 1944 and that priority civilian travel will not be invoked, (3) that the present volume of mail and express will continue through 1944, and (4) that, as to operating expenses, higher rates of pay for operating and nonoperating forces will be approved by the Government and that current prices of material will continue. It is assumed in the estimate that the present basis of Federal income and excess profits taxes will continue and the estimate is based on existing capitalization and interest charges. Included in nonoperating income is a dividend of $1,185,150 on preferred stock of The Texas and Pacific Railway Company. This estimate for 1944 shows total railway operating revenues for the Missouri Pacific $211,800,000, New Orleans $32,300,000, International $25,110,000, and system $269,210,000, total railway operating expenses for the Missouri Pacific $120,874,000, New Orleans $18,172,000, International $16,640,000, and system $155,686,000, and income available for payment of interest for the Missouri Pacific $34,547,000, New Orleans $5,072,000, International $3,810,000, and system $43,429,000.

The testimony of three economists, Leonard P. Ayres, testifying for the Missouri Pacific, debtor, John H. Parmelee for Alleghany Corporation, and Clyde R. Chambers for a group of Missouri Pacific preferred stockholders, was in general agreement that operating revenues will continue at a relatively high level for a considerable period after cessation of the war, except for some decrease during a limited period of transition from a war-time to a peace-time economy. In support of their positions, these witnesses relied in part upon the experience of carriers after the former world war as compared to pre-war operations at that time, the world demand for goods which will be needed after the ending of the present war and statistical studies showing the share of traffic borne by the railroads as compared with other forms of transportation and the share of total railroad traffic more or less uniformly obtained in the past by the Missouri Pacific system.

The director of industrial development for the trustee of the Missouri Pacific testified as to the development of many large war industries in the Missouri Pacific system territory, including steel mills, blast furnaces, aluminum, magnesium, synthetic rubber, aircraft, plastics, chemical plants, cotton mills and canning factories. Some industries he believes may be displaced by the manufacture of synthetic products but, in his opinion, the present industries will attempt to improve their existing products or convert to some kindred product, and some industries, now converted to war production, such as the automobile industry, will restore existing plants. He believes that some gasoline and fuel oil now being transported by railroad may be diverted to pipe lines and traffic in saw mill timber may fall off due to depletion but he pointed out that reforestration of cut-over lands in the case of pulpwood is now being initiated. The witness was unable to give an estimate of the amount of increased earnings which he believes will be enjoyed by the debtor as a result of the increased industrial development which he expects will be experienced in the future.

H. M. Johnson, general freight traffic manager for the trustee of the debtor, testified at the court hearing on July 16, 1943, that, since January 1940, 263 new industries have been located on the lines of the Missouri Pacific, 27 of which are camp schools, air schools, and air fields, 2 are miscellaneous Government plants, 31 are war project plants, 9 are plants expanded by war work and 194 are commercial industries, the great majority of which were established to serve or augument war plants located on the line as, for example, 11 storage yards for construction equipment, gravel pits and store yards, all of which ceased operating when construction of the war plants was completed. Additionally, 163 industries were located at points served by the Missouri Pacific in common with other railroads. On the lines of the New Orleans, 182 new industries have been established, of which 6 are camp schools and air fields, 23 are war project plants, 3 expansion programs of war project plants, and 150 commercial industries, the majority of which was established to augument the war effort. Additionally, the New Orleans has access to 24 other industries located at common points with other railroads. On the lines of the International, 82 new industries have been established, comprising 7 camp schools and air fields, 2 war project plants and 73 commercial plants, built primarily to aid the war effort. Additionally, the International reaches 19 plants at competitive points with other railroads. The witness pointed out that while the Missouri Pacific system could serve such plants located on other lines, the latter also have the opportunity to secure traffic from industries on the Missouri Pacific system lines.

During this period, the system also acquired and entered in its balance sheet accounts as "investment in affiliated companies—unpledged", the St. Joseph terminal properties, the purchase price being $3,600,000 plus $999,186 advances to affiliated companies.

CASH BALANCES AND CASH REQUIREMENTS

As of December 31, 1939, the day preceding the effective date of the Commission plan, the Missouri Pacific had a cash balance of $12,922,114 and cash on deposit with mortgage trustees of $1,405,034, a total of $14,327,148, the New Orleans had cash of $1,332,162 and similar deposits of $67,214, a total of $1,399,376, the International $402,391 cash and $197,835 deposits, a total of $600,226, and the system $14,656,666 and $1,670,083, a total of $16,326,749.

As of December 31, 1942, the day preceding the proposed effective date of the compromise plan, the Missouri Pacific had cash of $34,875,624, U. S. Treasury tax notes $27,000,000, special deposits for deferred maintenance $1,564,445 and cash deposits with mortgage trustees $4,105,374, the total of all cash and equivalents being $67,545,443; the New Orleans had cash $4,353,420, tax notes $3,500,000, deferred maintenance-special deposits $218,718 and deposits with trustees $252,426, a total of cash and equivalents of $8,324,564; the International had cash of $4,389,625, deferred maintenance-special deposits $157,757, and deposits with trustees $283,331, a total of cash and equivalents of $4,830,713. The totals for the system were cash $43,618,669, tax notes $30,500,000, deferred maintenance deposits $1,940,920 and deposits with trustees $4,641,131, the total of all cash and equivalents being $80,700,720.

As of September 30, 1943, the Missouri Pacific had cash of $19,676,046, U. S. Treasury tax notes $96,375,000, deferred maintenance-special deposits $2,275,723, of which all but $723 was invested in tax notes, a reserve fund for U. S. Government transportation bills $1,725,000 invested in tax notes, and deposits with trustees $4,777,067, the total of cash and equivalents being $124,828,836; the New Orleans had cash of $6,950,678, tax notes $13,588,000, deferred maintenance-special deposits $222,578, of which $60,000 was invested in tax notes, reserve fund for U. S. Government transportation bills $210,000, and deposits with trustees $280,662, the total of all cash and equivalents being $21,251,918; the International had cash of $3,358,591, tax notes $7,602,000, deferred maintenance-special deposits $205,400, of which $77,000 was invested in tax notes, a reserve fund for U. S. Government transportation bills $210,000, and deposits with trustees $361,888, the total of all cash and equivalents being $11,737,879; the system had cash of $29,985,315, tax notes $117,565,000, special deposits for deferred maintenance $2,703,701, of which $2,412,000 was invested in tax notes, reserve fund for U. S. Government transportation bills $2,145,000, of which $1,725,000 was invested in tax notes, and deposits with trustees $5,419,617, the total for the system of all cash and equivalents being $157,818,633.

The trustee of the debtors has furnished a cash forecast from the foregoing date of September 30, 1943, through December 31, 1943, for each of the groups and for the system. Before the deduction of reserves to be set up for the purposes, which will be later described, the trustee of the debtors estimates that net cash receipts or accumulation from October 1 to December 31 plus estimated deposits with mortgage trustees during the same period will, for the Missouri Pacific, be $11,041,500, New Orleans $2,302,000, International $2,091,000, and system $15,434,500. Adding these amounts to the cash and equivalents on hand on September 30, 1943, as previously stated, results in estimated totals of cash and equivalents on hand on December 31, 1943, as follows: Missouri Pacific $135,870,336, New Orleans $23,553,918, International $13,828,879, and system $173,253,133.

From these totals the trustee of the debtors estimates that reserves must be provided for the following purposes, the respective amounts being here stated for the system only: (1) Working fund and contingencies, $20,000,000, (2) all taxes accrued and not paid $56,786,000, (3) estimated net wage increase $1,824,933, (4) accumulated deferred maintenance July 1, 1942-December 31, 1943, $4,896,000, (5) anticipated land grant deductions accumulated January 1-December 31, 1943, $3,210,000, (6) new locomotives and freight cars to be delivered and paid for prior to December 31, 1943, on order and authorized by the War Production Board, $5,620,605, and (7) cash payment of principal and interest on certain obligations authorized by the court, as hereinbefore described, $44,274,119. After provision for all of these reserves the balances of cash remaining on December 31, 1943, are estimated by the debtor to be as follows: Missouri Pacific $27,590,595, New Orleans $5,176,220, International $3,874,661, and system $36,641,476.

In explanation of the estimate of $20,000,000 for system working fund and contingencies, C. D. Peet, assistant chief accounting and financial officer for the trustee of the debtors, testified that this amount is more or less arbitrarily divided $15,000,000 to the Missouri Pacific, $3,000,000 to the New Orleans, and $2,000,000 to the International, that the total was arrived at by starting with 1 month's operating expenses (less non-cash items) and adding amounts to provide for any deficiencies which might occur in the subsequently provided reserves for taxes and land grant deductions, to provide cash necessary to retain the debtor's position in the reorganized Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Company, and generally to meet conditions involved in the future transition period from a war-time to a peace-time economy, such as the necessity of having cash available to modernize the railroad facilities in order to lower costs and attract business.

William Wyer, an expert employed by the proponents to negotiate and draw up the compromise plan, considers that $20,000,000 for working fund and contingencies is excessive and that as of October 1943 probably $11,500,000 or $12,000,000 cash working capital would suffice in view of the volume of business then prevailing and which had increased since the preceding December. As of December 31, 1942, Wyer considers $9,500,000 sufficient for working capital and the negotiators of the compromise plan used that sum in determining the amount of excess cash available for distribution in carrying out certain cash offers included in that plan. In using this sum, Wyer followed an estimate in the same amount furnished him in November 1942, by the debtor's chief accounting and financial officer. Wyer considers that Peet's estimate of $20,000,000 contains duplication of other reserves separately provided for. Wyer made no deductions for these other purposes in arriving at his computation of excess cash available for the compromise plan, believing, at the time of his estimate, that the additional items could be taken care of out of 1943 earnings, an assumption which he contends has proven true. Neither he nor Peet deducted any amount for reorganization expenses, Wyer contending that they can be met similarly out of current earnings.

In formulating the compromise plan, Wyer and his associates in the negotiations started with the premise that the following amounts of excess cash would be available as of January 1, 1943, for distribution to creditors: Missouri Pacific $21,806,401, New Orleans $3,611,846, International $3,662,956, and total for system $29,081,203. These are approximately the same amounts as those necessary to put the compromise plan into effect as of the same date, which is the proposed effective date of the plan. These amounts are after deduction of all the principal of, and accrued unpaid interest on, the five underlying mortgages and 30 percent of the principal of the River and Gulf Mortgage, assuming that such payments would be made prior to January 1, 1944, but before deduction of the interest payments totaling $18,194,550 on Missouri Pacific first and refunding bonds, New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds, and International first-mortgage bonds, paid or to be paid as directed by the court's orders of September 18, 1943, hereinbefore referred to. These interest payments would be applicable to the cash payments required under the compromise plan.

Before deduction of all of the above cash payments both of principal and interest made or to be made pursuant to orders of the court, the excess cash available as of December 31, 1942 amounted to $47,044,620 for the Missouri Pacific, $3,611,846 for the New Orleans, and $3,662,956 for the International, or a system total of $54,319,422.

Wyer stated that the cash required to be available on January 1, 1944, to put the compromise plan into effect and bring it down to that date, including the making of all payments during 1943 under the terms of that plan, including dividends on the proposed new preferred stock, would be $26,842,489, and that Peet's forecast of net cash receipts and accumulations during the year 1943 less the cash reserves which Peet considers necessary to maintain, including his estimate of $20,000,000 for working fund and contingencies, shows that the system's excess cash available at the end of 1943 would be $36,641,476, or nearly $10,000,000 more than required to bring the compromise plan down to that date.

It is our opinion and we find that there will be sufficient cash available for working capital for the reorganized company as of its commencement of operations and that, in view of the latest available cash balance of the system, there would be excess cash on hand sufficient to make the cash payments provided for under the compromise plan as of its effective date plus the amounts necessary to put the plan into effect as of a later date and additionally, that, as of December 31, 1943, an additional substantial amount of excess cash can be considered as available for additional cash payments to creditors or for dividends on the new stock proposed to be issued under the compromise plan and payments into the retirement fund as proposed in that plan or for other proper corporate purposes.

FREE ASSETS

At the further hearing before us in October 1943, Wyer and Peet each introduced evidence with respect to investments of the debtors not pledged as security for any of their obligations.

Wyer found the book value as of December 31, 1942, of all such investments, comprising stocks, bonds, notes and advances held by the Missouri Pacific to be $17,738,627, of which $3,538,634 represented stock, $111,690 bonds, $1,638,459 notes, and $12,449,844 advances, New Orleans $2,088,648, of which $644,812 represented stock, $1,000 bonds, $158,479 notes, and $1,284,357 advances, International $269,266, of which $7,044 represented stock, and $262,222 advances, and total $20,096,541, of which $4,190,490 represented stock, $112,690 bonds, $1,796,938 notes, and $13,996,423 advances. As of April 1, 1933, he stated the book values of such investments of the Missouri Pacific as $12,939,873 ($1,249,618 stock, $210,119 bonds, $1,466,697 notes and $10,013,439 advances), New Orleans $1,897,817 ($893,676 stock, $47,340 bonds, and $956,801 advances), International $460,126 ($7,690 stock, $200,000 notes and $252,436 advances), and total $15,297,816 ($2,150,984 stock, $257,459 bonds, $1,666,697 notes, and $11,222,676 advances).

Peet furnished estimated values as of the same date of unpledged investments. He did not, however, place any values on unpledged advances by the debtors to affiliated companies. In the case of the Missouri Pacific these advances amounted to $12,268,196, book value, of which $2,637,458 were advances to companies involved in the compromise plan. In the case of the New Orleans the advances amounted to $1,367,314, book value, and, in the case of the International to $288,163, book value, in each case wholly comprising advances to companies included in the plan. The total book value of advances by all three groups was $13,923,673. Peet's estimated values of unpledged investments also excluded certain stocks and notes of companies involved in the compromise plan held by the Missouri Pacific totaling $595,298, book value, and 11 shares of International stock held by the New Orleans of a book value of $11. Peet testified that, with some exceptions, his estimates of the value of unpledged investments are based on the net worth of the issuing companies as reflected by their books. In the case of terminal companies he pointed out that the estimated values which he placed upon their securities could only be realized by the holders of such securities if the terminal companies should dissolve and their assets should bring the amounts shown on their books and if their liabilities were disposed of at their book values. He stated that his estimated values of the stocks of terminal companies are rather intangible and do not include the value of the terminal companies to the proprietary companies in creating traffic and earnings for the latter.

Peet's estimates of the values of unpledged investments as so limited and with such exclusions are as follows: Missouri Pacific $7,023,908, of which nearly $6,000,000 represents the estimated value of stock, New Orleans $1,495,448, of which all but about $59,000 is stock, and International $6,856, all stock, the total being $8,526,212. If there be added to these amounts, the book value of advances and, in the case of the Missouri Pacific, the book value of stocks and notes of companies involved in the compromise plan, the totals become, Missouri Pacific $19,887,402, New Orleans $2,862,762, International $295,019, and total $23,045,183.

Peet also introduced an exhibit showing that dividends and interest received on unpledged stock, bonds and notes from April 1, 1933, the date of the filing of the petitions in bankruptcy by the three principal debtors, and December 31, 1942, the day preceding the effective date of the compromise plan, amounted to $557,184 in the case of the Missouri Pacific, $11,353 in the case of the New Orleans, and $2,373 in the case of the International, the system total being $570,910. He also furnished a statement of the amounts of repayments of unpledged bonds and notes between the same dates, the amounts of the repayments of those held by the Missouri Pacific totaling $250,049, New Orleans $65,000, International none, and the total $315,049.

The record does not show what disposition was made of this cash by the trustees, i. e., whether used for capital expenditures or for ordinary expenses of the trust estate, and what part, if any, remains unexpended. Thus it is impossible to know whether and to what extent the reorganized company will benefit. Unsecured creditors do not have a lien on cash coming into the hands of the trustees of the debtors, at the time of the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings or subsequent thereto, whether comprising repayments of, or dividends or interest on unpledged bonds and notes, or otherwise, and such cash is available for use by the trustees for any proper purpose in the administration and operation of the trust estate without accountability to the unsecured creditors. See In re The Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., Debtor, 50 F. Supp. 835.

Further, in connection with the subject of free assets, Wyer furnished an analysis of the net current asset position of the Missouri Pacific as of March 31, 1933, the date of the filing of its bankruptcy petition. His analysis shows that the Missouri Pacific on that date had current assets of $19,155,035 and current liabilities (including tax liabilities) of $43,069,574, net current liabilities being $23,914,539. Alleghany Corporation contends on brief that, while $599,275 of special deposits held by banks for principal and interest on funded debt and $552,485 of interest and dividends receivable on pledged securities should be deducted from current assets, leaving $18,003,275 remaining, a sum of $32,046,441 should be deducted from current liabilities in determining the amount of net current assets not subject to mortgage liens or priority claims, leaving $11,023,133 of current liabilities remaining. The above sum of $32,046,441 comprises the principal of the Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and bank loans and interest on all claims of secured creditors. Alleghany Corporation contends that this deduction from current liabilities should be made since those creditors are dealt with in the compromise plan on the basis of their respective interests in mortgaged or pledged assets. It also contends that, of the other current liabilities, the only items which appear as of that time to have been entitled to priority of payment over unsecured creditors are pay rolls of $1,740,471 and taxes settled in 1936 for $590,136. Deducting only these priority items from current assets of $18,003,275 leaves the sum of about $15,670,000 which Alleghany Corporation contends is not applicable to settlement of secured or priority claims but to unsecured claims including those included in current liabilities. Another intervener, the trustee under the Missouri Pacific convertible-bond indenture, estimates that current assets of the Missouri Pacific exceeded current liabilities by approximately $10,500,000 as of April 1, 1933, after deducting from current liabilities $25,800,000 of Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and bank loans and $5,900,000 of unpaid accrued interest.

It is contended by these parties that net current assets as of April 1, 1933, the date of commencement of the bankruptcy proceeding, were not subject to the lien of the Missouri Pacific mortgages since the first and refunding and general mortgages expressly authorize the mortgagor to remain in possession of all tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues, and profits of the mortgaged property until default. On the other hand, the first and refunding committee by brief refers to an order of the court entered on June 12, 1936, authorizing the trustee of the debtor to enter into a settlement agreement with the U. S. Treasury Department in respect of certain income taxes and to make certain payments pursuant to that settlement, imposing a lien by way of subrogation upon unpledged assets to secure the mortgage creditors whose funds were used to effect the settlement.

What we stated above with respect to cash in the hands of the trustee of the debtors applies equally, in our opinion, to other forms of current assets held by him. It is our opinion that none of such current assets even to the extent, if any, of their excess over current liabilities, either at the date of the filing of the bankruptcy petition or subsequently, can be considered as held for the exclusive benefit of unsecured creditors, in the sense that unpledged investments may be deemed to be held.

The first and refunding committee contends that, as to all so-called "unpledged assets" which have been acquired since the institution of the bankruptcy proceeding, the demands made upon the court by various first-mortgage creditors for sequestration of income, including one filed by the first and refunding mortgage trustees on June 7, 1933, have the effect of subjecting practically all Missouri Pacific income since the institution of the bankruptcy proceeding to the liens of the various senior mortgages and that any of such funds expended by the trustee of the debtor for the acquisition of any so-called "unpledged assets" had the effect likewise of subjecting the assets so acquired to the liens of the senior mortgages. In this connection, Wyer produced an exhibit to show that the book value of unpledged investments owned by the Missouri Pacific increased by $4,798,754 between April 1, 1933 and December 31, 1942, New Orleans by $190,831, and the International's investments decreased $190,860, the total in unpledged investments of the system between these dates being $4,798,725, compared to total book value of $20,096,541 of all unpledged investments owned by the system on December 31, 1942, of which $17,738,627 represented the book value of the Missouri Pacific's investments. Of the increase of $4,798,725, $3,200,000 represents investments in the Missouri terminals properties which were not paid for out of income received during trusteeship but were acquired in settlement of the so-called Terminal Shares litigation by which the trustee of the Missouri Pacific sought to recover $3,200,000 which had been paid by Missouri Pacific on account of the purchase price of the properties prior to the institution of the bankruptcy proceeding.

The unpledged investments of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, aside from advances, consist of shares of stock of over 40 corporations, many of them terminal companies, bonds of 4 companies, secured notes of 5 companies, and unsecured notes of 2 companies, and as above stated, Peet estimates a total value for them, exclusive of notes of $400,000 of the New Orleans, of $7,023,908, of which the estimated value of the stock is $5,904,039. These investments obviously are difficult of appraisement. For the purpose of this proceeding we accept Peet's estimate. To such sum we believe should be added, for the purpose of ascertaining the total value of unpledged investments of the Missouri Pacific group, the value of such investments in obligations of such debtors in this proceeding as are not included in the Missouri Pacific group. This will result in the addition of an amount of about $400,000, representing the book value of notes of the New Orleans held by the Missouri Pacific, the resulting total being $7,423,908. Advances to affiliated companies total $12,268,196 but of this amount the sum of $2,427,458 represents advances to other companies of the group and $5,585,577 advances to the Missouri Pacific Transportation Company for purchase of stock in the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. The latter company has set up a reserve of nearly $3,500,000 for loss on these advances. We conclude and find that, with deduction for investments made subsequent to the date on which the bankruptcy petition was filed (except as to investments in the Missouri terminals), the total value of all unpledged investments of the Missouri Pacific group is about $10,000,000 but that they are not of such a nature as to warrant the issuance in respect of such assets in the reorganization of anything other than an evidence of ownership in the reorganized company.

Applying the same principles to the New Orleans, we find the value of such investments, including unsecured advances at their book value of $1,367,314, to be about $2,500,000, and such investments of the International to be about $250,000, such assets also being of a kind entitling those having claims against them to receive only common stock in recognition of their claims.

It may be added that certain of the junior creditors also contend that the excess in value, if any, of collateral securing the Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and bank loans also fall within the category of free assets. The value of this collateral is discussed hereinafter. The Railroad Credit Corporation has a second lien upon all collateral securing the Finance Corporation loans. Such of the collateral as has a market value is subject to wide fluctuations in price. The record does not warrant a finding of any excess value of the collateral securing these loans over the amount of the loans.

COMPROMISE PLAN

Cash distributions.—The compromise plan provides that cash may be distributed to creditors from time to time upon order of the court pending consummation of the plan and shall be credited pro tanto against (a) cash payable under the plan and/or (b) interest and dividends accrued on new securities up to the "interest adjustment date," as the reorganization managers, with the approval of the court, shall determine. The interest-adjustment date is the date (to be fixed by the reorganization managers with the approval of the court) to which interest and dividends on new securities are to be paid in cash at the time of the consummation of the plan. Different interest-adjustment dates may be fixed for different classes of new securities. There are appropriate provisions for the refunding by a creditor, who under the plan will receive alternative offers of cash or securities and who shall elect to take the securities, of any excess cash distributed to him over that to which he is entitled, including cash receivable by him under the terms of the plan (exclusive of the alternative offer) and interest and dividends on his new securities.

The plan also provides that, if the total cash authorized to be distributed on claims of any class after December 31, 1942, and prior to the consummation of the plan (after deducting any amount required to be refunded because of election to accept any alternative offer in securities), shall exceed the sum of (a) the total amount of cash payable on claims of such class as set forth in the plan, and (b) interest and dividends accrued on new securities distributable to claims of such class from the effective date up to the interest-adjustment date and (c) if the effective date be changed pursuant to the provisions of the plan (as hereinafter described), interest on the principal of the claims of such class from December 31, 1942 to the new effective date, such excess payment shall be deemed to constitute a retirement, pro tanto, at their principal amount, of the most senior class of new securities issuable in respect of claims of such class under the plan (collateral-trust notes being deemed senior to first-mortgage bonds for this purpose and for the purposes of the next following paragraph describing the effective date) and the aggregate amount of such class of new securities actually issued under the plan shall be correspondingly reduced. Any such excess cash payments shall be deemed to be credits against sinking-fund requirements for the issue so reduced.

Effective date.—The compromise plan provides for an effective date of January 1, 1943, which, by vote of a majority of the reorganization managers, including the member to be designated by the junior creditors as later described, with the approval of the court, may be changed to any later January 1 (not later than the consummation of the plan) if, but only if, system earnings available for interest for each calendar year between December 31, 1942, and the effective date shall have exceeded by at least $5,000,000 all interest accruing for such years on claims of creditors against the debtors (other than claims of general creditors against the International) outstanding during such calendar year.

If the effective date is so changed:

(a) There shall be paid in cash to the holders of those classes of claims entitled under the plan to receive any new first-mortgage bonds or collateral-trust notes an amount equal to the interest accruing on all such claims, excluding equipment-trust obligations and Plaza-Olive Building bonds, for the period from December 31, 1942 to the new effective date; provided, however, that in the case of the Finance Corporation and the bank debt interest shall be paid only at the rate of 3½ percent per annum;

(b) there shall be applied to the reduction of the debt to be issued under the plan an amount of cash sufficient to reduce such debt by a principal amount equal to interest accruing from December 31, 1942 to the effective date on all classes of claims (other than claims of general creditors against the International) not entitled under the plan to receive first-mortgage bonds or collateral-trust notes. Such reduction of debt may be effected (1) by payment of all or any part of any of the claims mentioned in clause (a) above and/or (2) by the purchase or redemption and retirement of debt to be issued under the plan, all as the reorganization managers shall determine; accruing from December 31, 1942 to the effective date on all classes of claims (other than claims of general creditors against the International) not entitled under the plan to receive first-mortgage bonds or collateral-trust notes; and each such class shall receive (in addition to other securities allotted under the plan) a number of shares of common stock, class A or B, equal (at $100 per share) to the interest accruing on such claims from December 31, 1942 to the effective date.

(c) the number of shares of class-A common stock and class-B common stock issuable under the plan shall be increased in the aggregate by an amount equal (at $100 per share) to interest

In making the distribution of additional common stock pursuant to subparagraph (c) above, any class of creditors allotted no class B common stock under the plan shall receive its additional allotment in class A, those allotted only class B shall receive class B and those allotted both classes shall receive proportional increases in their respective allotments of both classes.

New securities issuable under the plan as hereinafter described, shall be dated as of the effective date or, in the discretion of the reorganization managers and with the court's approval, any class of new securities may be dated as of the interest-adjustment date therefor, but in the latter case, creditors who receive new securities of such class shall receive the same amounts of cash and be entitled to the same rights in respect of accruals and accumulations as if the new securities of such class had been dated as of the effective date. Where, in this report, we refer to the effective date of the compromise plan, our reference, unless otherwise indicated, will be only to January 1, 1943.

The compromise plan provides that the carrying out of the plan shall not require any retroactive change in the operations of the trustee of the debtor's estate or in the reports made to us or in any other reports or returns for the period prior to the date when such new securities are issued.

General basis of the plan.—The following principles are stated by the proponents of the compromise plan as those upon which it is based: (1) The same amount of fixed charges as provided by the Commission plan is observed, (2) total permissible capitalization is the same, (3) the same relative treatment as between security issues is generally observed, with some exceptions, and (4) the surplus cash used in the plan is the amount considered available as of December 31, 1942, the day preceding the compromise plan's effective date. The negotiators state that they propose to use the cash, as well as they can, to improve the treatment of all classes of security holders over that accorded them by the Commission plan.

The surplus cash so to be used, the amount of which has been hereinbefore specified, is the amount remaining after deducting Federal income taxes and estimated necessary cash working capital from the total amounts of cash in the treasuries of the three railroad groups of the system on December 31, 1942. We have hereinbefore discussed the amounts of excess cash considered as available to each of the three groups of the system lines and to the system, including a discussion of the basis upon which $9,500,000 was arrived at by the framers of the plan as adequately representing the requirements of the system for cash working capital.

The excess cash available to each group of the system lines is allocated to the group. Since it seemed clear to the proponents of the plan that the cash was earned almost entirely by the properties subject to the liens of the mortgages securing the five underlying bond issues, the River & Gulf bonds, the Cairo & Thebes bonds, the Boonville, St. Louis & Southern bonds, the Central Branch Union Pacific bonds, and the first and refunding bonds, all of which are senior obligations of the Missouri Pacific group, and the first-mortgage and income bonds of the New Orleans, and the first-mortgage bonds of the International, the amounts of cash available in each of the three group treasuries were applied exclusively to those claims, except for cash in the Missouri Pacific treasury and about $1,700 from the International treasury, used in connection with the Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and bank loans. After the cash payments of principal on the underlying bonds and River & Gulf bonds as ordered by the court, the great bulk of the $21,806,401 of excess cash remaining in the Missouri Pacific treasury was applied to the first and refunding bonds, about $5,300,000, however, being applied to the Finance Corporation and bank loans.

While recognizing that the interest on the various system obligations is equally secured and entitled to equal treatment in reorganization with the unpaid principal of the obligations, the negotiators proceeded, in making offers in satisfaction of the claims, on a basis of a division of the claims into the amounts of principal and interest. The uses of the excess cash are limited to compromise settlements of unpaid interest owing on such of the claims as would receive cash under the plan, except in the cases of the five underlying mortgages and the River and Gulf mortgage of the Missouri Pacific. In those instances the court has ordered, as already described, that payments be made of principal as well as unpaid interest. Also, where an offer is made of a different class of new securities in satisfaction of a claim for principal than is offered for interest, the offer of the various classes of new securities is related to principal or interest respectively of the claims. For example, new first-mortgage bonds might be considered as offered in satisfaction of the principal of some claim and new general-mortgage bonds in satisfaction of the unpaid interest. This procedure proved useful in facilitating the negotiations.

In order to keep the total capitalization of the reorganized company provided for in the compromise plan the same as that approved in the Commission plan, despite the greater total amount of the claims as of the later effective date of the compromise plan, while still recognizing legal and equitable requirements in respect of satisfaction of claims, the compromise plan provides for options, exercisable by holders of some classes of old securities to which the surplus cash is applied, whereby such claimants may elect to take either new securities in amounts and of a class or classes considered by the proponents as meeting legal requirements for satisfaction of such claims, or, in lieu thereof to take, as to the amounts of such claims representing unpaid interest, specified amounts of the surplus cash by way of compromise settlements. By this device, and assuming that all creditors to whom such options are offered, elect to take the cash, a total of about $86,300,000 of claims for interest on obligations of senior creditors would be compromised by the payment of about $29,000,000 in cash, the ratios of the amounts of cash offered to the amounts of claims compromised varying depending upon various factors, including the amounts of excess cash available in the respective group treasuries, the extent to which the properties covered by the mortgages held by the creditors participated in the earnings resulting in the cash accumulations, and partly as a result of trading among the negotiators of the plan.

These compromise offers of cash to holders of senior claims are calculated to spread the sacrifice of a part of the unpaid interest on their claims, in the event that they elect to accept cash instead of new securities in satisfaction of such portions of their interest, equitably among all creditors to whom the compromise cash offers are extended and the proponents of the plan contend that any substantial change in the terms of the offers would constitute such an alteration of the plan as to release them from their agreement to accept it.

This use of the surplus cash results in a greater share of the new securities than in the Commission plan being made available within the same total capitalization to apply towards satisfaction of junior claims while the proponents of the compromise plan contend that, at the same time, the treatment of senior creditors is also improved. The benefit to the junior creditors is particularly evident in the case of the large issue of unsecured convertible bonds, an end which the proponents of the compromise plan urge is greatly to be desired in view of the rejection of the Commission plan by this class and four other classes of such junior creditors.

The proponents of the plan represent that the junior creditors' sacrifice in the interest of reaching a compromise agreement consists in their relinquishment of any claim to the part, amounting to about $18,000,000, of a total of nearly $41,000,000 of surplus cash on hand as of December 31, 1942, which part might have been used for payment of dividends during the period January 1, 1940, the effective date of the Commission plan, to January 1, 1943, the effective date of the compromise plan, on the new common stock provided for in the Commission plan and issuable to such junior creditors under the terms of that plan if it had gone into effect as of the former date. The amount of about $41,000,000 available for dividends on all of such stock was arrived at by deducting from the total amount of over $54,000,000 of excess cash, determined to have been on hand as of January 1, 1943, an amount of about $13,500,000 which would have been paid out in interest charges and preferred dividends during the period January 1, 1940 to January 1, 1943 after crediting amounts ordered by the court to be paid during the period as interim interest payments on the old securities.

In the event that any of the creditors to whom the compromise cash offers are tendered should elect to take the new securities in lieu of the cash in satisfaction of the parts of their total claims affected by the compromise cash offers, the total capitalization of the reorganized company would still be kept to the same amount by a provision in the plan that the excess cash so released shall be used by the reorganization managers to purchase in the open market or at private sale new securities issuable under the plan at prices insuring the acquisition of an amount of the securities sufficient to maintain the same capitalization. The new securities to be purchased will be new general-mortgage bonds, to be purchased with the cash released in respect of creditors entitled to receive and electing to take such bonds in lieu of cash, and common stock, to be purchased with the cash released in respect of creditors entitled to receive and electing to take stock. The maximum price at which the bonds would have to be purchased is 62 and the maximum price for the stock 26.

The proponents of the plan express confidence that sufficient stock will be available at the above price. As to the general-mortgage bonds, an agreement has been secured by the proponents of the plan from certain of the parties to this proceeding who will be entitled to receive such bonds under the terms of the plan, to sell to the reorganization managers, if necessary, a sufficient amount of the bonds at the maximum price. In fact, the plan's proponents believe that the new securities may be purchaseable at such lower prices than the above maxima as to result in a decrease in the permissible capitalization of the reorganized company below that determined in the Commission plan, since any surplus cash over that required to purchase the amount of securities necessary to keep the capitalization within the prescribed limit, must be used to retire other debt of the reorganized company through payment into the sinking funds for first-mortgage bonds and/or for general-mortgage bonds as the board of directors of the reorganized company shall determine.

We shall hereinafter discuss the allocations of the new securities proposed in the compromise plan and the optional cash offers in part settlement of interest on some of the claims. We shall defer until then a description of the methods and formulas used by the framers of the plan during their negotiations in arriving at their results. The compromises agreed upon appear to be largely a matter of trading between the various interests, with an effort to follow, so far as possible, the relative treatment afforded the different claimants in the Commission plan. The allocations provided in the compromise plan of cash and new securities to the various claims as a whole are set forth in detail in appendix A attached hereto on the basis that all optional cash offers are exercised. The amounts of the new securities and cash for each $1,000, principal amount of claim or for each $100 par value of stock, including the additional optional offers of securities and of cash, are stated in appendix B also attached hereto. The computation of outstanding claims as shown in appendix A and in our subsequent discussions gives effect to a payment as of some time prior to January 1, 1944, pursuant to the court orders hereinbefore referred to, of the principal and interest on the five underlying Missouri Pacific mortgages and 30 percent of the principal of the River and Gulf bonds, together with interest on such 30 percent of the principal.

The allocations provided in the Commission plan of cash and new securities to the various claims as a whole are set forth in detail in appendix C attached hereto and the distribution of cash and new securities for each $1,000 bond and all unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1940, is shown in appendix D.

Note A: As provided in the compromise plan, the claims of the Finance Corporation, the Railroad Credit Corporation and the bank debt are respectively allocated certain amounts of first-mortgage bonds, series A, with the option to each to accept in lieu thereof first-mortgage bonds, series B. Likewise, the holders of River and Gulf bonds are allocated a certain amount of first-mortgage bonds, series C, with the option to accept in lieu thereof either first-mortgage bonds, series A, or series B, whichever of the said series is not elected by the Finance Corporation. In the case of the acceptance of any of these options, the total amount of each of the several series of first-mortgage bonds to be issued in the reorganization will be adjusted accordingly, so that the aggregate amount of the first-mortgage bonds to be so issued shall be limited to approximately the amounts shown in the above table.

Note B: Does not include additional first-mortgage bonds to be pledged under the terms of both plans to secure new collateral-trust 10-year notes. Under the terms of the compromise plan these will be $12,940,000 of first-mortgage bonds, series C, and under the terms of the Commission plan $15,876,850 of first-mortgage bonds, series B.

Note C: No par value. Value stated at $100 per share. The amount of new common stock above stated does not include any stock to be issued to the holders of general unsecured claims.

Note D: The amounts shown in the Commission plan capitalization for equipment obligations and Plaza-Olive Building bonds have been stated to conform to the amounts shown in the compromise plan since, as of January 1, 1943, the same amounts would be outstanding under both plans.

Note E: Interest rate subject to change as provided in both plans.

Note F: The amount of first-mortgage bond interest under the terms of the compromise plan is subject to the contingencies mentioned in Note A under the foregoing table showing the capitalization of the reorganized company.

Note G: It is estimated that the average annual charge to operating expenses for depreciation on road property will approximate $2,900,000. This is the equivalent of a capital expenditures fund of 2½% on consolidated total railway operating revenues of $116,000,000. Consequently no charge is included in the table above in respect of the compromise plan.

Note H: Interest on equipment obligations and Plaza-Olive Bldg. bonds, as shown for Commission plan, are so stated as to conform to amounts shown for the compromise plan.

Note I: Commission plan provides for a capital expenditures fund equal to 2 percent of total railway operating revenues. The amount stated is, however, only one-half of one percent on $116,000,000 operating revenues in order to make the statements for the two plans comparable, since, under both plans charges to operating expenses for depreciation on road property is to be credited to the capital expenditures fund and, as stated in Note G, it is estimated that such charges will average about 2½ percent on railway operating revenues of $116,000,000.

The total capitalization of the Commission plan, as stated above, exceeds by about $2,000,000 the permissible capitalization authorized by, and as stated in that plan. This is because of the inclusion in the above statement, for purpose of comparison, of the greater amount of equipment obligations outstanding as of January 1, 1943, the effective date of the compromise plan, than as of January 1, 1940, the effective date of the Commission plan. These equipment obligations are to be assumed by the reorganized company under the terms of both plans.

The above statement of capitalization under the compromise plan is subject to the possibility that, as provided in that plan, in the discretion of the reorganization managers with the approval of the court, the properties of the International, and of the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company may be transferred to the International or to a separate new company instead of to the reorganized (Missouri Pacific) company; and that the properties of the Natchez & Southern Railway Company and Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company may be transferred to a separate new company instead of to the reorganized (Missouri Pacific) company; in either of which events the capitalization of the reorganized (Missouri Pacific) company as shown in the above table would be reduced by the amount of equipment obligations assumed by the separately incorporated International (or separate new company) and by the separate new company to which would be transferred the properties of the Natchez & Southern Railway Company and Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company. All of the bonds and stock of the separately incorporated International (or separate new company) and of the separate new Natchez company would be transferred to the reorganized (Missouri Pacific) company and pledged under its new first mortgage and general mortgage. The securities of the separately incorporated International (or separate new company), other than equipment obligations which are to be assumed, would be limited to approximately $23,415,000, principal amount, of first-mortgage bonds bearing contingent interest at the rate of 5 percent per annum, dated as of the effective date of the plan and maturing 75 years after their date, and such amount (not exceeding approximately $26,585,000) of new common stock with or without par value as the reorganization managers may determine. The securities of the separate new Natchez company would consist of equipment obligations, which are to be assumed, and approximately 5,000 shares of new common stock with or without par value as the reorganization managers may determine. The reasons for the possible incorporation of these separate companies will be discussed hereinafter.

The most important differences in the capital structures of the two plans are (1) a decrease in the compromise plan as compared with the Commission plan of about $4,000,000, in the principal amount of fixed-interest 10-year collateral-trust notes and an increase of about $8,000,000 in the principal amount of the junior issue of fixed-interest first-mortgage bonds, with a resulting net increase in the compromise plan of about $4,000,00 in total fixed-interest debt, and (2) an increase in the compromise plan of about $38,500,000, principal amount, of contingent-interest general-mortgage bonds and a decrease of about $44,500,000 in the total amount of stock to be outstanding, the compromise plan providing for about $57,800,000 less of preferred and about $13,300,000 more of common stock than the Commission plan.

The collateral-trust notes of the Commission plan would be distributed in satisfaction of the five underlying Missouri Pacific mortgages now paid or to be paid in cash pursuant to the court orders hereinbefore referred to, while the smaller amount of collateral-trust notes provided in the compromise plan would be allocated in payment of 30 percent of the principal amount of River & Gulf bonds outstanding after payment of another 30 percent thereof in cash pursuant to one of the court orders which have been hereinbefore referred to.

The increase in the amount of first-mortgage fixed-interest bonds under the terms of the compromise plan over the amount provided for in the Commission plan is the result of a transformation of about 30 percent of the issue of series-A general-mortgage income bonds provided for in the Commission plan into first-mortgage fixed-interest bonds, thereby and to that extent increasing the amount of the latter bonds, which otherwise would be outstanding.

The series-A general-mortgage contingent-interest bonds of the compromise plan may be considered as corresponding in priority to the total of the remainder of the series-A and all of the series-B general-mortgage contingent-interest bonds of the Commission plan, while the series-B general-mortgage bonds of the compromise plan are of approximately the same amount and may be said to correspond in some degree to the prior preferred stock of the Commission plan.

The compromise plan also provides additionally for the issuance of common stock purchase warrants not provided for by the Commission plan.

Description of the new debt securities.—The new first mortgage of the compromise plan differs in certain respects from that of the Commission plan. Three series of bonds, A, B, and C instead of two as in the Commission plan are issuable in the reorganization and are limited to the amount necessary to carry out the terms of the plan, but, as in the Commission plan, additional bonds of other series may be issued from time to time without limit as to aggregate amount, subject to such limitations and restrictions as may be specified in the first mortgage.

The series-A bonds would mature in 15 years, bear 3½ percent interest payable semi-annually, and be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest-payment date on 30 days' notice, and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 101 percent, of their face value during the first 3 years, 100¾ percent during the next succeeding 3 years, 100½ during the next 3 years, 100¼ during the next 3 years, and at 100 percent thereafter until maturity, together with accrued interest. They would be redeemable for the sinking fund, described hereinafter, at their principal amount plus accrued interest.

The series-B bonds would mature in 25 years, bear 3¾ percent interest payable semi-annually, and be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest-payment date on 30 days' notice and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 102½ percent of their face value during the first 3 years, 102¼ during the next succeeding 3 years, 102 during the next 3 years, then decreasing progressively by ¼ percent for each of the next seven 2-year periods and thereafter at 100 until maturity, together with accrued interest. They would be redeemable for the sinking fund at their principal amount plus accrued interest.

The series-C bonds would mature in 50 years, bear 4 percent interest payable semi-annually, and be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest-payment date on 30 days' notice and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 106 percent of their face value during the first 4 years, then decreasing progressively by ½ percent for each of the next ten 4-year periods, then at 100½ during the next succeeding 3 years, and thereafter at 100 to maturity, together with accrued interest. They would be redeemable for the sinking fund at their principal amount plus accrued interest.

The Commission plan has no provision for a regular sinking fund to retire the first-mortgage bonds issuable in the reorganization while the compromise plan provides for annual payment equal to one-quarter of 1 percent of the aggregate amount of series A, B and C bonds authenticated pursuant to the plan exclusive of bonds pledged to secure the collateral-trust notes. Payments are to be made on April 1 of each year out of available net income of the preceding year commencing with the second April 1 following the effective date of the plan and are cumulative so that, if not earned in any year, the deficiency shall be made up in the next succeeding year or years. The sinking fund is to be applied to the retirement of the following new securities in the order stated, by purchase in the open market or by call for tenders at not exceeding their principal amount plus accrued interest; (1) collateral-trust 10-year notes, (2) first-mortgage bonds, series-A, (3) first-mortgage bonds series-B and (4) first-mortgage bonds, series C. If, on November 1 of any year, the unexpended balance in the sinking fund exceeds $50,000, the funds shall be applied on the next succeeding interest-payment date to the redemption of the above new securities in the above order. All notes and bonds acquired by application of the sinking fund are to be canceled and no bonds shall be issued to refund them.

The compromise plan contains substantially the same restrictions upon the issue of additional first-mortgage bonds as the Commission plan except that it provides that emergency bonds may be issued and sold or pledged without regard to any of the restrictions contained in the plan with respect to the issue of first-mortgage bonds for other purposes, upon resolution adopted by the vote of two-thirds of the board of directors that funds are needed and cannot otherwise be raised, provided that (1) the emergency bonds shall constitute a revolving fund and the reorganized company shall agree to retire and restore to the treasury all emergency bonds as soon as practicable; (2) all of the emergency bonds shall be redeemable and if any emergency bonds are not retired within 2 years from the date of issue, there shall be an annual sinking fund therefor equal to 10 percent of the amount thereof, payable out of available net income of the reorganized company as hereinafter described, and (3) the amount of emergency bonds, including those pledged or held in the treasury of the reorganized company, shall not exceed at any one time $15,000,000 or 2 years' fixed charges, whichever sum shall be the greater.

The compromise plan differs from the Commission plan in that the former specifically provides that, subject to the foregoing provisions with respect to emergency bonds, any additional sinking fund or funds which may be created by the board of directors for the retirement of first-mortgage bonds other than series A, B and C may be subordinated to or rank equally and ratably with, but not prior to the sinking fund for the series A, B and C bonds and that the total amount of all annual installments payable in respect of such additional sinking fund or funds shall not exceed one-half of 1 percent of the greatest principal amount of first-mortgage bonds, other than series A, B and C, theretofore at any one time outstanding.

The compromise plan also contains a new restriction upon the issuance of additional first-mortgage bonds to the effect that the first mortgage shall contain a covenant that no bonds, other than those to be authenticated under the plan and emergency bonds, will be authenticated and delivered unless (a) the reorganized company shall have contracted forthwith to sell or pledge such bonds and (b) the board of directors of the reorganized company shall by resolution adopted by two-thirds of the entire number of directors, have determined that, in the opinion of the board, taking into account market and other relevant conditions at the time, it is undesirable or impracticable to provide the amount of money needed (1) by the sale of general-mortgage bonds having a suitable maturity at a price which would give a yield to maturity of 5 percent or less, or (2) by the sale of preferred stock at a price which would give a current dividend return of 6 percent or less or (3) by the sale of common stock of either class at a price which would give a current dividend return of 6 percent or less based on the regular dividend rate then in effect, or, if there is none, then on the average rate at which dividends have been paid during the past 12 calendar months.

The compromise plan contains certain specific provisions not included in the Commission plan as to modification of the first mortgage. These provisions are (a) that, with our approval, the obligation of the reorganized company to pay the principal of, or interest on, any bond at the time and place and at the rate and in the currency provided therein, (an obligation which under the Commission plan can only be waived by consent of the holder of the bond) may be modified by the concurrent action of the reorganized company and of the holders of not less than three-fourths in aggregate principal amount of bonds affected by such change then outstanding, so as to postpone the time of payment of all or any part of such principal and/or interest, and (b) that no change or modification of the mortgage shall permit the creation by the reorganized company of any mortgage or lien in the nature of a mortgage ranking prior to, or on a parity with the lien of the first mortgage, except as in that mortgage otherwise expressly provided. There is also a provision included in the compromise plan that any modification or alteration of the first mortgage authorized to be made as above provided, may specifically include procedural provision for ascertaining available net income without the maintenance of separate books of account in the event the reorganized company shall be merged into or consolidated or unified with another corporation, whether or not a subsidiary of the reorganized company.

The compromise plan also contains a new provision that the first mortgage shall contain a covenant that the reorganized company will at all times keep the mortgaged property supplied with such amount of motive power, rolling stock and equipment (on which the first mortgage shall constitute a paramount lien subject only to such liens in the nature of purchase money liens as may be permitted by the terms of the compromise plan) and maintain the same in such condition as may be necessary for the efficient and economical operation of the mortgaged property.

The provisions of the compromise plan with respect to the collateral-trust 10-year 3½-percent notes are the same as in the Commission plan except that it is provided in the compromise plan that they shall be redeemable without premium, and be secured by 125 percent of first-mortgage bonds, series C, compared with the 110 percent of series-B first-mortgage bonds provided for in the Commission plan, which also provides for redemption with premium. There is an additional express provision in the compromise plan that all series-C first-mortgage bonds released from the lien of the note indenture shall be canceled. There is a provision that the reorganization managers will use their best efforts to arrange for the underwriting of the notes prior to consummation of the plan. If the underwriting is arranged, each person entitled to receive notes may take either the notes or cash at not less than par plus accrued interest to a date fixed by the reorganization managers. The arrangement is to be subject to the court's approval.

The provisions of both plans as to the Plaza-Olive Building mortgage are identical.

The general mortgages of both plans would be liens upon all of the properties and assets of the reorganized company that are subject to the new first mortgage, subject, however, to the first mortgage. The general-mortgage bonds of the compromise plan would be issuable in series, the total authorized issue to be unlimited in principal amount. The series-A bonds differ from those issuable under the Commission plan in that the contingent-interest rate is 4½ percent instead of 4 percent per annum, the interest to be cumulative up to a maximum accumulation of 13½ percent compared with 20 percent as provided in the Commission plan. A new provision of the compromise plan is that interest owing as a debt in a given year but which is paid on the interest-payment date in the next succeeding year shall not be included in calculating the maximum limit of accumulation.

Series-B bonds of the compromise plan differ from those of the Commission plan in that they would bear contingent interest at the rate of 5 percent per annum instead of 4½ percent. The notice required for redemption would be 30 days if redeemed on an interest-payment date instead of 60 days as provided in the Commission plan and otherwise 60 days as compared with 90. The series-B bonds would not be convertible while in the Commission plan it is provided that the principal of each $1,000 series-B bond may be converted into seven shares of second-preferred stock and $500, principal amount, of general-mortgage bonds, series A, with appropriate provisions for adjustment of interest and dividends and for adjustment in case of an increase or reduction in the authorized amount of second-preferred stock or other contingencies.

The Commission plan provides for one sinking fund for both series A and B general-mortgage bonds, the annual payments into the fund to equal one-half of 1 percent of the maximum principal amount of bonds outstanding and the moneys in the fund to be used first in the retirement by purchase of series-A and then series-B bonds, the bonds so acquired to be kept alive and the interest paid on them credited to the sinking-fund payments, until the happening of certain contingencies as stated in the Commission plan. The compromise plan provides for separate sinking funds for each of series A and B bonds, the annual payments to be one-half of 1 percent on the series-A bonds and not to exceed that amount on the series-B bonds with the payments into the series-A sinking fund given priority. All bonds acquired through operation of both sinking funds are to be canceled under the terms of the compromise plan.

The compromise plan provides that general-mortgage bonds of other series than A and B, bearing contingent interest, may be issued but only for the following purposes: (1) To refund general-mortgage bonds or mortgage obligations which may at the time be a lien on any part of the system prior to the lien of the general mortgage and (2) for the purposes and subject to the restrictions contained in the plan in respect of the issue of additional first-mortgage bonds, to the extent that first-mortgage bonds are not issued for such purposes; provided, however, that no emergency bonds may be issued under the general mortgage.

The compromise and Commission plans contain substantially identical provisions for future changes or amendment of the terms of the general mortgage, the compromise plan, however, expressly providing that no such change or amendment shall permit the creation by the reorganized company of any mortgage or lien in the nature of a mortgage ranking prior to or on a parity with the lien of the new general mortgage except as in that mortage otherwise expressly provided.

Under the compromise plan, the new general mortgage would contain provisions that, if the International and the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company should be incorporated separately from the reorganized Missouri Pacific Company, the new first mortgage of the separately incorporated International Company should be in an amount and contain certain provisions which are specified.

The compromise plan provides that both the first mortgage and general mortgage shall contain such provisions as the reorganization managers may approve either (1) permitting the reorganized company, while it is not in default in the performance of its obligations under said mortgages respectively and during any period of grace therein specified, to use and dispose of, to the same extent as if not subject to the lien of such mortgages respectively, cash, temporary cash investments, tools, supplies and other current items or (2) excluding such property from the liens of said mortgages.

Available net income and capital expenditures fund.—The compromise plan provides that available net income shall be determined for each calendar year beginning with the year in which the effective date falls. It shall be determined by deducting all fixed charges of the reorganized company and its wholly owned railway subsidiaries accruing during the calendar year from the consolidated income of the reorganized company and such subsidiaries available for fixed charges for such year, provided, however, that available net income for any period after the effective date and prior to the consummation of the plan shall be computed as if the plan had been consummated on the effective date. If, in any calendar year available net income should be a deficit, the amount of such deficit would be carried forward and be deducted in determining available net income for the succeeding calendar year or years until such deficit (or accumulated or remaining deficits) be extinguished by earnings which, in the absence of such deficit or deficits, would be available net income, and (2) any adjustment necessary to correct the income accounts of any prior years shall be made by appropriate entries which may either be made in the accounts of the current year and/or, in the discretion of the board of directors and subject to our approval or such other governmental agency as may at the time have jurisdiction, may be made in whole or in part in the accounts of any subsequent year or years, and any such debits or credits to adjust income in prior years shall be treated as income items for the year in which entered on the books whether cleared through income or profit and loss accounts.

Available net income for each calendar year would be applied to the following purposes and in the following order:

(1) Capital expenditures fund.—The terms of the compromise plan with respect to the capital fund are substantially the same as contained in the Commission plan except (a) the amount of the annual payment into the fund under the compromise plan is to be equal, before the credits stated in the plan, to 2½ percent (instead of 3 percent as in the Commission plan) of the consolidated total railway operating revenues of the reorganized company and its wholly owned railway subsidiaries for such calendar year; and (b) a proviso, similar to one approved by us in other reorganization plans, is added to the prohibition against issuing any evidences of indebtedness to capitalize, or reimburse the reorganized company for, expenditures of moneys from the capital expenditures fund, to the effect that, if such expenditures are for purposes for which first-mortgage or general-mortgage bonds may be issued, the expenditures may, within such limits, if any, as may be specified in the mortgages, be used to supply in whole or in part the excess of capital expenditures required to be certified under either mortgage over the principal amount of the bonds that may be issued under the terms thereof.

(2) First mortgage sinking fund.—Any then remaining available net income would, to the extent required, be applied on the next succeeding sinking-fund payment date to sinking-fund installments on first-mortgage bonds, such payments, if any, in respect of emergency bonds to receive priority. Sinking funds for series of bonds other than A, B, and C may be subordinated as hereinbefore stated, including a special sinking fund set up in respect of bonds issued in respect of equipment.

(3) General-mortgage series-A interest.—Any then remaining available net income would be applied to payment of interest on general-mortgage bonds, series A, and any accumulations thereof unless such payment would be less than one-quarter of 1 percent, any excess not paid to be reserved and added to income available for such interest for the next succeeding year.

(4) General-mortgage series-A sinking fund.—Any then remaining available net income would, to the extent required, be applied to the sinking fund installment on general-mortgage bonds, series A.

(5) Interest on other general-mortgage bonds.—Any then remaining available net income would be applied to payment of interest on general-mortgage bonds of any series other than series A, without preference. The other provisions stated in paragraph (3) above apply.

(6) General-mortgage sinking fund.—Any then remaining available net income would, to the extent required, be applied to the sinking-fund installment or installments on general-mortgage bonds other than series A, without preference unless, at the time of creation of any series other than A and B, the sinking fund for such series is subordinated.

(7) Preferred stock dividends.—Any then available net income would be applied to the payment of dividends, when and as declared, on the preferred stock and any accumulations thereof, in accordance with the applicable provisions of the certificate of incorporation of the reorganized company and the resolutions establishing one or more series of preferred stock.

(8) Common stock dividends, retirement fund and other corporate purposes.—Any then available net income remaining may be applied to any proper corporate purpose, including dividends on the classes of common stock in their order of priority and to the retirement fund, which will be later described, for retirement of general-mortgage bonds and preferred stock, series A.

Description of the new stock issues.—The compromise plan provides for only one issue originally of preferred stock, designated series A, of an amount sufficient to carry out the terms of the plan. The stock would be of $100 par value and entitle the holders to dividends at the rate of 5 percent per annum, when and as declared by the board of directors, out of available net income for any calendar year in preference to holders of the common stock. Dividends would be cumulative in respect of each calendar year but only to the extent that there is available net income for such year distributable under the plan as such dividends. No dividend could be paid on the common stock in any calendar year unless all accumulated unpaid dividends and the year's current dividend on the series-A preferred stock has been paid or declared and set apart for payment.

In the event of the dissolution, winding up or liquidation of the reorganized company, the holders of series-A preferred stock would be entitled to receive out of the assets of the company $100 per share, together with an amount equal to all accrued, unpaid and accumulated dividends, before any distribution to holders of common stock. The series-A preferred stock would be redeemable in whole or in part at any time on 60 days' notice at par plus a 5 percent dividend, whether or not earned, from the preceding January 1 to the redemption date less any dividends paid during that period, plus all accumulated dividends for preceding year. Holders of the preferred stock series A would have no preemptive subscription privileges for any shares of stock of any class or to securities convertible into stock of any class. Each share of stock would entitle the holder to one vote.

The plan provides that the reorganized company's certificate of incorporation shall contain provisions that the company shall not, without a two-thirds in par value vote of the series-A preferred stockholders (a) amend the certificate of incorporation or any amendatory or supplemental one so as to alter or change the preferences and voting rights to which the series-A preferred stockholders are entitled under the plan, (b) create any additional stock ranking either as to assets or dividends in priority to, or on a parity with the new preferred stock and (c) issue any of the shares of preferred stock, which are to be originally authorized, for any purpose other than to carry out the plan or for purposes for which new first-mortgage bonds or new general-mortgage bonds might otherwise be issued.

Subject to the foregoing provisions, the certificate of incorporation would permit the authorization and issuance of additional preferred stock of such series and amounts, with such par value and entitled to such dividends, voting rights, priority, redemption, conversion and other special privileges and restrictions as the board of directors in its discretion determines.

The reorganized company's new common stock would be divided into two classes, class A and class B, both without par value, the number of shares authorized to be in relation to the requirements of the plan and originally to be in the amounts necessary to carry out the plan. Promptly after organization of the reorganized company, the board of directors would adopt resolutions (1) reserving the number of shares of authorized but unissued common stock, class B, necessary for issuance against the exercise of warrants as hereinafter described, (2) authorizing the issuance from time to time as warrants are exercised of all or any part of said reserved shares of class-B common stock against payment therefor at the price of $100 per share, and (3) providing that said resolutions, which shall be deemed to constitute a contract with the holders of the warrants, shall not be subject to revocation during the period when the warrants may be exercised.

The certificate of incorporation would permit the authorization from time to time of additional shares of common stock of either class with the consent of the holders of not less than a majority of the number of shares of common stock of each class at the time outstanding and would permit the board of directors in its discretion to authorize the issuance of such additional shares of common stock for any lawful purpose.

In any calendar year no class-B dividends could be paid until after a $5 class-A dividend, then $5 shall be paid on the class-B stock and thereafter the two classes with participate equally.

In dissolution, winding up, or liquidation, class-A common stockholders would be entitled to $100 per share out of assets before distribution to class-B stockholders. Thereafter the latter would receive $100 a share and thereafter any further distributions on common stock would be made equally and ratably on all outstanding shares of common stock of both classes. Each share of common stock would be entitled to one vote.

Voting trust.—A voting trust is proposed to be established for the purpose, as stated in the plan, of assuring a stable, experienced and impartial management which will be free to act in the general interest without allegiance to any particular class of security holders during the crucial period which will follow consummation of the reorganization and the termination of the war. The voting trustee would be three in number, one to be an outstanding citizen of Missouri, one an outstanding citizen of Texas and the third to be chosen by the other two, all subject to the approval of the court. If any vacancy shall occur it would be filled by a majority of the remaining trustees.

All of the series-A preferred stock, and series A and B common stock issued in the reorganization and all other voting stock thereafter issued by the reorganized company during the continuance of the voting trust, including additional shares of class-B common stock issued upon warrants, would be deposited in the voting trust and certificates issued therefor, the reference throughout this report to the reorganized company's stock being deemed to mean voting-trust certificates for the stock unless the context otherwise requires. The voting trust would continue (1) for 10 years from date of consummation of the plan or (2) until available net income shall have been sufficient, for a period of 3 consecutive calendar years, commencing not earlier than the January 1 nearest to the date of consummation of the plan, to provide full interest and sinking-fund requirements on all outstanding series A and B general-mortgage bonds plus the sum of $3,600,000 per year, whichever period shall be the shorter.

The above-described voting trust of the compromise plan differs from that provided by the Commission plan. In the latter plan the voting trust, which would be administered by five trustees instead of three as in the compromise plan, would be established for the protection of the holders of the new general-mortgage bonds issuable under the plan and would contain only the prior preferred and second-preferred stocks and not the common stock.

Warrants.—Unlike the Commission plan, the compromise plan provides for the issuance in the reorganization of warrants exercisable at any time within 10 years after date of consummation of the plan entitling the holders to purchase or subscribe for, at $100 per share, the aggregate number of shares of class-B common stock necessary to carry out the plan.

The exercise of the warrants would operate as a purchase of class-B common stock held in escrow (as hereinafter described) until all of the escrowed stock has been purchased and thereafter as a subscription to class-B common stock reserved for issuance against the exercise of warrants. The warrants would not entitle the holders to vote, to receive dividends, to any preemptive right to subscribe to stock of any class or to securities convertible into stock, or to any of the rights of stockholders.

Escrow of class-B common stock.—The compromise plan provides that all class-B common stock to which creditors are entitled under the plan be placed in escrow for a period of 10 years after consummation of the plan or until all stock warrants have been exercised, the creditors meanwhile receiving certificates of beneficial interest in lieu of their stock certificates. If, at the termination of the voting trust, any class-B common stock were still held in escrow, the holders of the certificates representing such stock thereafter would be entitled to have the stock registered in their names.

When warrants are exercised in respect of escrowed stock, the escrow agent would, from time to time, apply the purchase price to redemption at $100 per share of outstanding certificates of beneficial interest representing class-B common stock, provided, however, that, except upon termination of the escrow agreement, not less than aggregate amounts of $1,000,000 should be so applied unless requested by the reorganized company. The redeemed certificates would be determined by lot on the basis of units of one share of stock. Dividends received on escrowed stock would be distributed by the escrow agent pro rata to the certificate holders. Upon termination of the escrow agreement any stock held by the escrow agent would be distributed pro rata among certificate holders after applying to the redemption of such certificates any cash then held by the escrow agent representing proceeds of the exercise of warrants. The subscription price to be received by the reorganized company upon the exercise of warrants affecting stock reserved for issuance against the exercise of warrants (as distinguished from escrowed stock to be issued in the reorganization to creditors) could be used by the reorganized company for any lawful corporate purposes.

Provision is to be made for adjustment of the price per share of class-B common stock at which warrants are exercised in the event of the issuance of additional such stock at a price less than the warrant price and also for adjustment of the number of shares purchasable by warrants in the event of the subdivision or combination of outstanding class-B common stock or the distribution of dividends payable in such stock. Provision is also to be made for the protection of the holders of warrants in the event of a consolidation or merger of the reorganized company with any other corporation, or the sale or conveyance of its property as an entirety, or substantially so, to any other corporation.

Retirement fund.—The compromise plan provides for a retirement fund, not included in the Commission plan, whereby the new first mortgage and general mortgage will contain provisions that whenever a dividend (other than stock dividend) is paid upon common stock of either class, an amount equal to one-third of such dividend would be set aside as a sinking fund to purchase or redeem general-mortgage bonds, series A or B, issued pursuant to the plan. The retirement fund would continue to operate until all such general-mortgage bonds are retired.

Board of directors of the reorganized company.—The compromise plan provides for the same number of directors of the reorganized company as does the Commission plan and similarly provides that they be elected by the voting trustees as long as the voting trust is in effect and thereafter by the stockholders.

However, the panel of nominees from whom the members of the first board would be elected is different. The compromise plan provides that the panel be designated as follows: Five (5) by the first and refunding protective committee, of whom three (3) must be residents of the territory served by the Missouri Pacific; one (1) by the Finance Corporation; two (2) by the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds committee, of which one (1) must be a resident of the territory served by the New Orleans; two (2) by the International first-mortgage trustee of whom one (1) must be a resident of the territory served by the International; two (2) by the Missouri Pacific general-mortgage protective committee of whom one (1) must be a resident of the territory served by the Missouri Pacific; and two (2) by Alleghany Corporation of whom one (1) must be a resident of the territory served by the entire system.

If any nominee is unacceptable to the voting trustees, the trustees would promptly notify the nominating party who could designate another nominee who would be acceptable to the voting trustees. Thirty days' notice of the date of the election of the first board of directors would be given the nominating parties by the voting trustees and if 5 days prior to such date any of the parties have failed to designate his nominee or nominees, the vacancy or vacancies could be filled by the voting trustees. The president of the reorganized company would be the fifteenth director.

Reorganization managers.—The composition of the five (5) reorganization managers as provided by the compromise plan would be different from that of the Commission plan, although under both plans they all would be approved by the court. The compromise plan provides that two (2) of the reorganization managers be designated by the first and refunding committee, one (1) jointly by the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds committee and by the International first-mortgage trustee; one (1) by the Finance Corporation; and one (1) jointly by the Missouri Pacific general-mortgage protective committee and by Alleghany Corporation.

Otherwise the provisions of the two plans in respect of the reorganization managers are substantially the same, although the compromise plan has an additional provision to the effect that the reorganization managers should have the power to construe the plan and any construction approved by them on advice of counsel would, subject to approval by the court, be conclusive.

Execution of the plan by sales; exclusion of certain lines.—The compromise and Commission plans both contain provisions, which are substantially the same, declaring that the plans would not be inoperative and permitting their going into effect if the properties subject to certain mortgages are sold to others than the reorganization managers. These mortgages are The Central Branch Union Pacific Railway Company first mortgage, Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company first mortgage, Cairo & Thebes Railroad Company first mortgage and the Boonville, St. Louis & Southern Railway Company first mortgage.

The compromise plan omits the properties of the International and the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company, separate sales of which to others than the reorganization managers are also permitted by the Commission plan.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS AS TO A PLAN OF REORGANIZATION.

This proceeding has been pending since March 1933. Its termination at the earliest practicable date by consummation of a fair and equitable plan of reorganization obviously is of the greatest importance to every one having an interest in the proceeding, including the general public. Widely divergent views have been expressed and urgently contended for by the creditors in connection with every plan which has been proposed. It seems amply proved that no plan can be drawn which will receive the unanimous approval of all claimants nor is it probable that any preliminary creditors' agreement even approaching unanimity can be reached. We therefore believe that the very substantial accord afforded the compromise plan by representatives of holders of large amounts of securities of important classes entitle it to our careful consideration.

The primary purpose of the plan appears to be to improve the treatment of junior creditors as afforded them under the Commission plan, by inducing senior creditors to compromise a part of their claims for cash, thereby releasing a part of total capitalization to apply towards satisfaction of the junior claims. Those of the senior creditors refusing the cash compromises are given the option of taking additional new securities of such priorities and in such amounts as the supporters of the plan contend will fully satisfy their claims. The effectiveness of this provision is dependent upon new securities being available for acquisition by the reorganization managers at prices sufficiently low to maintain the permissible capitalization. The proponents of the plan contend that this is assured.

The question arises whether the plan should compel such an election by senior creditors in order for them to obtain participation in the distribution of the excess cash proposed to be used for compromise purposes. That this constitutes a sacrifice by the senior creditors does not seem to us self-evident, assuming that the plan provides full satisfaction of their claims by means of allocation of additional new securities in lieu of the compromise cash offers. The amount, if any, of the sacrifice would depend to a great extent upon the need or desire of an individual creditor as of the time of consummation of the plan for cash rather than an investment. Furthermore, all the new securities issued in the reorganization presumably will be marketable. No specific objections to this feature of the plan providing for the use of excess cash in compromise offers have been urged by any of the parties. Some of the objectors to the plan would confine the use of the greater part of the excess cash to satisfaction in full of only certain of the senior claims, evidently upon the assumption that the cash can be applied towards settlement of claims of senior creditors as convenience or expediency dictate and that, when so applied, the general estate of the debtors and consequently of all of the creditors will benefit.

It is our opinion and we find that this feature of the plan providing for the optional compromise cash offers, does not constitute an impairment of the rights of the senior creditors and should not prevent our approval of the plan.

Amount of capitalization.—In our report of January 10, 1940, supra, in this proceeding, we determined the approximate total permissible capitalizations of each of the three groups of railroads comprising the Missouri Pacific system and of the system as a whole. These capitalizations are Missouri Pacific $463,000,000, New Orleans $67,000,000, International $50,000,000, and system $560,000,000. We pointed out that, while the system total is less by $20,000,000 than the aggregate of the individual group capitalizations, the system total was determined after elimination of duplications due to ownership by one debtor of obligations of another.

One of the parties to the proceedings contends that the duplications do not affect the value of the properties and that the permissible capitalization for the system should equal the total of the separate capitalizations. If any one of the three operating groups of railroads were to be separately reorganized its ownership of valuable securities of one of the other two groups would be a recognizable asset, the value of the securities so owned being proper to add to the value which its other owned property otherwise would possess. Likewise, any income in the form of return on such securities of the other company so owned by the first group would increase the total income of the first group and its total permissible capitalization should be greater than if it did not own those securities. However, the total permissible capitalization of the second operating group of railroads whose securities were so owned would not be less by reason of any ownership of its securities by the first group. If, however, title to the entire owned properties of both groups were vested in a third new company, the securities of either of the former separate groups if transferred to the new company would represent no value to the new company additional to that which it would already possess by reason of the transfer to it of the titles to all of the other properties of the two groups. In the hands of the new company the securities of one of the former groups held by the other would be canceled. They would add nothing to the earnings of the third new company and would constitute no basis for permitting a higher capitalization of the new company than should be allowed if such securities had not been transferred to it.

Certain of the parties to this proceeding insist that the increased earnings of the Missouri Pacific system during the past few years and particularly since 1940, coupled with the increases in the debtors' physical properties and the net increases in their current assets, warrant at this time a materially increased capitalization. It may be well, therefore, to restate briefly the principles which have governed us in fixing the capitalizations of railroads undergoing reorganization, and indicate how we apply these principles in the instant proceeding.

In the first instance, a capitalization determined by us for a reorganized railroad is in substance a finding of value for reorganization purposes. In this connection, it is of the utmost importance to distinguish between a valuation for reorganization and for rate-making purposes, since they are controlled by quite different principles. Our position in this respect is fully stated in Chicago, G. W. R. Co. Reorganization, 247 I. C. C. 193, 195, where it is said:

> The value of railroad properties which we endeavor to determine within maximum limits for financial reorganization purposes is value in the strict economic meaning of that word. Briefly it may be described as the actual worth of the properties to their owners, and basically it is dependent upon the present and prospective earning power of the properties, considering among other things, the amount of business available, the competition which must be met in obtaining that business, and the character and condition of the facilities which make up the physical properties.
> For the purposes of public regulation of rates and charges, the word value has come to be used under the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, in another sense, known variously as "fair value", "value for rate-making purposes", and sometimes as the "rate base". It is the amount upon which the owners of the property are entitled, under the Constitution, to an opportunity to earn a reasonable return, an opportunity of which they cannot be deprived by public regulation if confiscation is to be avoided. This amount is determined after giving consideration and weight principally to the original cost of the properties, the cost of reproduction of the portion capable of reproduction, the present value of land, and the extent to which the properties have depreciated.

This latter so-called value may be obviously, and ordinarily will, differ from value in the strict economic meaning of the word. Because of sparsity of business available or the competition of other carriers, for example, it may not be possible to earn a reasonable return upon "value for rate-making purposes," even if public regulation allows the carrier a free hand in the making of its rates and charges. In that event the economic value will be the lower of the two. On the other hand it may be the higher, if the carrier is so strategically located that it can earn more than a minimum reasonable return upon "value for rate-making purposes" under public regulation, which must to some extent be based upon general transportation conditions.

Those criteria have governed us in fixing capitalizations of reorganized railroads and, in our opinion, are not only consistent with the statutory standards, but are also consistent with sound financial practices and the public interest. Our views in this respect have been sustained by many Federal district courts and by the Supreme Court of the United States. In the Milwaukee case, supra, Mr. Justice Douglas, after quoting the provisions of subsection (e) of section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act pertaining to the determination of value said:

> * * * It is argued that under this provision earning power is not the primary criterion of value and that the Commission did not give proper weight to the original cost, reproduction cost new, or the valuation for rate-making purposes. We disagree. We recently stated in Consolidated Rock Products Co. v. DuBois, supra, in connection with a reorganization of an industrial company that the criterion of earning capacity is the essential one if the enterprise is to be freed from the heavy hand of past errors, miscalculations or disaster, and if the allocation of securities among the various claimants is to be fair and equitable. * * *

Continuing the Court said:

> * * * A basic requirement of any reorganization is the determination of a capitalization which makes it possible not only to respect the priorities of the various classes of claimants but also to give the new company a reasonable prospect of survival. See Commissioner Eastman dissenting, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Reorganization, 131 I. C. C. 673, 705. Only "meticulous regard for earning capacity" (Consolidated Rock Products Co. v. DuBois, supra, p. 525) can afford the old security holders protection against a dilution of their priorities and can give the new company some safeguards against the scourge of overcapitalization. Disregard of that method of valuation can only bring, as stated by Judge Evans for the court below, "a harvest of barren regrets." * * *

The Court concluded:

> In this case the Commission followed the statute. While it made earning power the primary criterion, it did not disregard the other valuations. It considered them and concluded in substance that they afforded no reasonable basis for believing that the probable earning power of the road was greater than what the Commission had found it to be by the use of other standards. The Commission need not do more.

A plan of reorganization must serve as a basis for the company's financial structure for the indefinite future and the capitalization which we approve should be such that the reorganized company will be able to meet its obligations and accomplish necessary financing during periods of business depression as well as of high earnings, and such that under all probable conditions it will be compatible with the public interest. Thus it must be based on consideration of earnings over a period long enough to reflect years of both high and low earnings.

The adoption of principles differing from those referred to above would mean that capitalization, in most cases, would have no relation to earning power. It would result in the issuance of reorganization securities having no real worth as investments. This in turn, apart from the dilution of the priorities of the old security holders, would defeat one of the most important objects of reorganization, namely, restoration of the credit of the reorganized company. If the amount of junior securities of a company is far in excess of its expectable earning power, additional securities of that character must be sold, if sold at all, at prices which are prohibitive taking into consideration the amount of cash which would have to be raised and the plant additions to be financed. Reorganizations should remove rather than perpetuate the cause of bankruptcy, and should not be a means of misleading old and new investors. That desired effect can result only if the new securities are so related in character and total amount to the ability of the reorganized company to pay interest and dividends that such securities possess an actual value and not merely one that is speculative.

As stated in our report of January 10, 1940, in this proceeding, the statement by our Bureau of Valuation of certain elements of value as of December 31, 1935, of the properties of the Missouri Pacific system, excluding the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company which will not be included in this reorganization and four small wholly owned companies not covered by the Bureau's report, shows the following totals: Original cost, except land, $569,413,195; cost of reproduction new $629,380,505; cost of reproduction less depreciation $433,772,838; value of land and rights $50,966,605; and working capital $8,478,200. If to cost of reproduction less depreciation there be added the value of land and rights and working capital, the total is $493,217,643 and if there also be added, as stated in the former report, the value as estimated by the debtors of the 4 small companies omitted by the Bureau, the total is $496,432,504.

This compares with a total value of the physical properties, as of December 31, 1934, as estimated by the debtors, of $585,432,224 and an estimate as of 1936 by a witness for the trustee under the International's adjustment mortgage of $500,412,617.

We further stated in the former report the book value as $60,150,487 of investments as of December 31, 1934, which would be owned by the new company in affiliated companies. There was also $1,643,187 of other investments and about $100,000 held in sinking funds and as deposits held by mortgage trustees in lieu of mortgaged property sold. If these amounts are added to the above total of $496,432,504, the resulting total will be $558,326,178, compared with the debtors' estimate of the total investment of the new company as of December 31, 1934 of $675,552,073.

In our former report we determined a permissible maximum system capitalization of about $560,000,000 as of January 1, 1940. Since that date, according to exhibits filed at the further hearing, there has been an increase in the system investment in road and equipment of nearly $26,000,000 and an increase in accrued depreciation of about $15,000,000, indicating a net increase in investment in road and equipment of about $11,000,000. The investment of the system in affiliated companies as stated by the debtors has, during the same period, increased by about $4,600,000. Adding these sums of $11,000,000 and $4,600,000 to the total given above of $558,326,178 produces $573,926,178. It does not necessarily follow, however, and the record does not show, that greater future earnings will result from this net increase in investment accounts.

The system's earnings available for payment of interest and dividends have shown large increases in the last few years. As reported by the debtors, they were $10,097,423 in 1939; $13,495,717 in 1940; $30,607,244 in 1941; $66,205,617 in 1942; but in 1943, the total of separate earnings of the three groups of the system decreased to $47,614,534.[5]

[5] The 1943 earnings are as reported in the court record which does not show the system earnings, which, however, are approximately the same as the total of the group earnings.

If the average annual system earnings available for payment of interest and dividends for the last 8 years, 1936-1943, inclusive, amounting to $25,656,332, are capitalized at 5 percent the result is $513,126,640 and at 4 percent $641,408,300.

A capitalization at 5 percent of the average annual earnings available for fixed charges of $21,837,675[6] for the 22-year period, 1921-1942, inclusive, produces $436,753,500 and at 4 percent, $545,941,875. The trustee's forecast of system earnings for a normal year is $22,059,052, which, if capitalized at 5 percent, produces $441,181,040 and at 4 percent $551,476,300. The trustee's earnings forecast for the system for a normal year is based on estimated total railway operating revenues of $129,140,357. These revenues are about the average of the total railway operating revenues of $113,083,970 realized by the system in 1940 and $144,049,600 in 1941.

Uncertainty must exist in any attempt to predict earnings for the indefinite future. The development of competitive means of transportation, the possibility of recurring droughts in the agricultural territory served, the effect of future tax legislation, the extent to which any possible inflation might directly affect the debtors' operating expenses and its effect upon business in general, the possibility of further increases in railroad wages, the possible reinstatement of rate increases granted under Ex Parte 148 and possible future rate increases, are all matters which make predictions of future earnings uncertain.

[6] Includes income of Beaumont, Sour Lake & Western Ry. Co., International-Great Northern R. Co., Missouri Pacific R. Co., New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co., St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Ry. Co., and San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf R. Co., without the elimination of intercompany items and does not include income of the other minor operating companies which are included in the Missouri Pacific reorganization proceedings.

It is true that the record of the further hearing contains well reasoned testimony of eminent economists that, in their opinion, the level of railroad revenues in general and the Missouri Pacific's share of such revenues will be substantially greater for a considerable period after the termination of the war than prior thereto. The record also contains an imposing recital of many new industries which have been located on the debtors' lines. However, the testimony of the debtors' general freight traffic manager at the court hearing in July, 1943, shows how intimately most of the new developments are associated with the war effort. For example, of the 263 new industries established since January, 1940, directly on the lines of the Missouri Pacific, the witness described 27 as camp schools, air schools and air fields, 2 as miscellaneous government plants, 31 as war project plants, 9 as plants expanded by war work and 194 as commercial industries, the great majority of which were established to serve or augment war plants located on the line as, for instance, 11 storage yards for construction equipment, gravel pits and store yards, all of which ceased operating when construction of war plants was completed.

It is also reasonable to assume that other new industries on the debtors' lines, which might be convertible to other than war purposes, will, in a peacetime economy, be subject to the severest competition with similar new industries in other sections of the country, which also have been established or expanded during the war emergency.

The economists testifying at the further hearing emphasized the volume of traffic obtainable by the debtors after the war. It does not necessarily follow that any increases in gross revenues, over the level existing immediately prior to the war, will produce corresponding increases in net railway operating income. By way of illustration, an analysis of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and Missouri Pacific system earnings available for payment of interest for the years 1940 and 1941 recomputed in accordance with the method used by our Bureau of Transport Economics and Statistics in its Monthly Comment on Transportation Statistics issued on May 5, 1944, upon the basis of present rate and cost levels, produces interesting results. The changed conditions reflected are (1) a passenger fare increase of 10 percent, (2) straight-time wage rate increase of 31.7 percent, (3) payroll taxes increased by wage increase, (4) a weighted average increase in unit fuel costs of 45 percent, (5) an increase in material prices other than fuel of 19.74 percent and (6) depreciation accounting for roadway property instituted January 1, 1943.

The results shown are as follows:

The Missouri Pacific Railroad Company in 1940, instead of realizing $11,299,359 of income available for fixed charges before income taxes as reported by that debtor's trustee would have incurred a deficit before such fixed charges of $7,169,965. In 1941, the reported income available for fixed charges of $26,055,271 would have been reduced to $10,135,579.

Similarly, the Missouri Pacific system, instead of realizing $13,496,000 of income available for fixed charges before income taxes in 1940, as reported by the debtors' trustee would have incurred a deficit of $10,596,000 and in 1941 the reported income of $81,807,000 available for fixed charges before income taxes would have been reduced to $10,893,000. Income taxes paid by the system in 1941 amounted to $1,000,000 while under the present normal and surtax rates, the tax (40 percent) on the recomputed smaller net income would have amounted to $1,441,306.

The system figures are estimated on a basis of certain percentages obtained from recomputations for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, since some of the smaller roads in the system do not make monthly reports and also because some of the figures in the reports of the individual class I railroads of the system are distorted by their system relations. The recomputations do not take into consideration any greater economy of operations which might be possible at present as compared with the years 1940 and 1941 but they are significant as indicating the higher cost of operations now prevailing. The system recomputation indicates that 1941 system operations would have yielded more than the fixed interest provided for in the plan as now modified, but much less than both fixed and contingent charges. These recomputations of income available for fixed charges for 1940 and 1941 are particularly significant in view of the fact that the system's average total railway operating revenues for those 2 years were about the same as such revenues for a normal year as estimated by the trustee of the debtors.

In the light of the foregoing facts and principles, and upon consideration of the entire record, including consideration of the current increased earnings, and the fact that the capitalization fixed reflects the investments of the debtors in securities at their book value which doubtless exceeds their fair valuation, it is our opinion and we find that the capitalization of $560,000,000 for the Missouri Pacific system and the amounts above stated for each of the three groups comprising the system are the maxima which are warranted.

Capital structure.—We have hereinabove indicated the differences between the form of capital structure proposed by the compromise plan and that of the Commission plan. The decrease of about $4,000,000 in the former plan in the amount of 10-year collateral-trust notes to be outstanding, is more than offset by an increase of about $8,000,000 in fixed-interest first-mortgage bonds and, in a consideration of the amount of total indebtedness, by a further increase of about $38,500,000 in contingent-interest debt, due principally to the transference to general-mortgage bonds of that additional portion of the total permissible capitalization, represented in the Commission plan by preferred stock.

The first and refunding committee contends that this increase in contingent-interest debt is justified because of (1) the inclusion of the new debt-retirement provision already described, (2) the creation of a general sinking fund for the new first-mortgage fixed-interest bonds not provided for by the Commission plan, and (3) the sinking fund for retirement of the new general-mortgage bonds, provided for in both plans. The committee argues that the operation of these provisions would seem to assure a retirement before maturity of a far greater amount than $38,500,000 of indebtedness, the rate of retirement under the compromise plan being substantially in excess of that in the Commission plan.

The committee further urges that the burden of the greatly increased rate of income taxation which will probably continue for at least a number of years and which was not foreseeable at the time the Commission plan was issued, will be partly alleviated by the additional amount of contingent-interest debt. The committee maintains that this is a proper matter for us to take into consideration, particularly since railroads emerging from reorganization will be subjected to relatively greater tax burden than roads which have not had their capitalizations so drastically changed.

It is impossible to estimate the amount of indebtedness which will be retired before maturity through operation of the proposed retirement fund, the amounts of the annual payments being dependent upon the amount of net income earned in the future by the reorganized company and the amount thereof declared as dividends on the new common stock. It is obvious that during the last 3 years the payments might have been substantial. Earnings available for payment of interest in any year equal to the trustee's estimate of $22,059,052 for a normal year would provide nearly $6,200,000 available for payment of the dividend of about $2,886,000 on the new preferred stock and after payment of that dividend, would leave about $3,314,000 available for a $1,104,700 appropriation to the retirement fund and about $2.42 per share for dividends on the 911,840 shares of no-par class-A common stock. On the present scale of earnings, payments into the retirement fund might be substantially greater. The annual one-quarter of 1 percent (sinking-fund provision for new first-mortgage bonds) would amount to $417,023, and the sinking-fund payments on the general mortgage bonds to $795,876.

As of the effective date, total indebtedness of the reorganized company under the compromise plan would amount to about 63 percent of total capitalization compared to about 55 percent under the Commission plan. Total annual fixed and contingent charges would be about $15,870,000 compared to about $13,700,000 under the Commission plan, an increase of approximately $2,170,000. The amounts of such annual charges under both plans may be compared with the trustee's estimate of normal year income available for payment of interest of $22,059,052 and his estimate of such income for 1944 of $43,429,000.

It is our opinion that a capital structure involving an unduly large amount of indebtedness of fixed maturity even though in large part bearing contingent interest, lessens the opportunity for future financing on a favorable basis. However, in view of existing conditions and the reasonably favorable prospects of sufficient coverage in the future of the full interest requirements under the compromise plan and of retirement of principal, we conclude and find that, as qualified below, the forms of indebtedness included in the revised capital structure provided for by the compromise plan should be approved. We are making this finding because we are satisfied that sufficient of the new general-mortgage bonds will be available at the total necessary price, to supply creditors entitled under the compromise plan to receive, and electing to take, such bonds in part satisfaction of their claims.

We also approve the issue of preferred and common stocks in the amounts proposed and the division of the common stock into two classes as a means of adequately affording recognition to the priorities of the claimants. Certain provisions of the compromise plan affecting these issues of common stock and in respect of the issuance of stock purchase warrants will be later discussed.

Mortgage provisions.—The new first-mortgage bonds of the compromise plan to be issued in the reorganization are to be of three series with options offered, as hereinabove stated, to certain of the senior creditors to accept one or another of the series. The exact amounts of each series to be outstanding or whether bonds of each of the three series will be outstanding is therefore impossible to determine at this time but the total of all first-mortgage bonds will be approximately as set forth in appendix A. The mortgage provisions affecting these first-mortgage bonds differ from the provisions of the Commission plan in certain respects already stated. The series-A bonds will have a life of only 15 years and an interest rate of 3½ percent compared with the 25-year maturity and 3¾ percent interest rate of the series-A first-mortgage bonds of the Commission plan and of the optionally offered series-B bonds of the compromise plan. In view of the small amount of the issue, the new provision for a general sinking fund for retirement of first-mortgage bonds (the proceeds first to be applied to retirement of the 10-year collateral-trust notes secured by first-mortgage bonds), the smaller amount of the 10-year collateral trust notes to be outstanding, and the earnings prospect of the system, it is our opinion that the reorganized company should not experience difficulty in meeting this maturity.

The provisions of the compromise plan as to the first-mortgage sinking fund should be amended, however, to provide that bonds (or collateral-trust notes) purchased or redeemed out of the sinking fund, instead of being cancelled as provided in the plan, shall, for the purpose of the sinking fund, be retained in the sinking fund and interest paid thereon to the same extent as if the bonds were outstanding, such payments of interest into the sinking fund on such bonds to be additional to the regular sinking-fund payments. This amendment will require a change in the provision of the compromise plan relating to determination of available net income.

In view of the uncertainty at this time as to the needs of the reorganized company for emergency financing during the post-war period and thereafter, the provision in the compromise plan for the issuance of emergency bonds, as hereinabove described, seems to us prudent and should be approved.

In our third supplemental report in Chicago, M. St. P. & P. R. Co. Reorganization (April 10, 1944), ... I. C. C. ..., we stated our views as to the proper provisions of a so-called escape clause to be included in the new mortgages. In conformity with our conclusions stated in that report and for the reasons therein given, we find that the provisions to be included in the first mortgage in the present case should be as follows:

> The new first mortgage shall contain a provision, in such form and substance as may be determined by the reorganization managers with the approval of the court, that the mortgage may at any time, with the approval of the Commission or such other regulatory body as may at the time have jurisdiction in the premises, be modified by the concurrent action of the reorganized company and of the holders of not less than 75 percent in principal amount of all bonds of the mortgage outstanding at the time of such vote so as to postpone the time or times of payment of any fixed interest or accumulations of contingent interest, either before or after the interest is due, or the principal of any or all series of bonds of the mortgage, either before or after maturity, whether bearing fixed or contingent interest which at such time may be outstanding, provided that the payment of the principal of the bonds may not be postponed for a longer period than 20 years from the maturity date designated in the bonds and that the maturity of interest on the bonds may not be postponed for a longer period than 5 years but in no event beyond the maturity date of the principal of the bonds designated in the bonds unless such maturity be postponed, in which event the maturity of interest on the bonds may not be postponed beyond the extended maturity date of the principal.

We have considered the other different or additional provisions, hereinbefore described, contained in the new first mortgage of the compromise plan as compared with the provisions of the first mortgage of the Commission plan and find that they are reaonable and should be approved.

The provisions relating to the new 10-year collateral-trust notes of the compromise plan differ from those of the Commission plan in only one important respect. The collateral security under the compromise plan would consist of 125 percent of new first-mortgage bonds, series C, compared to 110 percent of series-B first-mortgage bonds as specified in the Commission plan. Although series-C bonds would be outstanding under the compromise plan in a total principal amount of $135,337,000 while under the Commission plan only about $127,000,000 of series-B first-mortgage bonds would be issued, we believe that some additional security is afforded by the greater amount of pledged first-mortgage bonds and that it should increase the likelihood of the notes selling at par without possible recourse to an increase in interest rate in order to achieve that necessary end and it is approved. The additional security justifies, we believe, the provision in the compromise plan that the notes shall be redeemable without the premium provided for in the Commission plan. We also approve inclusion in the plan of the express provision that all collateral-trust notes released from the lien of the note indenture shall be canceled, as well as the underwriting provision hereinabove described.

We have hereinbefore compared the general-mortgage provisions of the compromise plan with those of the Commission plan. As stated, the series-A 4½-percent bonds of the compromise plan correspond to a combination of about 70 percent of the series-A 4-percent bonds and all of the series-B 4½-percent bonds of the Commission plan, while the series-C bonds of the compromise plan are, more or less, substituted for the prior preferred stock of the Commission plan. In the latter plan, the series-A 4-percent issue comprises only about 19 percent of the total issue of general-mortgage bonds and the increase in interest charges on the series-A bonds of the compromise plan as compared with the total of the A and B bonds of the Commission plan amounts to only $114,325 a year. In view of the fact that the increase in interest rate is small and is one of the factors agreed to by the negotiators in reaching their agreement upon the terms of the compromise plan, we conclude that it should have our approval. We also approve the decrease from 20 percent to 13½ percent in the limit of accumulations of interest on general-mortgage bonds since the lower limit conforms to similar provisions which we have approved recently in other plans of reorganization. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. Reorganization (January 3, 1944), ... I. C. C. ..., Chicago, M. St. P. & P. R. Co. Reorganization (December 6, 1943), 254 I. C. C. ..., Chicago, I. & L. Ry. Co. Reorganization (January 3, 1944), 254 I. C. C. ...

Unlike the Commission plan the compromise plan contains no provision for conversion of general-mortgage bonds into other securities. In view of the establishment of the retirement fund for retirement of these bonds, we believe the omission of this feature of the Commission plan is justified. There should be included in the general mortgage an escape clause similar to that which we have approved for the new first mortgage. We approve the other changes, which we have hereinbefore described, in the terms of the compromise plan relating to the new general-mortgage bonds, including the proposed establishment of separate sinking funds for the A and B bonds instead of the one sinking fund as in the Commission plan. In the compromise plan the A bonds to a great extent may be considered as embracing both the A and B bonds of the Commission plan.

We find that the reduction in the amount of the annual payments into the capital expenditures fund from 3 percent to 2½ percent of total railway operating revenues is appropriate in view of the amount of such expenditures made since 1935 when the 3-percent rate provided for by the Commission plan was suggested. The lower rate also is in conformity with provisions which we have approved in other plans of reorganization in which the rate is 2½ percent or less. Denver & R. G. W. R. Co. Reorganization, 254 I. C. C. 349; Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co. Reorganization, 252 I. C. C. 615; Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. Reorganization, supra. As proposed by the compromise plan and as approved in our former plan, the capital expenditures fund would be applied to provide for, or to reimburse the treasury of the new company for all or any part of the gross charges to the investment account (as defined under this Commission's Classification of Income, Profit and Loss, and General Balance Sheet Accounts for Steam Roads, Accounts No. 701, Investment in Road Equipment, 702, Improvement on Leased Railway Property, and 705, Miscellaneous Physical Property) of the new company not otherwise financed, or not otherwise provided for. It is our view and we find that the plan should specify that the fund should be applied only to the net charges to investment account, in order that it will be available only for improvements to the property.

With respect to the provisions for ascertainment of available net income we have already referred to a modification which should be made to reflect our finding that new first-mortgage bonds (or collateral-trust notes) purchased or redeemed out of the sinking fund should be kept alive and interest paid thereon, such interest payments to add to the accretions to the sinking fund. We also find that the provisions for disposition of net income, should be amended to require that payment into any special sinking funds to be established in respect of first-mortgage bonds issued for acquisition of equipment should have precedence over any other sinking funds established for any first-mortgage bonds, except for the retirement of emergency bonds, which latter sinking fund should have precedence over equipment sinking funds. It is also our opinion and we find that in connection with the statement in the compromise plan that available net income is to be determined for each calendar year as the accounts shall be stated on the books of the reorganized company, without adjustments, an exception, additional to those described in the plan, should be made to the effect that in computing such available net income no amounts shall be deducted for retirements of non-depreciable property.

With these three modifications, we find that the provisions for both ascertainment and disposition of available net income are fair and equitable and they are approved.

Capital-stock provisions.—We have considered all the terms of the plan affecting the issuance of preferred and common stocks and find that the priority of each class of stock is adequately protected and, exclusive of the provisions for a voting trust, escrow arrangement, and the issuance of stock purchase warrants, which subjects will be hereinafter separately discussed, they are approved.

Cash distributions prior to consummation of the plan and effective date.—The previously described provision of the compromise plan for cash distributions to creditors prior to consummation of the plan upon order of the court, appear adequately to preserve the effect of the other provisions of the plan in the event of such distributions and in case of future abnormal earnings may prevent the accumulation in the hands of the debtor's trustee of unnecessary excess cash, a past condition which in part resulted in the reference back to us of the Commission plan.

The provision of the plan, also previously described, for a change in the effective date from that otherwise established as of January 1, 1943, may result in a decrease in indebtedness of the reorganized company with a corresponding increase in common stock at an assigned value of $100 per share. While this provision may also result in a greater measure of control of the company being obtained by junior creditors through an increase in their holdings of the new common stock the senior creditors will to the same extent receive payment in full of their claims. Total capitalization of the reorganized company, with no-par common stock assigned a value of $100 per share, will remain the same. This provision conforms to the principles with respect to selection of an effective date which we stated in our fifth supplemental report in New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. Reorganization, (February 8, 1944), 254 I. C. C.——.

The fixing of the basic effective date as January 1, 1943, appears to be one of the results of the negotiations leading to the agreement upon the compromise plan. The junior creditors do not desire a later date since they expect to benefit in the form of net income earned in 1943 and expected to be earned in 1944, applicable to return on the new common stock which they would receive in the reorganization. The probable date of consummation of a plan in this proceeding depends upon such a variety of factors that it can not be even approximately ascertained at this time. In our opinion, the date decided upon in the compromise plan, coupled with the provisions for subsequent change and interim cash disbursements should be approved.

We approve all of the provisions of the compromise plan relating to cash distributions and effective date, except that the provision as to the rate of interest on the Finance Corporation and bank debts, included in the provisions relating to the effective date, should be modified to provide that interest on these debts should be paid at the rate of 4 percent per annum for reasons hereinafter stated.

Allocations of cash and new securities.—The compromise plan contemplates as an accomplished fact, the payment in full in cash prior to January 1, 1944, of the principal and interest on the five underlying mortgages and 30 percent of the principal amount of all outstanding River & Gulf Divisions bonds together with interest on such 30 percent of principal, all as directed by the court's order hereinbefore referred to. The interim payments of interest on the Missouri Pacific first and refunding bonds, New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds and International first-mortgage bonds, also ordered by the court would, under the terms of the compromise plan and consonant with the terms of the court's order, be paid out of the optional cash payments offered under the compromise plan to such bondholders. All equipment obligations of the debtors and of their trustee outstanding upon consummation of the plan would remain undisturbed and be assumed by the reorganized company.

Holders of the underlying Missouri Pacific River and Gulf bonds, which, as we stated in our former report, are an underlying lien on lines of railroad of vital importance to the system and the interest on which has been fully covered even during the depression years, would receive per $1,000 bond for their remaining 70 percent of principal and unpaid interest thereon to the effective date of the plan, the amount of the interest in cash, $300, principal amount, of new 10-year collateral-trust notes, being the entire issue thereof, and, at the election of each holder, either $400, principal amount, of new first-mortgage 4-percent 50-year bonds, series C, or $400, principal amount, of new first-mortgage 3½ percent 15-year bonds, series A, provided, however, that if the Finance Corporation should elect, under the proposed treatment of that claim as hereinafter described, to receive new series-A first-mortgage bonds, then the holders of the River and Gulf bonds could elect to receive either the series-C first-mortgage bonds or the same principal amount ($400), of series-B first-mortgage bonds.

The collateral-trust notes offered to these bondholders would bear interest at 3½ percent or at such other rate as would enable them in the opinion of the reorganization managers to sell at par. They would be amply secured and the best efforts of the reorganization managers would be used to arrange for their underwriting. In view of these factors we consider these notes to be the practical equivalent of cash if, indeed, the cash is not immediately available to the River and Gulf bondholders through operation of the underwriting provision. As to the remaining 40 percent of their claim, these bondholders would receive an equal principal amount of bonds of the reorganized company having a first lien on 9,556 miles of railroad with a first-mortgage debt per mile of $17,456[7] as compared with a present first lien on 781 miles with a first-mortgage debt per mile of $30,929, after taking into consideration the recent payment in cash of 30 percent of the principal amount of the bonds previously outstanding. A sinking fund is provided for retirement of the new system first-mortgage bonds. The only party to the proceeding representing these bondholders, viz., the protective committee, has agreed to accept this treatment, and we find that it is fair and equitable, represents the full equivalent of the present security held, and maintains the full priority to which these bondholders are entitled.

The first and refunding bondholders would receive under the compromise plan, dependent upon the series held, for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest to January 1, 1943, from $398 to $404 principal amount of new series-C first-mortgage bonds, from $378 to $384 of series-A general-mortgage bonds, from $149 to $152 of series-B general-mortgage bonds, from $221 to $224 of preferred stock and from 2.74 to 2.79 shares of class-A no-par common stock. The exact amounts of each class of new security receivable by each series are shown in detail in appendix B.

The more favorable treatment accorded these bondholders than under the Commission plan is partly because of the enhancement in lien position of the bonds and of the River and Gulf bonds and general-mortgage bonds, resulting from the payment of the five underlying mortgages and 30 percent of the principal of the River and Gulf bonds, and partly the result of bargaining in the negotiation of the plan. The new class-A common stock which the Missouri Pacific first and refunding bondholders would receive at $88.98 per share in satisfaction of a part of their claim is participated in by the junior Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bondholders and the Missouri Pacific serial 5¼-percent bondholders. The general-mortgage bondholders, however, would receive the stock on a much less favorable basis. They would take the stock at $100 per share, if computed on the total amount of their claim, and the serial bondholders, who are secured collaterally by New Orleans capital stock, would receive only such amount of the new class-A common stock as the New Orleans stockholders are found in the plan to be entitled to receive, plus an additional amount in recognition of the control element of the pledged 80 percent of New Orleans stock, the remainder of the claim of the serial 5¼-percent bondholders not so satisfied being treated in the same manner as the claims of other unsecured creditors of the Missouri Pacific.

If the new no-par common stock which the holders of first and refunding bonds, series A, would receive is assigned for purposes of computation a value of $100 per share, the total principal amount of all of the new securities to be received by such bondholders, amounts to $1,426 per $1,000 bond compared to a total claim, both principal and interest, of $1,396. The new securities so receivable would entitle the holder of each outstanding $1,000 bond annually to $16 of fixed interest, $24.60 of contingent interest and $11.10 of dividends on preferred stock, a total annual yield of $51.70 equal to 3.7 percent on $1,396. He would receive additionally whatever dividend might be earned and paid on the 2.74 shares of new class-A common stock. The new mortgage securities receivable would be secured by liens on the entire system instead of only a part thereof, would have the benefit of sinking funds and a debt-retirement fund, the maturity dates would in general compare favorably with those of the present bonds, and the new securities would be part of a greatly reduced and, in our opinion, conservative system capitalization. The class-A common stock receivable, if universally accepted in lieu of the compromise cash offer, would give present first and refunding bondholders, together with their new preferred stock, about 24 percent of the voting power of the reorganized company and the class-A common stock should, we believe, in years of reasonable prosperity yield some return. In our opinion, the cash and new securities allotted the first and refunding bondholders represent the equitable equivalent of the rights surrendered by such bondholders and adequately compensate them for any loss of seniority resulting from the allotment.

The alternative offer of cash for class-A common stock in compromise of a portion of that part of the claim of the first and refunding bondholders representing their interest, conforms to a basic agreement reached during the negotiations that the same proportion of claim retired, in relation to amount of cash offered would apply to the Missouri Pacific first and refunding bonds and to the International first-mortgage bonds. The New Orleans first-mortgage and income bondholders would receive a larger proportional amount of cash in compromise of a part of their interest than would the senior creditors of the other two groups since the New Orleans proportionately had a greater amount of excess cash in its treasury available for use in compromising interest claims of senior creditors. Having approved the general principle of these compromise offers of cash, we see no reason to disturb this allocation in respect of the first and refunding bonds, which is the result of an agreement by the negotiators and appears to have been reached upon a fair and equitable basis. No objections have been offered to the proposed treatment to be accorded the first and refunding mortgage bondholders other than such as may be assumed from the representations of parties objecting to the compromise plan in its entirety.

The proposed treatment of the other two general first-mortgage bond issues of the system, viz., the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds and the International first mortgage, is also considerably improved over that afforded by the Commission plan.

During the negotiations representatives of holders of the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds demanded that these bondholders receive a greater amount of new first-mortgage bonds than allotted under the Commission plan. Also, representatives of the International first-mortgage bondholders sought some participation in that issue. In our former report we found that the International's record of earnings as of the date of the plan therein approved did not warrant an allocation of new system first-mortgage bonds to outstanding first-mortgage bondholders of the International. We have hereinbefore reviewed the more recent earnings of the International. While we consider these earnings abnormal, apparently they have increased recently in a greater degree proportionally than the earnings of the other two groups of the system. Although, in our opinion, such future relative prosperity of the International is not necessarily assured, we believe that such earnings are a factor, which, together with the accumulation of cash in the International treasury, warrants a tender of some of the new first-mortgage bonds to this debtor's senior creditors.

Holders of New Orleans first-mortgage and the equally secured and now fixed-interest-bearing income bonds of that debtor would receive, dependent upon the series of bonds held, for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, from $551 to $640, principal amount, of new first-mortgage series-C bonds, from $392 to $455, principal amount of general-mortgage series-A bonds, and from $120 to $139, principal amount, of general-mortgage series-B bonds, the total principal amounts of the new securities receivable, equaling, in the case of each series of first-mortgage bonds and in the case of the income bonds, the total of the claims for both principal and unpaid interest. There is no question of priorities of mortgage creditors in the case of the New Orleans properties.

Taking the outstanding series-A 5½-percent first-mortgage bonds as an example, the holder of each $1,000 bond, on which the unpaid interest is $234, would be entitled annually to $25.60 of fixed interest and $27.42 of contingent interest, a total of $53.02, which is equal to 4.3 percent on $1,234. Substantially the same reasons which we gave for approving the treatment of the Missouri Pacific first and refunding bondholders apply to the proposed allotments to the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bondholders, particularly as to the benefit which will be derived by obtaining liens on a greater mileage comprising the entire system and the benefit of the sinking and retirement funds which will be applicable to the new securities to be received in the reorganization. It is our opinion that the new reorganization securities which these New Orleans bondholders would receive represent the equitable equivalent of the rights which they would surrender and compensate them for any loss of seniority resulting from the allotment.

As we have stated, the optional alternative offer to these New Orleans bondholders of excess cash in compromise of interest claims is higher proportionally than the compromise cash offers to the Missouri Pacific first and refunding bondholders and International first-mortgage bondholders in relation to the amounts of their interest claims but is justified by the relatively greater amount of excess cash in the New Orleans treasury compared with the amount of unpaid interest on the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds. We approve the terms of this compromise cash offer.

Holders of International first-mortgage bonds would receive, dependent upon the series held, for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, from $116 to $123, principal amount, of new first-mortgage series-C bonds, from $512 to $542, principal amount, of general-mortgage series-A bonds, from $145 to $153, principal amount, of general-mortgage series-B bonds, from $231 to $244, par value, of preferred stock and from 4.73 to 5.03 shares of no-par class-A common stock. Assigning the new common stock a value of $100 a share, the total principal amounts of new securities offered these first-mortgage creditors exceeds by over $50 per $1,000 bond the amount of their claims, including principal and unpaid interest. While holders of the outstanding junior International adjustment bonds would, under the plan, participate in the issue of the new class-A common stock, which is the most junior class of new security offered the International first-mortgage bondholders, the junior interest would receive only 9.5 shares of such stock for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon of $735. The other new securities proposed to be given the adjustment-mortgage bondholders consist of new class-B common stock and warrants to purchase shares of that stock at $100 per share.

Taking the series-A 6-percent International first-mortgage bonds as an example, (the treatment of each series being equivalent but the exact amounts differing because of the varying interest rates applicable to the different series), the reorganization securities receivable by the holder of each $1,000 bond on which unpaid interest amounts to $510, would entitle him annually to $4.92 of fixed interest, $32.04 of contingent interest and $12.20 of preferred-stock dividends, the total of $49.16 being equal to approximately 3.26 percent on $1,510. In addition such holder would be entitled to receive whatever dividend might be earned and declared on 5.03 shares of new class-A common stock.

The optional alternative offer of excess cash in lieu of the new class-A common stock proposed to be given the International first-mortgage bondholders in satisfaction of a part of their claim is the same proportionally as that offered the Missouri Pacific first and refunding bondholders, appears to be justified by the amount of the cash accumulation in the International's treasury and, for the same reasons stated above in connection with our discussion of the cash offered the first and refunding bondholders, is approved.

The trustee under the International first mortgage takes the position that it will not oppose the compromise plan unless directed to do so by the bondholders, that the treatment offered is the minimum to which the bondholders are entitled, but that it is to their interest to accept the plan. However, various objections to the entire plan and to the specific treatment proposed thereunder for the International first-mortgage bondholders are advanced by a protective committee representing holders of about $3,000,000, principal amount, of these bonds. Our decisions upon many of these objections to the plan as a whole already have been stated in our discussion hereinbefore of various terms of the plan or will be disposed of in our later discussions of other terms of the plan.

This protective committee considers it established by the evidence that the International would contribute about 10 percent of the physical property and mileage used in the operation of the proposed system and about 8½ percent of the earnings therefrom, whether based on current conditions and estimates or upon averages going back over periods of 10 or more years. The committee urges that the allocation of new system securities should be substantially on a basis of 8½ percent of each issue of first-mortgage fixed-interest bonds and of the first series of general-mortgage income bonds and on a basis of 10 percent of any subordinate issue of general-mortgage bonds and 10 percent of all or of each series of the preferred stock of $100 par value. If, in referring to the earnings of the International, the committee means earnings available for payment of interest, the record of such earnings, which we have reviewed hereinbefore and in our previous report and which we consider significant, does not bear out the committee's contention.

The International first-mortgage bondholders would surrender their first lien on 1,100 miles of railroad but would receive in exchange, for about 65 percent of the principal of their claim, first and second liens on the entire system lines comprising about 9,556 miles and for the remainder of their claim, shares of preferred and common stock which would give them a substantial voting interest in the new corporation and should, in years of fair earnings, supplement the return which they will receive on their investment. In view of the International's record of earnings in the past 10 years, which we have heretofore reviewed, we find that this allocation of new securities represents the equivalent of all of the rights which they would surrender, fully compensating them for the surrender of their first lien upon the relatively small mileage of the International now securing the full amount of their claim, and for surrender of their other senior rights.

Regarding the treatment of the junior claims of the system, namely, the Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bonds, serial 5¼ percent bonds, and convertible bonds, the New Orleans capital stock, and the International adjustment bonds, the following formulas were used by the negotiators of the compromise plan.

The Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bondholders, being senior to the holders of the convertible bonds of that debtor, would receive the amount of their entire claim for both principal and interest in new class-A common stock at $100 per share, thus receiving 13.93 shares per $1,000 bond. The total number of shares so allotted the general-mortgage bondholders under the compromise plan compared with the number of shares of the senior class of common stock allotted under the Commission plan to these same bondholders is in the ratio of approximately 186 to 100.

This ratio was then applied to the number of shares of common stock allotted in the Commission plan to the International adjustment bonds, to the New Orleans capital stock and, after being increased as in the Commission plan to represent the control value of the New Orleans pledged stock, to the Missouri Pacific serial 5¼-percent bonds which are secured by New Orleans stock. The application of this ratio extends only to a determination of the amounts of class-A common stock offered to holders of each of those claims. The proponents of the compromise plan contend that this class-A common stock corresponds generally with the common stock of the Commission plan.

Holders of the New Orleans capital stock, the Missouri Pacific serial 5¼-percent bonds and the International adjustment bonds are additionally allotted some of the new class-B common stock, while holders of the Missouri Pacific unsecured convertible bonds are allotted only class-B common stock. Holders of unsecured claims against the International would receive only class-B common stock purchase warrants. Holders of unsecured claims against the New Orleans would receive new class-A common stock in an amount equal at $100 a share to the entire amount of their claims.

The Missouri Pacific unsecured creditors in return for surrendering any right to receive class-A common stock by reason of their claim to the free assets, which have been hereinbefore analyzed, had their treatment materially improved over that accorded them under the Commission plan, particularly in respect of the number of shares of common stock allocated to them. However, the class-B common stock which they will receive, is distinctly junior to the class A as to dividends and priority in liquidation, but has equal voting rights. This latter feature results in the allotment to the convertible bondholders under the compromise plan of about 20 percent of total voting power compared with only about 5 percent under the Commission plan.

The amount of the new class-B common stock which they would receive at an assigned value of $100 per share equals only the principal amount of their claim, or about 64 percent of their total claim. This 36 percent reduction in satisfaction of total claim was likewise applied in the compromise plan to the amounts of series-B common stock which the other junior claimants receiving any of the junior stock (viz, the Missouri Pacific serial 5¼-percent bondholders, as to the unsecured part of their claim, the International adjustment bondholders, and the New Orleans stockholders) would otherwise receive if allotted amounts at an assigned value of $100 a share equal to the amounts of their entire claims. The differences between such entire amounts and the total amounts of common stock receivable are represented by offers of warrants to purchase class-B common stock at $100 per share. All these negotiations resulted in the allocations of new stock to junior creditors of the Missouri Pacific and International and to the New Orleans stockholders as shown in appendixes A and B.

Although shares of new class-A common stock are allotted to Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bondholders in an amount at $100 per share equaling their claim and are also allotted to Missouri Pacific serial 5¼ percent bondholders, who have no mortgage lien upon railroad tracks or roadbed, the latter would receive only such amount as they are entitled to by virtue of their collateral security, consisting of New Orleans capital stock. Considering the amount of indebtedness of the New Orleans and the application of surplus cash in the New Orleans treasury to the retirement of part of this indebtedness, it is our opinion that holders of the capital stock are entitled to receive some of the class-A common stock.

Largely in connection with the claims of the holders of the serial 5¼ percent bonds and New Orleans stock, counsel for certain individuals owning these securities attempted at the hearing to prove various alleged acts of malfeasance by directors of the Missouri Pacific during a period extending from about the year 1926 to 1932, prior to the filing of the debtor's petitions in bankruptcy. Counsel attempted to prove these acts by cross-examination of Wyer, who appeared as the principal witness for the proponents of the compromise plan. Wyer is not now an officer or employe of any of the debtors, but formerly held the position of secretary-treasurer of the Missouri Pacific. The matters which were the subject of counsel's cross-examination of Wyer had not been a subject of direct examination. Counsel's queries were directed in large part to the question of whether Alleghany Corporation, which counsel contends controlled the Missouri Pacific during the above period, acting through the board of directors of the Missouri Pacific caused that company improperly to advance large sums of money to the New Orleans to enable the latter to pay unearned dividends on its capital stock. Counsel alleges that the major part of these dividends was received by the Missouri Pacific, which in turn improperly paid dividends on its own stock for the benefit of Alleghany Corporation.

The notes representing the unpaid advances by Missouri Pacific to the New Orleans are secured by the pledge of all of the International capital stock except directors' qualifying shares. The notes are pledged with the Finance Corporation as part security for its loans to the Missouri Pacific and the amount owing on the notes plus accrued unpaid interest is now about $16,000,000. The dividends on the New Orleans capital stock allegedly improperly paid by the New Orleans to the Missouri Pacific amount to about $4,000,000.

The parties holding the Missouri Pacific secured serial 5¼-percent bonds and New Orleans stock, who are represented by this counsel, own $80,000, principal amount, of the bonds and 39 shares of the New Orleans stock. They purchased the bonds as a speculation in the latter part of 1942 and early in 1943 at a price of about 10, and acquired the stock in the last quarter of 1942 at about $5 or $6 a share. They did not become parties to this proceeding until September 30, 1943, a little less than 3 weeks prior to the further hearing.

Counsel also attempted by cross-examination of Wyer to prove improper actions by the Missouri Pacific directors in an attempted acquisition by purchase of stock of the so-called Missouri Teminals. The matter of the acquisition of these terminal properties was referred to in our former report of January 10, 1940, in this proceeding. That controversy has since been settled by agreement approved by the court.

Counsel further attempted to prove an improper acquisition by the Missouri Pacific through the medium of the Missouri Pacific Transportation Company of some of its own stock and International adjustment bonds. This matter is now in the process of litigation by order of the court.

At the further hearing, counsel for the Finance Corporation objected to the cross-examination of Wyer in respect of the advances by Missouri Pacific to the New Orleans and the payment of dividends by the latter on the grounds that the issuance of the notes representing the advances was approved by us under the provisions of section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act and that in the present reorganization proceeding no question has heretofore been raised as to the validity of the claim on the advances although our plan was also approved by the District Court and has been argued before the Circuit Court of Appeals and briefs submitted in that court. Other parties joined in the objection.

The hearing officer refused to allow counsel's cross-examination to proceed, basing his ruling on the ground that it did not constitute proper cross-examination. Thereupon counsel made an offer of proof of evidence which he proposed to adduce through questions addressed to Wyer. The offer of proof was denied. Counsel contends on brief that these rulings constitute error and that we should afford him an opportunity at a future hearing to examine this witness on these subjects.

Counsel did not attempt to produce at the hearing any of the Missouri Pacific directors alleged to have committed acts of malfeasance, relying solely, insofar as testimony is concerned, upon an effort to obtain confirmation of the facts by cross-examination of Wyer. In his brief, counsel states that he believes that all of the evidence in support of his contentions as to wrongful acts by Alleghany Corporation is already in the record of this proceeding. He specifically enumerates the documents of record constituting this evidence.

Furthermore, at a previous hearing in this proceeding on September 28, 1937, these same alleged wrongful acts by Alleghany Corporation and the control exerted by that corporation over the debtor were the subject of considerable examination of the same witness Wyer by another counsel. At that time also, reference was made by that counsel to certain documents of record in support of his contentions. These documents included reports on the debtor by a firm of auditors, Price-Waterhouse & Company, an answer by the Missouri Pacific trustee to an application by a former Missouri Pacific counsel for compensation, the decision by the court denying the application, a report by a special counsel for the trustee of the Missouri Pacific and, in addition, reference was made to certain of our annual reports to the Congress.

Thus it will be seen that we have been well acquainted with the basis of these charges against Alleghany Corporation.

Counsel contends that these alleged illegal acts committed in the past by the then directors of the Missouri Pacific, which he alleges were performed under the influence or by the direction of Alleghany Corporation, require us to invoke the doctrine commonly known as the "instrumentality rule"[8] and that we should thereby find that Alleghany Corporation is not entitled to participate in the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific and should further find that the compromise plan is invalid as a result of the securities, rights, and benefits given under it to Alleghany Corporation.

In our opinion, the ruling on counsel's cross-examination of Wyer to which counsel excepts was correct. Counsel's examination of Wyer did not constitute proper cross-examination, nor, in our opinion, would it have been productive of useful information in respect of the subjects under discussion additional to that already of record. We affirm this ruling. It is our opinion that the matters which were the subject of counsel's examination of Wyer should be left to litigation in the courts, or, in any event, are not a proper subject of litigation in this proceeding in the manner proposed by counsel. An important duty of the trustee in bankruptcy was to investigate and advise the court of any irregularities in the management of the debtor preceding bankruptcy and of any transactions constituting causes of action in the debtor's behalf. We understand that the trustee performed his duty in that regard. We are not advised that any of the acts about which counsel sought to inquire, except the litigation and settlement of the controversy over terminal properties and the matter of the purchase by the Missouri Transportation Company of Missouri Pacific stock and International adjustment bonds has been deemed by the trustee and the bankruptcy court to afford grounds for legal action.

We will deny counsel's request for a reopening of the hearings to enable him further to examine Wyer upon these matters. Although more than 12 years have elapsed since the Missouri Pacific made its advances of cash to the New Orleans, as above stated, the invalidity of any part of these advances has never been established and we will assume for the purposes of this proceeding that they are valid obligations of the New Orleans in determining the right of, and extent to which, holders of Missouri Pacific 5¼-percent bonds and the New Orleans stockholders should participate in the plan of reorganization. As to the extent of participation which Alleghany Corporation will receive, we shall accord it only the same treatment as other similarly interested creditors, i. e., that to which it is entitled through its ownership of securities of the debtors.

If, however, the court shall rule that Alleghany Corporation is not entitled to participate in this reorganization, we conclude and find that any new class B common stock and warrants to subscribe to such stock, which, by the allocations of new securities approved herein, would be distributed to Alleghany Corporation, should not be allotted to that corporation but should be redistributed so as to increase the allotments of class B common stock, and warrants receivable by the other unsecured creditors of the Missouri Pacific group, and by holders of its serial 5¼-percent bonds, the increase in each case to be in the same proportion as that which the amount of such stock and warrants otherwise receivable by each such other unsecured creditor and each serial bondholder bears to the total amount of such class-B common stock and warrants authorized herein to be issued to all such other Missouri Pacific unsecured creditors and the serial bondholders.

No creditors of the International junior to the holders of the adjustment bonds of that debtor would participate in the reorganization other than by stock-purchase warrants. The adjustment-mortgage bondholders have a second lien on the International property and are allotted both class-A and class-B common stock but not in a total amount equal, at $100 per share, to the amount of their claim. It is our opinion and we find that, in view the past, present and prospective earning power of the International and the large issue of its first-mortgage bonds outstanding, the treatment proposed to be accorded the adjustment mortgage bondholders under the compromise plan, aside from the offer of stock-purchase warrants, is fair and equitable and that the unsecured creditors and stockholders of the International in view of the absence of free assets of that debtor of any substantial value, should be found to have no interest in the debtor's estate and that the plan which we shall approve herein need not be submitted to such unsecured creditors and stockholders of the International for their acceptance or rejection. The question of whether stock-purchase warrants should be issued and, if so, the extent to which the International adjustment-mortgage bondholders and holders of unsecured claims against that debtor should participate in their issues will be a subject of subsequent discussion herein.

We also find that the treatment proposed to be accorded the general-mortgage bondholders of the Missouri Pacific, considering the amount of prior indebtedness under the present capitalization, the amount of permissible new capitalization, the fair likelihood of a return being received as dividends on the new stock, and the substantial voting power accruing to these bondholders through the allotment of the new stock, represents the equivalent of the rights surrendered by them or of any loss of seniority resulting from the allotment of new securities.

We also find that the treatment accorded the Missouri Pacific serial 5¼-percent bonds and that accorded the unsecured creditors of the Missouri Pacific and unsecured creditors and stockholders of the New Orleans (aside from the allocations of stock-purchase warrants) is justified by the total value and earning power of these properties and the value of the free assets of these debtors and, in view of the rights of prior creditors and within the new capitalization which we have found justified, represents the full extent of participation in the plan of reorganization to which they are entitled.

The treatment of the holders of Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage bonds is the same as that afforded by the Commission plan, the separate new mortgage on the Plaza-Olive building being approved in both reports.

There remain to be considered the allotments under the compromise plan to the Finance Corporation, J. P. Morgan & Company and associates, the Railroad Credit Corporation, and holders of bonds issued under four small divisional or branch-line mortgages.

Referring to the Finance Corporation, bank, and Railroad Credit Corporation loans, we stated in our report of January 10, 1940:

> The loans represented by these claims were made under special circumstances to aid the debtors in emergencies, are relatively well secured by collateral, and appear to be entitled to special treatment as compared with claims of creditors to whom it is proposed to give the remainder of the first-mortgage bonds.

We also stated that the Railroad Credit Corporation loans appeared from the evidence of record to be secured even better than either the Finance Corporation or bank loans. As hereinbefore stated, the judge in referring the plan back to us expressed the opinion that accumulated cash might be used to liquidate some or all of the Finance Corporation and bank loans, and several parties to this proceeding urge on brief that these claims be satisfied by payment of the principal in cash and by compromise payments in cash of unpaid interest.

As of January 1, 1940, the effective date of the Commission plan, there were owing on the Finance Corporation loans $23,134,800 of principal and $8,630,275 of unpaid interest. Under that plan, the Finance Corporation is allotted $317,650 of cash, $23,135,000 of new series-A 3¾ percent 25-year first-mortgage bonds, $2,859,000 of series-B convertible 4½-percent 75-year general-mortgage bonds and $5,453,500 of second-preferred $5 dividend no-par stock at $100 a share.

As of January 1, 1943, the effective date of the compromise plan, the same amount of principal was owing but unpaid interest had increased to $9,918,342. Under that plan this creditor would receive $4,049,137 in cash, representing a compromise settlement of the interest on a basis of 3½ percent per annum instead of the contract rate of 6 percent, and, at its election, would have the principal satisfied in either new series-A 15-year 3½-percent first-mortgage bonds or new series-B 25-year 3¾-percent first-mortgage bonds.

The Finance Corporation did not participate in the negotiations resulting in the compromise plan. It objects to the treatment afforded it by that plan but has agreed to accept, in satisfaction of its entire claim, cash equal to the principal amount of its claim or bonds equal in money's worth to the principal amount of its claim (which shall be determined by us), plus cash equal to 4-percent interest from date of bankruptcy to January 1, 1943 on the principal of its claim. If the Commission plan had gone into effect as of January 1, 1940, its effective date, the Finance Corporation would have received 3¾ percent per annum interest on the new first-mortgage bonds allotted to it under that plan in a principal amount equal to the amount of principal of its claim. This compares with the 3½-percent compromise cash interest offer under the compromise plan and the 4-percent cash basis which the Finance Corporation states that it will accept.

The Finance Corporation contends that its collateral security, which it analyzes in detail, justifies the payment in full of its claim in cash but, if we should decide to adopt generally the compromise plan, it agrees to accept the compromise as above stated in order to facilitate the reorganization. The amount of cash required to satisfy the interest claim, if calculated on a 4-percent basis with respect to interest accrued since the date of bankruptcy plus $518,792 of unpaid interest at the contract rate which had accrued prior thereto, gives $5,329,242 or an increase of $1,280,105 above that required under the compromise plan. The compromise plan does not provide an alternative offer of new securities in satisfaction of the part of the Finance Corporation claim representing interest.

The Finance Corporation contends by brief that, if the same treatment were accorded it in respect of the pledged system securities as is accorded other owners of such securities under the terms of the compromise plan, it would be entitled to the following allocations of cash and new securities: Cash

$2,447,806, first-mortgage series-C bonds $14,060.900, general-mortgage series-A bonds $13,079,600, general-mortgage series-B bonds $4,837,500, 5-percent preferred stock $7,159,500, class-A common stock, at $100 a share, $17,470,643, and class-B common stock, at $100 a share, $2,199,000, the total of all new securities being $61,254,949, plus warrants to purchase 56,777 shares of class-B common stock. The potential annual income from the above securities, including the dividend on the preferred stock but excluding any dividends on the common stock, is $1,750,868.

Additionally the Finance Corporation is secured by various items of other collateral including $92,700 par value of American Refrigerator Transit Company capital stock, the value of which Wyer estimated at $1,158,750 and Peet, assistant chief accounting and financial officer of the trustee of the debtor, and William W. Sullivan, chief of the railroad division of the Finance Corporation, at approximately $2,030,000; and $11,475,000, par value, of Texas and Pacific Railway Company common stock having a substantial value.

The first and refunding committee disagrees with the Finance Corporation as to the value of the collateral, contending that such part of the offer of new securities under the compromise plan as purports to be in satisfaction of the principal of the claim fully recognizes the value of the Finance Corporation's listed collateral and that the remainder of the collateral measures the extent to which unpaid interest should be recognized. Wyer ascribed a total value of $2,729,277 to this latter part of the total collateral and the committee contends that it is of such a nature that it is entitled to recognition only by either (1) a distribution of new stock or (2) a commutation of such stock capitalization into a smaller amount of senior securities or an even smaller amount of cash. The committee urges that the Finance Corporation should be offered only the securities and cash allotted under the compromise plan or, in lieu of the amount of cash offered, which the committee admits could probably be justified only as a compromise offer subject to acceptance by the Finance Corporation, additional securities consisting preferably of $9,918,342, par value, of new preferred stock or, as a maximum, $1,763,120, principal amount, of new series-A general-mortgage bonds, $409,280, principal amount, of new series-B general-mortgage bonds, and $7,745,942, par value, of new preferred stock. The committee bases its contention to a large extent upon the treatment which it contends was accorded the interest part of the Finance Corporation debt under the Commission plan.

This first and refunding committee and representatives of the senior mortgage creditors of the other two principal debtors contended at the hearing that, if we find that a larger amount of cash should be allotted the Finance Corporation in compromise settlement of its claim for interest, proportionally larger amounts of cash also should be offered holders of the three senior mortgages of the system. Wyer testified that the sum of these additional increases would be about $10,400,000 if the Finance Corporation compromise cash payment were made on a 4-percent interest basis.

Upon consideration of the various contentions in respect of satisfaction of the Finance Corporation debt, the value of its collateral security, and the changed conditions since the effective date of the Commission plan, particularly as to the existence of the large amount of excess cash in the Missouri Pacific treasury, we conclude and find that this creditor should receive in full satisfaction of its claim the same amount of new securities allotted under the compromise plan but that the cash allotment should be increased by $1,280,105 to a total of $5,329,242, representing a compromise at 4 percent per annum of its interest claim, accrued since bankruptcy.

J. P. Morgan & Company and affiliated banks are, from the nature and value of the collateral security for their loans, entitled to treatment at least equivalent to that accorded the Finance Corporation. Although the banks have signified that they would accept the terms of the compromise plan, we are of the opinion and find that, to avoid unfair discrimination in view of the above improvement in the treatment accorded the Finance Corporation, these bank creditors should receive an increase of $321,510 in their cash allotment, the resulting total being $1,480,382.

These loans from the Finance Corporation and the banks were made to aid the debtor in emergencies, the proceeds were used in part at least, to permit interest payments to continue to be made on the obligations of the debtors, and the securities for the loans are of a different nature from the mortgage liens of the senior creditors of the Missouri Pacific, New Orleans, and International. In our opinion these increases in the cash payments to the Finance Corporation and J. P. Morgan & Company and associates, can be met out of excess cash in the Missouri Pacific treasury not required for other purposes. We find that the above allocations of cash and new securities to these two creditors represent the fair equivalent of the value of their claims, will not discriminate unfairly against the senior mortgage creditors and should be approved.

The Railroad Credit Corporation would receive under the compromise plan for the principal of the notes of the Missouri Pacific and International held by it plus accrued unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, $3,806 in cash and, at its election, $2,487,000, principal amount, of either new series-A or series-B mortgage bonds. The plan includes the following further provision in respect of these loans:

> The Railroad Credit Corporation shall release and surrender to the New Company its rights and interests in the Debtors' distributive shares under the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931, from and after the date of consummation of the Plan, and any proceeds from such shares applied by the Railroad Credit Corporation to the payment of principal or interest of or upon the obligations of the Debtors after the date of consummation of the Plan, unless such application shall have been made by authority of a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be turned over to the New Company.

The Railroad Credit Corporation contends that the collateral security for its loans warrants their payment in full in cash and expresses doubt that the new securities to which it will be entitled under the compromise plan would sell at their face value in the near future. If the corporation were sure that they would be saleable at their face value, it would have no objection to the plan but in the absence of such assurance, it requests that the plan be modified to the extent of permitting the Railroad Credit Corporation to retain the right to the distributive share of the debtors in the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931, until, and only until, the amount thus credited, together with the proceeds from the sale of the new bonds which it will receive in the reorganization, shall equal the principal of, and accrued unpaid interest on the loans.

No objections to this proposed modification have been offered either at the hearing or by brief. In our opinion, the security for the loans is sufficient to warrant their payment in full in cash or its equivalent and we find that the modification requested should be approved.

The amounts above stated of cash and new securities allocated under the compromise plan to the Finance Corporation, J. P. Morgan & Company and affiliated banks, and Railroad Credit Corporation are stated in respect of the amounts of these claims as of January 1, 1943. Certain payments have been made on these claims since that date and further payments doubtless will be made before consummation of the plan, representing income or other funds received in the interim on collateral held by these creditors and, in the case of the Railroad Credit Corporation, also representing proceeds from the distributive shares of the debtors under the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931. Under the terms of the compromise plan such payments up to the date of consummation of the plan are to be retained by these respective creditors and applied to the claims in accordance with the provisions of the plan as hereinbefore approved for application of cash distributions to creditors prior to consummation of the plan. This procedure with respect to such payments on these claims is approved.

The treatment proposed to be accorded the Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railway Company first-mortgage 4-percent bonds, hereinafter referred to as the Little Rock bonds, is improved over that provided under the Commission plan. As of January 1, 1940, this claim amounted to $1,140,000 of principal and $228,000 of accrued unpaid interest, the total being $1,368,000. Under the Commission plan the trustee under the mortgage would receive, in consideration for releasing from the lien of the mortgage the 31 miles of line owned and operated by the Missouri Pacific, $686,500 of new prior-preferred $100 par value 5-percent stock, $228,000 of no-par value $5 a year dividends second-preferred stock, and, additionally, there would be deposited with the mortgage trustee for the benefit of these bondholders $453,600, principal amount, of Rock Island, Arkansas & Louisiana-Little Rock & Hot Springs Western 4-percent notes, guaranteed by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, owned by the Missouri Pacific and now pledged by it as part security for its loan from the Railroad Credit Corporation. These notes are of doubtful value at the present time.

As of January 1, 1943, the effective date of the compromise plan, unpaid interest on the Little Rock bonds had increased to $364,800, the total claim as of that date being $1,504,800. Under the compromise plan the mortgage trustee would receive $684,000 of new series-A general-mortgage bonds and $820,800 of new 5-percent preferred stock, the amount of the allotment of preferred stock being increased over the amount of the comparable second-preferred stock allotted under the Commission plan, because of the increase in the interest claim between the effective dates of the two plans and the fact that the notes guaranteed by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company would, under the compromise plan, be released to the reorganized company upon consummation of the plan of reorganization instead of being delivered to the Little Rock mortgage trustee in part satisfaction of the claim.

The Little Rock bondholders voted unanimously to reject the Commission plan and have urged their objections before us, the district court, and the circuit court of appeals. In view of the improvement in treatment in a plan of reorganization which can now be generally afforded creditors, it is our opinion that this improved treatment of the Little Rock senior creditors, which they state is still insufficient, is justified. Upon consideration of the entire record in this proceeding including the past earnings record of these 31 miles of railroad, we further find that, in view of the system-lien and sinking-fund and retirement provisions of the new general-mortgage bonds to be allotted the Little Rock bondholders and the prospective earnings on the new preferred stock, the treatment proposed represents the equivalent of the rights surrendered by these bondholders or of any loss of seniority resulting from the allotment of the new securities.

The Little Rock mortgage trustee and the bondholders' protective committee object to the inclusion in any plan of reorganization of a provision for a judicial sale, if the court should order one, of this part of their mortgaged property to others than the reorganization managers. This same position was taken by these parties prior to the issuance of our plan of January 10, 1940, and in our report of that date approving the plan we discussed the matter and decided to include the provision. For the same reasons therein stated, we reaffirm that decision.

Holders of Central Branch Union Pacific Railway Company first-mortgage bonds, hereinafter called the Central Branch bonds, under the compromise plan, would receive for each $1,000, principal amount, of bonds plus accrued unpaid interest of $363, $60 of cash, equivalent to three interest coupons, $370 of new first-mortgage 4-percent series-C bonds, $230 of general-mortgage 4½-percent series-A bonds, $450 of general-mortgage 5-percent series-B bonds and $253 of 5-percent preferred stock.

In our opinion this represents an improvement over the treatment accorded these bondholders by the Commission plan under which they are offered no cash, $270 of series-B 4-percent first-mortgage bonds, $328 of series-A 4-percent general-mortgage bonds, $472 of prior-preferred stock and 1.73 shares of no-par value second-preferred stock. As of the date of the Commission plan the claim per $1,000 bond was $120 less than as of the effective date of the compromise plan.

The trustee under this mortgage and certain holders of the bonds contend that the improvement in treatment proposed is not sufficient to reflect the increase in earnings of their property if proper consideration is afforded the earnings applicable to 1.89 miles of main line subject to their mortgage located at Atchison, Kansas and giving access to various industrial facilities. They urge that the formula used in determining the earnings of the Central Branch does not give any substantial consideration to this factor. They did not, however, at the hearing propose any other formula to be applied nor offer evidence in support of their contentions, nor contend that the treatment accorded the Central Branch bondholders was not equitable if the formula is applied. Wyer testifying for the proponents of the plan, showed that an application of the earnings formula to the Central Branch and to the Missouri Pacific as a whole excluding the Central Branch, indicates that the system earnings increased more than eight times as much as those of the Central Branch when 1941 earnings are compared to those of 1939 and four times as much when 1942 earnings are compared to those of 1939.

It is our opinion based upon a consideration of the entire record of this proceeding, that the treatment proposed to be accorded the Central Branch bondholders adequately represents the value of their claim and that these bondholders would receive under the compromise plan the equivalent of the rights surrendered and full compensation for any loss of seniority resulting from the allotment of securities.

Holders of Cairo & Thebes first-mortgage 4-percent bonds under the compromise plan would receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, amounting to $133, $100 of cash, being the equivalent of five interest coupons, $750 of first-mortgage series-C, 4-percent bonds, and $283 of general-mortgage series-A 4½-percent bonds. As of January 1, 1940, the effective date of the Commission plan, unpaid interest amounted to $13.33 per $1,000 bond and under that plan each holder of a $1,000 bond would receive $13 of cash, $750 of series-B 4-percent first-mortgage bonds and $250 of series-B 4½-percent general-mortgage bonds. The treatment accorded under both plans is approximately the same, except that under the compromise plan interest accruing between the two effective dates of the plans increases the cash payment, thus recognizing the earning value of the Cairo & Thebes property to the Missouri Pacific during the war period. It is our opinion and we find that these allotments of cash and new system securities represent the equitable equivalent of the value of the securities surrenderd by the Cairo & Thebes bondholders and constitute full compensation for their surrender of any seniority rights. While payment of part of the claim is with a security which is not a first lien, both classes of bonds allotted will be secured by mortgages having liens on the entire property of the Missouri Pacific system.

Holders of Boonville, St. Louis & Southern first-mortgage 5-percent bonds, hereinafter referred to as the Boonville bonds, would receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon as of January 1, 1943 amounting to $396, $50 of cash, $274 of series-C 4-percent first-mortgage bonds, $274 of 5-percent preferred stock and in addition would receive a prorata share of the net cash proceeds from the abandoned line of this railroad, amounting as of December 31, 1942 to $254.32 per $1,000 bond. As of the effective date of the Commission plan, unpaid interest per $1,000 bond amounted to $245.83 and each holder of a $1,000 bond would receive under that plan, cash comprising only the prorata share of the cash proceeds from the sale of the abandoned line, $274 of series-B 4-percent first-mortgage bonds and 2.74 shares of no-par value $5 a year dividend second-preferred stock. Thus, the treatment accorded these bondholders is approximately the same under both plans except for the additional $50 cash payment per $1,000 bond tendered under the compromise plan and which represents the share of these bondholders in the cash accumulations of the Missouri Pacific during the war period. For the same reasons stated in approving the treatment accorded the Cairo & Thebes bonds, we conclude and find that these allotments of cash and new securities to the holders of the Boonville bonds also represent the equitable equivalent of the value of the securities surrendered by them and that there is no residual value of the property secured by the lien of their securities.

Under the terms of the compromise plan, claims against the debtors entitled to priority over their respective mortgages, current liabilities and obligations incurred by the bankruptcy trustees during the reorganization proceeding, to the extent unpaid at the date of consummation of the plan, would be paid in cash or assumed by the reorganized company with the same relative priority as they now have with respect to other obligations of the debtor. All such claims, liabilities and obligations may be adjusted or compromised and dealt with or paid and discharged by the reorganized company in such manner as may be determined by the board of directors of the reorganized company subject to the approval of the court.

We approve all of these terms of the plan except that it should be provided that all expenses of reorganization shall be paid out of the debtor's estate and no part of them assumed by the reorganized company.

Holders of general unsecured claims against any of the debtors (other than the New Orleans and its subsidiaries and the International), which are not entitled to preference, would receive under the compromise plan for each $1,000 of principal, 10 shares of common stock, class B, and for each $1,000 of unpaid interest to January 1, 1943, a warrant to subscribe to 15 shares of new common stock, class B, at the price of $100 per share.

Holders of general unsecured claims against the New Orleans and its subsidiaries, which are not entitled to preference, would receive for each $1,000 of claim, including principal amount and unpaid interest to January 1, 1943, 10 shares of common stock, class A.

Holders of general unsecured claims against the International, which are not entitled to preference, would receive for each $1,000 of claim including principal and unpaid interest to the effective date of the plan, a warrant to subscribe to 10 shares of new common stock, class B at the price of $100 per share.

The exact amounts of such unsecured claims against each of the groups of debtors is not ascertainable at this time. As of October 4, 1943, allowed claims against the Missouri Pacific group amounted to $329,167 and, in addition, $760,048 of such claims remained to be liquidated. The amount of claims allowed against the International as of the same date was $104,495 and those not then liquidated $186,889.

Claims allowed against the New Orleans group amounted to $30,106 and unliquidated claims to $579,618. We approve the allotments of new reorganization securities as above stated to holders of general unsecured claims against the Missouri Pacific and New Orleans. We find that, in view of the rights of prior creditors and within the new capitalization which we have found justified, such allotments represent the full extent of participation in the plan of reorganization to which they are entitled. We shall hereinafter discuss the propriety of the additional issuance of stock-purchase warrants to the Missouri Pacific general unsecured creditors and of the issue of warrants to the International general unsecured creditors.

There should be included in the plan of reorganization approved herein, the following provision:

> The debtor, as reorganized, or the transferee of the property of the debtor, in connection with any settlements of transportation accounts between the United States and the debtor or the reorganized company, shall be required to recognize and pay or allow for any and all sums determined through audit, adjustment, compromise, or litigation, as due the United States by virtue of the provisions of section 322 of the Transportation Act of 1940, 54 Stat. 955, for overpayments made prior to the date of confirmation of a plan of reorganization, without requiring proof thereof in this reorganization proceeding and without prejudice by reason of such sums not having been proved herein, with the same relative priority as they now have with respect to other obligations of the debtor.

Under the terms of the compromise plan holders of Missouri Pacific preferred stock outstanding in the par amount of $70,190,100 and upon which dividends were in arrears as of January 1, 1943, in an amount over $70,000,000, and holders of the common stock outstanding in the par amount of $81,314,343, would be allotted no cash or new securities within the permissible capitalization but would receive warrants entitling them to subscribe at a price of $100 a share within a period of 10 years from date of consummation of the plan, for shares of new class-B common stock of the reorganized company. The present Missouri Pacific preferred stockholders would be entitled to subscribe for seventy-five hundredths share of such new stock for each $100, par value of preferred stock held and the present common stockholders for twenty-five hundredths share for each $100, par value, of common stock held.

A proposal to issue stock purchase warrants to these stockholders was strongly and persistently urged by the debtor and other parties prior to the issuance of the Commission plan. In our report of January 10, 1940, and supplemental report of April 9, 1940, we discussed the proposal at length and decided adversely to the debtor.

In the last 3 years the earnings of the Missouri Pacific have increased greatly as hereinbefore shown. As we have already stated, it is impossible to prophesy how long increased traffic due to the war will continue to produce large net income or to predict with any assurance the amount of such income which will be realized in the years following the war. The United States Supreme Court pointed out in the Milwaukee case, supra, the unreliability in that case of the carrier's war earnings as a criterion for the indefinite future unless, as the court said, "history is to be ignored." The court referred to numerous other factors to be considered, including the great increase in taxes and in certain costs of operation and the decrease in wartime in water and truck competition. These considerations, as we have heretofore pointed out, apply also to the Missouri Pacific. Already net income of the debtor on its present capitalization is substantially less than its peak war earnings. We have fully discussed the reasons for our conviction that these recent increased earnings and the greater industrial development on the debtor's lines do not warrant an increase in either the system or Missouri Pacific capitalizations as fixed in our former report.

The debtor's director of industrial development testified at the further hearing that he could make no estimate of increased earnings which might accrue to the Missouri Pacific by reason of the recently increased industrial activity. While, in his opinion, the present "outlook for Missouri Pacific" is improved over what it was in 1939, he testified that the question "simmers down finally to the policy of Government" and that the Government "has a great stake in a great many of these industries." He pointed out that the investments are there whoever may operate the industries. The trustee of the estate of the debtor has not revised his estimate of record in this proceeding of normal year earnings available for payment of interest of about $18,200,000 for the Missouri Pacific alone, which we considered in our reports of January 10, 1940 and April 9, 1940.

In our former reports we referred to the fact that as of January 1, 1938, the indebtedness outstanding against the Missouri Pacific alone amounted to about $515,200,000 which may be compared to the permissible capitalization which we fixed for that debtor of about $463,000,000. Since then a great amount of additional interest has accrued on the debtor's obligations, a part of which has been offset by interest payments made upon order of the court and by payment of about $26,000,000 on the principal of this indebtedness.

However, this recent reduction in the amounts of the claims against the Missouri Pacific when considered in connection with the increase since 1938 in the total amounts of the claims of creditors and in light of our earlier discussion herein of the uncertainty which we believe must exist in respect of earnings for the indefinite future, does not in our opinion, afford a basis for reversing our former finding that the equities of the Missouri Pacific preferred and common stockholders are without value. We affirm that finding and our further finding that such stockholders are not entitled to participate in any allotments of reorganization securities and that it will not be necessary to submit the plan to such classes of stockholders for acceptance or rejection.

Warrants and stock escrow.—Of the warrants issuable under the compromise plan for the purchase of class B no par common stock (the junior issue), excluding warrants issuable to general unpreferred and unsecured creditors of the Missouri Pacific and International, warrants for subscription to about 494,700 shares or about 40 percent of the total of such warrants would be allotted to junior creditors of the system and to New Orleans stockholders and warrants for about 730,000 shares or about 60 percent of the total would be issued to holders of Missouri Pacific preferred and common stockholders. All warrants would be exercisable within a period of 10 years and would permit the holders to purchase the stock at $100 per share.

It is our opinion and we find that, under the circumstances of this case as disclosed by the record, some further opportunity for recoupment of their investments in the event that favorable conditions should occur in the future should be afforded the junior creditors and New Orleans stockholders. We therefore find that the allotments of warrants for the purchase of about 494,700 shares of class B common stock, as provided by the compromise plan and as shown in appendixes A and B, to be issued to junior creditors and New Orleans stockholders are equitable and should be approved. No increase in capitalization will result upon exercise of these warrants since the proceeds are to be applied to reduction of outstanding capital stock on a basis of a price of $100 a share.

Under the terms of the compromise plan, the effect of an issuance of the additional warrants to Missouri Pacific stockholders, as above stated, for subscription to about 730,000 shares of class B common stock as therein proposed, would be that the proceeds from the exercise of most of these additional warrants would be paid into the treasury of the new company to be used "for any proper corporate purpose". Thus, if all the warrants issuable under the compromise plan were exercised the result might be a substantial increase in capitalization of the new company.

Clearly in view of the impossibility of providing for substantial satisfaction of junior system creditors in a plan formulated within a prudent capitalization which will give a reasonable assurance that new securities will be issued only to the extent that some return will be earned on all of them in years of fair prosperity, it would be inequitable to offer any rights of value to the Missouri Pacific stockholders whose equities, in light of the amount of creditors' claims outstanding, are, in our opinion, certainly without value. Any such rights, if possessing any value and if proper to offer in the reorganization, should accrue to the junior creditors and not to the Missouri Pacific stockholders. The issuance of the warrants to such stockholders would result in a dilution of the value of the warrants issuable to the creditors and, upon their exercise, would dilute the value of the class B stock issuable to the creditors in the reorganization. Their issuance might also have a material effect upon the extent of control of the new company exercisable by the different classes of claimants under the plan. It is our conclusion and we find that there should be issued in the reorganization only the amount of warrants allocable to the junior creditors and New Orleans stockholders, and that no recognition of the claims of the present Missouri Pacific stockholders, either by issuance to them of securities, warrants or otherwise can be justified in the light of the principles which must govern us in determining the capitalization of the new company and the distribution of the new securities issuable under the plan.

We have already described the escrow agreement provided by the compromise plan whereby all class B common stock issuable to creditors would be placed in escrow and would first be retired from the proceeds of the exercise of stock purchase warrants. The amount of such class B stock issuable to creditors, if assigned a value of $100 a share, is $58,466,850 in addition to which $429,900 would be issued to New Orleans stockholders. The warrants issuable in the reorganization, to the extent we have approved would result in the issue of about $49,469,900 of class B stock at an assigned value of $100 a share if the warrants are exercised. If the warrants become of value, the present junior creditors receiving any of the class B stock in the reorganization would have an opportunity by sale of their warrants to receive a price of $100 a share for the class B common stock issued to them in the reorganization, all shares of which are to be placed in escrow.

As hereinbefore modified, the provisions of the compromise plan in respect of the issuance of warrants and the establishment of the escrow agreement are approved.

Other provisions of the plan.—In reports upon other plans of reorganization we have expressed our approval of the inclusion of provisions for retirement funds similar to that proposed in the compromise plan. The operation of the fund in this case should provide early payment of part of the principal of the new general-mortgage bonds and correspondingly improve the position of the preferred and common stocks. For these and other reasons stated in previous cases, we approve the inclusion of the provisions for a retirement fund in this instance.

We also approve the provisions, which are also to be subject to approval by the court, for a possible separate incorporation of the International properties and of the Natchez properties. The former provision is required because of the possibility, which we discussed in our report of January 10 and supplemental report of April 9, 1940, that the contract requiring the International to maintain its general offices, etc., in Palestine, Texas and which has been construed by the courts to apply to successors, may, unless a modification of the decree can be obtained, require the general system offices to be maintained at Palestine in the event of a consolidation of the International properties in the new system.

As to the Natchez properties, in view of the very small amount of property which the system would operate in the State of Mississippi if these properties were incorporated and which would consist entirely of these properties, it appears uneconomical and inadvisable to require the system to assume the tax burdens which might thereby be incurred and to subject the entire system to litigation and regulation in that State. Such a consolidation might also require the maintenance of a larger executive staff in Mississippi than if these small properties were separately incorporated.

Our approval of these provisions for possible separate incorporation of the International and Natchez companies includes approval of their proposed capitalizations, (that of the International being within the limit of the separate permissible maximum capitalization heretofore determined by us) the terms of the proposed new separate mortgages on the properties of the International and the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company, the provisions for determination of available net income of the system, and any other pertinent provisions of the compromise plan.

The provision in the compromise plan for execution of the plan by the sales exclusion of certain companies, is substantially the same as that in the Commission plan, except for the omission from the list of companies affected of the properties of the International and Austin Dam & Suburban Company. In the absence of evidence at the present time of any lack of cooperation by representatives of the International bondholders in the consummation of a plan which would provide for either direct or indirect ownership and operation of the International properties by a system company, and because of the prospective usefulness of these large properties to the system, we approve their omission from the statement in the plan of those which may be sold to others than the reorganization managers.

Voting trust, board of directors, and reorganization managers.—The voting trust provided by the compromise plan would be administered by three voting trustees, one to be an outstanding citizen of Missouri, one of Texas, and the third to be chosen by the other two, all to be subject to the approval of the court. The plan does not specify how the first two members are to be nominated or selected. Several parties protest the creation of any voting trust, contending that the stockholders should have the right to elect directors of the reorganized company and otherwise be permitted to vote their stock directly.

Under the plan approved by us herein the percentages of total voting power in the reorganized company which will accrue to present security holders upon consummation of the reorganization plan, assuming that all cash optional offers will be exercised, will be approximately the following:

Class of security		Percentage of total voting power
Missouri Pacific
First and refunding mortgage bondholders		34.0
General-mortgage bondholders		33.0
Serial bondholders		7.0
Convertible bondholders
Alleghany Corporation	3.4
Other holders	14.6	18.0
Little Rock, H. S. & W. bondholders		.4
Boonville, St. L. & S. bondholders		.3
Central Branch U. P. bondholders		.3
New Orleans
Capital stock		3
International
First-mortgage bondholders		2.2
Adjustment-mortgage bondholders		2.5
Total		100.0

It thus appears that about 79 percent of the total voting power will be held by the Missouri Pacific first and refunding mortgage bondholders, who are senior creditors of that debtor, Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bondholders, who are junior to the first and refunding bondholders, and Missouri Pacific convertible bondholders, whose claim is wholly unsecured. Present New Orleans creditors will have no voting power and International creditors about 13 percent.

It is stated in the plan that the purpose of the voting trust is to assure a stable, experienced, and impartial management, which will be free to act in the general interest without allegiance to any particular class of security holders during the crucial period which will follow the consummation of the reorganization and the termination of the war. The voting trustees will have the power to elect the directors of the reorganized company as long as the voting trust is in effect.

In our opinion a voting trust limited in duration should be of benefit in accomplishing the desired purpose. We believe, however, that the term of the voting trust should be of the shortest possible duration required to accomplish the purpose of its creation. It is our opinion and we find that the term of the voting trust should be reduced to 5 years from the 10-year period provided for in the compromise plan. The provisions for the voting trust as stated in the compromise plan are approved, with the above modification as to its term and with the further modification that the voting trustees, instead of being designated as stated in the compromise plan, should all three be designated by the court, one of them to be a citizen of Missouri and one a citizen of Texas.

The compromise plan provides that the directors of the reorganized company shall be 15 in number, the panel of the first board of directors to be designated, 5 by the first and refunding committee, 1 by the Finance Corporation, 2 by the New Orleans committee, 2 by the International first-mortgage trustee, 2 by the general-mortgage committee and 2 by Alle-ghany Corporation. The president of the reorganized company is to be the fifteenth director.

It will be noted from the above table of voting power in the reorganized company that, while the Missouri Pacific convertible bondholders as a whole including Alleghany Corporation will have about 22 percent of the voting power, Alleghany Corporation alone will have, as one of the holders of such bonds, only about 5.4 percent, its ownership of convertible bonds constituting its only source of control. While Alleghany Corporation also owns some of the outstanding Missouri Pacific preferred stock and about 64.3 percent of the total issue of the common stock, we have hereinbefore found that the equities of the holders of these stocks are without value and that such holders are not entitled to participation in the plan. We have further found that such stockholders are not entitled to be issued warrants for purchase of stock in the reorganized company.

In view of these facts we believe that it will be more equitable if the right to designate two of the directors of the first board of the reorganized company be not confined to one holder of the convertible bonds, but that such right of designation should be extended to a representative of all of such holders.

We find that the terms of the compromise plan with respect to the first board of directors of the reorganized company should be modified to provide that instead of their designation by Alleghany Corporation, two members of the panel shall be designated by the trustee under the indenture securing the Missouri Pacific convertible bonds. Otherwise we find that the provisions of the compromise plan as to the first board of directors are fair and equitable and they are approved.

The compromise plan provides that the reorganization managers shall be five in number, all to be approved by the court, of whom two are to be designated by the first and refunding committee, one jointly by the New Orleans committee and the trustee of the International first mortgage, one by the Finance Corporation, and one jointly by the general-mortgage committee and Alleghany Corporation.

Alleghany Corporation owns $11,152,000 or 24.5 percent of the total of $45,498,000 convertible bonds outstanding. For the same reasons which we have given for modifying the manner of designation of the panel of the first board of directors, we find that the trustee of the Missouri Pacific convertible bond indenture should be substituted for Alleghany Corporation as to the right of designation of one reorganization manager jointly with the general-mortgage committee. Otherwise, we find that the provisions of the compromise plan with respect to the reorganization managers are fair and equitable and they are approved.

Railway Labor Executives' Association's request for inclusion of certain provisions.—The Railway Labor Executives' Association requests on brief that we include in our approved plan of reorganization certain provisions, as set forth in its brief, for the protection of the employes upon consolidation or merger of the debtors into a new company, or that we define the procedural requirements which otherwise must be followed by the representatives of the employes in obtaining such protection.

Before consummation of the plan, it will be necessary for the debtors to apply to us for authority to issue the new securities, assume obligations, transfer any property, sell, consolidate, merge or pool traffic pursuant to either the Bankruptcy Act or the Interstate Commerce Act after the plan has been confirmed by the court.

There will be included in our approved plan the following provision for protection of employes:

> As a condition of its approval of the conveyance of the properties of the debtors to the reorganized company, the Commission shall require a fair and equitable arrangement to protect the interest of the railroad employes affected, as required by law.

Other plans of reorganization.—Several outlines of proposed capital structures of the reorganized company differing from those of either the compromise plan or the Commission plan have been presented or suggested in the record of this proceeding. These other so-called plans of reorganization have been considered by us, but insofar as they differ from the plan approved by us herein they are not approved. It is unnecessary to discuss these other proposed capital structures since we have already given in full the reasons for our findings and conclusions in respect of a capital structure for the reorganized company and described the terms which we consider should be included in a plan of reorganization.

CONCLUSION

We conclude that, upon the record previously made, and upon further hearing held by us, the report and order of January 10, 1940, supra, as modified by the report and order of April 9, 1940, supra, approving a plan of reorganization for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, et al., debtors, pursuant to section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, should be further modified as herein specified, and that, as thus modified, the plan will meet the requirements of section 77 (b) and (e) of that act, will be compatible with the public interest, and should be approved.

Annexed hereto as appendix E is a statement showing the distribution of reorganization securities and cash in respect of total claims and as appendix F a statement showing the distribution of cash and new securities per $1,000 bond.

An appropriate supplemental order will be entered.

Miller, Commissioner, dissenting in part:

In my opinion warrants to purchase stock should be issued also to the stockholders. However, I think that the stock to be issued should be subordinate to class B common stock and it would appear that the price should not be fixed at this time. For my views on this subject, I refer to my separate expression in F. D. No. 10992, New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co. Reorganization, 239 I. C. C. 337, 443, decided March 22, 1940. Moreover, what I said in that expression respecting such other principles to which the majority still adheres is also applicable here.

Splawn, Commissioner, concurring:

In my separate expression upon the plan for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific system, approved by the majority by its report of January 10 and supplemental report and order of April 9, 1940, I referred to the possibility that, if our plan then approved were assented to by the creditors of the International and its properties included in the proposed new company with the resulting extinguishment of its corporate identity as contemplated by the plan, the effect of a judgment of the Texas courts affirmed by the United States Supreme Court upholding the validity of a contract between a predecessor company of the International and the citizens of Palestine, Texas, might be to require the new company to maintain the general offices, shops, and roundhouses of the entire system at Palestine, Texas.

I further stated that it was my understanding that Palestine wishes only to be assured that the International's facilities, which it now has, be not diminished or abandoned, that is, that the general offices and shops of the International itself be maintained at Palestine.

Under the provisions of the former report the properties of the International could, if so ordered by the court, be sold to outside interests or that debtor left unreorganized and thereby excluded from the new company, in either case without making the plan inoperative. These provisions were inserted in the plan to be availed of in the event the International's creditors did not accept the plan.

By his order of July 12, 1941, approving our plan, the judge of the bankruptcy court "corrected" our plan by adding, among others, a provision to the effect that, in the discretion of the reorganization managers, with the approval of the court, the properties of the International could be transferred to the existing International as a wholly owned subsidiary of the new Missouri Pacific company unless there should be obtained a modification of the judgment of the Texas courts which would permit the general system offices of the new company to be located and maintained outside of the State of Texas even if the International properties were merged with the properties of the other debtor companies. The substance of this provision is included in our plan as now approved and there is deleted from our plan, as now approved, the provisions of our former plan that the International properties may be sold to outside interests or the International left unreorganized, without rendering the plan inoperative, if its creditors do not assent to our plan.

There is one further matter upon which I wish to comment. In his opinion, the judge of the bankruptcy court stated:

> In the absence of some modification of the decree of the State Court in the Anderson County case, it seems imperative that either the general offices of the consolidated company must be moved to Palestine, or else the International-Great Northern must continue to be operated separately until such time as a consolidation may be authorized under Section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act. (Emphasis added)

Subdivision (n) of section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act expressly provides that no reorganization effected under that act and an order of the court or Commission in connection therewith, shall relieve any carrier from the obligation of any final judgment of any Federal or State court rendered prior to January 1, 1920, against such carrier or against one of its predecessors in title, requiring the maintenance of offices, shops and roundhouses at any place where such judgment was rendered on account of the making of a valid contract or contracts by such carrier or one of its predecessors in title.

I do not wish at this time and upon the present record to express an opinion as to whether this Commission has the power, acting in the future under the jurisdiction conferred upon it by section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, to nullify the judgment obtained in the Texas courts in respect of the Palestine matter although the Commission is now expressly prevented from doing so in the bankruptcy proceeding. It would seem at the least that the Commission might be reluctant, if such a separate proceeding were later instituted, to circumvent the present expressed intention of Congress that such contracts should not be nullified. Such a question, if it should arise, would be decided, of course, in the light of the circumstances as disclosed by the record which would then be made in the separate proceeding.

I wish to point out, however, that the chance of such a question arising in the future is undoubtedly affected by the provision in the plan now approved that the International may be reorganized as a wholly owned subsidiary of the new company in the event no modification of the judgment of the Texas court is obtained. Whether, after such reorganization procedure has been followed and the system reorganization effected on that basis, any advantage would accrue from the institution of a section 5 proceeding under the Interstate Commerce Act is open to doubt. The present creditors of the International are not affected whichever method of reorganization is resorted to and the plan now approved appears to make it impossible for the International to be excluded from the system reorganization.

(1) Under the heading "Additional Optional Offers," holder of claim may elect one but only one of the offers shown on each line.

(2) Holders of River and Gulf 4s are offered $400 in new First Mortgage Bonds, Series C, with option to take Series A or Series B, whichever is not taken by the R. F. C.

(3) Approximate figures, as claim settled in new First Mortgage Bonds is reduced to next lowest multiple of $1000 by payment of cash.

(4) It is anticipated that 30% of the principal amount of these bonds will have been paid in cash prior to January 1, 1944, and the computations of outstanding claims in Schedule B next attached give effect to this payment. The tabulation above, however, shows the original claim for principal of $1000 per bond, and the anticipated $300 payment against principal is included in the column headed "Cash."

(5) Offered new Plaza-Olive Building First Mortgage Bonds.

(6) In addition, holders of outstanding bonds shall receive a pro rata share of the net cash proceeds from the abandoned line of this railroad. As of December 31, 1942, this amounted to $254.32 per $1000 bond.

(7) The plan also provides, in Section 77, for the possible underwriting of the Collateral Trust Notes. If this is arranged, holders of River and Gulf 4s would have the option of accepting either the $300 principal amount of Collateral Trust Notes shown, or in lieu thereof, cash for the notes at a price of not less than par, plus accrued interest.

Table above does not include provision for creditors, which are as follows:

Upon petitions, plan for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, et al., approved July 4, 1944, pursuant to section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, further modified and approved.[1]

Appearances as in prior reports, and in addition, Irving Rand for intervener.

THIRD SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT OF THE COMMISSION

By the Commission:

By report and order entered July 4, 1944, in the above proceeding, 257 I. C. C. ..., we approved a modified plan for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, et al., hereinafter called the debtor, pursuant to section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, 11 U. S. C. 205. Within the statutory period of 60 days from the date of that report and order, petitions for modification of the plan were filed by the debtor, the group of institutional holders of Missouri Pacific first and refunding mortgage bonds, John M. Balliet, owner of various system securities, Chemical Bank & Trust Company, trustee for Missouri Pacific secured serial 5¼-percent bonds, the protective committee for International first-mortgage bondholders, the protective committee for the Missouri Pacific common stockholders, the protective committee for Missouri Pacific preferred stockholders, the Missouri Pacific convertible bondholders' group, Andrew W. Comstock, holder of Missouri Pacific secured serial 5¼-percent bonds, Helen J. Comstock, owner of New Orleans stock, Fred D. Wilson, holder of Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bonds, and W. Seymour Smith, Donald D. Wilson, and William H. Bigga, as directors of the Missouri Pacific. A reply to the petition of the Missouri Pacific convertible bondholders' group was filed by the Commercial National Bank & Trust Company of New York, trustee for Missouri Pacific convertible 5½-percent bonds. Several parties have requested oral argument, an opportunity to file briefs, and a reopening of the proceeding for further hearings.

1 For previous reports see 249 I. C. C. 650; 252 I. C. C. 818; 254 I. C. C. 858 and 859; and 257 I. C. C. ....

The petition filed by the group of institutional holders of Missouri Pacific first and refunding bonds recites that the group, comprising 11 institutions holding $36,341,000 of the bonds, was formed after the termination on July 21, 1944, of the protective committee for holders of the bonds. The group has been permitted to intervene in this proceeding. It states that its members had all formerly deposited their bonds with the protective committee, that the same individuals serve as chairman and secretary of the group as formerly served in similar positions with the committee, that the same counsel has been retained, and that other holders of first and refunding mortgage bonds who have intervened in the proceeding hold comparatively small amounts of the bonds. The group requests that its name be substituted for the predecessor protective committee in the provisions of the plan which afford the protective committee the right to designate 5 of the first board of directors of the reorganized company and 2 of the reorganization managers. We approve this modification of our plan.

Balliet's petition is confined to a request that there be no voting trust. He contends that we have no power under section 77 to approve a plan that will deny to the stockholders of the reorganized company by means of the establishment of a voting trust their right to manage, control and operate the railroad after consummation of the plan. While the power to require a voting trust is not expressly granted by section 77, it is our opinion that the provisions of the statute that a plan shall include provisions modifying or altering the rights of creditors generally or of any class of them, secured or unsecured, or of stockholders, either through the issuance of new securities of any character or otherwise, and also the general provisions of the statute that a plan shall provide adequate means for the execution of the plan, fully empower us to exercise such a right if we consider it necessary as a part of the plan to provide a voting trust in order to afford adequate protection of any class or classes of creditors or stockholders to assure a stable, experienced and impartial management of the new company or to serve any other useful and necessary purpose. Since any plan approved by us and the court must under the statute be submitted to all creditors and stockholders found to have an interest in the plan for their acceptance or rejection and thereafter must be confirmed by the court, we find no basis for Balliet's further contention that a requirement for a voting trust violates the bondholders' rights under the Constitution as a deprivation of their property without due process of law. Balliet's petition will be denied.

We do not find in the other petitions any references to facts of record which were not considered by us in our report of July 4, 1944, nor do the arguments now advanced differ essentially from those which have already been effectively presented to us and which in our opinion have been the subject of adequate discussions in our reports and which were decided therein. In general, the petitions embrace requests for the fixing of a larger maximum capitalization, based upon contentions that greater consideration than that accorded by us should be given to recent increases in the investments and other assets of the separate groups of debtors and of the system, the recently increased earnings, especially during the last 4 years, and to the testimony of record with respect to the future prospective earnings of the debtor upon the termination of the war. All these arguments are urged to the end that the respective petitioners be granted greater consideration in the satisfaction of their claims than that accorded them by the plan or, in the case of the Missouri Pacific stockholders, that some valuable participation be granted them in the reorganized company by allocation of shares of stock or warrants for purchase of stock.

It is asserted by one of the petitioners that our controlling reason for not approving the issuance to Missouri Pacific stockholders of the warrants proposed for that purpose by the compromise plan was that the total capitalization of the debtor might thereby be increased, since, under the terms of the compromise plan, the cash proceeds from exercise of the warrants would be used by the new company "for any proper corporate purpose." For that reason this petitioner expressly requests that we authorize the additional warrants but require the proceeds to be used to retire new general-mortgage bonds. The result then would be no change in the amount of authorized capitalization. It should be observed, however, that we expressly stated in our report that, in view of the impossibility of providing for substantial satisfaction of junior system creditors in a plan formulated within a prudent capitalization, it would be inequitable to offer any rights of value to the Missouri Pacific stockholders, whose equities we found to be without value, and that such rights, if possessing any value, should accrue to the junior creditors and not to the stockholders. There is no reason for so diluting the stock and the warrants issuable under the approved plan by the further issuance to the junior creditors of additional warrants. As stated in our report, the issuance of any additional warrants might also have a material effect upon the extent of control of the new company exercisable by the different classes of claimants under the terms of the plan. This petition will be denied.

William H. Biggs, counsel representing several system security holders, renews his request that we adjudicate the question of the validity of the Missouri Pacific advances of cash to the New Orleans before approving any plan. We discussed in our report of July 4, 1944, the matter of these advances and counsel's contentions with respect to their validity. There is nothing which we desire to add to what we stated therein.

Several of the petitioners request that the plan provide for further payments in cash of all or parts of certain claims in addition to the cash payments authorized in the plan for such purposes. We analyzed at length in our report the cash position of the trustee of the debtor as disclosed by the record at that time and stated our conclusions in regard to the manner in which we considered the cash on hand should be used in the reorganization. There is pending in the court a petition that the debtor's trustee be directed to pay in cash 30 percent of the principal of the River and Gulf bonds additional to the 30 percent heretofore directed by the court to be paid. The payment of the latter was assumed by us to have been effected when we determined the allocations to present creditors of cash and new securities as stated in our report of July 4, 1944. If the petition to the court for the further payment is granted, it will result in the nonissuance of the $10,352,400 of new collateral-trust 3½-percent 10-year notes, authorized to be issued under the terms of the approved plan. As a further consequence of such payment, there also would not be issued $12,940,000 of new first and refunding mortgage series-C bonds, which would be pledged as collateral security for the payment of the 10-year notes.

We are urged to modify the plan so as expressly to approve the payment of this additional 30 percent of the principal of the River and Gulf bonds and the distribution to other creditors of securities in the principal amount of the collateral-trust notes which otherwise would be distributed to the River and Gulf bondholders. Under the terms of the approved plan, no new securities would be issued in lieu of the collateral-trust notes and, upon consummation of the plan, the amount of total capitalization would reflect the nonissuance of the notes.

In determining cash distributions as well as fixing total capitalization as stated in our report, we recognized that the cash position of the debtor's trustee would vary in the future and that "surplus cash" might either exceed or fall short of our estimates. We believed and are still of the opinion, that the court, in the light of current conditions, should determine any amounts of cash available and not authorized by the plan, which might be so distributed, within the framework of the plan, from time to time up to the date of consummation of the plan. In fixing the amount of capitalization and in approving the provision of the plan authorizing cash distributions upon order of the court prior to consummation, we recognized the possibility that as of the date of consummation the system capitalization might be somewhat less than the $560,000,000 approved by us. We contemplated, however, insuring that amount as the maximum. Even if the collateral-trust notes are not issued, an increase in equipment obligations resulting from a future demand for, and availability of, additional equipment prior to the date of consummation of the plan may result in total capitalization as of that time being about the same as the maximum fixed by us.

For these reasons we will deny the petitions requesting our approval of the additional cash payment to the River and Gulf bondholders or other additional cash distributions as well as the issuance and distribution to other creditors of additional new securities in lieu thereof.

One petitioner representing certain Missouri Pacific convertible bondholders urges that the provisions of the plan whereby the trustee for the convertible bonds is given the right of appointment of two directors and a joint right to appoint one reorganization manager be changed to provide that we "select a trustee for the convertible bondholders who shall impartially act for the benefit of all convertible bonds and whose services shall commence with the confirmation of the plan". This petitioner contends that the present successor indenture trustee is the "hand picked appointee of the Alleghany Corporation", an allegation which the trustee, Commercial National Bank and Trust Company of New York, denies. As pointed out by the trustee in its reply, it was selected to act as successor trustee by resolution of the board of directors of Missouri Pacific adopted at a meeting held on January 13, 1937, pursuant to the provisions of the indenture. It states that ever since its appointment it has represented all holders of the convertible bonds impartially. There is no evidence of record to the contrary. Petitioner's request will be denied.

Several of the petitioners have requested oral argument. In view of the fact that no matters or arguments of substance have been presented by the petitions, which have not been considered and discussed by us in our report of July 4, 1944, these requests will be denied. We will also deny the several requests for filing of further briefs and for reopening the proceeding for further hearings, as well as all other prayers of the petitions except as indicated herein.

On our own motion.—In the discussion in our report of July 4, 1944, of the investment items of the system producing a total of $573,926,178 as correctly stated in the first paragraph on page 42 of the mimeographed copy of our report, we inadvertently omitted reference to an item of $1,643,187 appearing on the debtor's balance sheet as of December 31, 1934, as representing "Other investments", and also an item of about $100,000 held in sinking funds and as deposits held by mortgage trustees in lieu of mortgage property sold, both of which are included in total investments shown. The report has been corrected and the omissions are supplied in the report about to be printed.

There are several typographical errors in appendixes E and F attached to our report of July 4, 1944, and made a part thereof.[2] These errors will be corrected in the printed copy of our report.

In paragraph T of our order of July 4, 1944, we provide the treatment to be accorded holders of general unsecured claims against the New Orleans and its subsidiaries. Our intention is to include in this provision all subsidiaries of the New Orleans except-

2 These errors are as follows:

Appendix E, sheet 1.—The amount of $29,262,840 appearing as the first item under the column entitled "First Mortgage Bonds Series C 4% 50-yrs." should be $89,262,840; the column entitled "Gen. Mortgage Ser. B 5% 25-yrs." should be entitled "Gen. Mortgage Ser. B 5% 75-yrs."; and the footnote symbol "(h)" where it appears in reference to the amount of $10,352,400 in the column headed "Collateral Trust Notes 3½% 10-yrs." should be stricken.

Appendix F, sheet 1.—The first item in the last column under the heading "Cash" should be 71.1000 instead of 71.0000.

ing the International which is treated in the next succeeding paragraph of the order. Our order will be corrected accordingly.

In order to meet the requirements of the New York Stock Exchange as to listing stocks we will add a provision to the plan that the holders of the preferred stock, voting as a class, shall have the right to elect not less than two directors after default of the payment of the equivalent of six quarterly dividends, and that the affirmative vote of the holders of at least two-thirds of the preferred stock shall be required as a prerequisite to any charter or bylaw amendment altering materially any existing provision of such preferred stock.

SUMMARY

Other than minor corrections and clarifications of our report and order of July 4, 1944, which have been hereinabove enumerated, the only modifications approved herein are:

(1) In section U of the plan, wherein the protective committee for Missouri Pacific first and refunding mortgage bonds is given the right of designation of five members of the panel of nominees for the first board of directors of the reorganized company, we will substitute for the protective committee, the group of institutional holders of Missouri Pacific first and refunding mortgage bonds and will approve a similar substitution in section V of the plan in respect of the designation of two of the reorganization managers.

(2) We will provide in section P of the plan that the preferred stock, voting as a class, shall have the right to elect not less than two directors after default of the equivalent of six quarterly dividends and that the affirmative vote of the holders of at least two-thirds of such stock shall be required as a prerequisite to any charter or bylaw amendment altering materially any existing provision of such stock.

We conclude and find that the plan of reorganization thus modified will meet the requirements of section 77(b) and (e) of the Bankruptcy Act, will be compatible with the public interest, and should be approved.

An appropriate order, superseding our order of July 4, 1944, will be entered approving the plan approved by us on July 4, 1944, as herein modified.

Miller, Commissioner, dissenting in part:

I dissent insofar as the petitions for the issuance of warrants to stockholders are denied. However, if such warrants were allowed, it is my opinion that the proceeds thereof should be used to retire fixed interest bonds instead of new general-mortgage bonds, as requested. See my dissent in the prior report of July 4, 1944, 257 I. C. C.

THIRD SUPPLEMENTAL ORDER

At a General Session of the INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, held at its office in Washington, D. C., on the 9th day of October, A. D. 1944.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY
REORGANIZATION

It appearing, That this Commission, on April 9, 1940, made and filed its supplemental report and entered its supplemental order in this proceeding, 240 I. C. C. 15, approving a plan for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company, the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, the Missouri Pacific Railroad Corporation in Nebraska, The Beaumont, Sour Lake & Western Railway Company, The St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railway Company, the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Railroad Company, the Houston North Shore Railway Company, the Boonville, St. Louis and Southern Railway Company, the Asherton and Gulf Railway Company, the Asphalt Belt Railway Company, the Houston and Brazos Valley Railway Company, the Iberia, St. Mary & Eastern Railroad Company, the New Iberia & Northern Railroad Company, the Austin Dam and Suburban Railway Company, The Orange & Northwestern Railroad Company, the Rio Grande City Railway Company, the San Antonio Southern Railway Company, the San Benito and Rio Grande Valley Railway Company, the Cairo and Thebes Railroad Company, The Chester and Mount Vernon Railroad Company, the Fort Smith Suburban Railway Company, the Marion & Eastern Railroad Company, the Sugar Land Railway Company, and the Natchez & Southern Railway Company, being all of the debtors in the proceeding excepting the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company, debtor, that plan being a modification of the plan approved by this Commission's report and order of January 10, 1940, 239 I. C. C. 7.

It further appearing, That after argument before, and submission of briefs to, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, the Circuit Court of Appeals remanded the proceeding to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri; that thereafter further objections to the plan of reorganization were filed in the District Court and, after a hearing on the objections, the District Court, hereinafter called the court, referred the proceeding back to this Commission for further proceedings in accordance with the applicable provisions of section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, including the consideration of modifications of the plan or the proposal of new plans;

It further appearing, That a further hearing has been held, and this Commission, on July 4, 1944, made and filed its second supplemental report and order, making certain modifications and adjustments in the plan of reorganization previously approved;

It further appearing, That upon consideration of petitions filed within the statutory period of 60 days from the date of the second supplemental report and order and of a reply filed to one of the petitions and upon further consideration of the record, this Commission upon the date hereof, made and filed its third supplemental report containing its findings of fact and conclusions thereon, which report, together with the previous reports of January 10, 1940, April 9, 1940, and July 4, 1944, is hereby referred to and made a part hereof, in which report of even date herewith it has approved certain modifications in the plan for the reorganization of the debtors:

It is ordered, That the following modified plan of reorganization of the debtors be, and it is hereby, approved:

PLAN OF REORGANIZATION

A. Cash distributions.—Cash in the treasuries of the debtors available for distribution may be distributed to creditors from time to time, pending the consummation of the plan, as the court may from time to time direct. Cash so paid shall be credited pro tanto against (a) cash payable under the plan and/or (b) interest and dividends accrued on new securities issuable under the plan up to the interest adjustment date, as the reorganization managers, with the approval of the court, shall determine. The interest adjustment date shall be the date (to be fixed by the reorganization managers with the approval of the court) to which interest and dividends on new securities are to be paid in cash at the time of the consummation of the plan. Different interest adjustment dates may be fixed for different classes of new securities.

If any creditor who shall receive under the plan alternative offers of cash or securities as hereinafter in the plan provided shall elect to accept such securities in lieu of cash, such creditor shall be required to refund an amount equal to any excess of (a) cash authorized after December 31, 1942, to be distributed in respect of securities owned by such creditor over the sum of (b) any cash payable to such creditor under the plan (exclusive of such alternative cash offer) and (c) interest and dividends accrued on new securities distributable to such creditor under the plan up to the interest adjustment date.

If the total cash authorized to be distributed on claims of any class after December 31, 1942, and prior to the consummation of the plan (after deducting any amount required to be refunded because of election to accept any alternative offer in securities), shall exceed the sum of (a) the total amount of cash payable on claims of such class as hereinafter set forth in the plan, (b) interest and dividends accrued on new securities distributable to claims of such class from the effective date, hereinafter stated, up to the interest adjustment date, and (c) if the effective date be changed pursuant to the following section B hereof, interest on the principal of the claims of such class from December 31, 1942 to the new effective date, such excess payment shall be deemed to constitute a retirement, pro tanto, at their principal amount of the most senior class of new securities issuable in respect of claims of such class under the plan (collateral-trust notes being deemed senior to first-mortgage bonds for the purposes of this section and of section B hereof) and the aggregate amount of such class of new securities actually issued under the plan shall be correspondingly reduced. Any such excess cash payments shall be deemed to be credits against sinking fund requirements for the issue or issues so reduced. The reorganization managers may, with the approval of the court, make any cash adjustments necessary to avoid the issue of fractional amounts of new securities.

B. Effective date.—The effective date of the plan shall be January 1, 1943, unless changed as hereinafter in this section provided. Interest on the principal of all allowed claims shall be computed to the effective date.

The effective date may, by the vote of a majority of the reorganization managers, including the reorganization manager designated by the junior creditors as hereinafter in the plan provided, with the approval of the court, be changed to any later January 1 (not later than the consummation of the plan), if, but only if, system earnings available for interest for each calendar year between December 31, 1942, and the effective date shall have exceeded by at least $5,000,000 all interest accruing for such calendar year on claims of creditors against the debtors (other than claims of general creditors against the International) outstanding during such calendar year.

If the effective date shall be changed pursuant to the last preceding paragraph:

(a) there shall be paid in cash to the holders of those classes of claims entitled under the plan to receive any new first-mortgage bonds or any collateral trust notes, issuable under the plan as hereinafter provided, an amount equal to the interest accruing on all such claims, excluding equipment trust obligations and Plaza-Olive Building bonds, for the period from December 31, 1942, to the new effective date; provided, however, that in the case of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the bank debt interest shall be paid only at the rate of 4 percent per annum;

(b) there shall be applied to the reduction of the debt to be issued under the plan an amount of cash sufficient to reduce such debt by a principal amount equal to interest accruing from December 31, 1942, to the effective date on all classes of claims (other than claims of general creditors against the International) not entitled under the plan to receive first-mortgage bonds or collateral trust notes. Such reduction of debt may be effected (1) by payment of all or any part of any of the claims mentioned in clause (a) above and/or (2) by the purchase or redemption and retirement of debt to be issued under the plan, all as the reorganization managers shall determine;

(c) the number of shares of class A common stock and class B common stock issuable under the plan as hereinafter provided shall be increased in the aggregate by an amount equal (at $100 per share) to interest accruing from December 31, 1942 to the effective date on all classes of claims (other than claims of general creditors against the International) not entitled under the plan to receive first-mortgage bonds or collateral trust notes; and each such class shall receive (in addition to other securities allotted under the plan) a number of shares of common stock, class A or class B, equal (at $100 per share) to the interest accruing on such claims from December 31, 1942, to the effective date.

In making the distribution of additional common stock pursuant to subparagraph (c) above, any class of creditors allotted no class B common stock under the plan shall receive its additional allotment in class A common stock and any class allotted only class B common stock under the plan shall receive its additional allotment in class B common stock. Classes allotted both class A common stock and class B common stock under the plan shall be entitled to have their respective allotments increased proportionately.

New securities issuable hereunder shall be dated as of the effective date or, in the discretion of the reorganization managers and with the approval of the court, any class of new securities may be dated as of the interest adjustment date therefor, but in the latter case, creditors who receive new securities of such class shall receive the same amounts of cash and be entitled to the same rights in respect of accruals and accumulations as if the new securities of such class had been dated as of the effective date.

The carrying out of the plan shall not require any retroactive change in the operations of the trustee of the estate of the debtors or in the reports made to this Commission or in any other reports or returns for the period prior to the date when such new securities are issued.

Debtors included in the plan.—This plan of reorganization, hereinafter called the plan, shall include Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, hereinafter called the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company, hereinafter called the New Orleans, the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, hereinafter called the International, the Missouri Pacific Railroad Corporation in Nebraska, The Beaumont, Sour Lake & Western Railway Company, The St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railway Company, the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Railroad Company, the Houston North Shore Railway Company, the Boonville, St. Louis and Southern Railway Company, the Asherton and Gulf Railway Company, the Asphalt Belt Railway Company, the Houston and Brazos Valley Railway Company, the Iberia, St. Mary & Eastern Railroad Company, the New Iberia & Northern Railroad Company, the Austin Dam and Suburban Railway Company, The Orange & Northwestern Railroad Company, the Rio Grande City Railway Company, the San Antonio Southern Railway Company, the San Benito and Rio Grande Valley Railway Company, the Cairo and Thebes Railroad Company, The Chester and Mount Vernon Railroad Company, the Fort Smith Suburban Railway Company, the Marion & Eastern Railroad Company, the Sugar Land Railway Company, and the Natchez & Southern Railway Company. All of the above named debtors are herein collectively referred to as the debtors. The Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company is not included, no plan for its reorganization having been filed with this Commission and the court having, on May 31, 1944 entered its order directing that as of that date all of the assets of the estate of that debtor be delivered to the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company, the court, however, reserving jurisdiction, among other things, for the entering of a final decree dismissing this reorganization proceeding as to that debtor.

C. Transfer of properties.—The properties of the debtors and of the Kansas-Missouri Elevator Company and Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company shall be merged or consolidated by transfer of the properties of all such companies to a new company, or, in the discretion of the reorganization managers with the approval of the court, to the Missouri Pacific, the reorganized company being hereinafter referred to in either case as the new company. The new company shall be incorporated under the laws of such State and shall have its general offices at such place as the court may direct, the laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding. In the discretion of the reorganization managers and with the approval of the court, (a) the properties of the International and Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company may be transferred to the International or to a separate new company (either of which are hereinafter called the reorganized International), and (b) the properties of the Natchez & Southern Railway Company and Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company may be transferred to the new company or to a separate new company (which latter is hereinafter called the reorganized Natchez). Any such transfer may be effected by a merger, consolidation, transfer of assets and/or by any other means approved by the reorganization managers. All such transfers shall be made subject to and in accordance with the plan.

D. New capitalization.—The capitalization of the new company after consummation of the plan shall, subject to the provisions of the preceding sections A and B hereof, consist substantially of the equipment obligations then outstanding of any or all of the aforesaid companies or of the trustee thereof, amounting as of January 1, 1943, to approximately $15,755,000, which shall be assumed by the new company (except in certain cases as will be hereinafter provided); approximately $166,809,000 of first-mortgage bonds of the new company, of which approximately $31,472,000 shall be either series A 15-year 3½-percent bonds or series B 25-year 3¾-percent bonds, and approximately $135,337,000 of series C 50-year 4-percent bonds (exclusive of approximately $12,940,000 principal amount to be pledged to secure the new collateral-trust 10-year notes hereinafter referred to); approximately $591,000 of Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage bonds; approximately $10,352,000 of 10-year collateral-trust secured 3½-percent notes; approximately $159,175,000 of general-mortgage income bonds, of which approximately $120,676,000 shall be series A 65-year cumulative 4½-percent bonds and approximately $38,499,000 shall be series B 75-year 5-percent bonds; approximately $57,717,000, par value, of series A 5-percent preferred stock of $100 par value per share; and approximately 1,500,810 shares of no par common stock, of which 911,840 shares shall be class A common stock and approximately 588,970 shares class B common stock, together with such additional shares of common stock as may be issued, as hereinafter provided, in satisfaction of allowed claims of general unsecured creditors of the debtors not entitled to preference, upon the terms hereinafter prescribed. In addition to the above stated capitalization of the new company there shall be issued as hereinafter provided, warrants entitling the holders thereof to purchase for a period of 10 years after consummation of the plan, approximately 494,699 shares of new class B common stock at a price of $100 a share, plus such additional warrants as shall, under the terms of the plan be issued to the holders of general unsecured claims against the debtors.

If the properties of the International and the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company be transferred to the reorganized International, the capitalization of the reorganized International, after consummation of the plan, shall consist substantially of equipment obligations, if any, then outstanding of the trustee of the estates of the International and the Austin Dam & Suburban, approximately $23,415,000 of new first-mortgage income 5-percent bonds, and such amount (not exceeding approximately $26,585,000) of new common stock with or without par value as the reorganization managers may determine. If the properties of the Natchez & Southern Railway Company and Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company be transferred to the reorganized Natchez, the capitalization of the reorganized Natchez, after consummation of the plan, shall consist substantially of equipment obligations, if any then outstanding, of the Natchez & Southern Railway Company, its trustee, and the Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company and approximately 5,000 shares of new common stock with or without par value, as the reorganization managers may determine. In either such event the capitalization of the new company shall be reduced by the amount of equipment obligations assumed by the reorganized International and the reorganized Natchez and all of the bonds and stock of the reorganized International and the reorganized Natchez, whether issued in reorganization or thereafter, shall be transferred to the new company and pledged under its new first-mortgage and general-mortgage, the creation of which are hereinafter provided for.

E. Disposition of old securities.—Upon the consummation of the plan and the issue and distribution of new securities as hereinafter provided, the existing stocks of the debtors and of the Kansas-Missouri Elevator Company and the Natchez & Louisiana Railway Transfer Company, when their properties shall have been conveyed as provided in the plan, together with all mortgage bonds, debenture bonds, notes and other securities (except equipment obligations which remain undisturbed) issued by them and outstanding, including any of such securities pledged, shall be surrendered to the reorganization managers and canceled, and all mortgages and indentures (other than indentures or agreements securing equipment obligations which remain undisturbed) shall be satisfied of record and canceled.

F. Cancellation of old securities and indebtedness.—The following securities shall be canceled upon consummation of the plan, and no securities of the new company shall be issued in respect of them:

(1) All securities issued by any of the debtors which are owned by one or more of the debtors.

(2) The following blocks of various classes of securities which are owned by the Missouri Improvement Company or Western Coal & Mining Company: (a) Owned by Missouri Improvement Company—$899,000 Missouri Pacific Railroad Company convertible 5½-percent bonds; 16,100 shares Missouri Pacific Railroad Company preferred stock; 7,600 shares Missouri Pacific Railroad Company common stock; and $2,095,000 International-Great Northern Railroad Company adjustment-mortgage 6-percent bonds; and (b) owned by Western Coal & Mining Company—$820,000 Missouri Pacific Railroad Company first and refunding mortgage 5-percent bonds, series F; $30,000 Missouri Pacific Railroad Company first and refunding mortgage 5-percent bonds, series I; $40,000 St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company River and Gulf Divisions first-mortgage 4-percent bonds; $275,000 International-Great Northern Railroad Company adjustment-mortgage 6-percent bonds; and $11,500 Boonville, St. Louis & Southern Railway Company first-mortgage 5-percent bonds.

(3) The following indebtedness of the debtors and of the Western Coal & Mining Company, the Missouri Improvement Company, and the Missouri Pacific Transportation Company: (a) $10,565,227 debt of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, together with unpaid interest; (b) $2,788,211 debt (as of June 30, 1943) of International-Great Northern Railroad Company to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company, together with unpaid interest; (c) $500,000 debt of Western Coal & Mining Company to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, including unpaid interest; (d) the indebtedness, including unpaid interest, of Missouri Improvement Company to Missouri Pacific Transportation Company in the principal amount of $2,877,971; and of Missouri Pacific Transportation Company to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company in the principal amount of $3,439,623; being the indebtedness incurred for the purchase of the securities above listed as owned by Missouri Improvement Company.

(4) The following blocks of securities: (a) $1,628,000 Missouri Pacific general-mortgage 4-percent bonds, reserved for issuance against a like principal amount of Central Branch Union Pacific Railway Company first-mortgage 4-percent bonds, provided for elsewhere; (b) $382,578.75 Missouri Pacific Railroad Company general-mortgage 4-percent bonds reserved for issuance against assessment on old Missouri Pacific Railway common stock; (c) $5,000 Boonville, St. Louis & Southern Railway Company first-mortgage 5-percent bonds, reserved for issuance against old Boonville bonds; (d) $765,157 Missouri Pacific Railroad Company common stock, reserved against old Missouri Pacific Railway Company common stock; (e) $167,100 New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company common stock, reserved against deposit of St. Louis & San Francisco, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Division bonds.

Nothing in section E or in this section F shall be deemed to require (1) the cancellation of the capital stock of the International if it shall be retained as a separate corporation as herein permitted by the plan; or (2) the cancellation of the voting stock issued by any debtor if it shall be needed to effect a dissolution of such debtor or if the corporate existence of such debtor should, in the opinion of the reorganization managers, be preserved in order to retain any valuable franchise or other right which would be seriously impaired or destroyed if transferred to the new company, the reorganized International or the reorganized Natchez.

G. Disposition of funds on deposit with mortgage trustees under old indentures.—Upon consummation of the plan, all funds on deposit with the mortgage trustees of the debtors, representing sums paid from time to time to such trustees for the release of properties from the liens of the mortgages, sale of scrap, dividends, interest, and otherwise, and all collateral pledged under such mortgages shall be surrendered to the reorganization managers free from existing mortgage liens (excepting the cash proceeds from salvage of the properties of the Boonville, St. Louis & Southern Railway Company, debtor, for which a different disposition is herein provided), after deductions therefrom of any amounts which the court may find should be deducted under the provisions of the mortgages and consistent with the plan of reorganization. The new company shall pay, in cash, all interest on the bonds of the debtors which had been declared payable but had not been paid prior to the filing of the petitions by the debtors under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act and, subject to the provisions of section A hereof, all interest which shall have been ordered paid by the court subsequent to the dates of filing of such petitions up to the date of consummation of the plan but which shall not have been paid, if and when such coupons are presented by the holders thereof; provided, however, that nothing herein shall require the new company to pay any interest which shall be barred by the statute of limitations.

H. Disposition of collateral held by R. F. C., R. C. C. and the Banks.—Upon consummation of the plan, all collateral pledged by the debtors as security for their notes to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation, and J. P. Morgan & Company and participating banks shall be surrendered to the new company.

I. The new first-mortgage bonds.—The new first-mortgage bonds shall be secured by a new, open, first mortgage constituting a first lien, subject only to the liens of equipment obligations and the Plaza-Olive Building first mortgage, on all properties and assets, including securities and leaseholds, owned by the new company upon consummation of the plan and, subject to liens and mortgages in existence at the time of acquisition and to purchase money liens and mortgages, upon all property acquired by the new company after reorganization, except land grant lands not used in or necessary for the operation of the railroad and such other property, if any, as the reorganization managers with the approval of the court may determine to exclude, and except that (a) if the new company shall acquire the properties of any company (other than a subsidiary wholly owned at the time of consummation of the plan) constituting a class I carrier, such properties shall not be subject to the lien of the first mortgage unless acquired in whole or in part by the use of first-mortgage bonds or general-mortgage bonds, or moneys deposited under either of those mortgages and (b) if the new company shall be consolidated with, or merged into, or shall sell its assets substantially as an entirety to any other class I carrier (other than a subsidiary wholly owned at the time of consummation of the plan) no properties theretofore owned or thereafter acquired by such other company shall be subject to the lien of the first mortgage except properties thereafter acquired which shall be appurtenant or incident to properties subject to the lien of the first mortgage or which shall consist of any line of railroad or securities representing control thereof, which will displace or otherwise adversely affect the use theretofore made of, or have the effect of diverting traffic from, any line of railroad then subject to the first mortgage, or which shall be within the maintenance or replacement covenants of the first mortgage or which shall be acquired in whole or in part by the use of first-mortgage bonds or general-mortgage bonds or moneys deposited under the first mortgage or the general mortgage.

So far as the reorganization managers may deem practicable, such lien shall be in the form of a direct mortgage, but it may take the form of the pledge or assignment of securities of a corporation or corporations owning, or securities having a lien upon, property to which the lien is intended to extend. The first mortgage shall contain provisions permitting, upon suitable terms, the use free from the lien of the mortgage of any securities subject thereto in effecting a merger or consolidation of the issuer of such securities into the Missouri Pacific system, subject, however, to the obtaining of such governmental authority for such merger or consolidation as may be then required.

First-mortgage bonds, other than series A, B and C bonds, may be issued from time to time without limit as to aggregate amount in different series, subject to such limitations and restrictions as may be specified in the first mortgage, payable on such date or dates, in such denominations, bearing interest at such rates, and containing such provisions in regard to sinking funds, redemption, conversion, taxes, place or places and money or moneys of payment, and registration, and having such other characteristics as may be prescribed by the board of directors of the new company at the time of issue, but, with respect to the lien of the first mortgage, all equally secured.

First-mortgage bonds, series A, B and C, shall be issued in the reorganization and shall respectively be limited in authorized principal amount to the amount necessary to carry out the terms of the plan, which require the issuance or pledge of such bonds.

Series A bonds shall be limited to the principal amount necessary to carry out the plan. They shall mature 15 years after their date, shall bear interest at the rate of 3½ percent per annum payable semi-annually and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest-payment date on 30 days' notice, and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 101 percent of their face value during the first 3 years, 100¾ percent during the next succeeding 3 years, 100½ percent during the next succeeding 3 years, 100¼ percent during the next succeeding 3 years, and at 100 percent thereafter until maturity, together with accrued interest. Bonds of series A shall be redeemable for the sinking fund at the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest.

Series B bonds shall be limited to the principal amount necessary to carry out the plan. They shall mature 25 years after their date, shall bear interest at the rate of 3¾ percent per annum payable semi-annually, and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest payment date on 30 days' notice, and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 102½ percent of their face value during the first 3 years, 102¼ percent during the next succeedings 3 years, 102 percent during the next succeeding 3 years, 101¾ percent during the next succeeeding 2 years, 101½ percent during the next succeeding 2 years, 101¼ percent during the next succeeding 2 years, 101 percent during the next succeeding 2 years, 100¾ percent during the next succeeding 2 years, 100½ percent during the next succeeding 2 years, 100¼ percent during the next succeeding 2 years, and at 100 percent thereafter until maturity, together with accrued interest. Bonds of series B shall be redeemable for the sinking fund at the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest.

Series C bonds shall be limited to the principal amount necessary to carry out the plan. They shall mature 50 years after their date, shall bear interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum payable semi-annually, and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest payment date on 30 days' notice, and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 106 percent of their face amount during the first 4 years, 105½ percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 105 percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 104½ percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 104 percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 103½ percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 103 percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 102½ percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 102 percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 101½ percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 101 percent during the next succeeding 4 years, 100½ percent during the next succeeding 3 years, and at 100 percent thereafter to maturity, together with accrued interest. Bonds of series C shall be redeemable for the sinking fund at the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest.

The first mortgage shall provide for the payment on April 1 of each year, commencing with the second

April 1, following the effective date, while any series A, B or C bonds are outstanding, of an installment of sinking fund in an amount equal to one-quarter of 1 percent of the aggregate principal amount of series A, B and C bonds to be authenticated pursuant to the plan (excluding bonds pledged to secure the collateral-trust notes). The obligation of the new company to make such sinking fund payments shall be cumulative so that, if not earned in any year, the deficiency shall be made up in the next succeeding year or years. Such sinking fund installments shall be payable only out of available net income as hereinafter in Section O provided. Said sinking fund shall be applied to the retirement of the following new securities in the order stated, by purchase in the open market or by call for tenders at not exceeding the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest: (1) collateral-trust 10-year notes, (2) first-mortgage bonds, series A, (3) first-mortgage bonds, series B, and (4) first-mortgage bonds, series C. If on November 1 of any year the unexpended balance remaining in said sinking fund exceeds $50,000, the funds then in said sinking fund shall be applied on the next succeeding interest-payment date to the redemption of the above new securities listed in the above order. All notes and bonds acquired as in this paragraph provided shall be retained in the sinking fund and, for the purpose of the sinking fund, interest shall be paid thereon to the same extent as if the bonds (or notes) were outstanding, such payments of interest into the sinking fund on such bonds (or notes) to be additional to the regular sinking-fund payments.

First-mortgage bonds, in addition to those to be issued in the reorganization, may be authenticated from time to time subject to the approval of this Commission or of such regulatory body or tribunal as may have jurisdiction thereof as follows:

(a) In such amount as the reorganization managers or the board of directors of the new company may determine in order to enable the new company to preserve a suitable proprietary position in the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Company now in reorganization; or

(b) to refund first-mortgage bonds (excluding bonds issued solely by way of pledge) or obligations secured by mortgage liens prior to the lien of the first-mortgage, or obligations secured by first-mortgage bonds to the extent so secured; or

(c) upon the deposit of new cash equal to the principal amount to be issued; or

(d) to provide for, or to reimburse the new company for not exceeding 75 percent of expenditures made after the effective date, but not more than 3 years prior to the date of such authentication (including expenditures for the acquisition or construction of new railroad equipment, free from other lien, but not including expenditures for the making of additions and betterments to equipment) which under the accounting rules of this Commission are properly chargeable to capital account; provided, however, that (1) except when bonds are authenticated in respect of new mileage (or securities representative thereof) or in respect of new equipment, the said 75 percent shall be applied to the net amount of said capital expenditures after deducting therefrom, to such extent and on such basis as may be specified in the first mortgage, credits to capital account after the effective date; (2) if any first-mortgage bonds are authenticated, or cash deposited under the first mortgage is withdrawn to provide or reimburse for the acquisition of railroad equipment, a sinking fund shall be established (in addition to any other sinking fund then in effect for any series of first-mortgage bonds) payable in equal annual installments in an amount sufficient to retire (at par) within the expected efficient service life of such equipment (in no case to exceed 15 years) a principal amount of first-mortgage bonds equal to (a) the principal amount of bonds so authenticated, or (b) the amount of deposited cash so withdrawn, the payments into such sinking funds to have precedence over any other sinking funds established for any first-mortgage bonds, except any sinking funds established for the retirement of emergency bonds, which latter sinking funds shall have precedence over the equipment sinking funds; (3) if any property shall be acquired subject to existing liens, the amount of additional first-mortgage bonds issuable therefor, or issued to refund prior lien obligations thereon, together with the aggregate amount of existing liens to which such property is subject, shall not exceed 75 percent of the net cost thereof, including as part of such cost the amount of such existing liens whether or not the indebtedness secured thereby is assumed by the new company; and (4) no bonds shall be issued on the basis of the acquisition of equipment under equipment trust obligations or obligations for the deferred or serial payment of the purchase price for equipment, or on the basis of the retirement of any such obligations; or without regard to any of the restrictions contained in the plan, except those in this clause (e) upon resolution adopted by the vote of two-thirds of the board of directors that funds are needed and cannot be raised except by sale, exchange or pledge of the bonds applied for, provided that (1) the emergency bonds shall constitute a revolving fund and the new company shall agree to retire and restore to the treasury all emergency bonds as soon as practicable; (2) all of the emergency bonds shall be redeemable, and if any emergency bonds are not retired within 2 years from the date of issue, there shall be an annual sinking fund therefor, equal to 10 percent of the amount thereof, payable as hereinafter in section O provided; and (3) the amount of emergency bonds, including emergency bonds pledged or held in the treasury of the new company, shall not exceed at any one time $15,000,000 or 2 years' fixed charges, whichever sums shall be the greater.

(e) bonds, hereinafter referred to as "emergency bonds", may be issued and sold or pledged

Subject to the foregoing provisions with respect to emergency bonds and to first-mortgage bonds authenticated or withdrawals of cash deposited under the first mortgage to provide or reimburse for the acquisition of equipment, (1) the first mortgage shall provide that the board of directors of the new company may create an additional sinking fund or sinking funds for the retirement of bonds of series other than series A, B, and C; (2) any such sinking fund or sinking funds may be subordinated to or may rank equally and ratably with, but not prior to the sinking fund for the bonds of series A, B and C; and (3) the aggregate amount of all annual installments payable in respect of such additional sinking fund or sinking funds shall not exceed one-half of 1 percent of the greatest principal amount of first-mortgage bonds, (other than series A, B and C) theretofore at any one time outstanding.

The first mortgage shall contain a covenant to the effect that no bonds (other than those to be authenticated under the plan and emergency bonds) will be authenticated and delivered unless (a) the new company shall have contracted forthwith to sell or pledge such bonds, and (b) the board of directors of the new company shall by resolution adopted by two-thirds of the entire number of directors, have determined that, in the opinion of the board, taking into account market and other relevant conditions at the time, it is undesirable or impracticable to provide the amount of money needed (1) by the sale of general-mortgage bonds having a suitable maturity, at a price which would give a yield to maturity of 5 percent or less, or (2) by the sale of preferred stock at a price which would give a current dividend return of 6 percent or less, or (3) by the sale of common stock of either class at a price which would give a current dividend return of 6 percent or less, based on the regular dividend rate then in effect, or, if no regular rate is in effect, on the average rate at which dividends have been paid during the past 12 calendar month.

The first mortgage shall provide, within conditions and limits to be therein prescribed, for the modification and alteration thereof and of any or all supplements thereto and of the rights and obligations of the new company and of the holders of the bonds issued thereunder, at any time, by the concurrent action of the new company and of the holders of not less than 66⅔ percent of the aggregate principal amount of bonds then outstanding affected by such change or modification; and such modification or alteration may specifically include procedural provision for ascertaining available net income without the maintenance of separate books of account in the event that the new company shall be merged into or consolidated or unified with another corporation, whether or not a subsidiary of the new company; provided that no change or modification shall (a) alter or impair the obligation of the new company to pay the principal of, or interest on, any bond at the time and place and at the rate and in the currency provided therein, or (b) permit the creation by the new company of any mortgage or lien in the nature of a mortgage ranking prior to, or on a parity with the lien of the first mortgage, except as in the new first mortgage otherwise expressly provided. Notwithstanding the limitation in clause (a) of this paragraph the new first mortgage shall contain a provision, in such form and substance as may be determined by the reorganization managers with the approval of the court, that the mortgage may at any time, with the approval of this Commission or such other regulatory body as may at the time have jurisdiction in the premises, be modified by the concurrent action of the reorganized company and of the holders of not less than 75 percent in principal amount of all bonds of the mortgage outstanding at the time of such vote so as to postpone the time or times of payment of any fixed interest or accumulations of contingent interest, either before or after the interest is due, or the principal of any or all series of bonds of the mortgage, either before or after maturity, whether bearing fixed or contingent interest which at such time may be outstanding, provided that the payment of the principal of the bonds may not be postponed for a longer period than 20 years from the maturity date designated in the bonds and that the maturity of interest on the bonds may not be postponed for a longer period than 5 years but in no event beyond the maturity date of the principal of the bonds designated in the bonds unless such maturity be postponed, in which event the maturity of interest on the bonds may not be postponed beyond the extended maturity date of the principal.

The first mortgage shall contain a covenant that the new company will at all times keep the mortgaged property supplied with such amount of motive power, rolling stock and equipment (on which the first mortgage shall constitute a paramount lien subject only to such liens in the nature of purchase money liens as may be permitted by the terms hereof), and maintain the same in such condition as may be necessary for the efficient and economical operation of the mortgaged property.

J. The collateral trust notes.—The collateral-trust notes shall mature 10 years after their date, shall bear fixed interest at the rate of 3½ percent per annum (or such other rate as may in the opinion of the reorganization managers be necessary to permit the sale of these notes at par), payable semiannually, and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest payment date prior to maturity on 30 days' notice and at any other time on 60 days' notice at their principal amount together with accrued interest. The notes shall be issued under and secured by a trust indenture under which there shall be deposited and pledged with the indenture trustee, as security for the notes, new first-mortgage bonds, series C, equal in principal amount to 125 percent of the principal amount of said notes from time to time outstanding. All first-mortgage bonds, series C, released from the lien of said indenture shall be canceled.

Prior to consummation of the plan, the reorganization managers shall use their best efforts to arrange for the underwriting of the new collateral-trust notes. If such an underwriting is arranged, each person who is entitled to receive notes of said issue shall be entitled, at his election, either (a) to take said notes or (b) to direct the delivery of his notes to or for the account of the underwriter, at a price which shall not be less than par per $1,000 note plus accrued interest to a date to be fixed by the reorganization managers. The manner of making such election, the time within which it shall be made and the terms of the underwriting agreement shall be determined by the reorganization managers, subject to the approval of the court.

K. Plaza-Olive Building mortgage.—Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage bonds shall be limited in authorized principal amount to an amount equal to the principal amount of Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage 6 percent bonds outstanding immediately prior to consummation of the plan. Notwithstanding the provisions of section B, these bonds shall be dated as of the date of consummation of the plan, shall mature 15 years after their date, and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest payment date on thirty days' notice, and at any other time on sixty days' notice, at par plus accrued interest. They may be issued only in exchange, par for par, for presently outstanding Plaza-Olive Building 6 percent first-mortgage gold bonds as hereinafter provided.

The new bonds shall bear fixed interest at the rate of 3 percent per annum, payable semiannually on the 1st days of July and January. They shall in addition bear contingent interest as hereinafter set forth.

The bonds shall be secured by a mortgage to a trustee, which shall be a bank or trust company doing business in St. Louis, Missouri. The mortgage shall constitute a first lien upon the same property as that now subject to the lien of the mortgage securing the outstanding Plaza-Olive Building 6 percent first-mortgage gold bonds, and with respect to such property shall be prior to the lien of the mortgage securing the first-mortgage bonds of the new company.

Income available for contingent interest and for the sinking fund hereinafter provided for shall be deemed to be that amount which shall remain after deducting from the annual gross earnings and income of the property subject to the mortgage securing these bonds the following items and no others: (a) all operating and administrative expenses relating to said property, including reasonable compensation and expenses of the mortgage trustee, commissions of renting agents, insurance premiums and non-capital repairs and maintenance; (b) all taxes and assessments levied against said property; (c) all income and excess profits taxes allocable to the earnings and income of said property as hereinafter defined; (d) depreciation at an annual rate of 2 percent of the book value of the building located on said property; and (e) the annual amount of fixed interest payable with respect to these bonds.

The amount of income and excess profits taxes allocable to the earnings and income of said property shall be deemed to be either (1) the amount which would be payable as such taxes were the property subject to this mortgage operated under independent corporate ownership, or (2) the proportion of all such taxes paid by the new company which the taxable income of the property subject to this mortgage bears to the entire taxable income of the new company, whichever is the lower amount.

For the purpose of computing income available for contingent interest and sinking fund there shall be credited to the gross earnings and income of said property an amount equal to the reasonable rental value of any space occupied by the new company on said property.

One-half of income available for contingent interest and sinking fund for any calendar year, beginning with the date of the new bonds, shall be paid to the mortgage trustee on the 1st day of April of the next succeeding year as a sinking fund and shall be used for the retirement of bonds of this issue. The other one-half of such income shall be applied to the payment of contingent interest on said bonds up to a maximum of 2 percent. Contingent interest shall be payable on the 1st day of April of each year. Any additional income remaining after payment of the maximum of 2 percent contingent interest shall also be paid to the mortgage trustee on the 1st day of April of each year as a sinking fund and used for the retirement of bonds of this issue.

The depreciation reserve provided for in the foregoing subparagraph (d) in this section K shall be used to pay for additions and betterments to the building located on the property subject to the mortgage securing these bonds. Any amounts remaining in the depreciation fund not so utilized as of the end of each calendar year shall be paid to the mortgage trustee within 3 months after the close of the year as a sinking fund and shall be used by said trustee for the retirement of bonds of this issue.

Sinking fund moneys held by the mortgage trustee on the 1st day of April of each year shall be used by the trustee within 6 months thereafter to retire bonds of this issue by purchase pursuant to tenders from bondholders or in the open market, at the lowest available prices, provided that no such purchase shall be made at a price exceeding par. In the event that at the expiration of the aforesaid 6 months' period there shall remain of the funds on deposit in the sinking fund an amount in excess of $10,000, the mortgage trustee shall forthwith use such unexpended balance to retire bonds of this issue by redemption by lot at par and accrued interest. Any sinking fund moneys not used as aforesaid may be used by the mortgage trustee, in its discretion, to retire bonds of this issue by purchase in the open market at any time at the lowest available prices.

The new company shall have the right to tender bonds to the mortgage trustee for the sinking fund at a price not exceeding the cost to it of the bonds so tendered; provided, however, that bonds of this issue received by the Western Coal & Mining Company, a wholly owned subsidiary of The Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, in exchange for the Plaza-Olive Building 6-percent first mortgage gold bonds now held by it in the principal amount of $8,500 shall not be eligible for tender to the sinking fund and shall not be redeemed so long as any other bonds of this issue remain outstanding in the hands of the public, and shall carry provision to this effect on their face.

The new company shall keep separate books and records of the income and expenses of operation of the property subject to the mortgage securing these bonds, which books and records shall at all times be open to the inspection of the mortgage trustee or its agents. The new company shall furnish to the mortgage trustee annually a statement showing the results of the operation of said property for each 12 months during the term of said bonds, which statement shall specifically show the amount of net income, if any, available for contingent interest and sinking fund.

The mortgage trustee may, at its option, require an audit by a certified public accountant of the accounts of the new company with respect to the operation of the property subject to the mortgage securing these bonds for any calendar year. The cost of any such audit shall be deemed to be an operating expense of such property within the meaning of the foregoing subparagraph (a) of this section K.

The property subject to the mortgage securing these bonds shall, except as hereinafter otherwise provided, be managed by such person or real estate firm as shall be appointed by the new company with the approval of the mortgage trustee. In the event the manager appointed by the new company shall not be approved by the mortgage trustee, the new company shall name a panel consisting of three qualified real estate men or firms and the mortgage trustee shall select a manager from such panel. The cost of employing such manager shall be deemed to be an operating expense of the property within the meaning of the foregoing subparagraph (a) of this section K. The mortgage trustee may in its discretion consent to the operation of the property by the new company without the appointment of a manager as aforesaid.

The court has heretofore authorized payments to the holders of Plaza-Olive Building 6-percent, first-mortgage gold bonds. Further payments may hereafter be authorized from time to time by the court. All such payments out of the net income of the property subject to the mortgage securing said bonds for the period since October 1, 1936, shall be treated as having been applied in accordance with the following provisions:

(1) Net income for the period from October 1, 1936, to December 31, 1937, shall be applied to the payment of interest for such period at the rate of 3 percent per annum. One-half of any balance of such net income shall be applied to the payment of additional interest for such period, provided that such additional payment shall not exceed interest at the rate of 2 percent per annum. The remainder of such net income shall be applied to the sinking fund.

(2) Net income for the period subsequent to December 31, 1937, shall be applied to the payment of interest and sinking fund to the extent that the same would have been paid on the new bonds herein provided for had such new bonds been issued on and dated January 1, 1938. Such sinking fund payments shall be deposited with the present mortgage trustee.

Sinking-fund moneys deposited with the present mortgage trustee in accordance with the foregoing sinking fund provisions shall be used by said trustee to retire presently outstanding Plaza-Olive Building 6-percent first-mortgage gold bonds by purchase, at the lowest available prices. Any such sinking fund moneys in the possession of the present mortgage trustee at the date of consummation of the plan shall be paid to the trustee under the new mortgage and used by it in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this section K, relating to the application by the mortgage trustee of sinking fund moneys.

For the purposes of the foregoing provisions of this section K relating to the disposition of net income, the term "net income" shall be deemed to mean the balance remaining after deducting from the gross earnings and income of the property subject to the mortgage securing the presently outstanding Plaza-Olive Building 6-percent first-mortgage gold bonds the items specified in the foregoing subparagraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) of this section K.

In the event any payments are made hereunder with the approval of the court out of net income for any period subsequent to the date of the new bonds herein provided for, the amount of interest and sinking fund payments required under the new bonds shall be reduced to the extent of such payments.

L. Exclusion of Plaza-Olive income and expenses in determining available net income.—In determining "available net income" and income available for capital expenditures fund, sinking funds, contingent interest and dividends on stock of the new company as hereinafter provided, all income and expenses of the property subject to the mortgage securing the Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage bonds shall be excluded so long as any of said bonds remain outstanding.

M. The new general-mortgage bonds.—The general-mortgage bonds shall be issuable in series, the total authorized issue to be unlimited in principal amount. Series A bonds shall be limited in authorized principal amount to the amount necessary to carry out the terms of the plan. They shall mature 65 years after their date, and shall bear contingent interest at the rate of 4½-percent per annum, payable annually on the first day of April in each year (beginning on the second April 1 following the effective date) and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest payment date on 30 days' notice and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 100 percent of their principal amount plus (a) all unpaid accumulated interest to the end of the calendar year next preceding the date of redemption and up to the maximum limit of accumulation hereinafter stated and (b) interest at the rate of 4½ percent per annum from the end of such calendar year to the redemption date.

Interest on the bonds of series A accruing for each calendar year shall, up to the limits of accumulation hereinafter specified, become owing as a debt on December 31 in such year, but shall be payable on April 1 in the next succeeding year or thereafter as provided below. Such interest shall be mandatorily payable, except as herein provided, only to the extent that the available net income of the new company is sufficient for the payment thereof upon the application of such available net income as hereinafter provided. All interest not paid because of the limitation in the preceding sentence shall accumulate up to the maximum accumulation of 13½ percent, but not beyond. Interest owing as a debt in a given year but which is paid on the interest payment date in the next succeeding year shall not be included in calculating the 13⅓ percent. Upon the maturity of the series A bonds, whether by acceleration or otherwise, all unpaid accumulated interest to the end of the calendar year next preceding the date of maturity up to the specified maximum plus interest at the rate of 4⅓ percent per annum for the period from the end of such calendar year to the date of maturity shall be paid, whether or not earned. All interest after maturity shall be a fixed obligation.

Series B bonds shall be limited in authorized principal amount to the amount necessary to carry out the terms of the plan. They shall mature 75 years after their date, shall bear contingent interest at the rate of 5 percent per annum, payable annually on the first day of April in each year (beginning on the second April 1 following the effective date), and shall be redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest payment date on 30 days' notice, and at any other time on 60 days' notice, at 100 percent of their principal amount, together with interest, whether or not earned, at the rate of 5 percent per annum from January 1 of the calendar year next preceding the calendar year in which redemption occurs, less any interest theretofore paid in the calendar year in which redemption occurs.

Interest on bonds of series B for each calendar year shall be mandatorily payable, but only to the extent that available net income of the new company is sufficient for the payment thereof upon the application of such available net income as hereinafter provided; and such interest to the extent mandatorily payable shall become owing as a debt on December 31 in such calendar year. Upon the maturity of the bonds of series B, whether by acceleration or otherwise, there shall be payable thereon one year's interest, whether earned or not, at the rate of 5 percent per annum, less any interest theretofore paid in such year. All interest after maturity shall be a fixed obligation.

The general mortgage bonds of all series shall be secured by a mortgage which shall be a lien upon all of the properties and assets that shall at the time be subject to the new first mortgage, subject, however, to said first mortgage.

The general mortgage shall provide for an annual sinking fund payment for series A bonds to be made from available net income as hereinafter provided in Section O with respect to the determination and application of available net income, in an amount equal to one-half of 1 percent of the aggregate principal amount of series A bonds to be authenticated pursuant to the plan or such amount as shall be applicable for such purpose, whichever is less. Such payments shall be made on April 1 in each year commencing with the second April 1 following the effective date. The series A sinking fund shall be applied from time to time to the retirement of series A bonds by purchase in the open market or by call for tenders at not exceeding the redemption price. If on January 31 of any year the unexpended balance remaining in said sinking fund exceeds $50,000, the cash in said sinking fund shall be applied on the next succeeding interest payment date to the redemption of series A bonds. All bonds of series A so purchased or redeemed shall be canceled.

The general mortgage shall also provide for an annual sinking fund payment for series B bonds to be made from available net income as hereinafter provided in section O with respect to the determination and application of available net income, in an amount equal to one-half of 1 percent of the aggregate principal amount of series B bonds to be authenticated pursuant to the plan, or such amount as shall be applicable for such purpose, whichever is less. Such payments shall be made on April 1 in each year commencing with the second April 1 following the effective date. The series B sinking fund shall be applied from time to time to the retirement of series B bonds by purchase in the open market or by call for tenders at not exceeding the redemption price. If on January 31 of any year the unexpended balance remaining in said sinking fund exceeds $50,000, the cash in said sinking fund shall be applied on the next succeeding interest payment date to the redemption of series B bonds. All bonds of series B so purchased or redeemed shall be canceled.

Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained with respect to the determination and application of available net income, the general mortgage shall provide in substance that bonds, other than series A and series B, may be issued from time to time without limit as to aggregate amount, in one or more series, bearing such date or dates, having such maturity or maturities (which must be later than the maturity of series A bonds except when issued to cover the cost of equipment as herein provided), in such denominations, bearing contingent interest at such rates and containing such provisions in regard to accumulation of interest, redemption, conversion, taxes, place or places and money or moneys of payment, registration and sinking funds, and having such other charactertistics as may be prescribed by the board of directors of the new company at the time of issue. The lien of the general mortgage shall secure all bonds issued thereunder equally and ratably. No interest shall be mandatorily payable on general-mortgage bonds of any series, (except at or after maturity or redemption) except out of available net income as hereinafter provided in section O.

Bonds, other than the bonds of series A and series B hereinbefore authorized, may be issued under the general mortgage only for the following purposes: (1) to refund general-mortgage bonds or mortgage obligations which may at the time be a lien on any part of the system prior to the lien of the general mortgage, and (2) for the purposes and subject to the restrictions contained in this plan in respect of the issue of additional first-mortgage bonds, to the extent that first-mortgage bonds are not issued for such purposes; provided, however, that no emergency bonds may be issued under the general mortgage.

No general mortgage bonds, other than those of series A and series B, may be authenticated and delivered unless (a) the new company shall have contracted forthwith to sell or pledge such bonds, and (b) the board of directors of the new company, by resolution adopted by two-thirds of the entire number of directors, shall have determined that in the opinion of the board, taking into account market and other relevant conditions at the time, it is undesirable or impracticable to provide the amount of money needed (1) by the sale of preferred stock at a price which would give a current dividend return of 6 percent or less, and (2) by the sale of common stock of either class at a price which would give a current dividend return of 6 percent or less, based on the regular dividend rate then in effect, or, if no regular rate is in effect, on the average rate at which dividends have been paid during the last 12 calendar months.

The general mortgage shall provide, within conditions and limits to be therein prescribed, for the modification and alteration thereof, and of any or all supplements thereto, and of the rights and obligations of the new company and of the holders of bonds issued thereunder, at any time by the concurrent action of the new company and of the holders of not less than two-thirds in aggregate principal amount of the bonds affected by such modification or alteration; and such modification or alteration may specifically include procedural provision for ascertaining available net income without the maintenance of separate books of account in the event that the new company shall be merged into or consolidated or unified with another corporation, whether or not a subsidiary of the new company; provided, however, that no such change or modification shall (a) alter or impair the obligation of the new company with respect to the determination and application of income available for interest on the general-mortgage bonds (except as hereinabove specifically provided) or with respect to payment of the principal of or accumulated interest on any general-mortgage bond at the time and place, at the rate and in the currency provided in the general mortgage and such bond without the consent of the holder of such bond or (b) permit the creation by the new company of any mortgage or lien in the nature of a mortgage ranking prior to or on a parity with the lien of the new general mortgage except as in said mortgage otherwise expressly provided.

The general mortgage shall contain provisions similar to those to be contained in the first mortgage with respect to the use free from the mortgage of any securities subject thereto in effecting a merger or consolidation of the issuer of such securities into the Missouri Pacific system. Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (a) of the next preceding paragraph hereof, the new general mortgage shall contain a provision, in such form and substance as may be determined by the reorganization managers with the approval of the court, that the mortgage may at any time, with the approval of this Commission or such other regulatory body as may at the time have jurisdiction in the premises, be modified by the concurrent action of the reorganized company and of the holders of not less than 75 percent in principal amount of all bonds of the mortgage outstanding at the time of such vote so as to postpone the time or times of payment of any fixed interest or accumulations of contingent interest, either before or after the interest is due, or the principal of any or all series of bonds of the mortgage, either before or after maturity, whether bearing fixed or contingent interest which at such time may be outstanding, provided that the payment of the principal of the bonds may not be postponed for a longer period than 20 years from the maturity date designated in the bonds and that the maturity of interest on the bonds may not be postponed for a longer period than 5 years but in no event beyond the maturity date of the principal of the bonds designated in the bonds unless such maturity be postponed in which event the maturity of interest on the bonds may not be postponed beyond the extended maturity date of the principal.

N. Limitation on the amount of pledged first-mortgage and general-mortgage bonds.—The first mortgage and the general mortgage each shall contain a covenant substantially to the effect that the excess of the aggregate principal amount of all bonds issued under such mortgage and under pledge at any time over the principal amount of all indebtedness so secured shall not exceed 10 percent of the aggregate principal amount of all bonds issued under such mortgage then authenticated and uncanceled. This restriction shall apply to both mortgages, but shall be applied to each independently.

Miscellaneous provisions of mortgages, indentures, etc.—Each of the mortgages, indentures, certificates of incorporation and other similar instruments herein provided for shall contain such provisions, in addition to those herein specified, as may be necessary or proper adequately to protect the holders of the securities issued under such instruments without unduly restricting the new company.

In the event the new company shall be merged or consolidated or unified with any other corporation, whether or not a subsidiary of the new company, then by vote or consent of the holders of a majority in par value of the preferred stock and a majority of the shares of common stock then outstanding, procedural provision may be made for ascertaining available net income without the maintenance of separate books of account, and such provision shall be binding on all holders of stock of such classes.

The new first mortgage and the new general mortgage may contain such provisions as the reorganization managers may approve either (1) permitting the new company, while it is not in default in the performance of its obligations under said mortgages respectively and during any period of grace therein specified, to use and dispose of, to the same extent as if not subject to the lien of such mortgages respectively, cash, temporary cash investments, tools, supplies and other current items or (2) excluding such property from the liens of said mortgages.

If the property of the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company and the International shall be transferred to the reorganized International there shall be a new first mortgage constituting a first lien, subject only to the liens of equipment trust obligations, if any, on all properties and assets, including securities, owned by the reorganized International upon consummation of the plan. The mortgage shall contain after-acquired property clauses substantially similar to those which shall be included in the first mortgage of the new company. The bonds to be issued in reorganization under the first mortgage of the reorganized International shall be limited to approximately $23,415,000 in principal amount, shall bear contingent interest at the rate of 5 percent per annum, shall be dated as of the effective date of the plan and shall mature 75 years after their date. The new reorganized International first mortgage shall contain such provisions with respect to the determination and application of available net income of the reorganized International and other matters as shall be consistent with the provisions of this plan and as may be necessary or proper to protect the security holders of the new company without unduly restricting the reorganized International and the new company. The new first mortgage of the reorganized International may contain provisions authorizing the issuance of additional first-mortgage bonds from time to time for purposes and subject to restrictions substantially similar to those contained in the plan with respect to the issue of additional first-mortgage bonds of the new company.

O. Available net income and capital expenditures fund.—Available net income shall be determined for each calendar year beginning with the year in which the effective date falls. Available net income for each such calendar year shall be determined by deducting all fixed charges of the new company and its wholly owned railway subsidiaries accruing during such calendar year from the consolidated income of the new company and its wholly owned railway subsidiaries available for fixed charges for such calendar year (determined in accordance with accounting rules of this Commission or other Federal authority having jurisdiction in the premises at the time in force, or, to the extent not governed by such accounting rules, in accordance with sound accounting practice); provided, however, that available net income for any period after the effective date and prior to the consummation of the plan shall be computed as if the plan had been consummated on the effective date.

Available net income shall be ascertained for each such calendar year, as the accounts shall be stated on the books of the new company during such calendar year, without adjustments, except that (1) if in respect of any calendar year the available net income is a deficit, the amount of such deficit shall be carried forward and be deducted in determining available net income for the succeeding calendar year or calendar years until such deficit (or accumulated or remaining deficits) be extinguished by earnings which, in the absence of such deficit or deficits, would be available net income; (2) any adjustment necessary to correct the income account of any prior year shall be made by appropriate entries which may either be made in the accounts of the current year and/or in the discretion of the board of directors of the new company and subject to the approval of this Commission or such other governmental agency as may at the time have jurisdiction over the accounts of the new company, may be made in whole or in part in the accounts of any subsequent year or years, and any such debits or credits to adjust income in prior years shall be treated as income items for the year in which entered on the books whether cleared through income or profit and loss accounts; and (3) in computing such available net income no amounts shall be deducted for retirements of nondepreciable property.

Available net income for each calendar year shall be applied to the following purposes and in the following order:

(1) Capital expenditures fund.—To the creation of a capital expenditures fund, the amount to be set aside in the fund in each such calendar year, except as hereinafter provided, to be equal to 2½ percent of the consolidated total railway operating revenues of the new company and its wholly owned railway subsidiaries for such calendar year less depreciation of roadway and structures charged against income in such calendar year to the extent that the amount of such depreciation is available for the purpose of the capital expenditures fund, plus the amount, if any, by which available net income for the last preceding calendar year shall have been less than the maximum amount permitted for the capital expenditures fund for such calendar year by the preceding provisions of this paragraph (1). The capital expenditures fund shall be applied, as shall be from time to time determined by the board of directors of the new company, either to provide for or to reimburse the treasury of the new company for all or any part of the net charges to the investment account (as defined under this Commission's Classification of income, profit and loss, and general balance sheet accounts for steam roads, accounts No. 701, Investment in road equipment, 702, Improvement on leased railway property, and 705, Miscellaneous physical property) of the new company not otherwise financed, or not otherwise provided for, with proper adjustment for use by the new company, of secondhand material donations and other items not involving a cash outlay, or the equivalent thereof. Any portion of the fund not required for the foregoing purposes may be applied to the retirement of fixed interest funded debt, either by purchase or redemption of securities, representing such debt, or may be applied to the payment of interest on fixed interest debt in any year in which it is not earned, but no contingent charges or dividends thereafter shall be paid until the capital fund has been reimbursed for the funds used for the payment of fixed interest. To the extent that the capital expenditures are so provided for or reimbursed out of the capital expenditures fund, the new company shall not thereafter have the right to issue any bonds or other evidences of indebtedness to capitalize or to reimburse it for such expenditures; provided, however, that such expenditures, if for purposes for which first-mortgage bonds or general-mortgage bonds may be issued, may, within such limits, if any, as may be specified in the first mortgage or the general mortgage, be used to supply in whole or in part the excess of capital expenditures required to be certified under either such mortgage over the principal amount of the bonds that may be issued under the terms thereof. Any moneys in the capital expenditures fund which shall not be applied as above provided, during the calendar year in which they were credited to such fund, shall be carried over in such fund to the next calendar year in addition to the regular annual credit to such fund.

(2) First-mortgage sinking fund.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year shall, to the extent required, be applied on the next succeeding sinking-fund payment date to the payment of the sinking fund installment or installments on any first-mortgage bonds, including emergency bonds, if any such sinking fund installments are required to be paid in respect of emergency bonds, and to payment into the sinking fund of the interest on first-mortgage bonds (or collateral-trust notes) theretofore purchased or redeemed out of the sinking fund and retained in the sinking fund. The sinking fund installment for emergency bonds, if any is required, shall be preferred over any other sinking fund installment. Any special sinking fund installments in respect of first-mortgage bonds issued for acquisition of equipment or in respect of withdrawals of cash deposited under the first-mortgage to provide or reimburse for the acquisition of equipment shall be preferred over any other sinking funds established for any first-mortgage bonds, except for the retirement of emergency bonds. Otherwise all the first-mortgage sinking fund installments shall be on a parity except that, as provided in section I hereof, sinking funds for series other than series A, B and C may be subordinated.

(3) General-mortgage, series A, interest.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year shall be applied to the payment on the next succeeding interest payment date of interest on the then outstanding general-mortgage bonds, series A, and any accumulations thereof. No interest need be paid if it would amount to less than one-quarter of 1 percent. Any excess available for such interest but not paid because of the foregoing provision shall be reserved and added to the income available for interest on the general-mortgage bonds, series A, for the next succeeding calendar year.

(4) General-mortgage, series A, sinking fund.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year shall to the extent required be applied on the next succeeding sinking fund payment date to the payment of the sinking fund installment in respect of general-mortgage bonds, series A.

(5) Interest on other general-mortgage bonds.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year shall be applied to the payment on the next succeeding interest payment date of the interest, on the then outstanding general-mortgage bonds of any series other than series A, without preference of the bonds of any such series over the bonds of any other such series. No interest need be paid if it would amount to less than one-quarter of 1 percent. Any excess available for interest but not paid because of the foregoing provision shall be reserved and added to the income available for interest on general-mortgage bonds other than series A for the next succeeding calendar year.

(6) General-mortgage sinking fund.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year shall to the extent required be applied on the next succeeding sinking fund payment date or dates to the payment of the sinking fund installment or installments in respect of any series of general-mortgage bonds other than series A without preference of the installment for any such series over the installment for any other such series, unless at the time of creation of any series other than series A and series B the sinking fund for such series shall be subordinated.

(7) Preferred stock dividends.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year shall be applied, when and as declared by the board of directors of the new company, to the payment of dividends on the preferred stock and any accumulations thereof in accordance with the applicable provisions of the certificate of incorporation of the new company and the resolutions establishing one or more series of preferred stock.

(8) Common stock dividends, retirement fund and other corporate purposes.—Any then remaining available net income for any calendar year may be applied to any proper corporate purpose, including dividends on the classes of common stock of the new company in the order of their priority and the retirement fund for retirement of general-mortgage bonds, as hereinafter provided.

P. Preferred stock.—The amount of the new preferred stock to be originally authorized shall be fixed by the reorganization managers and there shall be issued upon reorganization an amount of preferred stock, series A, sufficient to carry out the plan, viz., approximately 577,170 shares of the par value of $100 each. Additional preferred stock of any other series may, subject to conditions hereinafter in this section P stated, be authorized and issued from time to time for any proper corporate purpose.

The new preferred stock, series A, shall entitle the holders thereof in preference to the holders of the common stock to receive dividends, when and as declared by the board of directors, at the rate of 5 percent per annum out of the available net income for any calendar year. Dividends on the preferred stock, series A, shall be cumulative in respect of each calendar year but only to the extent that there shall be available net income for such calendar year which could be distributed by way of dividend on the preferred stock, series A, under the provisions of this plan respecting the determination and application of available net income. No dividend shall be paid on the common stock in any calendar year unless all accumulated unpaid dividends for all prior calendar years shall have been paid or declared and set apart for payment on the preferred stock, series A, and, if the dividend on the common stock shall be payable out of available net income for the year in which payment is made, unless full dividends at the rate of 5 percent per annum for such year shall also have been paid or declared and set apart for payment on the preferred stock, series A.

In the event of the dissolution, winding up or liquidation of the new company, the holders of preferred stock, series A, shall be entitled to receive out of the assets of the new company $100 per share, together with an amount equal to all accrued, unpaid and accumulated dividends before any distribution shall be made to the holders of common stock.

The preferred stock, series A, shall be redeemable in whole or in part at any time on 60 days' notice at its par value, plus an amount equal to dividends at the rate of 5 percent per annum, whether or not earned, from the preceding January 1 to the redemption date less any dividends paid for that period, plus all accumulated dividends for preceding years. The holders of preferred stock, series A, shall have no preemptive right to subscribe to any shares of stock of any class or to securities convertible into stock of any class.

The certificate of incorporation of the new company shall provide in substance that the new company shall not, without the vote or consent of the holders of at least two-thirds in par value of the outstanding preferred stock, series A, (a) amend the certificate of incorporation of the new company or any certificate amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto so as to alter or change the preferences and voting rights to which the holders of said stock are entitled in accordance with the provisions of the plan, (b) create any additional stock ranking either as to assets or dividends in priority to or on a parity with the new preferred stock, and (c) issue any of the shares of preferred stock which shall be originally authorized for any purpose other than to carry out the plan or for purposes for which new first-mortgage bonds or new general-mortgage bonds might otherwise be issued.

Each share of preferred stock shall entitle the holder thereof to one vote.

Holders of preferred stock, voting as a class, shall have the right to elect not less than two directors after default of payment of the equivalent of six quarterly dividends, and the affirmative vote of the holders of at least two-thirds of the preferred stock shall be required as a prerequisite to any charter or bylaw amendment altering materially any existing provision of such preferred stock.

Subject to the foregoing provisions of this section P, the certificate of incorporation shall permit the authorization and issuance of additional preferred stock of such series and amounts, with such par value and entitled to such dividends, voting rights, priority, redemption, conversion and other special privileges and restrictions as the board of directors may determine in its discretion.

Q. New common stock, class A and class B.—The common stock of the new company shall be divided into two classes, one of which shall be designated as class A and the other of which shall be designated as class B, all of which shall be without par value. The number of shares in each class to be authorized in the certificate of incorporation of the new company shall be fixed by the reorganization managers in relation to the requirements of the plan and the number of shares in each class to be originally issued shall be in the amounts necessary to carry out the plan. The certificate of incorporation shall permit the authorization from time to time of additional shares of common stock of either class with the consent of the holders of not less than a majority of the number of shares of common stock of each class at the time outstanding and shall permit the board of directors in its discretion to authorize the issuance of such additional shares of common stock for any lawful purpose.

In any calendar year, no dividends on common stock, class B, shall be paid unless dividends of $5 per share shall have been paid or declared and set apart for payment on the common stock, class A, and after $5 per share has been paid or declared and set apart for payment on the common stock, class A, and on the common stock, class B, all further dividends in such calendar year shall be declared and paid on common stock, class A, and common stock, class B, share and share alike.

In the event of the dissolution, winding up or liquidation of the new company, the holders of common stock, class A, shall be entitled to receive out of the assets of the new company $100 per share before any distribution is made to the holders of common stock, class B. Thereafter the holders of common stock, class B, shall be entitled to receive $100 per share, and thereafter any further distributions on the common stock out of the assets of the new company shall be made equally and ratably on all outstanding shares of common stock of both classes.

Each share of common stock of each class shall entitle the holder thereof to one vote.

Voting trust.—A voting trust shall be created in order to assure a stable, experienced and impartial management which will be free to act in the general interest without allegiance to any particular class of security holders during the crucial period which will follow the consummation of the reorganization and the termination of the war. All of the preferred stock, series A, and the new common stock, class A and class B, issued in the reorganization and all other voting stock thereafter issued by the new company during the continuance of said voting trust shall be deposited in said voting trust and voting trust certificates will be issued therefor. All references in the plan to stock of the new company shall, unless the context otherwise requires, be deemed to include voting-trust certificates for the same.

The voting trustees shall be three in number, all to be designated by the court, one of whom shall be a citizen of Missouri, and another a citizen of Texas. The reasonable expenses of such voting trustees, including counsel fees, shall be paid by the new company. Such voting trust shall continue (1) for 5 years from the date of the consummation of the plan, or (2) until available net income, determined and applied as hereinbefore in section O provided, shall have been sufficient, for a period of three consecutive calendar years commencing not earlier than the January 1 nearest to the date of consummation of the plan, to provide full interest and sinking fund requirements on all outstanding general-mortgage bonds, series A and series B, plus the sum of $3,600,000 per year, whichever period shall be the shorter. The voting-trust agreement shall provide that, if any vacancy shall occur among the voting trustees, such vacancy shall be filled by a majority of the remaining voting trustees.

Warrants.—The new warrants shall entitle the holders thereof at any time within 10 years after the date of consummation of the plan to purchase at $100 per share, that aggregate number of shares of common stock, class B, as shall be necessary to carry out the plan. The exercise of warrants shall operate as a purchase of common stock, class B, held in escrow, as hereinafter provided. The new warrants shall not entitle the holders thereof to vote, to receive dividends, to any preemptive right to subscribe to shares of stock in the new company of any class or to securities convertible into shares of stock of the new company of any class, or to any of the rights of stockholders of the new company.

Escrow of common stock, class B.—The certificates representing all of the common stock, class B, to which creditors are entitled under the plan shall be deposited with an escrow agent under an escrow agreement which shall continue for a period of ten (10) years after consummation of the plan or until all warrants herein provided for shall have been exercised. The escrow agent shall issue to creditors entitled to receive common stock, class B, under the plan certificates of beneficial interest representing all of the common stock, class B, held in escrow. If at the termination of the voting trust there shall be any common stock, class B, held in escrow, holders of certificates of beneficial interest representing such common stock, class B, shall thereafter be entitled to have registered in their respective names, if they shall so request, a number of shares of common stock, class B, equal to the number of shares represented by such certificates of beneficial interest.

Whenever warrants shall be exercised in respect of common stock, class B, held in escrow, the purchase price of such common stock, class B, shall be paid to the escrow agent and held by the escrow agent until disposed of as hereinafter provided. Moneys so paid to the escrow agent shall be applied from time to time to the redemption of outstanding certificates of beneficial interest representing common stock, class B, at $100 for each share of common stock, class B, represented by such certificates; provided, however, that except upon the termination of the escrow agreement the escrow agent shall not apply to such redemption any amount less than $1,000,000 in the aggregate unless the new company shall in writing so request. The certificates of beneficial interest to be redeemed shall be determined by lot on the basis of units of one share of common stock, class B. During the continuance of the escrow agreement any dividends paid on common stock, class B, held by the escrow agent shall be distributed pro rata among the holders of certificates of beneficial interest. Upon the termination of the escrow agreement any common stock, class B, held by the escrow agent shall be distributed pro rata among holders of certificates of beneficial interest, after applying to redemption of such certificates, as aforesaid, any cash then held by the escrow agent representing proceeds of the exercise of warrants.

Whenever in the provisions of this section relating to warrants and to the escrow agreement, the term "common stock, class B," is used, it shall, unless the context otherwise requires, be deemed to mean voting-trust certificates issued therefor during the continuance of the voting trust provided for in this section.

Provision shall be made for adjustment of the price per share of common stock, class B, at which warrants may be exercised in the event of the issuance of additional common stock, class B, at a price less than the warrant price and also for the adjustment of the number of shares that may be purchased by exercise of the warrants in the event of the subdivision or combination of outstanding shares of common stock, class B, or the distribution of dividends payable in common stock, class B; also provision shall be made for protection of the holders of the warrants in the event of a consolidation or merger of the new company with any other corporation, or the sale or conveyance of its property as an entirety or substantially as an entirety to any other corporation.

R. Securities retirement fund.—The new first mortgage, the new general mortgage and the certificate of incorporation of the new company shall contain provisions to the effect that whenever a dividend or distribution (other than a dividend payable in stock of the new company) is declared on the new common stock of either class, additional funds in a sum equal to one-third of the aggregate of such dividend or distribution shall be set aside as a sinking fund and used for the purchase or redemption for retirement of general-mortgage bonds, series A or series B, issued pursuant to the plan.

The retirement fund shall continue to operate until all of said general-mortgage bonds issued pursuant to the allotments of new securities as hereinafter in the plan provided for, have been retired.

S. Issue of New Securities—Scrip.—The new securities may be issued in temporary form in the first instance or interim certificates may be issued therefor. Scrip may be issued and distributed in lieu of fractions of a warrant, share of stock, bond or note. Such scrip shall be non-dividend bearing or non-interest bearing and non-voting, but shall be exchangeable for new securities (or interim certificates therefor) when presented in proper multiples upon terms and conditions approved by the reorganization managers. Accrued interest upon outstanding claims has been calculated as of December 31, 1942, and in most cases results in odd amounts which would involve the delivery of scrip representing small fractions. Such adjustments of these interest amounts as may be necessary to avoid the issuance of scrip in too small fractions may be made by the reorganization managers in their discretion.

T. Allocation of New Securities and Treatment of Claims.—The computation of outstanding claims upon which the plan is based gives effect to the payment prior to January 1, 1944 of:

(1) Principal and interest on all outstanding Pacific Railroad Company of Missouri first-mortgage 4-percent bonds;

(2) Principal and interest on all outstanding Pacific Railroad Company of Missouri, Carondelet Branch, first-mortgage 4½-percent bonds;

(3) Principal and interest on all outstanding Pacific Railroad Company of Missouri second-mortgage 5-percent bonds;

(4) Principal and interest on all outstanding Missouri Pacific Railway Company third-mortgage 4-percent bonds;

(5) Principal and interest on all outstanding Pacific Railroad Company of Missouri, St. Louis City Real Estate, first-mortgage 5-percent bonds;

(6) 30-percent of the principal amount of all outstanding St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company, River and Gulf Divisions, 4-percent first-mortgage bonds, together with interest on said 30 percent of principal.

The computations do not give effect to any payments, other than those specified above, which may be authorized or may have been authorized after December 31, 1942. All payments of interest authorized prior to January 1, 1943, are to be credited and have been credited in the computations herein against the respective claims.

The equipment obligations of the debtors and of the trustee of the estates of the debtors outstanding upon consummation of the plan shall remain undisturbed and shall be assumed by the new company.

The holders of Missouri Pacific first and refunding mortgage 5-percent gold bonds of the respective series shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943 approximately the following:

	First-mortgage bonds series C	General-mortgage bonds Series A	General-mortgage bonds Series B	Preferred stock	Common stock class A (No. of shares)

The holders of the said bonds of the respective series shall be entitled at their election to receive, in lieu of the common stock, class A, allocated to them as above set forth, cash per $1,000 bond as follows:

Series F	71.63
Series G	72.12
Series H	72.46
Series I	71.10

The holders of Missouri Pacific general mortgage 4-percent bonds shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, approximately 13.93 shares of new common stock, class A.

The holders of Missouri Pacific secured serial 5¼-percent bonds shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, approximately 7.5 shares of new common stock, class A, 5 shares of new common stock, class B, and a warrant to subscribe for 4.19 shares of new common stock class B, at $100 per share.

The holders of Missouri Pacific 20-year convertible 5½-percent bonds shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, approximately 10 shares of new common-stock, class B, and a warrant to subscribe for 8.39 shares of new common-stock, class B at $100 per share.

The plan contemplates, as hereinbefore stated, that the holders of St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company River and Gulf Divisions 4-percent first-mortgage bonds will have received prior to January 1, 1944, $300 in cash in settlement of 30 percent of the principal amount of each $1,000 bond plus interest on said 30 percent; they shall receive for the remaining $700 claim for principal, plus unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1942, approximately the following cash and new securities: The amount of such interest in cash, $300 principal amount of new collateral-trust notes and, at the election of the holder, either $400 principal amount of new first-mortgage bonds, series C, or $400 principal amount of new first-mortgage bonds, series A; provided, however, that, if the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall elect to receive new first-mortgage bonds, series A, the alternative to said series C bonds shall be $400 principal amount of new first-mortgage bonds, series B.

The cancellation of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company, River and Gulf Divisions 4-percent first-mortgage bonds owned by Western Coal & Mining Company, as provided in sections E and F hereof, shall be effective only after the receipt by said company of its share of the foregoing allocations to the holders of the bonds of said issue.

The holders of Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage 6-percent bonds shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon (determined in accordance with the provisions of section K hereof) to the date of consummation of the plan a sum in cash equal to the amount of such interest and $1,000 principal amount of new Plaza-Olive Building first-mortgage bonds.

The holders of Cairo & Thebes Railway Company first-mortgage 4-percent bonds shall receive for each $1,000 bond and unpaid interest thereon to January 1, 1943, approximately $100 in cash, $750 principal amount of new first-mortgage bonds, series C, and $283 principal amount of new general-mortgage bonds, series A.

The trustee of the mortgage securing Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railway Company first-mortgage 4-percent bonds shall receive approximately $684,000 principal amount of new general-mortgage bonds, series A, and $820,800 par value of new preferred stock, series A, in consideration for the release by said mortgage trustee of that part of the line of railroad of the Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railway Company extending from Benton to Hot Springs, Arkansas, and for the release of the new company from any obligations in connection with said mortgage.

Claims against the debtors entitled to priority over their respective mortgages, current liabilities and obligations incurred by the bankruptcy trustees during the reorganisation proceedings, to the extent unpaid at the date of consummation of the plan, shall be paid in cash or assumed by the new company with the same relative priority as they now have with respect to other obligations of such debtors. All such claims, liabilities and obligations may be adjusted or compromised and dealt with or paid and discharged by the new company in such manner as may be determined by the board of directors of the new company subject to the approval of the court. When so treated as in this paragraph provided, the interests of such class of creditors will not be adversely and materially affected by the plan.

Holders of general unsecured claims against any of the debtors (other than the New Orleans and its subsidiaries and the International), which are not entitled to preference, shall receive for each $1,000 of principal, 10 shares of common stock, class B, and for each $1,000 of unpaid interest to January 1, 1943, a warrant to subscribe to 15 shares of new common stock, Class B, at the price of $100 per share.

Holders of general unsecured claims against the International, which are not entitled to preference, shall receive for each $1,000 of claim, including principal and unpaid interest to the effective date of the plan, a warrant to subscribe to 10 shares of new common stock, class B, at the price of $100 per share.

The court in its discretion may authorize cash compromise settlements of any general unsecured claims for amounts approximating the estimated expense to the trust estates of contesting such claims.

Creditors who are entitled to an election to receive securities of one class in lieu of securities of another class or cash in lieu of securities, shall make such election within such time (not earlier than the date upon which the plan is confirmed), and in such manner as the reorganization managers, subject to the approval of the court, shall determine.

After confirmation of the plan, the trustee of the estates of the debtors shall upon request of the reorganization managers pay to them a sum in cash equal to the difference between (a) the maximum amount which would be payable to creditors under the alternative offers of cash or securities herein provided for and (b) the amount of cash theretofore distributed to such creditors which is to be credited against cash payable under the plan pursuant to section A hereof. Said funds, together with any cash refunded to the reorganization managers by creditors who shall elect to take the alternative offer of securities, shall be deposited in a separate account to the credit of the reorganization managers and shall be used by them solely for the following purposes:

(1) On consummation of the plan to pay to creditors who, under the alternative offer of cash or securities, shall have elected to receive cash, the amounts to which such creditors, respectively, are entitled, as set forth in this section T, and

(2) To acquire in the open market or at private sale, including purchases on a "when issued" basis, a principal amount of general-mortgage bonds, series B, and a number of shares of common stock which shall not exceed the principal amount of general-mortgage bonds, series B, and the number of shares of common stock which are to be issued to creditors pursuant to their election to take such bonds and stock in lieu of cash.

The reorganization managers shall make such disposition of the securities so acquired as the court may direct. Any unexpended balance of said funds shall be paid into the sinking fund for first-mortgage bonds, series A, B and C and/or the sinking fund for general mortgage bonds, series A or B, as the board of directors of the new company shall determine. The trustee of the estates of the debtors shall allocate the charge for the above mentioned payment to the reorganization managers among the estates of the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans and the International in proportion to the amounts of cash (after deducting prior distributions) offered to the creditors of the respective estates under the alternative offers of cash or securities.

There shall be set aside for securities issued in the reorganization of 1917 which have not been claimed, new securities under the plan to the same extent as for outstanding securities of the debtors. The new securities so set aside shall be exchanged for the old securities outstanding prior to said reorganization upon presentation. After the expiration of 6 months from the date of consummation of the plan, all the new securities so set aside which shall not have been exchanged, shall be canceled, and the securities issued in the reorganization of 1917 which shall not have been claimed and exchanged for new securities prior to the expiration of such period (except so far as canceled pursuant to section F hereof), shall become null and void. An appropriate notice, advising the persons entitled to securities issued in the 1917 reorganization which have not been claimed of their rights, shall be published. Said notice shall contain such provisions, be in such form and be published in such manner, as the reorganization managers shall, with the approval of the court, determine.

The new company shall, with respect to certain guaranties and agreements executed in connection with contracts as described in proofs of claims filed with the court as hereinbelow listed, whereby the debtors of the companies in question, or their predecessors or the trustee of the estates of the debtors acquired certain rights with respect to terminal operations, to the extent that such guaranties and agreements are binding upon any of the debtors, assume such guaranties and agreements and comply with the provisions and conditions of the indentures, contracts or leases relating to the bond or trust certificates issued, referred to in such proofs of claims, and shall assume and adopt the contracts relating to such terminal operations. When so treated the interests of the claimants under any of such guaranties, executory contracts or agreements will not be adversely and materially affected by the plan. The guaranties and agreements with respect to such contracts are described in the following proofs of claims: Proof of claim No. 912 (court record p. 7121), filed by Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, successor trustee under Kansas City Terminal Railway first-mortgage; proof of claim No. 913 (court record p. 7127), filed by Bankers Trust Company, trustee under Memphis Union Station Company first-mortgage; proof of claim No. 928 (court record p. 7027), filed by Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, trustee under Galveston, Houston and Henderson Railway Company mortgage; proof of claim No. 929 (court record p. 7217), filed by Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, trustee under Houston Belt and Terminal Railway Company first-mortgage; proof of claim No. 930 (court record p. 7229), filed by Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, trustee under Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis general mortgage; proof of claim No. 933 (court record p. 7271), filed by Guaranty Trust Company, trustee under Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis first mortgage; proof of claim No. 933 (court record p. 7271), filed by Guaranty Trust Company, trustee under Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis first-consolidated mortgage; proof of claim No. 934 (court record p. 7285), filed by Guaranty Trust Company, trustee under Texas Pacific-Missouri Pacific Terminal Railroad of New Orleans first mortgage; proof of claim No. 935 (court record p. 7295), filed by Guaranty Trust Company, trustee under Texarkana Union Station trust; proof of claim No. 936 (court record p. 7301), filed by Guaranty Trust Company, trustee under Arkansas & Memphis Railway Bridge and Terminal Company first mortgage.

The new company shall assume the liability for and shall pay in full in due course any and all taxes due to the United States from the reorganization trustee for any taxable period subsequent to March 31, 1933, and prior to the date of confirmation of the plan, subject to the statutes of limitations normally applicable to the assessment and collection of such taxes, without requiring proof in this proceeding of any such taxes for the year 1937 or any subsequent year: provided, however, that the liability of the new company for any taxes which are the subject of litigation on the date of confirmation of the plan, or which may become the subject of litigation on any date thereafter and prior to the expiration of the applicable statutes of limitations, shall be determined pursuant to law, and provided further, that this provision shall not be deemed to preclude any of the debtors, their trustees or the new company from contesting the merits of any such tax claim in the manner provided by law.

The debtors as reorganized, or the transferee of the property of the debtors, in connection with any settlements of transportation accounts between the United States and the debtors or the reorganized company, shall be required to recognize and pay or allow for any and all sums, determined through audit, adjustment, compromise, or litigation, as due the United States by virtue of the provisions of section 322 of the Transportation Act of 1940, 54 Stat. 955, for overpayments made prior to the date of confirmation of a plan of reorganization, without requiring proof thereof in this reorganization proceeding and without prejudice by reason of such sums not having been proved herein, with the same relative priority as they now have with respect to other obligations of the debtors.

As a condition of its approval of the conveyance of the properties of the debtors to the new company, this Commission shall require a fair and equitable arrangement to protect the interest of the railroad employees affected, as required by law.

The expenses of reorganization, as allowed by the court, subject to the provisions of section 77, shall be paid in cash as a cost of administration prior in lien to the new securities issued under the plan.

Preferred claims not entitled to priority over the mortgages shall be paid in cash as the court may order or assumed by the new company with the same relative priority to which they are now entitled. When so treated, such preferred claims will not be materially and adversely affected by the plan.

All contracts made by the trustee pursuant to his duties as such trustee, or made by the debtors subsequent to March 31, 1933, and prior to the appointment of the trustee, and executory contracts made by the debtors prior to March 31, 1933, not disaffirmed by the trustee prior to the time set by order of the court for disaffirmance, shall be assumed by the new company. When such contracts are assumed by the new company, the interests of the other parties to such contracts so assumed will not be adversely and materially affected by the plan.

The Railroad Credit Corporation shall release and surrender to the new company its rights and interests in the debtors' distributive shares under the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931, when, and only when, any proceeds from such shares applied by the Railroad Credit Corporation to the payment of principal or interest of and upon the obligations of the debtors, together with the cash and proceeds from the sale of the new bonds which it shall receive in the reorganization shall equal the principal of and accrued unpaid interest on its loans to the debtors. Thereafter such rights and interests of the Railroad Credit Corporation in the debtors' distributive shares under the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931, and any proceeds therefrom shall be turned over to the new company.

If the properties of the International and of the Austin Dam & Suburban Railway Company shall be transferred to the reorganized International, then notwithstanding the foregoing provisions, the reorganization managers may, with the approval of the court, require the reorganized International to assume equipment obligations, taxes, preferred claims, obligations upon contracts, and other obligations of said debtors of the kind hereinbefore mentioned. Similarly the reorganized Natchez, if any, may be required to assume obligations of the kind mentioned in the foregoing sentence.

U. Board of Directors.—The board of directors of the new company shall consist of fifteen (15) members who shall be elected by the voting trustees so long as the voting trust shall continue in effect and thereafter by the stockholders. The members of the first board of directors shall be elected by the voting trustees from a panel of nominees designated as follows: Five (5) by the group of institutional holders of Missouri Pacific first and refunding-mortgage bonds, of whom three (3) shall be residents of the territory served by the Missouri Pacific; one (1) by Reconstruction Finance Corporation; two (2) by the committee for New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds, one (1) of whom shall be a resident of the territory served by the New Orleans; two (2) by the trustee of the International first-mortgage bonds of whom one (1) shall be a resident of the territory served by the International; two (2) by the protective committee for Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bonds of whom one (1) shall be a resident of the territory served by the Missouri Pacific; and two (2) by the trustee under the indenture securing the Missouri Pacific convertible 5½-percent bonds, of whom one (1) shall be a resident of the territory served by Missouri Pacific system (including the New Orleans and International). If any such nominee shall not be acceptable to the voting trustees, they shall promptly so notify the party who nominated him, and thereupon such party may designate another nominee who shall be acceptable to the voting trustees. The voting trustees shall give to the above-named parties at least 30 days' notice of the date fixed for the election of the first board of directors. If, on the fifth day prior to the date fixed for the election of the first board of directors, any of the above-named parties shall have failed to designate his nominee or nominees, the voting trustees may fill the vacancy or vacancies in the panel occasioned by such failure. The president of the new company shall be the fifteenth director.

V. Reorganization managers.—There shall be five (5) reorganization managers, all to be approved by the court, of whom two (2) shall be designated by the group of institutional holders of Missouri Pacific first and refunding-mortgage bonds, one (1) jointly by the committee representing the New Orleans first-mortgage and income bonds and the trustee of the International first mortgage, one (1) by Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and one (1) jointly by the protective committee for Missouri Pacific general-mortgage bonds and by the trustee under the indenture securing the Missouri Pacific convertible 5½-percent bonds. Should any of the parties named fail to designate its representative or representatives within such time as the court shall consider reasonable, the court shall appoint such representative or representatives. If there be any vacancy, however created, after the appointments are made, the successor member shall be appointed by the party or parties who designated the member whose position has become vacant, and if any committee initially appointing such member shall not be in existence, the appointment shall be made by the individual who was formerly the last chairman of that committee.

Subject to any limitations of law, the reorganization managers shall have full and plenary discretionary power (a) to take all such action and to enter into such arrangements, financial and otherwise, as they may deem necessary or advisable in order to consummate and carry into execution the plan; (b) to fix the compensation of trustees, depositaries, counsel and others whose services they may employ in the execution of their powers and of the voting trustees; (c) to incorporate the new company, the reorganized International and the reorganized Natchez, to supervise the transfer of the various properties to the new company, the reorganized International and the reorganized Natchez and to make agreements and commitments for its or their account subject to confirmation by the new company or the reorganized International or the reorganized Natchez; (d) to provide the method by which creditors and other interested parties may participate in the plan; and (e) to determine the form and provisions (so far as not otherwise specifically provided in the plan) of the certificates of incorporation of the new company, the reorganized International and the reorganized Natchez or their articles of association or consolidation and their bylaws, the new bonds, notes and coupons, and the mortgages and trust agreements under which the same shall be issued, the voting trust agreement and certificates, the stock certificates, the escrow agreement and certificates of beneficial interest, the warrants, scrip, interim certificates and any other instruments deemed by the reorganization managers to be necessary or proper in connection with the plan; and (f) to construe the plan, and any construction approved by them on advice of counsel shall, subject to approval by the court, be conclusive. The reorganization managers, however, shall exercise only such power as shall be necessary to carry out the plan in accordance with its provisions, subject to the direction of the court. The reorganization managers may act, by a majority of the reorganization managers, as from time to time constituted, at a meeting or in writing without a meeting, and may delegate to others any power or discretion conferred upon them, and no reorganization manager shall be liable for any action taken by him in good faith or by any person employed by the managers except for his individual malfeasance or willful neglect. The indenture trustees, escrow agent, transfer agents and registrars of the new securities, and such depositaries as may be necessary in connection with the distribution thereof, shall be appointed by the reorganization managers.

Nothing herein contained shall be construed as authorizing the reorganization managers to solicit deposits of securities or authorization to represent security holders, except upon approval by this Commission of the terms of such solicitation by further action pursuant to section 77 (p) of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended.

W. Execution of the plan by sales.—If so ordered by the court, the plan, after it shall have been found fair and equitable and shall have been confirmed by the court, may be executed by the sale or sales at not less than fair upset prices to be fixed by the court of all or any part of the property of any of the debtors, all on such conditions, including the extent to which the sale may be free of liens or subject to prior liens or interests, and in such manner as the court may direct. Upon any such sale or sales, the property and assets offered for sale may be purchased for the benefit of the new company by the reorganization managers, and in that event there shall be applied on account of the purchase price the distributive share of the proceeds of such sale of all securities the holders of which shall have assented to the plan, and of the securities, though not assenting to the plan, of all classes which shall have accepted the plan. If the property of the debtors so offered for sale should be sold to others than the reorganization managers, the plan herein approved shall be deemed inoperative except insofar as provision is made therein for the sale of the properties at such sales as may be ordered by the court, provided that, if any or all of the property subject to the following mortgages, to-wit, The Central Branch Union Pacific Railway Company first mortgage, Little Rock & Hot Springs Western Railroad Company first mortgage, Cairo & Thebes Railroad Company first mortgage and the Boonville, St. Louis & Southern Railway Company first mortgage, should be sold to others than the reorganization managers, the plan shall not be deemed inoperative but shall be executed without the inclusion of such property or properties in the reorganization, and the coverage of the mortgages and the issue of securities shall be adjusted accordingly and the proceeds of the sale shall be applied, all as directed by the court.

In the event of any such sale to the reorganization managers, the managers may in their discretion sell all or any portion of the new securities distributable under the plan in respect of securities of any bondholder, if neither such bondholder nor the class to which such bondholder belongs shall have accepted the plan, provided that bondholders in a class which shall not have accepted the plan, and who themselves shall not have accepted the plan shall have the right, if they shall so notify the managers within a period of 30 days after the confirmation of such sale, to assent to the plan and receive the securities allocated to them under the plan in lieu of their aliquot share of the proceeds of such sale. The proceeds of any such sale of securities may be used to pay the portion of the purchase price payable in cash on any such sale of the properties.

X. Court may construe plan.—The construction of the plan by the court shall be final and conclusive. The court may cure any defect, supply any omission, or reconcile any inconsistency, in such manner or to such extent as may be necessary or expedient to carry out the plan effectively.

Y. Effect of acceptance of plan.—Acceptance of the plan shall include acceptance of the provisions of the new bonds, mortgages, notes, indentures, stock certificates, warrants, certificates of beneficial interest, voting trust certificates and all instruments necessary and appropriate to the carrying out of the plan, other than the orders of the court and this Commission, to the same effect as though the terms of such instruments were set forth in full herein.

Z. The carrying out of the plan shall be as provided in the Bankruptcy Act.

It is further ordered, That the journal entries covering the necessary accounting adjustments under the plan herein approved shall be submitted to the Bureau of Accounts of this Commission for approval before the permanent accounting records are made.

It is further ordered, That nothing herein contained shall be, or be construed as, a grant of authority for the issue of any securities, assumption of obligations, transfer of any property, sale, consolidation, or merger of the debtor's property, or pooling of traffic, pursuant to either the Bankruptcy Act or the Interstate Commerce Act, except as provided herein, or until further action by this Commission upon confirmation of the plan by the court.

It is further ordered, That, except as otherwise decided in the aforesaid reports, all petitions heretofore made or filed in this proceeding for oral argument, filing of further briefs, rehearing, reopening of the proceeding or for other relief, be and they are hereby, denied.

It is further ordered, That approval at this time of any plan of reorganization of the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company, debtor, be, and it is hereby, refused without prejudice to a continuation of the proceedings for the reorganization of the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Company, or dismissal of such proceedings as the court may direct.

It is further ordered, That the orders entered herein on January 10, 1940, April 9, 1940, and July 4, 1944, be, and they are hereby, revoked and superseded.

By the Commission.

The Group of Institutional Investors holding First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and the Protective Committee for holders of General Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, appellees, move the Court to dismiss the above entitled appeals upon the following grounds:

1. Cause No. 13377. This is an appeal from Order No. 2604-A overruling Comstock's Objection 19. (R.7). The grounds for dismissal of this appeal are:

(a) No objections to the Plan* and no claims for equitable treatment were filed in the court below by or on behalf of the New Orleans. The appellant, Andred W. Comstock, did not appear on behalf of the New Orleans in the proceedings below which resulted in the entry of Order No. 2604-A. Accordingly, he is not entitled to appeal from said order in the name of the New Orleans.

(b) Upon information and belief, said Andrew W. Comstock has not been authorized to appeal from Order No. 2604-A in the name of the New Orleans by the New Orleans, by the Court below, or by Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of the New Orleans.

[fol. 5] (c) The brief filed on behalf of said Andrew W. Comstock in support of the above entitled appeals fails to comply with Rule 11(b) of the Rules of this Court in that said brief contains no separate and particular statement of a point pertaining to his right to appeal in the name of the New Orleans, and no such point is urged in said brief.

2. Cause No. 13378. This is an appeal from Order No. 2604-A. (R.7) The grounds for dismissal of this appeal are:

*The plan of reorganization approved by order of the court below, No. 2604-B (R. 1124-1128), is referred to herein as the "Plan".

The New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company, one of the subsidiary debtors in the reorganization proceedings below is herein referred to as the "New Orleans".

(a) No objections to the Plan and no claims for equitable treatment were filed in the court below by or on behalf of Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee of the New Orleans. Said Andrew W. Comstock did not appear on behalf of Guy A. Thompson as Trustee of the New Orleans in the proceedings below which resulted in the entry of Order No. 2604-A. Accordingly, he is not entitled to appeal from said order in the name of Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee of the New Orleans.

(b) Upon information and belief, neither the court below nor Guy A. Thompson has authorized said Andrew W. Comstock to appeal from Order No. 2604-A in the name of Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee of the New Orleans. (See R. 39).

(c) The brief filed on behalf of said Andrew W. Comstock in support of the above entitled appeals fails to comply with Rule 11(b) of the Rules of this Court in that said brief contains no separate and particular statement of a point pertaining to his right to appeal in the name of Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee of the New Orleans and no such point is urged in said brief.

[fol. 6] 3. Cause No. 13379. This is an appeal from Order No. 2888 of the court below (R. 39) denying an application of said Andrew W. Comstock (R. 35) for leave to appeal from Order No. 2604-A in the name of Guy A. Thompson, as Trustee of the New Orleans. The grounds for dismissal of this appeal are:

(a) If and to the extent that said Andrew W. Comstock is entitled to appeal from Order No. 2604-A, his right is to appeal in his own name in respect of issues which were properly raised and presented by him in the court below.

(b) The brief filed on behalf of said Andrew W. Comstock in support of the above entitled appeals fails to comply with Rule 11(b) of the Rules of this Court in that said brief contains no separate and particular statement of a point pertaining to his appeal from Order No. 2888 and no such point is urged in said brief. (See R. 56-57).

The foregoing motion is made upon the record on appeal herein and the brief filed in December 1946 on behalf of the appellants in the above entitled cause.

Wherefore the above named appellees pray that the foregoing motion be granted.

Before GARDNER, WOODROUGH, and THOMAS, Circuit Judges.

WOODROUGH, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the Court.

This appeal is taken by Andrew W. Comstock to reverse an order (No. 2604-A) entered January 22, 1946, in the proceedings for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, and a number of other affiliated railroad corporations, under Section 77 (11 U.S.C.A. Sec. 205), begun in March, 1933. The order followed upon a separate hearing by the court of certain of the separately numbered objections and claims for equitable treatment which were included among many others in the objections and plea for equitable treatment filed by Comstock as an owner of 5¼% Missouri Pacific Secured Serial bonds secured by pledge of New Orleans stock against the plan of reorganization then before the court. The objections passed on after the separate hearing were identified as "Comstock's objection 19 and related objections dependent thereon." On consideration of the voluminous evidence adduced on the issues thereby presented, the court found the facts against the objector, and determined the plan to be fair and equitable in so far as those objections and claim of Comstock are concerned. The identified objections and claim for equitable treatment based thereon were denied and Comstock appeals.

It appears that the Missouri Pacific acquired the controlling interest in the capital stock of the New Orleans at the end of 1924 and at times relevant here owned from 58 to 93 percent of the total $15,000,000 par value of such stock, and from January 1925, until simultaneous commencement of reorganization proceedings in bankruptcy of both corporations in 1933, it managed the affairs of the New Orleans through Missouri Pacific officers who were given corresponding positions in the New Orleans corporation. An expansion program for both companies was carried on and throughout the course of operations the Missouri Pacific made advancements for improvements and betterments to the New Orleans. Some were repaid, but in February 1933, the New Orleans filed its application with the Interstate Commerce Commission under Section 20a of the Transportation Act (49 U.S.C.A. Sec. 20a (2)), showing that it was indebted to the Missouri Pacific for an accumulation of such advances over a period of years remaining unpaid in the sum of $10,355,226.78, and that it had been requested by the Missouri Pacific to issue demand notes therefor in the amount of $9,955,226.78 to the Missouri Pacific. It had partially complied by issuing one such note for $400,000.00, and one for $2,498,500, and after hearing the Commission made its finding as required by the statute,[1] 49 U.S.C.A. Sec. 20a (2), and authorized New Orleans to issue to the Missouri Pacific a note for the remaining $7,456,726.78. So that at the time of the bankruptcy of the New Orleans on the same date as that of the Missouri Pacific the notes of the New Orleans to the Missouri Pacific in the sum of $10,355,226.78 were outstanding and unpaid. Under authorization of the Interstate Commerce Commission, granted after hearing, the Missouri Pacific had pledged two of the notes aggregating $9,955,-226.78 as security for loans made to it by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. An additional pledge was made to Railroad Finance Corporation.

After appointment of the trustees for the railroads and on August 29, 1938, an officer of the Missouri Pacific filed claim for that company against the New Orleans for the amount of the notes, plus an item of advancement of $210,-000.00, aggregating the amount of $10,565,226.78, describing the consideration as "cash advances for operation, interest payments, etc., at various times from March 1929 to February 1933, both inclusive." The items which made up the total $10,565,226.78 were clearly specified and evidence of the validity of the debt as consideration for the notes was adduced before the Commission at an early stage of these Section 77 proceedings, and the obligation was deemed to be valid and ahead of New Orleans' stockholder interest in all of the accountings, computations and adjustments resulting in the plan of reorganization determined by the Commission and approved by the court in 1940. It has also been so considered by the Commission in the plan of reorganization before the court at the time of the hearing and order now appealed from.

[1] " * * * that the issue by the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company of a note or notes in an aggregate amount not exceeding $7,456,726.78, as aforesaid, (2) is for a lawful object within its corporate purposes, and compatible with the public interest, which is necessary and appropriate for and consistent with the proper performance by it of service to the public as a common carrier, and which will not impair its ability to perform that service, and (b) is reasonably necessary and appropriate for such purpose." New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company Notes, Finance Docket No. 9817; 189 ICC 600, 601, (1933) (R. 20839-20840)

It appears that in 1926 the Missouri Pacific issued and caused to be sold to the public its 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds in the amount of $13,156,000, secured by the pledge of $1000.00 par value of New Orleans capital stock for each $1000.00 principal amount of outstanding bonds, so that the officers who were put in charge of the affairs of both corporations came under fiduciary obligation to the creditors and the stockholders of each company to handle honestly the affairs of each.

Comstock owns some of said 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds so secured by the pledge of the New Orleans capital stock, and by virtue of his ownership of said bonds he has an interest as a creditor of the Missouri Pacific in the payment of his bonds and the interest thereon, and also an interest in the capital stock of the New Orleans pledged to secure the bonds. On November 22, 1944, he filed his objections to the plan of reorganization and plea for equitable treatment on the basis of those interests. Certain of his objections contained charges of mismanagement of the Missouri Pacific to his detriment as a bondholding creditor of that corporation, but the separately numbered objections here involved relate to wrongs which he alleges were done by the Missouri Pacific to the New Orleans to the detriment of his interest in the pledged stock of that company.

By his objections "Numbered 19 and related objections," Comstock charged that during the period when the affairs of the New Orleans were controlled by its majority stockholder the Missouri Pacific, between the end of 1924 and the bankruptcy in 1933, the Missouri Pacific management caused the New Orleans to pay dividends illegally out of capital and to improvidently declare and pay dividends unjustified by the business and condition of the New Orleans; improperly loaned money to it for the purpose of enabling it to pay dividends; involved it (the New Orleans) in expansion and improperly made advancements to it and caused it to assume indebtedness growing out of expansion; caused it to be operated with unfair advantage to the Missouri Pacific and loss to itself, and generally mismanaged it and committed spoliation and waste of its property and interests to the financial detriment of the New Orleans and for the benefit of the Missouri Pacific. There is also a charge that the trustee for the New Orleans, who is also trustee for the Missouri Pacific, failed to perform his duties as trustee for the New Orleans, to the detriment of New Orleans stock interest. Although an Exhibit "A" attached to the objections assumed to set forth details, the charges remained sweeping and general in form with few exceptions.[3]

The objector prayed that the Missouri Pacific claim for $10,565,227 and interest against the New Orleans be disallowed; that it be determined that the New Orleans was not indebted to the Missouri Pacific, and in the alternative, that all claims of the Missouri Pacific against the New Orleans be subordinated in the reorganization to the New Orleans capital stock interest.

The allegations of breaches of obligations on the part of the Missouri Pacific were traversed in pleadings of other parties in interest. The main burden of producing witnesses and evidence to justify the handling of the affairs of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific during the period of Missouri Pacific management and to prove the

[3]The Exhibit "A" also included excerpts from a report of a subcommittee of the United States Senate on the subject of Missouri Pacific System—Inter Company Dividends and Advances, published about July 29, 1940, which criticized Missouri Pacific management of the New Orleans.

$10,565,226.78 indebtedness of the New Orleans to the Missouri Pacific was carried at the trial by the Group of Institutional Investors Holding First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and The Protective Committee for the holders of General Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. They recognized fully the fiduciary nature of the obligation which law and equity attributed to the Missouri Pacific by reason of its pledge of the capital stock of the New Orleans to secure the 5¼% Serial Bonds while the New Orleans was under its management as majority stockholder, and that by the terms of the pledge the Missouri Pacific was entitled to receive itself only the dividends (lawfully and properly declared) of the New Orleans stock and was required as to the corpus of said stock to honestly manage the corporate affairs and to exercise honest judgment and good faith to preserve the stock interest inviolate.

Comstock did not question or deny that the New Orleans had executed its negotiable promissory notes to the Missouri Pacific which were outstanding at the time of the trial drawing interest, and conceded that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as an innocent holder thereof in pledge could hold the New Orleans for their face amount and interest, but his contention was that by reason of its wrongdoings the Missouri Pacific either had no valid claim or that such claim as it had should be subordinated to the capital stock interest. He did not assert or tender evidence to show that any specified individuals working for the New Orleans or the Missouri Pacific, or both companies, had misappropriated or wrongfully diverted to their own use any of the assets or business of the New Orleans to the detriment of stockholders. He tendered no evidence to show that the plan of Missouri Pacific system expansion, including expansion and improvement of the New Orleans, and for the financing thereof, adopted and carried through by the Missouri Pacific, was in itself fraudulent or reckless and improvident. As to the New Orleans, the plan contemplated that the Missouri Pacific would advance money to the New Orleans for betterments and additions on short time loans, and that at intervals when the indebtedness became of sufficient size bond issues would be sold to refund it. The worst of the depression came coincidentally with the time when such refunding was expected to be made and made the refunding impossible.

From testimony frankly given by himself, and on the face of the record, it clearly appears as to the case Comstock presented to the court on the objections herein involved that after the report of the Senate subcommittee which criticized the Missouri Pacific management of the New Orleans, and in 1940, Comstock bought a few of the 5¼% Serial bonds at about 10 cents on the dollar and then employed an accountant to make studies of the accounts, records and reports of Missouri Pacific management of the New Orleans and based his charges on the accountant's studies. He tendered no extraneous or newly discovered evidence. As the period of Missouri Pacific alleged mismanagement of the New Orleans (1925 to 1933) had expired many years before Comstock acquired his interest in New Orleans stock, a court would not ordinarily have felt obliged at his instance to try the merits of charges of mismanagement committed in long past years and claimed to be provable by contemporaneous records which were at all times accessible. It would not sanction such buying into a lawsuit.

But here the plan for Missouri Pacific reorganization was before the court to be approved or disapproved, according to whether it was or was not fair and equitable. The proposed plan included as one of its essential postulates that the New Orleans was indebted to the Missouri Pacific in a sum which with accumulated interest amounted to around eighteen million dollars. No judicial determination upon the validity of the debt had ever been made in any adversary proceedings throughout the thirteen year course of the Section 77 proceedings and bonds like Comstock's are outstanding in many hands aggregating some $13,500,000. Although the court was of opinion that not only Comstock but all other owners of the Missouri Pacific 5¼% Serial Bonds secured by New Orleans stock who had at all times trustee representation and in great part representation by counsel, had been guilty of laches in failing for so many years to assert and present proof and try out before the Commission and the court the alleged invalidity of the debt almost entirely evidenced by the notes,[3] it concluded that judicial adjudication should be made as to the debt and that the court should, and therefore it did, hear the evidence covering the whole period of management of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific, and it tried out the whole case and all the charges presented by Comstock on the merits.

The expert accountant called by Comstock produced a large number of exhibits which he had prepared from the books, records and reports of the individual companies and explained in connection with them the inferences he had drawn from his studies and expressed his opinions tending to support the Comstock charges. He centered his attack largely on that part of the accounting system of the railroads through which the New Orleans and its fourteen subsidiary railroads had been treated as a unit for financing purposes and the financial condition indicated by consolidated balance sheets. By disregarding the system character of all the Gulf Coast Lines held under New Orleans ownership he inferred a much less favorable financial position for the New Orleans than was shown by its consolidated balance sheets. He had no personal knowledge of the railroad operations or transactions covered by his testimony.

The Group of Institutional Investors Holding First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific and The Protective Committee for the holders of General Mortgage bonds of Missouri Pacific to sustain the burden of Missouri Pacific defense called as their witnesses on the trial the railroad men who had engaged, each in his own department, in all of the transactions and railroad operations and the records made thereof throughout the period involved, and they testified of and concerning matters with which they were intimately familiar. Also Mr. William Wyer, who after his graduation from Yale and Massachusetts Institute of Technology served in railroad construction and operation for the government during World War I, and in U. S. Railroad Administration during Federal Control, and afterwards in various positions in the Division of Operations, Division of Accounts and Assistant to the Comptroller. From 1920 to 1927 he occupied important positions with the Southern Railroad Company and the Denver Rio Grande and Western, the latter being "fifty percent. owned by the Missouri Pacific so it was considered a part of the Missouri Pacific System." In February, 1929, he became Assistant to the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Missouri Pacific who was also Chairman of the Board of the New Orleans, and later in the year he became Secretary and Treasurer of the Missouri Pacific and an officer on all the subsidiaries, except as to the Texas and Pacific he was such officers for only six years. He handled a great many of the financial matters involving the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans under the supervision of the Chairman of the Board of the Missouri Pacific. In 1933 he started studies which have provided substantially all of the studies upon which the various plans of reorganization have been based. He was at the time of testifying the chief executive officer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

He was thoroughly informed and conversant with the Missouri Pacific policies of system operation and of expanding and financing, and with the railroad operations and the financial transactions upon which the validity or invalidity of the debt in controversy depend, as well as the accounting and reporting system maintained for disclosing and reporting them. He had an important part in what was done, was in touch with substantially the whole course of the management of the New Orleans under attack and he gave his extensive testimony upon direct and cross examination with obvious understanding of its relevancy and importance. His testimony, supported by many accounting and summarizing exhibits, was to the effect that Missouri Pacific management of New Orleans was honest and was beneficial to New Orleans.

Judge Moore, presiding at the trial, has exercised the jurisdiction in these Section 77 proceedings through most of their course, and his questions, comments and directions reflect his close attention to and understanding of the testimony and its application through the trial. His written opinion is reported 64 F. Supp. 64. His findings of facts and conclusions of law were drawn with care and thoroughness, and appear to us to be responsive to all the issues presented by the objections here involved and the evidence that was adduced, and the appellant has not called our attention to any refusal on the part of the court to make findings in respect to any other issues claimed to have been presented. The vast extent of the railroad business carried on by the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans during the long past period of alleged mismanagement and the intricate corporate structures of the railroads, inevitably presented most serious problems in the attempts of accountants to picture what their course of operations and financial transactions had been. The New Orleans had in some respects the character of a holding company in that it operated itself only a small fraction (around 11%) of the railroad mileage of its railroad system but owned the stocks and securities of some fourteen other railroad companies and was the only one of the group of railroads comprising its railroad system which had any relatively substantial amount of securities outstanding in the hands of the public. For financing purposes the individual roads in the group were dependent upon the New Orleans which, acting for the group in respect to financing, presented the necessary unitary functioning principal. There was fundamental controversy as to what inferences should be drawn from the available accounts to establish the true financial condition of the New Orleans at different times within the period and to establish and present the financial results of the railroad operations that were carried on. Mr. Wyer testified that the identified consolidated balance sheets compiled under direction of the Missouri Pacific and New Orleans officers were the summarizing records which were submitted to the Board of Directors to keep its members informed in the discharge of their duties. It was through the use of the consolidated balance sheets that the New Orleans and its affiliated railroads were treated as a unit in the financing of the companies throughout Missouri Pacific management. Though he could not say what went on in the minds of others, his testimony leaves no room to doubt that the Board members well understood how the computations were arrived at and that the members relied on them in the usual course of the financing of the business. He was intimately familiar with all phases of the accounting in which they culminate, and although he admitted that perfection was never attained, his testimony together with that of the railroad officers and employees who did the work, fully justified the trial court's reliance upon the consolidated balance sheets in his findings and conclusions. But the disputes and conflicts of testimony in respect to the accounts and the inferences to be drawn were all issues of fact. The court recognized fully all the en of obligation imposed by law upon the Missouri ic in respect to its management of the New Orleans that if the Comstock charges could be proved and the tedness in issue was invalid or ought not in equity to nforced against New Orleans stockholders, the then ing plan of reorganization could not stand.

mstock's contention that the court erroneously put the en of proving his charges on him rather than requirhe Missouri Pacific to proceed first to disprove them, thout merit. As the execution of the promissory notes admitted and at least formal proof of all of the items vancements making up the debt had been in the record e Section 77 proceedings for many years before the ng, the court required only that all the records of the actions that were questioned be made available for the ng so that there was the equivalent of a full dis-re by the Missouri Pacific before Comstock was red to proceed with his proof of the charges. In its gs the court stated the facts as it found them to be en by the whole evidence. It found in detail and in that the Missouri Pacific had administered the s of the New Orleans in good faith to the advantage
t company; had made the advancements to it for prop-rposes; had not caused dividends to be paid out of l or improvidently in bad faith, and that the asserted tedness arose from advancement made by Missouri ic to New Orleans for betterments and additions and alid and should be allowed in items specified, and that an of reorganization based as it was in part on recogof the existence of the debt in question, was fair and able and comformable to the requirements of law re-ng the participation of the various classes of creditors tockholders.

this appeal the case is stated for the appellant in antial disregard of the findings of the trial court and ically as though the case was here to be tried by this court de novo on the voluminous evidence. This court must decline to assume that function. We may not set aside the findings of facts which have been made by the trial court, who in this case had more than ordinary opportunity to judge of the credibility of the witnesses, unless such findings were clearly erroneous. F.R.C. 52a; General Orders in Bankruptcy Nos. 36 and 49, 11 U.S.C.A. following Section 53. Though we have considered the appeal sufficient in form to require a complete study of the record and evidence, we are forbidden by the rule to upset those findings which are supported by substantial evidence and are not clearly erroneous nor induced by error of law. Rule 52a is no less controlling because the conflicts of evidence upon which the trial court was required to decide were in the field of accountancy and expert opinions in that field were opposed. Our examination of the record in accordance with the rule has not disclosed any finding which lacks support in testimony of qualified and intelligent witnesses who fully understood the import of what they showed by the exhibits they vouched for or said on the witness stand.

The findings which we sustain cover many printed pages of the record, and to discuss them in connection with the contrary inferences which appellant contends should be drawn from particulars of evidence would extend this opinion to great length to no useful purpose. The Missouri Pacific's two hundred million dollar expansion and improvement plan, its plan for financing the same, the accounting system that was used and by which the directors were kept informed for management purposes, and the whole course of the management of the New Orleans is revealed in the evidence. There is also substantial evidence in the record that the war years tested the effects of the investments for the New Orleans made under Missouri Pacific management and justified them. The findings indicate the opposing contentions made on the trial and cover the particulars of the evidence and indicate the bases of the court's action.

appellant has strenuously urged that the decision of preme Court in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric 6 U.S. 307, requires reversal herein. But we think e court there had to deal with a situation entirely nt. The Supreme Court later said concerning its n in that case as to the subordination which it there d on a parent corporation's claims against the sub-: "This was based on the equities of the case—the of spoliation, mismanagement, and faithless stew-of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the nt of the public investors." Pepper v. Litton, 308 5, l.c. 308. Here the trial court has found on sub- evidence an exactly contrary situation. The stock New Orleans has been kept intact and of recognized hrough depressions which wiped out vast amounts securities, and on full investigation of the facts the as found the Missouri Pacific's stewardship was and there was no mismanagement or spoliation.

ind no error in the trial court's findings against ck in respect to his charges of dereliction of duty by tee of the New Orleans. Those charges were with-it. The holders of 5¼% Secured Series Missouri bonds at all times had trustee representation and f them were being represented by counsel. WOODROUGH, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the Court.

These appeals, Nos. 13,377 and 13,378, by Comstock in the names of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee, and in the name of the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, Debtor, were presented upon the same record as the appeal in No. 13,376. They were taken out of precaution to reverse the same order (No. 2604-A) involved in No. 13,376 on the same grounds, to be relied on in the event that some insufficiency of right to review the order should be found in respect to Comstock's appeal taken in his own name as an owner and holder of 5¼ percent Missouri Pacific Secured Serial Bonds. We have accorded review to Comstock and considered the grounds of attack upon the order and affirmed it in No. 13,376, this day decided, and accordingly dismiss these appeals.

The appeal in No. 13,379 is taken from an order denying Comstock's application for leave to appeal from Order No. 2604-A in the name of the railroad or of the trustee and is also dismissed on the same considerations.

Interstate Commerce Commission,
Bureau of Accounts
Washington, March 28, 1936.

Mr. M. Eckert,
Auditor, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company,
Houston, Texas.

Dear Sir:

Under Schedule 200 A, "Comparative General Balance Sheet-Asset Side", in your Company's annual report to the Commission for the year 1934, an amount of $4,732,892.39 is reported against Account 717, "Interest and Dividends Receivable." It is understood that this amount included an item of $1,400,000.00 representing a part of a dividend declared by the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railway Company in the year 1931, and that this amount was credited to Account 513, "Dividend Income" in that year.

The text of Account 513 reads in part as follows:

"Dividends declared shall not be credited prior to actual collection unless their payment is reasonably assured by past experience, guaranty, anticipated provision, or otherwise."

When this dividend was declared your company was aware that the St. Louis, Brownsville, and Mexico Railway was without funds to pay it, and even on the basis of past experience the earnings of the company, had business continued good, would not have been adequate to make the payment until some future date. The recording of the dividend in Account 513 when declared was clearly in violation of the Commission's accounting rule hereinabove quoted.

While it is at this time too late to correct the income accounts which have already been closed, it is not too late to write off the unpaid portion of this dividend through profit and loss. Please arrange to have this done in the current accounts, sending me a copy of the journal entry through which the accounting is accomplished.

[fol. 57] In this connection you are requested to furnish this bureau with a statement showing the items comprising the current balance in Account 717 together with your comments supporting their classification as current assets, within the provisions of Section 7 of the special instructions in the classification of Income, Profit and Loss and General Balance Sheet Accounts.

A prompt reply to this letter will be appreciated.

Yours very truly,

ALEXANDER WYLIE,
Director.

Mr. F. P. Johnson

In order to do away with the necessity for listing family line bills and family line vouchers each time and analysis of these accounts is prepared I would like before closing December 1933 accounts to transfer such items in so far as prior items are concerned to Advances and Non Negotiable Debit accounts in the same manner as we handled similar items some years ago.

With this end in view I have had prepared a statement of family line bills unpaid and family line unpaid vouchers as of Nov. 30, 1933. This statement reflects separation of bills between prior and Trustee accounts but as there is no prospect of paying prior accounts items I proposed to transfer such items from Acct 727 Unadjusted Debits where the bills are now carried and Acct 778 Unadjusted Credits where the vouchers are carried to Acct (706d) Advances to Affiliated Companies and Acct 757 Non-Neg-Debt to Affiliated Companies in so far as the prior items are concerned.

Exception No. 19

Advances to or from affiliated companies, and items subject to current settlement with such companies, classified as unadjusted debits or credits instead of as investments in affiliated companies, nonnegotiable debt to affiliated companies, or miscellaneous accounts receivable or payable, as appropriate.

(a) The amounts of all bills rendered by the carrier against the several affiliated Missouri Pacific lines having headquarters in Houston, Texas, except the Brownsville and Matamoros Bridge Company, are debited to an account styled "Family Lines Bills", classified under account 727, "Other unadjusted debits". The balance of $15,640,056.89 in that account as of December 31, 1932, contained large amounts representing an accumulation of bills rendered against some of the affiliated lines during periods of from two to six years. Therefore, it is evident that to a large extent such bills were not subject to current settlement. Bills against certain other system companies, also reflected in the balance in that account covered charges customarily settled on what amounts to a current basis.

Items due from affiliated companies which are subject to current settlement should be debited to account 715, "Miscellaneous accounts receivable", while those permitted to remain outstanding indefinitely should be stated in account 706, "Investments in affiliated companies", in accordance with the texts of those accounts.

(b) Audited bills received from the affiliated lines mentioned in section (a) are immediately covered by non-bankable vouchers, the amounts thereof being credited to an account styled "Family Lines Vouchers", classified under account 778, "Other unadjusted credits", which account reflected a balance of $78,394.45 as of December 31, 1932. It was noted that in most instances such amounts were cleared by cash transfers within one or two months from date of voucher. In such cases the amounts of vouchers should be considered as current liabilities and credited to account 761, "Miscellaneous accounts payable", in accordance with the text of that account. However, any amounts vouchered which are not subject to current settlement should be credited to account 757, "Nonnegotiable debt to affiliated companies", in accordance with the provisions of that account.

The practices referred to in sections (a) and (b) of this exception should be corrected and the accounts adjusted in harmony therewith, and two copies of the adjusting entry submitted to this bureau, giving journal entry reference, ledger folio and the month in which entered.

We assent to this exception and adjustments have been made in December, 1933 accounts by transferring family line vouchers having liability prior to April 1, 1933 from Account 778, "Unadjusted Credits," to Account 757b, "Non-Negotiable Debt to Affiliated Companies"; and by changing the ledger heading on such balances subsequent to April 1, 1933 from Account 778, "Unadjusted Credits," to Account 761, "Miscellaneous Accounts Payable," they being considered subject to current settlement. Exception No. 11

Advances to or from affiliated companies, and items subject to current settlement with such companies, classified as unadjusted debits or credits instead of as investments in affiliated companies, nonnegotiable debt to affiliated companies, or miscellaneous accounts receivable or payable, as appropriate.

(a) The amounts of all bills rendered by the carrier against the several affiliated Missouri Pacific lines having headquarters in Houston, Texas, except the Brownsville and Matamoros Bridge Company, are debited to an account styled "Family Lines Bills", classified under account 727, "Other unadjusted debits". The balance of $410,674.21 in that account as of December 31, 1932, contained large amounts representing an accumulation of bills rendered against some of the affiliated lines during periods of from two to ten years. Therefore, it is evident that to a large extent such bills were not subject to current settlement. Bills against certain other system companies, also reflected in the balance in the account, covered charges customarily settled on what amounts to a current basis.

Items due from affiliated companies which are subject to current settlement should be debited to account 715, "Miscellaneous accounts receivable", while those permitted to remain outstanding indefinitely should be stated in account 706, "Investments in affiliated companies", in accordance with the texts of those accounts.

account reflected a balance of $10,598,654.54 as of December 31, 1932. It was noted that amounts due some of the lines were cleared within one or two months by means of cash transfers but that the balance in the account also included large amounts which have been due other lines for several years.

Amounts due affiliated companies which are subject to current settlement should be credited to account 761, "Miscellaneous accounts payable", while those not subject to current settlement should be credited to account 757, "Nonnegotiable debt to affiliated companies", in accordance with the texts of those accounts.

Houston, March 27, 1926.

Mr. H. R. Safford: Referring to your file 482-2 in regard to the matter of dividends on the capital stock of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company which was paid on March 1st. It is again necessary that we take some action on behalf of our subsidiary companies with respect to declaring a dividend out of surplus of either The St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Ry. Co., or the Beaumont, Sour Lake & Western Ry. Co. for the purpose of taking care of the last dividend, as the income of the NOT&M Ry. Co. has been inadequate to pay out of its earnings the dividend which was declared by the Board of Directors.

Would you kindly have this matter placed before Mr. Cole in order that he may have suitable resolution prepared and passed on at the next meeting of the Board of Directors of the StLB&M Co. I will give him the amount which it will be necessary to provide from StLB&M funds.

Mr. Eckert: Returning your file 5–0

The dividend requirement of 1-¾% on the N.O.T. & M.'s capital stock declared as of March 1st, 1927, was $259,575.75, compared with net income of the N.O.T. & M. for the three months ended February 28th of $253,043.86, as per statement attached, resulting in a deficit of $6,531.89, which I presume will have to be made up by a dividend on the capital stock of the St. L. B. & M. in favor of the N.O.T. & M.

Mr. A. T. Cole: Referring to your conference with Mr. Anderson, with reference to meeting of Board of Directors of the StLB&M Railway Company, whose stock is owned by NOT&M Railway Company, for the purpose of declaring dividend out of the earnings for the three months ending May 31st, 1926.

Following our past practice, it will be my desire to declare out of the StLB&M earnings, to extent of amount necessary to protect the dividend already declared and paid by the NOT&M, namely, $41,344.58.

You have scheduled adjourned annual meeting of Directors of the StLB&M for August, at which time this matter can be handled, and I would like for you to have our Legal Department prepare a resolution in proper form for presentation at that time.

Houston, Jan. 9th, 1926.

Mr. L. W. Baldwin: The minutes of meeting of the Board of Directors of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company held in New York October 27th, 1925, state that the Chairman reported that the estimated earnings of the Company for the three months ending November 30, 1925, would be in excess of the rate of 7% per annum on the capital stock of the Company and recommended the declaration of the quarterly dividend payable December 1, 1925, which was done.

The dividend requirement on New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Co. capital stock was $259,575.75, based upon 1¾% on 148,329 shares outstanding. So long as we declare this dividend out of net income of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Co. it is necessary that New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Co. itself earn a sufficient amount to warrant paying it.

The actual results of that line for the three mont period ending with November 30, 1925, aggregated on $172,053.55, or 1.147% and fell short by the sum $87,522.20 of the amount of dividend which has been d clared and paid.

Mr. Andrews to whom I have referred this matter, co curs in my views that meetings of the Board of Directo of The Beaumont, Sour Lake & Western Railway Co. an The St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railway Co. shou be held and dividend declared out of the earnings of tho companies for the current year, or so much thereof as ma be necessary to protect the dividend already declared an paid by New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Co.

Will you kindly advise if you desire meeting of th Boards of Directors of the two Texas companies mentione called for the purpose of taking such action as may b necessary in the premises.

[fol. 130] Comstock Exhibit 84.

Houston, April 28th, 1931

Mr. Baldwin: Replying to your letter of April 16th written at New York setting a goal for Gulf Coast Lines net income for the year 1931.

We have made a survey of the situation and have prepared statements indicating what we believe is a conservative estimate of the probable gross earnings, and showing operating expenses and other charges as now programmed and which are very close to the irreducible minimum unless we make some further drastic reduction in service.

The realization of the goal indicated by you is largely dependent upon gross earnings. Actual results for the first three months of the year reflect a decrease in total railway operating revenues of $1,324,505, and present indications are that April will show a further decrease of something like $350,000, making the total decrease for four months $1,674,000 as compared with the same period last year. The general conditions effecting this decrease will no doubt continue but will be off-set in a measure by the special movement of East Texas oil to Baytown, Itreco, and Pt. Arthur, which traffic incidentally takes very low rate per car, and by increased movement of citrus during the latter part of the year. The major trends in our freight traffic are shown in a separate statement attached. Passenger revenues are showing a very substantial reduction under last year and there are no prospects for improvement in the near future.

Taking all these factors into consideration, we are estimating gross revenues for the year at $12,889,034, a reduction of $2,539,387 or 16.4% under 1930. As stated above, for the first four months our gross revenue will be $1,674,000 or 26% behind the same period last year.

Our Maintenance of Way and Structures expenses are now programmed at $1,801,507, a reduction of $591,622 or approximately 25% under last year. We have reduced our operating expenses in connection with improvements from $382,600, as originally budgeted, to $55,100; this involves deferring all rail and ballast work. We plan on using 150,000 cross ties as compared with 212,000 last year.

Our present program for Maintenance of Equipment means that we must hold our expenditures for the year to $2,102,409, a reduction of $621,756 or 22.8% under last year. This will be the lowest expenditure for MofE since 1924 and provides running repair money only for locomotives and cars, except that we will be able to turn out about 15 Class 1, 2 and 3 repairs as compared with 49 last year. At the end of 1931 there will be about 30 engines which will have run out their assigned mileage.

[fol. 131] Transportation Expenses are estimated at $3,654,538, a reduction of $508,189 under last year, the estimated transportation ratio being 28.35, as compared with 26.98 last year. This estimate gives effect to the reduction in passenger service on the Kingsville Division in January, amounting to approximately 242,000 train miles per annum; also, takes into consideration a substantial improvement in freight train performance as a result of placing 1200-class engines on the Kingsville Division. The estimate further involves a very close check of our supervisory, yard, and station forces which is now being done. The increase in transportation ratio anticipated is entirely due to the low level of earnings.

We will not be able to show much reduction in hire of freight cars because of the fact that such increases as we anticipate in freight traffic will be largely in oil and vegetables, involving increase in private line mileage.

Net income for the year on this basis is estimated at $457,519, a reduction of $644,382 under last year and $680,581 under the goal set by you in your letter mentioned above.

The net result falls far short of what you want to accomplish and I realize this is disappointing and am still hopeful we can improve it and we shall make every possible effort to do so. Our present program for MofW and MofE is materially under last year and we have felt that we have gone as deeply into these expenditures as we could without impairing, the standard of service, but we will continue to check this further to see what more can be done, in recognition of your request.

Purchase of Stock of New Orleans Texas & Mexico Railway Company

Mr. Williams, Chairman of the Executive Committee, then presented to the Board the matter of the proposed purchase of shares of the capital stock of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company (Gulf Coast Lines) and explained in detail an agreement which had been negotiated by him, with the co-operation and assistance of Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., for the purchase from W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc., and Blair & Co., Inc., of said stock. The Agreement as outlined by Mr. Williams provided for the purchase by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company from said bankers on June 2, 1924 of 37,500 shares of the capital stock of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company (being 25% of the outstanding capital stock thereof) at the price of $120. per share, payable in the 7% Notes of this Company maturing September 1, 1925, secured by the pledge of the stock so purchased. In consideration of such purchase this Company is to be given an option by said bankers to purchase an additional 39,000 shares of stock of said New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company, being an additional 26% thereof, at the same price. The agreement further contemplated that the directors of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company should prior to the purchase of the stock by this Company declare a cash dividend to the present stockholders aggregating the sum of $2,475,000. It further provided for the acquisition by the Company of additional shares on the same terms to such extent as the bankers might be able to offer the same. The agreement also provided that this Company should exercise its option to acquire the additional 26% of said stock in case the Interstate Commerce Commission should grant the [fol. 139] necessary authority to enable it to exercise the same, and to issue in payment for said stock its Seven Per Cent. Fifteen-Year Collateral Trust Gold Bonds, secured by the pledge of stock of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company acquired, which by the terms of said agreement were to be accepted by said bankers in payment for said stock at par. The agreement further provides that in case the Interstate Commerce Commission should authorize the issue of said Seven Per Cent. Fifteen-Year Collateral Trust Gold Bonds, this Company should have the right at any time prior to January 1, 1925 to exchange into such bonds, par for par, its 7% Collateral Trust Notes issued for the purchase of said 37,500 shares of said stock.

Mr. Williams further explained that the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company had entered into an agreement to acquire, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, all of the capital stock of the International-Great Northern Railroad Company at the price of $31. per share, payable in cash on or before June 14; and also, subject to like approval, to guarantee the payment of interest up to four per cent. per annum upon the Adjustment Mortgage Gold Bonds, Series A, of the International-Great Northern Railroad Company.

Mr. Williams fully explained the proposed transaction and read to the Board a statement compiled from reports recently made by the Chief Engineer of the Missouri Pacific of examinations of the property of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company and the International-Great Northern Railroad Company and from the annual reports of said Companies, and the reports made to him by the officers of the Gulf Coast Lines regarding the earnings of said properties, which statements and reports and other data upon which the same was based were filed among the records of the Company.

Mr. Williams further stated that the matter had been submitted to the Executive Committee at its meeting held April 4, 1924, and again at its meeting held April 10, 1924, and that the Executive Committee had adopted a resolution approving of the proposed purchase and recommending it for the approval of the Board of Directors. A general discussion followed, in which the President of the Company participated and expressed himself as being heartily in favor of the proposed transaction.

Mr. Williams further stated that in connection with the purchase he had agreed with Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., subject to the approval of the Board, that their compensation for services rendered in connection with the negotiations should be an amount equal to 1¼% of the face amount of securities issued by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company in connection with said purchase.

Mr. Williams also read and submitted to the Board a memorandum of agreement which had been submitted to and approved by the Executive Committee and which had been initialed by him on behalf of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, and by Messrs. G. H. Walker and Elisha Walker on behalf of the bankers, and which provided that a more formal agreement should be entered into upon the approval of the transaction by the Boards of Directors of the various parties concerned.

[fol. 140] On motion, duly seconded, it was

November 11, 1926

Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co.,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to the $13,156,000 principal amount Missouri Pacific Railroad Company 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds, maturing in equal annual instalments from December 1, 1931 to December 1, 1956, both inclusive, which you have agreed to purchase, I state the following for your information:

The Bonds will be the direct obligation of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and will be secured by the deposit and pledge with a trust company, as trustee under a trust indenture, of $1,000 par value of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company stock for each $1,000 principal amount of bonds outstanding, as provided in the trust indenture.

Missouri Pacific Railroad Company owns $13,160,500 par value of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company stock being approximately 87¾% of the outstanding stock. This stock was acquired by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company at a cost of $120. per share. Dividends are being paid at the rate of 7% per annum. For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1925, the earnings of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company applicable to dividends were equivalent to 16¾% on its stock, and for the last three fiscal years such earnings averaged about 17⅛%.

[fol. 142b] The proceeds of the sale of the bonds will be applied to the retirement of $13,391,500 of this Company's Fifteen Year 7% Sinking Fund Notes which are to be called for redemption on January 17, 1927. This new issue will, therefore, result in a substantial reduction of the annual fixed charges of the Company.

The gross income of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company for the year ended December 31, 1925, applicable to the payment of interest on funded debt and other fixed charges, amounted to $23,167,799, while such charges amounted to only $14,823,943. Such income for the nine months ended September 30, 1926, increased $1,749,020 over the same period of last year.

The total authorized amount of the 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds is limited to $15,000,000 principal amount. The $13,156,000 principal amount of bonds which you have agreed to purchase will mature in equal annual instalments of $506,000 from December 1, 1931 to December 1, 1956, both inclusive and will bear interest from December 1, 1926 at the rate of 5¼% per annum, payable semi-annually on June 1 and December 1 of each year. They will be issued in coupon form in the denomination of $1,000. each with the privilege of registration as to principal. The bonds will be redeemable as a whole, but not in part, on any interest date upon sixty days' previous notice, at their principal amount and accrued interest, plus a premium equal to ½% for each six months between the redemption date and the date of maturity, but not exceeding 5%. Both the principal of and interest on the bonds will be payable in gold coin of the United States of America of the standard of weight and fineness existing December 1, 1926, without deduction for any tax, assessment or other governmental charge (except any Federal Income Tax) which the Company or the Trustee may be required to pay thereon or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States of America or of any state, municipality or other taxing authority therein.

The issuance of these bonds and their sale to you are subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission and all proceedings in connection with the creation and issuance thereof are subject to the approval of your counsel.

Pending the issue of the definitive bonds, temporary bonds or interim certificates will be issued.

Yours very truly,

Chairman of the Board.

On motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously

Resolved that the letters to be written to Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in connection with the sale of $13,156,000 principal amount, 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds of this Company, which have been submitted to this meeting, be and they hereby are in all respects approved, and that the Chairman of this Board be and he hereby is authorized to execute and deliver to Messrs. Gold Bonds now held unpledged in the Treasury of this Company, with The Railroad Credit Corporation as partial security for the payment of a note evidencing a loan of not to exceed $400,000. to International-Great Northern Railroad Company; provided, however, that before making such pledge, hypothecation, or repledge, this Company shall have received an agreement of indemnity, in form approved by counsel, executed on behalf of International-Great Northern Railroad Company by the proper officers thereof, agreeing that it will indemnify, reimburse, protect and save harmless this Company from any loss, cost, damage or expense whatsoever which it may sustain, suffer or be subject to on account of the pledge, hypothecation or repledge of security contemplated in these resolutions.

Resolved, that this Company make, in form approved by counsel, application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to pledge and repledge from time to time with The Railroad Credit Corporation, as partial collateral security for a loan or loans made or to be made by said The Railroad Credit Corporation to this Company or to International-Great Northern Railroad Company, a subsidiary of this Company, $822,300. principal amount of International-Great Northern Railroad Company's Adjustment Mortgage Six Per Cent. Gold Bonds, Series A, constituting all of said bonds acquired by this Company pursuant to the guarantee and option authorized in the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission entered December 10, 1924, in Finance Docket No. 3479; and that O. P. Petition to Federal Court

The Chairman presented to the Committee a statement prepared by the Treasurer of the amounts which will be due on April 1, 1933, consisting of interest on this Company's First Mortgage Bonds, due April 1, 1933, aggregating approximately $791,062.50.

The Chairman stated that the Company is without funds to pay this indebtedness, and is unable to borrow or otherwise procure such funds; that in the circumstances he recommends for consideration that the proper officers of this Company be authorized to file on its behalf in the District Court of the United States, Eastern Division, Eastern Judicial District of Missouri, a petition under Section 77 of Chapter VIII of the Acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, stating this Company's inability to pay its debts as they mature, and its desire to obtain the benefits of said Section 77 by effecting a plan of reorganization in connection with, and as a part of, the plan of reorganization of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company which is about to file a similar petition in said Court.

Whereupon, after full discussion, on motion duly made, seconded and unanimously carried, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, that the officers of this Company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to execute any and all documents and to do and perform any and all acts or things necessary or proper to carry out the purpose and intent of these resolutions.

Missouri Pacific Railroad

Summary from Jan 33 - Oct 24, 1937 Inclusive

Dear Mr. Bellows

The M.O.P. has a very large claim against the L&N Various attempts were made by the Railroad Commission to secure a settlement of this claim. On the other hand the L&N has claims against the M.O.P. and also the Texas Railroad Commission. The Attorney General and Railroad Commission met with the R.C.C. for a loan to L&N. It is felt that the settlement will be greatly expedited if Commission will any future loans of the motor transport companies here. The Chairman has requested me to bring the matter and as the Commission has suggested that the parties bring to the Commission for Executive

This call the claim of M.O.P. and show the amount (1,400,000.00) to the M.O.T. which will then pay it to the L&N and the L&N will use the amount to close out claim against M.O.P. The Commission hopes that the M.O.P. will be left with an amount to the Gulf Coast lines and a reasonable claim in its favor. L&N will be left with the amount in hand to M.O.P. after paying the M.O.P. entered into between the L&N and the M.O.P.

Ratification of Loan of $3,000,000. received from The Railroad Credit Corporation on August 30, 1932.

The Chairman stated that, pursuant to resolutions adopted on August 9, 1932, applications were made on August 10, 1932, to Reconstruction Finance Corporation and The Railroad Credit Corporation concurrently for a loan of $3,000,000. to be made available on or before September 1, 1932, to assist the Company in meeting its interest payments due on that date, and submitted both applications to the Board for inspection. He further stated that, after negotiations, the Railroad Credit Corporation made the loan of $3,000,000. upon condition, among other things, that it be released from its agreement to lend this Company the sum of $4,300,000. in two instalments of $1,500,000. and $2,800,000. respectively, resolutions approving these two instalments having been adopted by the Board of Directors of said Corporation upon February 17, 1932, and February 24, 1932, respectively. The sum of $4,300,000. required by this Company at that time was advanced by Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the resolutions of The Railroad Credit Corporation referred to above providing that, in the event the funds were advanced by Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it would when funds became available pay direct to Reconstruction Finance Corporation the amount of such advances made by it. This Company furthermore gave to Reconstruction Finance Corporation irrevocable orders upon The Railroad Credit Corporation directing the latter Corporation to pay such sums, when advanced, direct to Reconstruction [fol. 211] Finance Corporation, which orders were on August 30, 1932 surrendered by Reconstruction Finance Corporation to The Railroad Credit Corporation for account of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, and delivered to Missouri Pacific Railroad Company by The Railroad Credit Corporation.

The Chairman further submitted to the Board for inspection, copies of various other documents, as more specifically referred to hereinafter, executed and delivered by Wm. Wyer, Treasurer, in connection with the said loan of $3,000,000.

Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, the following preambles and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, applications dated August 10, 1932, for a loan of $3,000,000. to be made available on or before September 1, 1932, were prepared and submitted on behalf of this Company by its Treasurer, Wm. Wyer, to Reconstruction Finance Corporation and The Railroad Credit Corporation concurrently; and

Whereas, The Railroad Credit Corporation granted said loan pursuant to resolutions adopted at a meeting of its Board of Directors held on August 18, 1932, subject, however, among other things, to the condition that it be released from its agreement, previously made, to lend this Company the sum of $4,300,000. when funds became available, which condition was agreed to on behalf of this Company by its Treasurer, Wm. Wyer; and

Whereas, the Railroad Credit Corporation requested that certain securities be pledged with it as collateral for the loan of $3,000,000., and Wm. Wyer, Treasurer, acting under the authority of resolutions adopted August 9, 1932, did pledge with said Corporation the securities hereinafter mentioned; and

Whereas, certain documents were executed and delivered to The Railroad Credit Corporation on August 30, 1932, by Wm. Wyer, Treasurer, in connection with the loan of $3,000,000. received from said Corporation that day;

Now, therefore, be it

[fol. 222] Group Exhibit 3.

Memorandum in connection with advances made by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company to the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, and the cancellation of advances made by the International-Great Northern Railroad to the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company.

The indebtedness of the various Gulf Coast Lines to the International-Great Northern Railroad represented by bills, interest on unfunded debt, and miscellaneous advances increased from time to time by reason of the inability of the Gulf Coast Lines to pay the amount in cash, until in October 1932 the amount involved was $1,261,009.84.

At the same time the International-Great Northern Railroad was indebted to the Missouri Pacific for advances made in an amount in excess of the indebtedness of the Gulf Coast Lines.

It was impossible for the Gulf Coast Lines to pay the International-Great Northern in cash, and in order to simplify the accounting, and to satisfy the criticism of the Railroad Credit Corporation, arrangements were made for the Missouri Pacific Railroad to advance the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, the amount of $1,261,009.84, and to credit the International-Great Northern Railroad with a like amount, representing advances to that company. At the same time, the Gulf Coast Lines made Journal Entries upon their books, cancelling the debt of their various companies to the International-Great Northern, and taking up the additional advance from the Missouri Pacific of a similar amount of money.

While the International-Great Northern Railroad adjusted its accounts between the Missouri Pacific and the several Gulf Coast Lines, which in reality transferred the debt of $1,261,009.84 due from the Gulf Coast Lines to the International-Great Northern Railroad Company, from the latter company to the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, this adjustment was by Journal Entry, no cash changing hands.

There is attached hereto copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, under date of October 11, 1932, authorizing this transaction, and copy of letter from Mr. Wyer, dated October 22, 1932, advising that the Railroad Credit Corporation had consented to the adjustment of the intercompany accounts on the books of the three companies.

In the District Court of the United States, Eastern Division, Eastern Judicial District of Missouri

In the Matter of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Debtor

In Proceedings for the Reorganization of a Railroad,
No. 6935
Gulf Coast Lines

Statement of C. S. Kirkpatrick concerning Additions and Betterments to Road, Period 1925 to 1932

The following statement is made with reference to the principal improvements made to the main lines from Brownsville to Baton Rouge, including feeder lines in the Rio Grande Valley, during the period 1925 to 1932:

During the eight years ended December 31st, 1932, the Gulf Coast Lines expended on its principal lines approximately $11,482,400, chargeable to Road, the majority of which was for improvements to existing roadway, but there is included about $1,700,000 for the construction of 80.1 miles of new lines and extensions in the Rio Grande Valley. The extension of the Southern Pacific into the Rio Grande Valley which project was started in 1926 and completed in 1927, created a strong competitive situation in this territory. The improvements were absolutely necessary to meet the competition and to provide the class of service demanded from the Rio Grande Valley and other southwest territory to Kansas City and St. Louis

The expenditures chargeable to Road for Addition and Betterment work during the period under consideration are shown below:

Year	Charges to Road
1925	$ 1,096,461.02
1926	1,962,515.06
1927	2,298,658.26
1928	1,574,652.32
1929	2,356,387.33
1930	1,136,492.75
1931	633,336.23
1932	423,917.84
Total	$11,482,420.81

The total shown above of $11,482,420.81 was spent for improvement projects as follows:

1. New Lines and Extensions:

During this period new lines and extensions, all in the Rio Grande Valley, were constructed as follows:

Location	Miles	Date Completed	Cost
Raymondville to Edinburg	30.11	12- 1-26	$ 667,881
Faysville to Monte Christo	9.97	12- 1-26	133,230
Hargill to Ed Couch	11.07	12- 1-26	207,289
Raymondville to Santa Monica	19.30	3- 1-28	351,832
Ed Couch to Weslaco	9.67	1-30-30	349,458
Total	80.12		$1,709,690

[fol. 238] 2. Rail Renewal Projects:

Expended—$1,401,150.

The principal items included in this project are as follows:

	Track Miles
Replacing 65-lb. rail with 75-lb. relay rail	10.3
Replacing 65# and 75# rail with relay 80# rail	86.1
Replacing 75# and 80# rail with new 85# rail	29.9
Replacing 75# and 80# rail with new 90# rail	239.1
Total	365.4

Additional tie plates installed.....3,269,800
Additional rail anchors installed..... 276,750

Carrying out the above rail program resulted in the removal of 335 miles of lighter section rail out of a total of 383 miles in the primary lines of the StLB&M between Algoa and Brownsville and the Hidalgo Branch. In addition 30 miles of new 85-lb. rail was laid on the NOT&M between Lottie and Anchorage, La., completing the renewal of light rail on the line between Houston, Texas, and Anchorage, La., which program was commenced in 1920. Considerable improvements were also made in branch lines and passing tracks by the replacement of 52-lb. to 60-lb. rails with 65-lb. to 75-lb. rails recovered from the above main line relays.

3. Ballasting Projects:

Expended during period—$1,555,578.

796,500 cubic yards of improvement ballast was applied resulting in ballasting of 330 miles of main line that had heretofore not been ballasted or requiring a heavier section, as well as ballasting yards and sidings not previously ballasted.

4. Bridges, Trestles & Culverts:

Expended—$1,353,400.

On December 31st, 1924, there were various classes of structures on the Gulf Coast Lines as shown below:

Lineal feet of open deck untreated trestles	95,574
Lineal feet of open deck creosoted trestles	32,042
Lineal feet of steel bridges	7,396
Total	135,012

During the period renewal of these trestles were made using various types:

Renewed with creosoted open deck trestles—	L. F.	45,579
Renewed with creosoted ballast deck trestles—	"	3,882
Renewed with concrete ballast deck trestles—	"	888
Open deck trestles filled	— "	9,585

So that, in the eight years ended December 31, 1932, 39% of all pile trestles on those lines have been renewed with creosoted material. In addition to the above improvements in bridges, 37,268 lin. ft. of pile trestles were reinforced to take care of heavier power.

[fol. 239] 5. Fuel and Water Facilities:

Expended—$130,540.

Two large fuel oil storage tanks, one at Harlingen, the other at Kingsville, increasing oil storage capacity 130,000 barrels, were installed. Six new water stations and various and sundry improvements to these facilities, such as improved pumps, feed water treaters, etc. were carried out. Account of increasing the size of engine tanks on locomotives and improving operating conditions it has been possible to increase the distance between water stops and a great many stations have been abandoned. The expenditure shown above is net.

6. Shops and Engine Houses:

Expended—$364,940.

During this period shop facilities at DeQuincy were completely rebuilt, enlarged and electrified, making provision for heavy repairs to locomotives. New engine handling facilities were constructed at Harlingen and a longer and heavier turntable was installed at Kingsville.

7. New Yard Tracks, Sidings and Industry Tracks:

Expended—$1,460,400.

During this period there was constructed 88.51 miles of yard sidings and industry tracks to meet the development and provide for increased business. In addition to providing the required passing tracks along the lines there was a complete revamping of facilities in the vegetable and citrus growing section, Lower Rio Grande Valley, and additions and extensions provided to take care of the [phenominal] growth during the eight years. Some of the important items included are train yards and icing facilities at Harlingen, Kingsville and Vanderbilt.

8. Signals and Interlockers:

Expended—$436,410.

The major items under this project were the construction of automatic block signals from Houston to Trinity River, 34 miles, and from DeQuincy to Kinder, 36 miles, a total of 70 miles. There was also constructed at various railroad crossings, to eliminate train stops, eleven interlocking plants. This work was carried out in order to [expediate] movement of perishable products originating in the Rio Grande Valley and to improve transportation service generally and promote safety.

9. Telegraph and Telephone:

Expended—$107,700.

During the period there were 1,143 miles of telegraph and telephone circuits constructed in order to more efficiently handle the business and to provide telephone dispatching. Telephones were installed at each end of all passing tracks for the purpose of expediting train movements.

[fol. 240] 10. Roadway Machines:

Expended—$60,700.

While this is a small investment to be listed under major items, yet it is felt this equipment should be referred to. These lines are fully equipped with ballast discers, wood-burners and track mowers, and they are of great economic value in the way of preserving ballast, keeping it clean and permitting it to drain freely, and the heavy growth of vegetation in this section make them the greatest money and labor saving devices we have for the investment.

11. Shop Machinery and Appurtenances:

Expended—$348,080.

During the period substantially all old and obsolete machinery has been removed from shops at Kingsville and DeQuincy and replaced with modern and up-to-date equipment.

12. Land for Industrial Development Projects:

Expended—$435,000.

The growth of the territory, particularly the Lower Rio Grande Valley, has made it necessary to acquire land for the establishment of shipping facilities. These lines have not followed the practice of buying large tracts of land and holding them, but rather have followed the plan of providing property if and when needed. Changes in development and the expansion of residential and business sections has made it unwise and impossible to forecast definitely in advance what should be done in this fast growing section of southwest Texas.

13. New Station Facilities:

Expended—$1,264,840.

The largest expense included in the above is approximately $850,000 for the construction of fruit and vegetable packing sheds in the Rio Grande Valley which was necessary to enjoy our portion of the high class tonnage originating in this competitive territory. Also during the period there was constructed freight and passenger station facilities to meet the development of the territory. Major items are new freight stations at Harlingen, San Benito, San Juan, Edinburg and Raymondville. New passenger stations at Brownsville, Edinburg, Weslaco, San Benito and San Juan. The development mentioned has been confined to the Rio Grande Valley, but in addition there has been development of facilities at many points on the line.

14. Bank Widening Projects:

Expended—$147,000.

During the period there has been 358,000 cubic yards of material used in increasing the width of banks. In the low lands of East Texas and Louisiana, main line embankments have been widened to 22 ft. and in Texas all primary main lines to 20 ft. and subsidiary lines to 16 ft. and 18 ft. With few exceptions, work of this class has been practically completed on these lines for many years to come.

[fol. 241] 15. Rio Grande Valley Flood Control Projects:

Expended—$176,800.

During the period the Rio Grande Valley planned and carried out a flood control project which required construction of bridges across floodways at two different locations and the raising of the track. Heretofore at intervals of ten or twelve years the railroad has been subject to overflow, and these projects were entered into and carried out to secure a more dependable route for the heavy perishable traffic out of the Rio Grande Valley and to promote the safety and convenience of the public.

16. River and Bank Protection:

Expended—$92,180.

During this period bank protection had to be undertaken at three major stream crossings, namely, Mississippi, Trinity and Atchafalaya Rivers in order to prevent wash and in connection with government flood control work on the Mississippi.

17. Assessments for Public Improvements:

Expended—$78,688.

This expense covers railway's portion of paving in municipalities along its line. Charges to this account have been held to a minimum and primarily confined to the rapidly developing section of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

18. Roadway Buildings:

Expended—$53,615.

During the period only such charges were made to this account so as to maintain adequate living quarters for track foremen and laborers. There was no definite program of building or rebuilding section layouts.

19. Crossings and Signs:

Expended—$233,569.

Within the past eight years 29 automatic crossing signals were installed on important highway and street crossings where vehicular traffic is heavy. In addition grade separation was accomplished at four points and in all cases we were successful in participating only to the extent of a minor portion of the total cost. Improved type highway crossings were installed at numerous points.

20. Power Plant Buildings and Appurtenances:

Expended—$40,500.

This expense covers cost of building new power plant and equipment at DeQuincy, La., to more efficiently and economically handle heavy engine repairs at that point.

21. Storage Warehouse:

Expended—$20,444.00.

The heavy movement of fruit from the Rio Grande Valley and the concentration of this product at Harlingen necessitated the construction of a brick storage warehouse at that point to properly handle the business.

(a) In case default shall be made in the payment of any instalment of interest on any of the bonds hereby secured when and as the same shall become payable, as therein and herein expressed, and such default shall continue for a period of three months; or

(b) In case default shall be made in the payment of the principal of any of the bonds hereby secured when and as the same shall become due and payable either by the terms thereof or otherwise as herein provided; or

(c) In case default shall be made in the observance or performance of any other of the covenants, conditions and agreements on the part of the Railroad Company in the bonds hereby secured or in this indenture or any indenture supplemental hereto contained, and such default shall continue for a period of three months after written notice specifying such default and requiring the same to be remedied shall have been given to the Railroad Company by the Corporate Trustee, which notice may be given by the Corporate Trustee in its discretion and shall be given on the written request of the holders of five per cent. in amount of the bonds hereby secured at the time outstanding; or

(d) In case an order shall be made for the appointment of a receiver of the Railroad Company or of the trust estate or of any part thereof; or capital stock shall be pledged or assigned hereunder; and any of such defaults shall continue for thirty days; or the Railroad Company shall fail, on the maturity, whether by declaration or otherwise, of any such bonds or obligations (except as aforesaid), and on presentation thereof in accordance with the terms thereof, either to pay said bonds or obligations or to cause said bonds or obligations to be taken up and delivered to the Trustees to be held under this indenture, or, if so required by the terms of any indenture constituting a prior lien upon any part of the trust estate, to be delivered to the trustee or trustees thereunder, and in such case to be assigned to the Trustees hereunder; or default shall be made in the performance of any covenant contained in any mortgage or deed or other instrument of trust securing any such bond or obligation, or constituting a lien on any part of the trust estate in priority to this indenture or upon property a leasehold interest in which shall be subject to the lien of this indenture; and, by reason of any of such defaults, any right of entry or right of action for the enforcement of the security afforded thereby shall accrue;

then, and in each and every such case, in the discretion of the Corporate Trustee, the Trustees, or either of them, personally or by their agents or attorneys, may enter into and upon all or any part of the railroads, property and premises, lands, rights, interests and franchises hereby conveyed, and each and every part thereof, and may exclude the Railroad Company, its agents and servants, wholly therefrom, and having and holding the same may use, operate, manage and control said railroads and other premises, regulate the tolls for the transportation of passengers and freight thereon, and conduct the business thereof, either personally or by their superintendents, managers, receivers, agents and servants or attorneys, to the best advantage of the holders of the bonds hereby secured; and upon every such entry the Trustees, at the expense of the trust estate, from time to time, either by purchase, repair or construction may maintain and restore, and may insure and keep insured, the property, buildings, bridges and structures erected or provided for use in connection with said railroads and other premises, and whereof they shall become possessed as aforesaid, in the same manner and to the same extent as is usual with railroad companies, and likewise from time to time, at the expense of the trust estate, may make all necessary or proper repairs, renewals and replacements, and useful alterations, additions, betterments and improvements thereto and thereon, as to them may seem judicious; and, in such case, the Trustees shall have the right to manage the trust estate and to carry on the business and exercise all rights and powers of the Railroad Company, either in the name of the Railroad Company or otherwise, as the Trustees shall deem best; and they shall be entitled to collect and to receive all tolls, earnings, income, rents, issues and profits of the same and every part thereof; and after deducting the expenses of operating said railroads and other premises, and of conducting the business thereof, and of all repairs, maintenance, renewals, replacements, alterations, additions, betterments and improvements, and all payments which may be made for taxes, assessments, insurance and prior or other proper charges upon the said premises and property or any part thereof, as well as just and reasonable compensation for their services, and for all attorneys, counsel, agents, clerks, servants and other employees by them properly engaged and employed, they shall apply the moneys arising as aforesaid as follows:

(1) In case the principal of none of the bonds hereby secured shall have become due and be unpaid to the payment of the interest in default, in the order of the maturity of the instalments of such interest, with interest thereon at the same rates as are borne by the bonds respectively upon which such interest shall be in default; such payments to be made ratably to the persons entitled thereto, without discrimination or preference; and

(2) In case the principal of any of the bonds hereby secured shall have become due, by declaration or otherwise, and shall be unpaid, first to the payment of the accrued interest (with interest on the overdue instalments thereof at the same rates as are borne by the bonds respectively upon which such interest shall be in default) in the order of the maturity of the instalments of such interest, and then to the payment of the principal of all bonds hereby secured, whether due or not; such payments to be made ratably to the persons entitled thereto, without discrimination or preference.

These provisions, however, are not intended in any wise to modify the provisions of Section 1 of this Article Eight, but are subject thereto.

SECTION 5. If one or more of the events of default described in Section 2 of this Article Eight shall happen, and shall be continuing, the Trustees, with or without entry, personally or by attorney, in the discretion of the Corporate Trustee, either

(a) may sell, subject to the then existing prior liens thereon, to the highest bidder, all and singular the trust estate, including bonds and stocks, rights, franchises and interests and appurtenances, and other real and personal property of every kind, and all right, title and interest, claim and demand therein, and right of redemption thereof; which sale or sales shall be made at public auction at such place in the City of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, or at such other place, and at such time and upon such terms, as the Corporate Trustee may fix and briefly specify in the notice of sale to be given as herein provided; or

(b) may proceed to protect and enforce their rights and the rights of the holders of the bonds secured by this indenture, by a suit or suits in equity or at law, whether for the specific performance of any covenant or agreement contained herein, or in aid of the execution of any power herein granted, or for the foreclosure of this indenture, or for the enforcement of any other appropriate legal or equitable remedy, as the Corporate Trustee, being advised by counsel, shall deem most effectual to protect and enforce any of their rights or duties hereunder.

Upon the written request of the holders of twenty-five per cent. in amount of the bonds hereby secured, in case of any default made and continued as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the Trustees, upon being indemnified as hereinafter provided, to take all steps needful for the protection and enforcement of their rights and the rights of the holders of the bonds hereby secured, and to exercise the powers of entry or sale herein conferred, or both, or to take appropriate judicial proceedings by action, suit or otherwise, as the Corporate Trustee, being advised by counsel, shall deem most expedient in the interest of the holders of the bonds hereby secured.

In case default shall be made in the payment of the principal or interest of some, but not all, of the bonds outstanding hereunder, then whatever action it is in this Article Eight provided may or shall be taken by or upon the request of the holders of a specified percentage of bonds outstanding, may or shall also be taken by or upon request of the holders of the same percentage of the outstanding bonds of all series upon bonds of which any such default shall have occurred.

SECTION 17. In case an event of default shall have happened and a bill of equity shall be filed or any other judicial proceedings commenced to enforce any right of the Trustees or of the bondholders under this indenture, then the Trustees shall be entitled to exercise the right of entry herein conferred, and also any and all other rights and powers herein conferred and provided to be exercised by the Trustees upon the occurrence and continuance of default as hereinbefore provided, and as matter of right the Trustees shall be entitled to the appointment of a receiver of the trust estate and of the earnings, income, revenue, rents, issues or profits thereof, with such powers as the court making such appointment shall confer; provided, however, that notwithstanding the appointment of any such receiver, the Corporate Trustee shall be entitled to retain possession and control of any bonds, cash and other property deposited with the Corporate Trustee hereunder.

SECTION 18. In case the Railroad Company shall make default in any of the respects mentioned in Section 2 of this Article Eight, and (1) at any time during the continuance of such default there shall be any existing judgment against the Railroad Company unsatisfied and unsecured by bond on appeal or (2) in any judicial proceeding by any party other than the Trustees, a receiver shall be appointed of the Railroad Company or of its property, or a judgment or order be entered for the sequestration of its property; or if, in case of default in payment of interest specified in subdivisions (a) and (e) of said Section 2, the Railroad Company shall admit to the Trustees its inability to make good such default within the period of grace in said subdivisions mentioned; the Trustees, without waiting the period of grace, if any, in said section specified in respect of such default, shall thereupon be entitled, in the discretion of the Corporate Trustee, forthwith to exercise the right of entry herein conferred, and also any and all other rights and powers herein conferred and provided to be exercised by the Trustees upon the occurrence and continuance of default as hereinbefore provided, and as a matter of right the Trustees shall thereupon be entitled, in the discretion of the Corporate Trustee, to the appointment of a receiver of the trust estate, and of the earnings, income, revenue, rents, issues and profits thereof, with such powers as the court making such appointment shall confer; provided, however, that notwithstanding the appointment of any such receiver, the Corporate Trustee shall be entitled to retain possession and control of any bonds, cash and other property deposited with the Corporate Trustee hereunder and to receive and hold any property or money, and to retain control of any moneys deposited with other depositaries as herein provided.

SECTION 21. Except as herein expressly provided to the contrary no remedy herein conferred upon, or reserved to, the Trustees, or either of them, or the holders of bonds hereby secured, is intended to be exclusive of any other remedy, but each and every such remedy shall be cumulative, and shall be in addition to every other remedy given hereunder or now or hereafter existing at law or in equity or by statute.

2. The petitioner, Benjamin F. Edwards, is, and at all of the times wherein he is hereinafter mentioned was, a citizen of the State of Missouri, and a resident and inhabitant of the City and County of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and of the Eastern District of Missouri.

3. The debtor, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company (hereinafter called the "Railroad Company"), is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, and a citizen and resident of said State, and owns or leases and, prior to the filing of its petition in this Court under Section 77 of Chapter VIII of the Acts of Congress relating to Bankruptcy, as hereinafter shown, operated lines of railroad continuous and connecting and forming a complete railroad system lying within the States of Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, Tennessee and Illinois, a substantial and material part whereof is within the Eastern District of Missouri, Eastern Division, and its principal operating and general offices are in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, within the Eastern District of Missouri, Eastern Division.

4. On or about May 18, 1917, the Railroad Company, desiring to provide for funding and consolidating the indebtedness secured by mortgages, trusts and liens on certain of the railroads, equipment and property of the Railroad Company and to provide for making additions to, and extensions and betterments of, its railroads and other property and for the purchase of additional equipment and property and, for such and other corporate purposes, to borrow money, in pursuance of resolutions of its Board of Directors adopted by the affirmative vote of more than two-thirds of the entire Board, and of resolutions of the holders of its entire capital stock outstanding, at meetings duly called and held in accordance with law, and with the by-laws of the Railroad Company, determined to increase its bonded indebtedness by the creation and issue of its bonds, limited, except as otherwise provided in the First and Refunding Mortgage, to an aggregate principal amount at any one time outstanding of Four hundred and fifty million dollars ($450,000,000), to be known as its First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds (hereinafter sometimes called the "First and Refunding Bonds"); such bonds to be issued in series, to bear such date or dates and have such maturity or maturities, to bear interest at such rate or rates not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually or quarterly on such date or dates, as might from time to time be fixed by the Board of Directors and expressed in the bonds respectively; and to be secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on the lines of railroad, property and franchises therein described or embraced thereunder; and in order to secure the payment of the principal and interest of all the First and Refunding Bonds at any time issued and outstanding under the First and Refunding Mortgage according to their tenor and effect and to secure the performance and observance of all the covenants and conditions therein and in the First and Refunding Mortgage contained, and to declare the terms and conditions upon which the First and Refunding Bonds were to be issued and secured thereunder, duly made, and on or about May 18, 1917, executed under its corporate seal and delivered to the petitioners, as Trustees, a mortgage or deed of trust, dated April 2, 1917, and known as its First and Refunding Mortgage, a copy of which is hereto annexed, marked Schedule A and made a part hereof, wherein and whereby the Railroad Company granted, bargained, sold, aliened, remised, released, conveyed, confirmed, assigned, transferred pledged and set over, subject to the priority of lien of the several mortgages upon separate portions of its lines of railway and other property in the First and Refunding Mortgage mentioned, unto Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Benjamin F. Edwards, as Trustees, and unto their successors in the trust and their assigns forever, all and singular the premises, railroads, properties, real or personal, rights, franchises, estates, appurtenances, stocks and bonds described in the granting clauses of the First and Refunding Mortgage, as follows (the Railroad Company therein referred to is the debtor, and the Indenture therein mentioned is the First and Refunding Mortgage and the Bonds therein referred to are the First and Refunding Bonds) viz.:

5. All the above described premises, railroads, properties, real or personal, rights, franchises, estates, appurtenances, stocks and bonds were in and by the First and Refunding Mortgage granted, bargained, sold, aliened, remised, released, conveyed, confirmed, assigned, transferred, pledged and set over unto the petitioners, Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Benjamin F. Edwards, as Trustees, to have and to hold the same unto them, their successor or successors and assigns forever, in trust, for the equal and proportionate benefit and security of all present and future holders of the First and Refunding Bonds and interest obligations issued and to be issued under the First and Refunding Mortgage, and for the enforcement of the payment of the First and Refunding Bonds and obligations when payable, and the performance of and compliance with the covenants and conditions of the First and Refunding Mortgage, without preference, priority or distinction as to lien, or otherwise, of any one bond over any other bond by reason of priority in the issue or negotiation thereof, or otherwise, so that each and every bond secured by the First and Refunding Mortgage should have the same right, lien and privilege thereunder, and, subject to the terms thereof, be equally and proportionately secured thereby, as if all had been made, executed, delivered and negotiated simultaneously with the execution and delivery of the First and Refunding Mortgage, it being intended that the lien and security of the First and Refunding Mortgage should take effect from the day of the execution and delivery thereof, without regard to the time of such actual issue, sale or disposition of First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds, and as though upon said date all of the First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds had been actually issued, sold and delivered to and were in the hands of innocent holders thereof for value.

6. In and by the granting clauses of the First and Refunding Mortgage there were granted, bargained, sold, conveyed and confirmed unto the petitioners as Trustees, among other things, the "tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits" of the mortgaged property.

7. The petitioners, Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Benjamin F. Edwards, duly accepted the trusts created by the First and Refunding Mortgage and united in the execution of the same to evidence such acceptance.

8. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that since the date of the execution and delivery of the First and Refunding Mortgage, the Railroad Company has from time to time acquired certain other property, real and personal, rights and interests (the exact character, description and extent of which are at present unknown to the petitioners), which has become subject to the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and among which property, rights and interests are certain bonds, notes, stocks and other securities specifically set forth and described in Schedule B attached hereto and made a part hereof with the same force and effect as if herein set forth at length, and also the property specifically conveyed to your petitioners, as Trustees, by several supplemental indentures, which said supplemental indentures and property are described in Schedule C (1 to 20 inclusive) hereto attached and made a part hereof with the same force and effect as if herein set forth at length, and that for the proper protection and enforcement of the rights of the Trustees and of the holders of First and Refunding Mortgage bonds and interest obligations, it is necessary for the Railroad Company to account to petitioners in this proceeding for all property, rights and interests owned by the Railroad Company at the date of the execution and delivery of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and for all property rights and interests subsequently acquired by the Railroad Company, and for certain property released from the lien of said mortgage, and to exhibit in this proceeding a full and true description thereof, in order that the said property, rights and interests or so much thereof as is subject to the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage, may be so declared and decreed by this Honorable Court.

9. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that subsequent to the execution and delivery of the First and Refunding Mortgage, the same was duly recorded in each county in which the lines of railroad and other property of the Railroad Company covered by the First and Refunding Mortgage were and are situated or located, and elsewhere as required by law, and that the said supplements to the First and Refunding Mortgage likewise were duly recorded respectively in the counties in which the property covered by each of said supplements were and are situated or located.

10. The First and Refunding Mortgage and the said supplements thereto were and are the proper act and deed of the Railroad Company, and were by it authorized, made and delivered in all respects in conformity with law, and the same were and are valid conveyances for the purposes therein stated and now constitute valid and subsisting liens upon all the property therein mentioned and set forth and covered by or embraced in or under the First and Refunding Mortgage and supplements thereto, or intended so to be, or which has become subject to the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage and supplements thereto, and the petitioners are advised and charge that the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage covers and extends to all of the premises and properties mentioned and described in said supplemental indentures (Schedule C 1-20), or thereby conveyed and transferred, or intended so to be.

11. By Article Two of the First and Refunding Mortgage it is, among other things, provided that the First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds should be executed by the Railroad Company and delivered by it for authentication to the Corporate Trustee, and that thereupon, as provided therein, the Corporate Trustee should authenticate and deliver the same. From time to time the petitioner Guaranty Trust Company of New York, the Corporate Trustee, in conformity with the provisions of the First and Refunding Mortgage has duly authenticated Thirty Five Million Four Hundred and Fifty Seven Thousand Dollars ($35,457,000) principal amount of Series A 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Thirteen Million Six Hundred Forty One Thousand Dollars ($13,641,000) principal amount of Series B 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Nine Million Forty Four Thousand Dollars ($9,044,000) principal amount of Series C 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Sixty Million Three Hundred Seventy Three Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($60,373,500) principal amount of Series D 6% First and Refunding Bonds, Thirty Million Seven Hundred One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($30,701,500) principal amount of Series E 6% First and Refunding Bonds, One Hundred Fifteen Million One Hundred Twenty One Thousand Dollars ($115,121,000) principal amount of Series F 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Forty Four Million Two Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($44,250,000) principal amount of Series G 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Twenty Five Million Dollars ($25,000,000) principal amount of Series H 5% First and Refunding Bonds and One Hundred One Million Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($101,200,000) principal amount of Series I 5% First and Refunding Bonds, all of which Bonds had been theretofore duly executed by the Railroad Company pursuant to authority of law and due corporate action, and thereupon each and all of said Bonds were duly delivered to the Railroad Company or upon its order pursuant to the terms of said mortgage.

Seventeen Million Six Hundred Sixteen Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($17,616,500) principal amount of Series A 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Thirteen Million Six Hundred Forty One Thousand Dollars ($13,641,000) principal amount of Series B 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Nine Million Forty Thousand Dollars ($9,040,000) principal amount of Series C 5% First and Refunding Bonds, Sixty Million Three Hundred Seventy Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($60,372,500) principal amount of Series D 6% First and Refunding Bonds and Thirty Million Seven Hundred One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($30,701,500) principal amount of Series E 6% First and Refunding Bonds, Twenty Million One Hundred Twenty One Thousand Dollars ($20,121,000) principal amount of Series F 5% First and Refunding Bonds and Nineteen Million Two Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($19,250,000) principal amount of Series G 5% First and Refunding Bonds have been cancelled in accordance with the provisions of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and as petitioners are informed and believe, Forty Million Dollars ($40,000,000) principal amount of Series I 5% First and Refunding Bonds, a part of the One Hundred One Million Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($101,200,000) referred to heretofore, in the aggregate are pledged to secure advances from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and others.

Your petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that the balance of all the First and Refunding Bonds which have been issued and which have not heretofore been cancelled is $264,045,500 principal amount, consisting of Bonds of the following Series:

$ 17,840,500	principal	amount	of	Series	A 5%	First	and	Refunding	Bonds

all of which Bonds are lawfully created, valid and existing obligations of the Railroad Company and entitled to the lien and security of the First and Refunding Mortgage, and with the exception of Forty Million Dollars ($40,000,000) principal amount of Series I 5% First and Refunding Bonds pledged to secure advances from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and others as aforesaid, are in the hands of numerous bona fide holders for value.

12. The First and Refunding Mortgage of the Railroad Company (Schedule A hereto annexed), in and by Article Eight thereof, provides, among other things, as follows

(the Railroad Company therein referred to is the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and the debtor herein; the Indenture therein referred to is the First and Refunding Mortgage; the bonds and interest obligations therein referred to are the First and Refunding Bonds and coupons respectively; and the Trustees therein referred to are the Trustees under the First and Refunding Mortgage and the petitioners herein):

(Text of Article Eight, Sections 2, 5, 17, 18 and 21 of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage, dated April 2, 1917, set forth in Petition is not here printed. For text of these provisions see this volume, supra, at pages 315 to 322.)

13. Your petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that heretofore and on or about March 31, 1933, the Railroad Company filed in this Court its petition as debtor under Section 77 of Chapter VIII of the Acts of Congress relating to Bankruptcy, which petition represented, among other things, that the petitioner was duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, and a common carrier by railroad engaged in the transportation of persons and property in interstate commerce, in the states of Missouri, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Kansas, Louisiana and Oklahoma; that there would become due on April 1, 1933, and within thirty days thereafter, certain sums aggregating $40,589,330.78 for principal and interest on its obligations or obligations constituting a lien on its property and for taxes; that the Debtor was without funds to pay and discharge the aforesaid obligations as they matured, and alleged, on information and belief, that it had no means of borrowing or otherwise procuring such funds and was unable to meet its debts as they matured and desired to effect a plan of reorganization pursuant to Section 77 of Chapter VIII of the Acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that on the date of the filing of the petition a copy thereof was being filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that the filing of the petition was duly authorized by the Debtor by resolution of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of the Debtor, adopted at a meeting thereof duly held on the 31st day of March, 1933. The said petition prayed, among other things, that an order might be entered approving said petition as properly filed under Section 77, and that there might be granted to the Railroad Company all other and further relief to which it might be entitled.

14. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege, that upon the filing of said petition by the Railroad Company and on or about March 31, 1933, an order was made and entered by this Court, which order, among other things, directed that the petition be approved as properly filed under Section 77 of Chapter VIII of the Acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, and authorized the Railroad Company, pending further order of this Court, among other things, to run, manage, maintain, operate and keep in proper condition and repair the railroads and property of the Railroad Company, wherever situated, whether in Missouri, or the Eighth Judicial Circuit, or elsewhere, and to manage and conduct its business as a railroad company, all according to law and subject to such supervision and control by the Court as the Court might exercise by its further orders entered herein.

15. The petitioners pray leave to refer to the said petition of the Railroad Company, and to the said order entered thereon, or to duly certified copies thereof when the same shall be produced upon the final hearing, or upon any hearing in this proceeding, with the same force and effect as if the said petition and order were herein set forth at length.

16. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that the Railroad Company, subsequent to the entry of the aforesaid order by this Court, has operated its lines of railroad, properties and premises of every kind and description, including the properties subject to the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage and the supplements thereto (other than certain securities in the possession of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as Corporate Trustee), subject to the supervision and control of this Court pursuant to said order and the further orders entered herein and to the provisions of Section 77 of Chapter VIII of the Acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, by reason whereof the petitioners are unable, save as herein sought, to take possession thereof and to administer their trust as in the First and Refunding Mortgage it is provided should be done in the event of a default as herein specified.

17. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege, that events of default under the First and Refunding Mortgage have occurred in that (a) the Railroad Company has failed, on the maturity on May 1, 1933, of the $34,548,000 principal amount of St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company River and Gulf Divisions First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Thirty Year Gold Bonds secured by its First Mortgage dated May 1, 1903, constituting a lien prior to that of the First and Refunding Mortgage on a part of the property secured by such First and Refunding Mortgage, to pay the same or to cause the same to be taken up and delivered to your petitioners, as Trustees, or to be delivered to the trustee or trustees of any indenture constituting a prior lien, and (b) the Railroad Company has defaulted in the payment of the interest due April 1, 1933, upon all the First Mortgage 4½% Gold Bonds issued and outstanding and secured by the First Mortgage of Pacific Railroad of Missouri (Carondelet Branch), and that such default in the payment of interest has continued for a period of thirty (30) days from April 1, 1933, and such defaults still continue.

18. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that by reason of the defaults mentioned in the foregoing paragraph 17 they are entitled, under the terms of the First and Refunding Mortgage, to exercise the right of entry therein conferred and to proceed to protect and enforce their rights and the rights of the holders of the

First and Refunding Bonds in the manner described in the First and Refunding Mortgage and are entitled to collect and to receive all tolls, earnings, income, rents, issues and profits of the mortgaged premises, and to apply the same as provided in the First and Refunding Mortgage, and generally to exercise any and all rights and powers in and by the First and Refunding Mortgage conferred and provided to be exercised by the Trustees, or either of them, thereunder, upon the occurrence and continuance of any default as in the First and Refunding Mortgage provided.

19. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that default has been made by the Railroad Company in the payment of the instalment of interest which became due an April 1, 1933, upon all of the Series H 5% First and Refunding Bonds issued and outstanding and secured by the First and Refunding Mortgage and that such default still continues.

The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that default has likewise been made by the Railroad Company in the payment of the instalment of interest which became due on May 1, 1933, upon all of the Series G 5% First and Refunding Bonds issued and outstanding and secured by the First and Refunding Mortgage and that such default still continues.

20. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that various mortgages exist upon the properties of the Railroad Company, including the First and Refunding Mortgage as aforesaid; that the liens and provisions of the said mortgages differ among themselves and the aggregate of the outstanding bonds secured by them respectively is very great, amounting to many millions of dollars; that some of said mortgages purport, or may be claimed, to constitute liens upon the property covered by the lien of the First and Refunding Mortgage, or some portions thereof, partly superior and partly inferior to the First and Refunding Mortgage lien, but that the amount and extent of such liens, if any, is unknown to your petitioners.

21. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege, that the income and revenues of the Railroad Company are and will be wholly insufficient to pay and discharge the indebtedness of the Railroad Company now due and owing by it, and that the Railroad Company has insufficient resources with which to provide for the payment of its obligations as they mature.

22. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege that the said railroad property, premises and franchises covered by and embraced in and under the First and Refunding Mortgage and the supplements thereto constitute one single property, consisting of a railroad and its appurtenances, and should be conducted as a single enterprise.

23. No proceedings have been had at law or in equity for the protection and enforcement of the rights of the petitioners as such Trustees, and the rights of the holders of the First and Refunding Bonds or for the foreclosure of the First and Refunding Mortgage or for the collection or enforcement of the said mortgage debt, or any part thereof, save only this proceeding, and that petitioners have no adequate relief at law, and the relief to which they are entitled can only be granted by this Court.

24. The petitioners are informed and believe and therefore allege, that the Railroad Company owns or leases and operates lines of railroad, substantially all continuous and connecting and forming a complete railroad system, lying within the States of Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, Tennessee and Illinois, aggregating in length of first main track about 7,450.59 miles; the Railroad Company owns and leases certain rolling stock and equipment and owns other property, real and personal, as well as rights, privileges and franchises, appertaining to, or used in connection with, its lines of railroad and business, and certain bonds, stocks and other securities; that pursuant to the order of this court entered March 31,

1933, the Railroad Company now retains and claims possession of a large amount of rolling stock and equipment and other personal property which is pledged under and covered by the First and Refunding Mortgage, and which, or an interest in which, is claimed by the petitioners as Trustees as aforesaid, which petitioners cannot, without the accounting hereinafter prayed, more particularly and fully describe; that pursuant to the order of this court entered March 31, 1933, said Railroad Company also holds and retains and claims title to certain of the tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits thereof which are also subject to and covered by the petitioners' said mortgage lien, and are likewise claimed by them as Trustees as aforesaid. The petitioners are advised and therefore aver that by reason of the premises and of the matters hereinbefore in this petition alleged, and of the defaults hereinbefore in this petition alleged, as well as by reason of the impairment of and danger and injury to the security of their said mortgage lien hereinbefore alleged, and the further danger to the security of said mortgage lien by reason of the situation in this paragraph shown, the petitioners are entitled to file this petition and to have the relief herein prayed, and to have all such tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the Railroad Company and every part thereof segregated and sequestered for the benefit of petitioners as such Trustees and of the holders of the First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds and interest obligations secured by their said mortgage lien; and the petitioners hereby demand that said tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits be so segregated and sequestered as aforesaid, and be applied, subject only to such expenses and other uses as may legally and properly, having due regard to the rights of petitioners and the holders of the First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds, be incurred and made in the operation and preservation of the property, rights and franchises covered by petitioners' said mortgage lien, to and for the benefit of petitioners, as such Trustees, and of the holders of the First and Refunding Mortgage

Bonds and interest obligations, and to and for the proper protection of petitioners' said mortgage lien and the security thereof.

25. By reason of the premises the petitioners, as Trustees of the First and Refunding Mortgage, are unable adequately to execute their said trust in the manner specified and provided in and by the First and Refunding Mortgage without the aid and interposition of this Honorable Court, nor can their said trust be executed, as the petitioners are advised and charge, and the rights of all the parties in interest be ascertained and fully protected otherwise than by segregating and sequestering the tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the Railroad Company and every part thereof.

Wherefore, the petitioners pray:

1. That the petitioners be permitted to intervene generally in the above entitled proceeding for the purpose of protecting their rights as Trustees under the First and Refunding Mortgage and the rights of the holders of the First and Refunding Bonds issued thereunder, and further and more specifically for the purposes of this petition.

2. That the First and Refunding Mortgage, dated April 2, 1917, and the supplements thereto, executed and delivered to the Trustees therein named, may be decreed to be valid and subsisting liens, upon all of the railroads and property, real and personal, rights, privileges and franchises in the First and Refunding Mortgage and said supplements described or thereby conveyed or transferred or intended so to be, or which have become subject thereto (save and except such property as may have been duly released from the lien thereof), and upon the tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the Railroad Company and every part thereof, prior and superior to the interests or liens or claims of the debtor Missouri Pacific Railroad Company.

3. That the nature, extent and character of the said property and premises may be ascertained and determined; that an account be taken of all the railroads and property, real, personal and mixed, which belonged to the Railroad Company at the date of the First and Refunding Mortgage and of all the railroads, property, additions, extensions, improvements, renewals and replacements acquired by the Railroad Company since the date of the First and Refunding Mortgage.

4. That all tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits of the mortgaged property and every part thereof, as shall come into the possession of the Railroad Company or of any trustee or trustees thereof appointed in this proceeding be impounded as of the date of the filing of this petition (without waiver of any claim of petitioners to tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits, accruing prior to the filing of this petition) and segregated and sequestered by or under the direction of this Honorable Court for the benefit of petitioners, as Trustees, and of the holders of the First and Refunding Bonds and interest obligations secured by the said mortgage lien and be applied to and for their benefit, subject only to such expenses and other uses as may legally and properly be incurred in the operation and preservation of said property, having due regard for the rights of petitioners and holders of the First and Refunding Bonds and for the protection of the security of said mortgage lien, and that the rights of petitioners, as Trustees, and of the holders of the First and Refunding Bonds and interest obligations may be carefully and fully preserved.

5. That the debtor Railroad Company be required to make answer to all and singular the matters hereinbefore stated and charged, but not under oath, answer under oath being hereby expressly waived, and to stand to and abide by and perform such orders, directions or decrees as shall be made herein and as to your Honors shall seem equitable and just.

6. That the petitioners may have such other and further relief in the premises as the nature and circumstances of this proceeding may require and as to this Honorable Court shall seem meet.

And the petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

STATE OF MISSOURI, } ss.:

AFFIDAVIT OF THOS. T. RAILEY.

I, Thos. T. Railey, of lawful age, being duly sworn, state:

For a long time prior to the institution of Missouri Pacific reorganization proceedings, I was Assistant General Solicitor of said Company, and since the institution of said proceedings March 30, 1933, have had the title of Assistant to Counsel for Trustee. I am familiar with the issues raised in subdivision 19 and in Schedule A of objections of Andrew W. Comstock to the plan of reorganization embodied in Interstate Commerce Commission's Order of October 9, 1944, and know of my own knowledge that the officers of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and of the Gulf Coast Lines hereinafter referred to who are now deceased would, if living, be in a position to offer substantial testimony on one or more of the issues involved in said controversy, said deceased officers being as follows, to-wit:

(1) Mr. William H. Williams, Chairman of the Board of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company prior to May 1930, died October 14, 1931. Mr. Williams presided over certain Board of Directors and Executive Committee meetings, extracts from which have been offered in evidence respecting the transactions in question.

(2) Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen, who succeeded Mr. Williams as Chairman of the Board of Directors of said Companies, died November 23, 1936.

(3) Mr. H. R. Safford, Executive Vice-President of the Gulf Coast Lines from about the time that they were acquired by the Missouri Pacific in December, 1924, down to date of the reorganization proceedings in 1933, died April 10, 1943. Mr. Safford testified at the hearings before the Commission on the Plan, particularly with respect to the conditions of the Gulf Coast Lines, and if living his testimony would to my knowledge be important in connection with the controversies involved in the Comstock objections.

(4) Mr. F. P. Johnson, Vice-President in charge of accounting of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and subsidiary lines for a long time prior to institution of the reorganization proceedings, died April 11, 1938. Mr. Johnson testified at some length in the hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Plan, and if living, his testimony would be very essential in connection with the issues involved in the Comstock objections to the Plan.

(5) Mr. J. Cannon, who for a long time prior to date of institution of the reorganization proceedings was Vice-President & General Manager of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, died September 14, 1941. If living, his testimony might be of value in explaining operating arrangements between Gulf Coast Lines and Missouri Pacific.

(6) Mr. L. A. David, former General Superintendent of Missouri Pacific, and Assistant General Manager of Gulf Coast Lines at the time of his death, January 11, 1939, would to my knowledge, if living, be an important witness with respect to the allegations in the Comstock motion involving condition of equipment and engine hire. In connection with the somewhat similar issue raised in 1937 by motion for appointment of separate Trustee for the Gulf Coast Lines, Mr. David was selected as the officer best qualified to cover this class of testimony.

(7) Mr. Horace Booth, General Freight Traffic Manager, Texas Lines, for many years prior to the institution of the reorganization proceedings, died May 18, 1944. If living, his testimony would be of great value in explaining any advantages or disadvantages to the Gulf Coast Lines by reason of their operation as part of the Missouri Pacific System.

(8) Mr. E. J. White, Vice-President & General Solicitor, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, who if living would be familiar with many of the questions involved, died December 29, 1935.

(9) Mr. Frank Andrews, General Solicitor for the Texas Lines, died December 8, 1936. Mr. Andrews' name has been mentioned as a member of the Board of Directors, and Legal Adviser for the officers of certain of the Gulf Coast Lines, and as such attorney approved the payment of some of the dividends now in question.

Numerous other officers of the Missouri Pacific and of the Gulf Coast Lines whose testimony might be of value are now deceased, such, for example, as Mr. T. M. Niven, General Auditor, Missouri Pacific, and Mr. O. B. Huntsman, Vice-President & Assistant Treasurer & Secretary of Missouri Pacific and certain subsidiaries.

From information obtained in an effort to furnish various documents requested by the attorneys in this proceeding, and upon general information and belief, I am of the opinion that many of the Carriers' records which might be pertinent to the controversy in question have been lost or destroyed.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

TO THE HONORABLE THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES:

Petitioner respectfully prays that a writ of certiorari be issued to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review the order and judgment of that Court rendered in the above cause, affirming the order, judgment, and decree of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Section 240(a) of the Judicial Code, as amended. The date of the order and judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit was August 28, 1947.

The Opinions of the Courts Below

The opinion of the District Court (R. 1089*) is reported in 64 F. Supp. 64. The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit (R. IV—13) is reported in 163 F. (2d) 350.

Summary Statement of the Case

This case involves the validity and priority of the $10,565,227 claim of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. (hereinafter called MOP) in reorganization against its controlled and dominated subsidiary, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called NOTM). MOP seeks to insert its Inter-Company Claim ahead of the claims of public investors, secured by MOP's pledge of NOTM capital stock.

MOP managed the financial affairs of NOTM in the following manner. It caused NOTM to pay to it dividends over twenty consecutive quarters well in excess of NOTM income, although NOTM was without funds and was already borrowing for an extensive expansion program.

For three years, NOTM could only pay such dividends to MOP by bookkeeping transactions in which MOP made "advances" to NOTM one day in amounts substantially equivalent to the dividends paid by NOTM on the next.

NOTM's lack of resources required it to borrow continually and heavily from the public, when it could, and from MOP, when public borrowing was impossible. MOP supplied NOTM with funds, but MOP always termed them "advances", and never additional capital investments.

MOP further sought to benefit itself at NOTM's expense by other methods, one of which was a bookkeeping shifting of indebtedness. MOP arbitrarily increased its claim against NOTM and as consideration therefor allegedly arranged for the assignment to NOTM of uncollectible claims in the same face amount, from which NOTM to this day has not received one penny.

These "advances" for dividends, these "advances" in lieu of needed capital investments, and this arbitrary shifting of indebtedness constitute practically the entire Inter-Company Claim allowed by the Courts below.

Petitioner contends that the Claim must be disallowed or subordinated.

Facts

This petition is submitted on behalf of Andrew W. Comstock, representing himself and fourteen other public investors owning in excess of $980,000 principal amount of Missouri Pacific 5¼% Secured Bonds.* On the bankruptcy of MOP, $12,140,000 of these bonds were outstanding, secured by MOP's pledge of 121,460 shares, or 82%, of NOTM capital stock.

On March 31, 1933, MOP and NOTM filed petitions for reorganization under Section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act (R. 89). On September 19, 1947, at the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission (hereinafter called Commission), the Plan of Reorganization of these roads was remanded to the Commission for "further investigation, consideration and recommendation". The Commission hearings on the Reorganization Plan are not scheduled to begin until January 27, 1948.

* Comstock's objections to the MOP Claim were also adopted by a committee representing an additional $199,000 principal amount of such bonds.

 NOTM has only one class of stock.

Review of this case will not delay the reorganization.

In these proceedings, MOP filed a proof of claim against NOTM in the amount of $10,565,226.78, allegedly based on > "Cash advances for operation, interest payments and so forth, at various times from March, 1929 to February, 1933, both inclusive" (Ex. 1, R. 402).

The alleged creditor, MOP, and the alleged debtor, NOTM, at all times have had a common trustee, Mr. Guy A. Thompson.* This common trustee at no time took any steps to oppose the MOP Inter-Company Claim.

Public investors found it necessary to assume the burden of protecting NOTM against this alleged claim. Petitioner thus asserted objections to the MOP Claim in the 1943 Commission hearings on the MOP Plan. The Commission ruled that this issue "should be left to litigation in the courts" (R. 20842).

Petitioner objected to the MOP Claim in the District Court, contending, among other things, that the MOP Claim must be disallowed or subordinated to the claim of the MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds (R. 227, 232-33, 237-47). After hearings, the District Court overruled such objections and allowed the MOP Claim in full, together with interest at 5½% and 6%, totalling an additional $7,500,000. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit affirmed (R. 7, IV—13).

* Mr. L. W. Baldwin had originally been appointed a co-trustee of MOP and NOTM, but resigned in 1935 (R. 76, 89).

 The Commission assumed the validity and priority of the claim in determining the allocation to the MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds (R. 20842). Clearly if such claim is invalid or is subordinated, the treatment to be accorded such bonds in any subsequent plan must necessarily be materially enhanced.

There is remarkably little in the record which is disputed. Almost all the evidence is documentary, taken from the books and records of MOP, NOTM and its subsidiaries.

MOP Ownership of NOTM

Under circumstances condemned by the Commission,* MOP acquired majority control of NOTM from a banking syndicate in 1924.

Until bankruptcy, MOP thereafter dominated NOTM and NOTM's subsidiaries through ownership of up to 93% of NOTM stock, through common officers, and through interlocking directorates. Every director of NOTM was a MOP director or officer—MOP officers occupied comparable offices in NOTM and NOTM subsidiaries (Ex. 5-61, 177, R. 403-6, 630). NOTM was operated as a department or instrumentality of MOP.

Exploitation of NOTM by Wrongful Dividends

Under MOP control, NOTM was caused to pay dividends in each and every quarter from 1925 through 1931, aggregating $7,267,386. Almost all these dividends went to MOP (Ex. 177, R. 630). Even though NOTM was then borrowing to pay its operating charges, interest due on its bonds, and sinking fund obligations, MOP's pressure on NOTM for dividends was unrelenting (Ex. 281, R. 900).

* Control of Gulf Coast Lines by Missouri Pacific R. R., 94 I. C. C. 191, 199-200, 204 (1924). NOTM and its subsidiaries (other than the International-Great Northern Ry. Co., hereinafter called I-GN) are known as the Gulf Coast Lines (R. 10).

 The Commission referring to MOP's dividend policy said: at a later date that MOP under Van Sweringen control: "* * * for its own purposes caused or permitted carrier corporations which it controlled to pay dividends when they were not being earned, or to pay dividends when they were under a heavy burden of debt, when traffic was declining, and earnings were decreasing notwithstanding scrimping of maintenance." Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Purchase, 261 I. C. C. 239, 255 (1945).

(a) NOTM Dividends to MOP Exceeded NOTM Earnings

NOTM dividends substantially exceeded income. In only two * of the seven years from 1925 through 1931 was NOTM's income adequate to pay the annual dividends exacted by MOP (Ex. 195, R. 663).

The total consolidated earnings of NOTM and its subsidiaries were less than NOTM dividends in each year from 1927 to bankruptcy. During this period, NOTM dividends totalled $5,190,000 against consolidated earnings of $1,151,000 (Ex. 301, R. 914).

NOTM dividends were not merely in excess of income. Mr. Wyer, the principal witness in support of the claim, admitted before the United States Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce that 1931 NOTM dividends were paid out of capital.

(b) Matching of Simultaneous MOP Advances to NOTM and NOTM Dividends to MOP

From 1928 through 1931, NOTM was able to pay dividends only by simultaneous advances from MOP (Ex. 281, R. 900). These MOP advances were paper transactions by which MOP advanced sums to NOTM with one hand, and simultaneously took them back by way of dividends with the other. They were usually accomplished by checks drawn by an officer of MOP and then endorsed by the same person acting as an officer of NOTM (Ex. 239, 26-50, R. 791, 406). Without such paper advances, NOTM could not have paid these dividends (Ex. 75-79, R. 453).

For example, on February 28, 1930, NOTM had a cash balance of only $13,565. On that day, NOTM borrowed

* Without the paper dividends from a subsidiary which the Commission later condemned and directed NOTM to write off insofar as then still unpaid, NOTM suffered a substantial loss in 1931 although the books show an ostensible profit for the year (Ex. 62-4, R. 420-2).

 Hearings before Subcommittee of Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce pursuant to S. Res. 71, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 12, p. 5296 (1938). Judicial notice may be taken of these official reports. Arizona v. California, 283 U. S. 423, 453-4 (1931).

$260,000 from MOP. On the next day, NOTM paid its quarterly dividend of $259,576, of which $242,072 went back to MOP.

This matching of simultaneous advances from MOP and dividends to MOP was repeated in eleven out of thirteen consecutive quarters, from November, 1928 through November, 1931 (Ex. 75-81, 281, R. 453, 900).

		MOP's Share $2,654,000
$ 254,091	AVERAGE "ADVANCE"	EACH DIVIDEND $ 259,576

Although MOP advanced to NOTM $2,795,000, it received back $2,654,000 in dividends within a day or two. The total net advance from MOP to NOTM was only $141,000 ($2,795,000 less $2,654,000) (Ex. 177, R. 630).

Yet, the Courts below allowed MOP its claim of $2,795,000 plus interest of about $2,000,000, aggregating about $4,795,000, for this net advance of $141,000. This constitutes a return of over 3400% to a fiduciary parent.

(c) Dividends Drained from Brownsville to Make Possible NOTM Dividends to MOP

In order to make possible the steady flow of NOTM dividends to MOP, the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Ry.

* Eleven dividends of $259,575.75 each.

Co. (hereinafter called Brownsville)—NOTM's principal subsidiary—was repeatedly caused to declare dividends to NOTM (Ex. 111-21, 123-34, 172, 206, R. 569-601, 616, 674). This policy reached a fantastic climax in 1931.

On April 16, 1931, Mr. Baldwin—President of MOP and NOTM—wrote to Mr. Safford—Vice-President of MOP and NOTM:

> "I want to impress upon you again the fact that although it may necessitate a much more drastic curtailment of expense than you have ever had or anticipated, the NOT&M must earn and pay its dividend this year and have $100,000 left in addition" (Ex. 135, R. 601).

Mr. Safford replied that NOTM earnings were much too low to make this possible despite the fact that expenses were "very close to the irreducible minimum unless we make some further drastic reduction in service" (Ex. 135-7, R. 601). Nonetheless, MOP caused NOTM to pay its dividends regularly in 1931 although "earnings were decreasing notwithstanding scrimping of maintenance" (261 I. C. C. at 255). NOTM was able to do so only as a result of an ostensible surplus created by 1931 Brownsville dividends.

On June 17, 1931, MOP caused Brownsville to declare dividends to NOTM of $655,079 or 131% on Brownsville stock (Ex. 113-9, 206, R. 576, 579, 674). This was still not enough. On July 11, 1931, Brownsville, at MOP's direction, declared a further dividend of 700% amounting to $3,500,000, an amount greater than the sum of all Brownsville dividends for the preceding fifteen years (Ex. 106, 206, R. 564, 674).

These 1931 dividends totalled $4,155,079, although Brownsville suffered a deficit for the year (Ex. 309, R. 927). These dividends have not been paid in full even to this date (Ex. 102, R. 519).

In auditing the Brownsville accounts, the Commission held that the interlocking directors and officers knew at the time that these Brownsville dividends could not be paid. Accordingly, the Commission disapproved the dividends and directed NOTM to write them off insofar as they were then still unpaid (Ex. 62-4, R. 420-2).

These 1931 and earlier Brownsville dividends were declared though Brownsville's long past due indebtedness to NOTM for fuel, materials and supplies, and even for interest paid on Brownsville equipment trust notes, had been steadily mounting from less than one million dollars in 1924 to over $10,200,000 by 1932 (Ex. 102, 103, 189, R. 519, 538, 660).

In such fashion, MOP—by reason of its own desperate position—disregarded the needs and welfare of NOTM and its subsidiaries (Ex. 83, 156-60, R. 455, 613). The fiscal affairs of NOTM were managed in the New York or Cleveland offices of MOP—without regard to the railroad operations of NOTM* (R. 590, 594, 597). In short, every financial act of NOTM was the act of MOP. Beyond that, MOP determined the form in which such financial transactions were recorded on the books of MOP and NOTM.

MOP's Claim Includes $1,261,009 Saddled on NOTM without Authority or Consideration

In October, 1932, MOP imposed a bookkeeping transaction on NOTM amounting to $1,261,009 which MOP included in its claim and which the Courts below allowed (Ex. 221-5, 231-2, 240-1, R. 701, 706, 794).

This transaction was conducted in the shadow of bankruptcy, which occurred less than six months later.

Mr. Baldwin, President and operating head of MOP and NOTM, testified that his relations with the financial offices in New York were: " * * quite indefinite, largely being a good fellow, I guess * * *" (R. 597). The Chairman of the Board and Mr. Wyer had their offices in New York and then in Cleveland.

The only contact that the NOTM main office in Houston, Texas had with the NOTM financial office in New York and Cleveland was through the MOP office at St. Louis. The NOTM auditing department never saw the books kept in the NOTM financial office. That was under the "jurisdiction" of the MOP office (R. 499-502, 590-5).

MOP had unsecured claims against two subsidiaries—NOTM and I-GN. The financial position of NOTM was stronger (R. 20879, Appdx. C).

MOP moved to improve its position by shifting debtors. MOP arbitrarily increased its claim against NOTM by $1,261,009. MOP simultaneously reduced its claim against I-GN by the same amount. As alleged consideration for the write-up, MOP planned to have I-GN assign to NOTM $1,261,009 of uncollectible claims which I-GN had against certain NOTM subsidiaries—I-GN sister companies. NOTM had not previously had any connection with or liability for these claims in any way.

There was no pretense of corporate action by NOTM or I-GN. Mr. Wyer in Cleveland merely wrote a directive on MOP stationery to Mr. Baldwin outlining what was to be done, and the bookkeeping entries followed automatically (R. 703).*

The officers of MOP knew at the time that these I-GN receivables were uncollectible (R. 797, 1043; Ex. 240, R. 794).

Mr. Eckert, the then NOTM auditor and one of the few NOTM officers who was not also an officer of MOP, did not know the details of this transaction until the District Court hearing, twelve years later (Ex. 52, R. 406). Mr. Eckert testified:

> "* * * I haven't seen any of these (journal) entries at all. This is news to me" (R. 702).

* This is one example of Mr. Wyer's bookkeeping. Before the Senate Committee, Mr. Wyer admitted that his bookkeeping of MOP and MOP subsidiaries had been false in numerous respects.

President (then Senator) Truman, who was conducting the hearing, replied to a comment by Mr. Wyer: "Mr. Wyer * * * this statement is exactly in line with your bookkeeping. I do not think it conveys the truth * * *" (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 12, pp. 5059-63, 5079, 5269).

 For example, about $800,000 of these claims were due from a road, San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf R. R., that had been in default for years on its first mortgage bond interest, which default totaled $975,000 by December 31, 1932 (Ex. 179, 223, R. 632, 701).

Yet, the sum of $1,261,009, together with interest amounting to about $900,000, was allowed by the Courts below.

The record contains evidence of other examples of financial burdens imposed on NOTM by MOP for the benefit of MOP. Thus, NOTM was compelled to borrow and expend millions of dollars to acquire North Texas "feeder" lines for the benefit of MOP and I-GN, not NOTM (Ex. 193, 233, R. 662). These "feeder" roads* do not even connect with NOTM or any of the Gulf Coast Lines, but tie in with I-GN (Ex. 213, R. 605-6, 678). As the Commission found, it was recognized that these "feeder" lines "were really acquired for the benefit of the entire (MOP) system * * * they have usually been operated at a deficit since acquisition." **

Respondents in the Courts below presented testimony in an effort to show that the traffic, physical conditions and operations of NOTM had been improved during the years of MOP control (R. 814-67, 933-59; Ex. 249-66). The District Court so found (R. 13).

History of NOTM Notes Representing the Bulk of the Claim

All MOP "advances" to NOTM—whether cash, bookkeeping entries or paper transactions—were recorded as open book accounts. When MOP sought to obtain loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Railroad Credit Corporation (hereinafter called R. F. C. and R. C. C.), the open accounts constituting the MOP Claim (except for $610,000) were transmuted into two demand notes within nine weeks of bankruptcy. These notes were signed by Mr. William Wyer, as Treasurer of NOTM,

* These include the Asphalt Belt Ry., Asherton & Gulf Ry., and the San Antonio Southern Ry.

 Missouri Pacific R. R. Reorganization, 239 I. C. C. 7, 71 (1940).

and delivered to himself as Treasurer of MOP (Ex. 51-2, 348-9; R. 406). The notes were immediately pledged together with other collateral by MOP to the R. F. C. and R. C. C. (R. 30).*

Subsequently, pursuant to Court order, the R. F. C. and R. C. C. claims against MOP were paid and the claims and collateral, including the two NOTM notes, surrendered to the Trustee of MOP (R. 1155, 1164). The R. F. C. was then stricken as a party to these proceedings (R. 1348).

Nature of the Proceedings Below

In the District Court, petitioner Comstock originally petitioned for leave to file objections to the MOP Claim in the name of the Trustee of NOTM (R. 247). He also filed objections to the then pending MOP Plan; of these, objection No. 19 and related objections repeated the objections to the MOP Claim contained in the first petition (R. 227, 232-33).

Counsel for respondents contended that the issues raised by these two documents of petitioner were identical, and that petitioner should be compelled to litigate the Claim in connection with the hearings on the Plan, rather than in two separate hearings (R. 338-39, 365-67). The District Court agreed (R. 367).

The validity and priority of the MOP Claim, as attacked in Comstock's Objection No. 19, were thereafter the subject of a separate hearing by the District Court, and were determined by a separate order, from which a separate appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals was taken (R. 1, 7, 378).

* An R. F. C. official stated that the R. F. C. made the loans to MOP on the basis of financial statements sworn to by Mr. Wyer which were false and "crooked" (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 3, pp. 1116, 1139 [1938]). The late Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman also characterized these financial statements as false (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 74th Cong., 2d Sess., Part 2, p. 544 [1938]). The Commission deemed this incident sufficiently serious to be included in its formal report to the Congress, (1937) I. C. C. Annual Report, pp. 27-8.

The District Court held that the MOP Claim "should be allowed" (R. 31-4). The Circuit Court held that "the claim of Missouri Pacific was properly allowed" (IV—27).

The Courts below were thus passing on the validity and priority of a claim and objections thereto.*

This is litigation over such orders of allowance and is independent of any particular plan of reorganization.

The Questions Presented

1. Whether the $10,565,227 claim of a parent corporation in reorganization against a dominated subsidiary is valid in its entirety and ranks prior to the claim of public investors, who are secured by the parent's pledge of the subsidiary's stock, when:

(a) $2,795,000 of the Claim is based on eleven "advances" made by the parent over thirteen consecutive quarters which were matched within one to five days by dividends from the subsidiary to the parent in substantially equivalent amounts, which the subsidiary could not have otherwise paid.

(b) The parent did not permit the subsidiary to devote its earnings to its own needs, but caused the subsidiary to pay to the parent twenty consecutive quarterly dividends in excess of earnings, and four and one-half times the consolidated earnings of the subsidiary and its affiliated companies, while the subsidiary was already borrowing heavily for an extensive expansion program.

(c) $1,261,009 of the Claim is based on the parent's write-up of the subsidiary's indebtedness through bookkeeping entries made six months before bankruptcy without the consent or approval of the subsidiary—the consideration for such write-up being the alleged assignment to the subsidiary of uncollectible claims in the same face amount, from which the subsidiary has not received one penny tc this day.

(d) Much of the Claim represents funds supplied by the parent to the subsidiary, whose resources were inadequate to enable it to finance an extensive expansion program, after public borrowing became impossible, which funds were denominated by the parent as "advances" and never as additional capital investments.

2. Whether the doctrine of subordination of a claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary to the claims of public investors is inapplicable, when the parent corporation is insolvent and its claim is asserted by the parent's creditors, who did not participate in the parent's wrongdoing?

3. Whether the doctrine of subordination of a claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary to the claims of public investors is inapplicable, when such public investors are claiming through the common stock of the subsidiary?

4. Whether a court may allow the disputed claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary, both being in reorganization with the identical trustee, over the challenge of public investors, when the subsidiary has never had the protection of a separate and independent trustee?

Reasons Relied On for the Allowance of the Writ

1. The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit is in conflict with the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit on the same matters. In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. (2d) 734 (C. C. A. 7th, 1944).

2. The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit is in conflict with the decision of this Court in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939), on the same matters.

3. It is of public importance in the administration of the bankruptcy laws and of large corporate reorganizations thereunder that certain questions relating to the scope of the doctrine of subordination be settled. These questions presented by the instant case are:

(a) Whether the claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary may be subordinated to the claims of public investors, when the parent corporation is insolvent and its claim is asserted by the parent's creditors, who did not participate in the parent's wrongdoing?

(b) Whether the claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary may be subordinated to the claims of public investors, when such public investors are claiming through the common stock of the subsidiary?

4. The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit is in conflict with the established policy of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

5. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit has decided a question of law of substantial importance in the administration of the bankruptcy laws, which has not been settled, but which should be settled by this Court, to wit, a disputed claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary, both being in reorganization with the identical trustee, may be allowed over the challenge of public investors although the subsidiary has never had the protection of a separate and independent trustee.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, your petitioner respectfully prays that a writ of certiorari be issued under the seal of this Court, directed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review the order and judgment of that Court in the above cause; and that said order and judgment be reversed; and that your petitioner be granted such other and further relief as may seem proper.

Respectfully submitted,

BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The matters set forth in the foregoing petition are hereby adopted and made part of this brief.

POINT I

The instant case is in conflict with the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in the Commonwealth case.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in the instant case is in square conflict with the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. (2d) 734 (C. C. A. 7th, 1944).

In the Commonwealth case, the parent corporation, Inland, organized a subsidiary, Michigan, and received all the Michigan common stock. Inland then pledged this stock to secure a public issue of Inland bonds.

Years later, Inland (the parent) went into Section 77B reorganization proceedings. It then had a $620,132 claim against Michigan for advances.

Michigan never went into reorganization, and its stock was subsequently sold for over $1,000,000, pursuant to court order.* The question was whether the proceeds of the sale should first be applied to Inland's $620,132 claim against Michigan, or to the claim of Inland public bondholders who had held the pledged Michigan common stock.

The Circuit Court of Appeals subordinated the parent's claim and awarded the proceeds to the public investors, concluding that:

> "Michigan was under the complete control and domination of Inland; that
>
> it was insufficiently capitalized; that
>
> Inland failed to make provision for sound financing for Michigan's extensive rehabilitation and expansion program; and that
> Michigan, upon the demand of Inland, declared dividends which were paid to Inland by open account borrowings from Inland. * * *" (141 F. (2d) at 739).

The basic identity between the Commonwealth case and the instant case cannot be questioned. Every element emphasized by the Court in the Commonwealth case is present herein.

---

* To facilitate the sale, the Michigan stock was sold free of the Inland claim.

(a) Complete Control and Domination

Like Inland, MOP completely dominated and controlled its subsidiary, NOTM. Respondents herein have conceded such control (Institutional Group Brief, C. C. A. 8th, March 29, 1947, p. 53). The Courts below so found (R. 11; IV—15).

(b) Matching "Advances" and Dividends

MOP and Inland both insisted on a continued flow of dividends from their subsidiaries irrespective of earnings, financial needs, or even the utter lack of funds with which to pay dividends.

Quarter in and quarter out in 1929, 1930 and 1931, the parents thus made "advances" to their respective subsidiaries on one day which were matched by "dividends" to the parents in relatively equivalent amounts a few days later.

In the Commonwealth case, this bookkeeping matching occurred as follows:

Amount of Advance	Date of Advance	Payment of Dividend	Amount of Dividend
$29,576	June 25, 1929	5 days later	$29,576
29,576	Sept. 26, 1929	4 days later	29,576
60,000	Jan. 6, 1930	6 days before	51,844
8,000	June 25, 1930	5 days later	7,663
40,000	Oct. 9, 1930	9 days before	38,313
59,000	Mar. 25, 1931	6 days later	34,000
40,000	June 20, 1931	10 days later	34,000
45,000	Sept. 24, 1931	5 days later	34,000
25,000	Dec. 26, 1931	5 days later	34,000
82,500*	Mar. 30, 1932	1 day later	34,000

(S. E. C. Ex. 28, Commonwealth Record, C. C. A. 7th, Vol. II, pp. 985-7)

On page 7, supra, appears a chart of almost simultaneous MOP advances and NOTM dividends in relatively equivalent amounts. Language cannot state more emphatically than these two charts the identity between the Commonwealth case and the instant case.

---

* This item bears a notation also referring to bond interest.

The Circuit Court below did not even refer to the Commonwealth case, although petitioner emphasized its identity with the case at bar.

It is indisputable that if MOP or Inland had not made these advances, payment of the dividends would have been impossible. NOTM and Michigan did not have the funds (Ex. 75-79, R. 453; S. E. C. Ex. 28, Commonwealth Record, C. C. A. 7th, Vol. II, p. 986).

(c) Absence of Sound Financing for Expansion

The Court in the Commonwealth case also emphasized Inland's role in failing to provide sound financing for the "extensive rehabilitation and expansion program" which it caused Michigan to undertake.

By supplying Michigan with funds needed for improvements in the form of loans rather than as additional equity investment, Inland created a claim, which it later sought to insert ahead of the claims of public investors.

MOP's financing of NOTM's expansion program was even more harmful.

Whereas in the Commonwealth case, Inland kept Michigan dividends to 80% of Michigan earnings, MOP went further. It compelled NOTM to declare dividends well in excess of earnings. Thus, from 1927 to 1932, NOTM dividends were four and one-half times consolidated NOTM earnings. Dividends of $5,190,000 were paid against earnings of only $1,151,000 (Ex. 301, R. 914).

Furthermore, Inland made an additional capital contribution to Michigan by surrendering its claim for $450,000 of previous advances for additional Michigan common stock; this sum was almost three-quarters of Inland's subsequent claim.

MOP, however, compelled NOTM to finance its expansion program entirely out of borrowed funds. When MOP acquired a controlling interest in NOTM from the bankers, it did not put a penny into the NOTM treasury. On the contrary, to reduce the purchase price to MOP, NOTM was caused to pay $2,500,000 in extraordinary dividends.

Nor did MOP subsequently make any additional equity investment in NOTM.*

MOP's draining of the NOTM treasury did not stop there. By compelling NOTM to pay dividends well in excess of earnings, MOP actually decreased its investment in NOTM and prejudiced the equity of the pledged stock.

Such a drain on NOTM assets for the benefit of MOP substantially weakened NOTM's ability to finance, out of its own assets, the expansion program thereafter dictated by MOP. NOTM became all the more dependent on borrowing from MOP.

(d) Inadequate Capitalization

The resources of Michigan were inadequate for the conduct of its business. Its financial history, like that of NOTM, consisted of a dreary cycle of bank loans and advances from its parent (Inland) which in turn were refunded as long as possible by public security issues. Despite Michigan's needs, Inland did not want its own funds tied up in Michigan, and repaid itself as fast as it could with the proceeds of Michigan public security issues.

Michigan's publicly held bonds and preferred stock increased by 250% in five years. Michigan's cash position was weak and its open account indebtedness to Inland continued to grow. During the same period Inland made only one additional equity investment in Michigan.

Under MOP control, NOTM also suffered from insufficient capitalization. During the entire period, NOTM was forced to borrow continuously and heavily, in good years and in bad. It borrowed, among other things, for an improvement program, for interest payments on bonded debt, for principal and interest on equipment trusts, and for sinking fund installments (Ex. 281, R. 900).

* Its shares of NOTM stock were acquired from New York bankers or on the market; NOTM received no additional capital.

As long as possible, these sums were raised from the banks and MOP and refunded by public bond issues, with NOTM total bonded indebtedness climbing from $29,382,000 in 1924 to almost $43,000,000 four years later (Ex. 71, R. 432). Annual fixed interest requirements almost doubled, rising from $1,463,000 in 1925 to $2,685,000 in 1932 (Ex. 99, R. 488). At the same time, NOTM consolidated income declined precipitously (Ex. 301, R. 914).

After the spring of 1928, NOTM was no longer able to borrow from the public (R. 1024). At the same time, NOTM became chronically short of cash working capital.* From then until bankruptcy, NOTM's cash position grew weaker. Its open account debt to MOP rose steadily.

The Commonwealth case condemned the parent for the subsidiary's inadequate capitalization despite the fact that the subsidiary never went into reorganization. The inadequacy of capitalization in the instant case is all the more serious because it resulted in the subsidiary going into reorganization.

(e) Public Pledgees of the Subsidiary's Stock Competing with the Insolvent Parent's Creditors

In each of these cases, the interest of the public investors arose in the same way. Public bondholders of the parent, secured by the parent's pledge of the subsidiary's capital stock, urged the subordination of the parent's claim.

Furthermore, each parent corporation was bankrupt. Creditors of the parent, who did not participate in the wrongdoing, asserted the parent's claim.

The Commonwealth Court expressly held that the fact that the parent's claim was not asserted by the parent itself did not prevent subordination to the claim of public investors. The District Court below, however, flatly disagreed, and held that subordination is inapplicable in such a situation (R. 1111). The Circuit Court below affirmed.

* NOTM cash which had averaged $992,000 during the early years of MOP control (1925 to 1927) dropped sharply to an average of $209,000 from 1929 to 1932 (Ex. 69, R. 432). These are year-end averages.

(f) Operational Benefits Do Not Excuse Financial Mismanagement

In each case, the parent's wrongdoing consists solely of financial exploitation.

In the Commonwealth case, Michigan had received substantial benefits from an "extensive rehabilitation and expansion program". Although this fact was vigorously urged in support of the claim,* the Commonwealth Court held that financial mismanagement by a parent required subordination.

The Courts below rejected subordination because of the operational benefits received by the subsidiary, NOTM. In so doing, they rejected the rule of the Commonwealth case (R. 1110, IV—26).

Thus, there is a fundamental identity between these two cases. The inter-corporate manipulations of the Insull Utility Empire are repeated, with surprising duplication of detail, in its contemporary, the Van Sweringen Railroad Empire.

In these very reorganization proceedings, the late Circuit Judge Faris excoriated the exploitation of MOP by its parent, the Van Sweringen-dominated Alleghany Corporation ; he stated:

> "For to me it is plain that the Congress intended to stop a practice among railroads and their exploiters

* See Joint Brief of The Middle West Corporation and Bachrach, Trustee, in support of the Inland Claim, C. C. A. 7th, p. 27.

 This arose on the application of the R. F. C.—then a claimant—to require the MOP Trustee to disavow or rescind what Judge Faris subsequently found to be "improvident, unfair, unlawful and overreaching" contracts imposed on MOP by Alleghany.

The R. F. C. application and the brief submitted by Mr. Justice Reed (then R. F. C. general counsel) attacked both Alleghany and Mr. Wyer's testimony in support of such contracts (R. F. C. Brief before Special Master, pp. 60, 77-8).

and manipulators which has had much to do with making the financial history of railroads the most indecent and sordid chapter ever written in this or any other nation." In re Missouri Pacific R. R., 13 F. Supp. 888, 892 (D. Mo., 1935).

Upon identical patterns of inter-company financial wrongdoing, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit reached a decision contrary to that of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

We submit that this Court should resolve this conflict.

POINT II

The instant case is in conflict with the decision of this Court in the Deep Rock case.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit is in conflict with the decision in the Deep Rock case, Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939).

In the Deep Rock case, this Court subordinated the entire claim of a parent, against a dominated subsidiary to the claim of public investors.

Both the parent, Standard, and the subsidiary, Deep Rock, had gone into Section 77B proceedings.

Standard asserted a claim against Deep Rock for advances totalling $9,300,000. This claim was resisted by the independent trustee of Deep Rock. After prolonged hearings, Standard proposed a compromise reducing its claim to $5,000,000, consisting solely of advances for the undisputed benefit of Deep Rock.

After rejecting one Plan based on this compromise, the District Court, with the support of most public Deep Rock preferred stockholders and the Deep Rock Trustee, allocated most of the new Deep Rock common stock to Standard for its $5,000,000 compromise claim, and a small portion of new common to the public preferred stockholders for their $5,000,000 claim. The Circuit Court affirmed.

This Court reversed, holding that it had been an abuse of discretion to fail to subordinate the entire Standard claim to the claim of the public preferred stockholders. The Court concluded:

> "It is impossible to recast Deep Rock's history and experience so as even to approximate * * * its financial condition * * * had it been adequately capitalized and independently managed and had its fiscal affairs been conducted with an eye single to its own interests" (306 U. S. at 323).

(a) Domination and Control

Standard had controlled and dominated Deep Rock through 98% common stock ownership.

This Court emphasized that Standard and Deep Rock had common officers and that "all of the fiscal affairs of the debtor (Deep Rock) were wholly controlled by Standard which was its banker and its only source of financial aid" (306 U. S. at 311).

As we have seen, identical domination, control and financial dependence are present in the instant case.

(b) Dividend Policy

An outstanding instance of Standard's misconduct * was the exploitation of Deep Rock by continued insistence upon dividends. Out of Deep Rock earnings of about $10,000,000, Standard compelled the declaration of over $5,500,000 in dividends (Deep Rock Record, Supreme Court, Vol. II, pp. 649-50). Most of these dividends could only be paid by simultaneous borrowing from Standard.

This Court stressed that:

* Other instances of Standard's abuse of Deep Rock included unfair leases, large service fees, 7% interest on open accounts compounded monthly, and the concealment of whether properties were being bought for Standard or Deep Rock.

"Whatever may be the fact as to the legality of such dividends * * * it is evident that they would not have been paid over the long course of years by a company on the precipice of bankruptcy and in dire need of cash working capital" (306 U. S. at 317, 323).

MOP's exploitation of NOTM through its dividend policy followed a similar line, and in some aspects was even more flagrant. Whereas Standard had kept Deep Rock dividends to less than 60% of earnings, NOTM dividends exceeded earnings.

Moreover, in the Deep Rock case, over half of Deep Rock dividends had gone not to Standard, but to the public preferred stockholders, the very class seeking subordination. MOP, however, received approximately 90% of each dividend it caused NOTM to declare.

(c) Inadequate Capitalization

Another element of financial mismanagement was Standard's policy of running Deep Rock without resources adequate for the conduct of its business. Such inadequacy of capitalization compelled the continued advances from the parent that mark both the Deep Rock case and the case at bar.

Although its original financing had enabled Deep Rock to acquire the properties needed for its business and provided $6,700,000 in working capital, Deep Rock was soon forced to borrow, and its open account to Standard rose steadily.

As this Court stated:

"* * * So inadequate was Deep Rock's capitalization that, in the period from organization to 1926, the balance due on open account to Standard grew to more than $14,800,000" (306 U. S. at 315).

Like Deep Rock, NOTM was able to conduct its business only by the continual infusion of funds borrowed from its parent.

Standard made additional equity investments in Deep Rock. Standard, for example, took additional Deep Rock common stock as payment for $11,000,000 of previous advances. This sum was more than twice the amount of Standard's subsequent compromise claim.

In contrast, MOP did not make one penny additional equity investment in NOTM, and in effect, decreased its investment in NOTM by siphoning off dividends in excess of earnings.

The Court below was influenced by the operational benefits received by NOTM from MOP, and attempted to distinguish the Deep Rock case on this ground. We submit that the Court below was in error as a matter of law.

Operational benefits did not prevent subordination of the Standard claim. There was evidence of considerable physical improvement of Deep Rock.* This Court pointed out that Standard had acquired additional oil properties and erected additions for the benefit of Deep Rock (306 U. S. at 317, 319).

NOTM operational benefits were not dependent on MOP financial mismanagement. If advances for dividends had not been made or if NOTM indebtedness had not been arbitrarily written up, the MOP Claim would have been smaller. Yet, not one rail less would have been laid nor one trestle less constructed.

MOP's obligations as a fiduciary relate to each and every transaction with NOTM. Operational benefits cannot excuse any breach of fiduciary obligations.

The decision of the Court below seriously limits the protection extended to public investors by the Deep Rock case. It is submitted that this Court should prevent the Deep Rock doctrine from being whittled away.

* The Deep Rock record discloses that in 1927 alone, Deep Rock improvement and additions amounted to more than $1,700,000, and in 1928 alone to more than $1,700,000 (Vol. III, pp. 106, 108; Trustees' Exs. H, I).

POINT III

The instant case involves important questions as to the scope of the doctrine of subordination.

The decision of this Court in the Deep Rock case has engendered lively discussions in the law reviews on important questions as to the scope of the doctrine of subordination which are involved in the instant case.

E.g., Israels, The Implications and Limitations of the Deep Rock Doctrine, (1942) 42 Col. L. Rev. 376, 386-9;

Krotinger, The "Deep Rock" Doctrine: A Realistic Approach to Parent-Subsidiary Law, (1942) 42 Col. L. Rev. 1124, 1133, 1138-44;

Note (1941) 54 Harv. L. Rev. 1045, 1050-1.

The most important of these questions is whether the Deep Rock rule is inapplicable when the parent corporation is bankrupt and the struggle for priority is between creditors of the parent, who did not participate in the parent's wrongdoing, and innocent public investors with an interest in the subsidiary.

The Commonwealth case held that whether or not the parent is bankrupt is immaterial on the issue of priority. However, the District Court in the instant case, affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, flatly disagreed with the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit on the issue.

Furthermore, the District Court below held that this issue had not been involved in the Deep Rock case, and concluded that the doctrine of subordination was inapplicable. Although it seems to us that the Deep Rock case did settle the question, the commentators, cited above, view the question as still open for decision by this Court.

The Deep Rock decision required subordination of a parent's claim in favor of public preferred stockholders. This Court has never passed upon the question whether subordination may be decreed in favor of public investors claiming through common stock of the subsidiary.

This open question, which has been the subject of extended discussion by commentators, is presented by the instant case.

POINT IV

The instant case is in conflict with the established policy of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The decision in the instant case is in conflict with the established policy of the Securities and Exchange Commission (hereinafter called S. E. C.).

In the Commonwealth case, itself, the S. E. C. took a leading role in the litigation and insisted on complete subordination of the parent's claim.

In its recent decision in the Indiana Service case, the S. E. C. again attacked a claim of a parent for loans to a dominated subsidiary, which were matched by almost simultaneous dividends to the parent. The S. E. C. stated in language strikingly applicable to the case at bar:

> "While some of the loans made by Utilities (the parent) to Indiana Service were more or less contemporaneous with the preferred and common stock dividend payment dates, Utilities states that there is no evidence that such advances were made in whole or in part for dividend purposes.
> "* * * We think it is fairly obvious that the loans made to Indiana Service concurrently with the payment of common stock dividends to Utilities when Indiana Service was in need of funds for other purposes were for the purpose of converting earned surplus to notes payable. On the basis of the foregoing, we would have no difficulty in finding a proper basis for subordination. * * * " (In re Indiana Service Corporation, S. E. C. Holding Company Act Release No. 7054, December 14, 1946, pp. 33-4).

So too, in the instant case MOP's matching of "advances" to NOTM concurrently with the payment of NOTM dividends to MOP was designed to convert "earned surplus" to "notes payable".

Despite the decisions in the Deep Rock case, the Commonwealth case, and the clearly articulated position of the S. E. C., the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit refused to subordinate the MOP Claim. Such a conclusion, if uncorrected, will result in a serious encroachment on the protection which the above decisions extend to public investors.

POINT V

MOP's Claim against NOTM may not be allowed until NOTM has been given the protection of an independent Trustee.

MOP and NOTM have a common Trustee, Mr. Guy A. Thompson. This Trustee patently has conflicting loyalties. The performance of his duties as Trustee of MOP in pressing the MOP Claim inescapably clashes with his statutory duty as Trustee of NOTM to resist the Claim (Sec. 47a(8), National Bankruptcy Act). This conflict of interest has deprived NOTM of the full protection to which it is entitled by law, just as much as if it arose from opposing personal financial interests.

Whether the MOP Claim may be held to be valid and prior under such circumstances is a question of substantial importance in the administration of the bankruptcy laws, which should be settled by this Court.

A conflict of interest on the part of the trustee was condemned by Mr. Justice Van Devanter, who as a Circuit Judge, stated:

> "* * * the trustee's action (in not contesting a claim) was accorded undue consideration, when it is considered that * * * he was represented and presumably advised by counsel who was also representing the creditor whose claim was challenged. Of course, this ought not to have been, no matter what may have been the belief of counsel respecting its propriety. The interests of the creditor were adverse to the bankrupt estate, with the protection of which the trustee was charged, and were in conflict with the interests of others who were represented by the trustee." In re Stern, 144 Fed. 956, 959 (C. C. A. 8th, 1906).

This principle applies no less to the instant case. It was not observed by the present Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

The lack of an independent NOTM Trustee was especially harmful since the MOP Claim involved parent-subsidiary transactions, which have been held by this Court to be "presumptively fraudulent" and to require vigorous judicial scrutiny before allowance.

> Corsicana National Bank v. Johnson, 251 U. S. 68, 90 (1919);
> Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 306 (1939);
> Consolidated Rock Products v. DuBois, 312 U. S. 510, 522-23 (1941).

The type of scrutiny required has been indicated by a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. That Court directed a Trustee to make a further investigation although one had already been made and the District Court had concluded that another would be futile.

> In re Central States Electric Corp., 143 F. (2d) 684 (C. C. A. 4th, 1944).

The Court insisted upon:

> "* * * an investigation of the most complete and thorough-going character, with opportunity to examine under oath those who had knowledge of the corporation's affairs * * * to the end that all the processes of discovery provided by law might be fully used" (143 F. [2d] at 686).

The common Trustee in the case at bar indicated in the District Court that he did not feel the MOP Claim was especially important; he testified that he always thought that the Claim was "washed out in the Plan, and would be washed out in any Plan" (R. 645). Accordingly, he did not announce whether or not he regarded the MOP Claim as valid until some time after the hearings had commenced in the District Court (R. 646). Previously during the hearings, the Trustee's counsel, who had served in that capacity for many years, was unable to tell the Court the Trustee's attitude on the Claim (R. 392-3).

The failure of the NOTM Trustee to oppose the MOP Claim has not been offset by the efforts of petitioner and other public bondholders. Resources available to a trustee for the purpose of investigation obviously are superior to those at the command of scattered public investors. As the accountant for petitioner testified:

> "Mr. Thompson directed me to * * * Mr. Vollmer* (who) * * * stated that they would make records available, but I was not to ask any questions of any of the employees; * * * any direct questioning would have to be done in court" (R. 495).

This is far from the "opportunity to examine under oath" and the full use of "all the processes of discovery provided by law" stressed in the Central States Electric case.

* Mr. Vollmer was Executive Assistant to the Trustee (Ex. 56, R. 406).

To permit the validity of the Claim of MOP, a fiduciary, to be established in such circumstances, is to deny to NOTM the protection to which it is entitled.

POINT VI

The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals fails to deal with basic questions of law presented by undisputed facts.

The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit does not discuss the Commonwealth case, which had been argued before it, although the facts and issues in the Commonwealth case are strikingly identical with those in the case at bar. The opinion hardly discusses the other questions of law presented by this case.

The Circuit Court stated that it would not re-examine the facts, and reached its conclusion in reliance on the findings of fact of the District Court.

Petitioner seeks no re-examination of the facts. To a remarkable extent the facts, arising almost entirely from books of account and corporate records, are undisputed.

Thus, when a parent asserts a claim for $2,795,000 representing sums which the parent, in eleven out of thirteen consecutive quarters, advanced to its dominated subsidiary one day and of which all but $141,000 was returned to the parent in the next few days in matching payments described as dividends, the question arises whether the parent has a claim for $141,000 or for $2,795,000 or any claim at all.

Similarly, it is not disputed that $1,261,009 of the MOP Claim is based on bookkeeping entries, which MOP, shortly before bankruptcy, unilaterally wrote into the books. MOP increased NOTM's open account by $1,261,009 and, as consideration, allegedly arranged for the assignment to NOTM of uncollectible claims in the same amount. It is undisputed that the NOTM Board of Directors never requested, consented to or ratified this transaction. No conceivable benefit could have accrued to NOTM by reason of this unjustifiable imposition by MOP.

There is no dispute about these facts. The only question is one of law. The Circuit Court of Appeals does not discuss this question of law. It is content to rely generally on a finding of good faith. We submit, however, that good faith is insufficient to transform such transactions into a valid and prior claim.

These two items alone comprise a substantial part of the MOP Claim.

Most of the balance of the Claim arises from sums advanced by a parent to its dominated subsidiary to enable it to finance an expansion program, when the subsidiary, in need of funds, was unable to borrow from the public, and was already borrowing from the parent to pay dividends in excess of earnings and for other purposes. This presents a question of law. May a parent by the facile device of denominating such sums as "advances", rather than as additional capital investments, insert a claim against its dominated subsidiary ahead of the claim of public investors?

In the Deep Rock case, this Court concerned itself with the question whether, on the facts before it, a District Court had abused its discretion in approving a compromise of a claim, which consisted of advances concededly for the benefit of the subsidiary.

In this case, petitioner does not ask examination of any question of discretion, or of fact.

Petitioner asks solely whether, as a matter of law, the decision on undisputed facts of the Court below, in conflict with the decisions of this Court, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, and of the S. E. C., can stand.

Petitioner urges this Court to take jurisdiction and to determine these questions of law. The reorganization will not be delayed.

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully submitted that a writ of certiorari should be granted.

PETITION FOR WRITS OF CERTIORARI

TO THE HONORABLE THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES:

Petitioners respectfully pray that writs of certiorari be issued to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review the related orders and judgments of that Court rendered in the above causes, dismissing related appeals from orders, judgments and decrees of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Section 240(a) of the Judicial Code, as amended. The date of the related orders and judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit was August 28, 1947.

The Opinions of the Courts Below

The opinion of the District Court (R. 1089)* is reported in 64 F. Supp. 64. The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit (R. IV—29) is reported in 163 F. (2d) 358.

Summary Statement of the Case

There were four related appeals before the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in the litigation over the validity and priority of the claim of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. (hereinafter called MOP) against the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called NOTM).

* References to the transcript of the record are indicated by the letter "R." except for Volume IV thereof which is indicated by "R. IV". Arabic numerals indicate pages.

Three of these appeals were from Order No. 2604-A of the District Court below, which allowed the MOP Inter-Company Claim and overruled objections relating thereto (R. 7). These three appeals were as follows:

(a) in the name of Andrew W. Comstock (Appeal No. 13,376)

(b) in the name of NOTM, by Comstock (Appeal No. 13,377)

(c) in the name of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of NOTM, by Comstock (Appeal No. 13,378)

The fourth appeal was that of Comstock in his own name from a subsequent order of the District Court (R. 39) denying his petition for leave to appeal from Order No. 2604-A in the name of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of NOTM (Appeal No. 13,379).

The Circuit Court of Appeals considered Appeal No. 13,376 taken by Comstock in his own name from Order No. 2604-A, and affirmed such order on the merits. The annexed petition for certiorari relates to that cause.

The Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed the remaining three appeals (Nos. 13,377-79).

This petition for certiorari relates to these three causes. To support this petition, we rely on the annexed petition for certiorari and brief, which are herewith incorporated by reference.

It is desired to eliminate from the litigation any possible procedural question as to whether Comstock should have appealed from the order of allowance of the MOP Inter-Company Claim in the name of NOTM or in the name of the Trustee of NOTM rather than in his own.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, petitioners respectfully pray that writs of certiorari be issued under the seal of this Court, directed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review the orders and judgments of that Court in the above causes; and that said orders and judgments be reversed; and that petitioners be granted such other and further relief as may seem proper.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM H. BIGGS,
Attorney for Petitioners,

REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

Petitioner files this Brief in reply to the Brief dated December 12, 1947, submitted by a group of respondents.

POINT I

The Petition Presents No Factual Controversy.

There is no factual controversy before this Court. The challenge of petitioner is directed solely to questions of law. We asserted this on pages 33 and 34 of our main brief; we assert it again.

Thus, a substantial portion of the claim of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. (hereinafter called MOP) against its dominated subsidiary, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called NOTM), is based on repeated MOP advances to NOTM which were consistently matched within one to five days by NOTM dividends to MOP in substantially equivalent amounts. These are the facts as found by the District Court (R. 19).* Finding of Fact No. 19 contains a chart of such matching loans and dividends which is in full accord with the chart presented on page 7 of our main brief. Such facts arise from extracts from the corporate accounts introduced by respondents as well as by petitioner (Ex. 75-79, 281).

Similarly, another substantial portion of the MOP Inter-Company Claim involves the bookkeeping transaction, six months before bankruptcy, by which MOP wrote up the indebtedness of NOTM to MOP by $1,261,000. These are the facts as the District Court found in Finding No. 29 (R. 22). These facts also arise from the corporate records, introduced both by respondents and petitioner (Ex. 221-5, 231-2, 240-1), and from the testimony of witnesses for respondents (R. 797, 1043).

These are but two examples of the undisputed facts presented by the case at bar. They suffice to indicate the lack of merit in respondents' contention that we present a factual controversy.

We assume the findings of the District Court. Our challenge is directed only to the legal import of these unchallenged facts.

Our position is that the courts below have decided the questions of law presented by the findings of fact in conflict with the decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. (2d) 734 (C. C. A. 7th, 1944), and of this Court in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939).

POINT II

An Adjudication on the Merits of the MOP Claim Is Necessary.

Respondents further maintain that this case may be disposed of on either of two separate grounds without an adjudication on the merits of the MOP Inter-Company Claim. These alleged grounds are:

(a) laches; and

(b) the pledge by MOP to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Railroad Credit Corporation (hereinafter called RFC and RCC) of two NOTM notes representing a portion, but not the entire MOP Claim.

(a) Laches

The Circuit Court opinion demonstrates that laches does not dispose of this case.

The Circuit Court pointed out that although the District Court had expressed an opinion as to laches, the District Court

> "concluded that judicial adjudication should be made as to the debt and that the court should, and therefore it did, hear the evidence covering the whole period of management of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific, and it tried out the whole case and all the charges presented by Comstock on the merits." (R. IV, 21)

Similarly, the Circuit Court of Appeals gave no weight to the contention of laches and adjudicated the MOP Claim on the merits.

(b) MOP's Pledge of the NOTM Notes

Respondents also seek wholly to avoid an adjudication on the merits by reliance on the legal consequences which they would draw from the one-time MOP pledge, since redeemed, of two NOTM notes representing a portion, but not the entire MOP Claim.

The District Court expressly found that only a portion of the $10,565,227 Claim was pledged to the RFC and RCC (R. 19-21). Thus, whatever the legal consequences attributed to the pledge, an adjudication on the merits of the validity and priority of the sizable portion of the MOP Claim which was never pledged cannot be avoided. This, of itself, is a complete answer to respondents' contention.

The former pledge to the RFC and RCC does not even dispose of that portion of the Claim represented by the heretofore pledged NOTM notes. This is elementary Bills and Notes law.

(1) As between the maker (NOTM) and the payee (MOP) of these notes, it is clear that all questions with regard to the transactions surrounding their issuance remain open for determination, irrespective of transfer to a holder in due course or otherwise.

(2) Subsequent to the decision of the District Court in this case, the notes were reacquired by the payee, MOP, through its trustee, which is again the holder (R. 1155). It is settled that a payee reacquiring an instrument—even from a holder in due course—is subject to all the equities and defenses of the maker.

(3) The RFC and RCC are no longer in the case. At present no MOP creditor has succeeded to any of their rights. The District Court order authorizing payment of the RFC and RCC was incompletely stated by respondents. Such order only subrogated MOP creditors to the rights of the RFC and RCC "to the extent of their respective interests, if any, in the cash used in the purchase of" the RFC and RCC claims (R. 1157, 1165). The District Court to this date has not determined whether respondents or any other MOP creditors had an interest in such cash. Until such determination is made no creditor can be said to have any interest in the NOTM notes.

Accordingly, it is understandable why the Circuit Court did not regard the legal consequences of the MOP pledge of sufficient importance to merit discussion.

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully submitted that a writ of certiorari be granted.

of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit (R. IV-13) is reported in 163 F. (2d) 350.

Preliminary Statement

This case involves the validity and priority of a claim of $10,565,227 filed by the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. (hereinafter called MOP) against its controlled and dominated subsidiary, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called NOTM) in joint reorganization proceedings under Section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended.

This brief is submitted by petitioner, Andrew W. Comstock, representing himself and fourteen other public investors holding in excess of $980,000 principal amount of MOP 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds.*

This class of MOP bonds is secured by MOP's pledge of 82% of the outstanding shares of NOTM's sole class of stock (Ex. 304, R. 917).

MOP seeks to insert its claim against NOTM ahead of the claims of public investors secured by such pledge.

Petitioner contends that the MOP Intercompany Claim must be disallowed, or, to the extent, if any, not disallowed, subordinated to the claim of all public investors, holding MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds.

* Andrew W. Comstock is the holder of $80,000 principal amount of such bonds. The names and holdings of the fourteen other public investors holding in excess of $900,000 additional principal amount of such bonds have previously been stated in these proceedings.

Comstock filed his objections relating to the MOP Intercompany Claim on behalf of himself, such fourteen other investors, and on behalf of all owners and holders of such bonds (R. 227). Comstock's objections were adopted by the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. 5¼% Serial Bondholders Committee presently holding and representing at least an additional $315,000 principal amount of such bonds (Interstate Commerce Commission Report, October 15, 1947, pp. 2-3). This comprises an aggregate total of $1,295,000, or about 11½% of all such bonds publicly outstanding.

The Parties

Petitioner's interest arises out of the 82% of NOTM stock pledged as security for the MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds. The Commission has recognized that such stock is of value (R. 20835, 20955). If the MOP Claim is invalid or subordinated to the claim of such bonds, the value of the pledged NOTM stock will be greatly enhanced. Consequently, the allocation of new securities to MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds is dependent upon the judicial determination of the validity and priority of the MOP claim.

The leading respondent is the Group of Institutional Investors Holding First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of MOP; this group represents 10% or less of such bonds. Sen. Rep. No. 432, 80th Cong., 1st Sess., pp. 22-23 (1947). This Group admitted that it had "no financial interest in the controversy revolving about" the MOP Claim, and that its interest was only to expedite a Plan of Reorganization of which it was then the leading proponent. This plan has since been returned to the Commission (Institutional Group Brief, Dist. Ct., p. 2). The Institutional Group offered the only evidence in the District Court in support of the MOP Claim.

Another respondent is the NOTM Mortgage and Income Bondholders Committee, which had similarly stated that it has "no interest" in the litigation over the Claim (R. 366).

Other respondents include MOP itself, MOP common and preferred stockholders committees, the Trustee of MOP, Alleghany Corporation, certain groups of creditors and indenture trustees.

Facts

There is remarkably little in the Record which is disputed. Almost all the evidence is documentary—taken from the books and records of MOP, NOTM and NOTM subsidiaries.

In these proceedings, MOP filed a proof of claim agains NOTM in the amount of $10,565,226.78, allegedly based o

> "cash advances for operation, interest payments, etc at various times from March, 1929, to February, 193 both inclusive" (Ex. 1, R. 402).

No steps were taken by MOP, the claimant, or on it behalf, to have such claim adjudicated or allowed. Mr Thompson—the sole trustee of MOP, of NOTM and o NOTM subsidiaries *—took no steps to oppose it.

Public investors found it necessary to assume the bur den of protecting NOTM against this claim. Petitione objected to the MOP Claim in the 1943 Interstate Commerc Commission (hereinafter called the Commission) hearing on the then pending MOP Plan. The Commission rule that the issue of the validity and priority of the MO Intercompany Claim "should be left to litigation in th courts" and that it would "assume for the purposes of thi proceeding that they (the MOP advances) are valid" (R 20842).

Petitioner's objections relating to the MOP Claim were the subject of a separate court hearing and separat order (R. 736-737). The District Court overruled peti tioner's objections and held that the $10,565,227 clai "should be allowed" in full, together with interest at 5½% and 6%, presently aggregating in excess of $18,000,00

* Mr. L. W. Baldwin had originally been appointed a co-truste of these roads, but resigned in 1935 (R. 76, 89). The MOP proo of claim was filed by Mr. F. P. Johnson, Vice-President of MO and NOTM, not by the MOP Trustee.

 This Plan—at the request of the Commission—was returned t it in September, 1947. The Commission has set March 23, 1948 fo a hearing on proposed plans of reorganization.

† The petitioner's objections relating to the subordination of th securities owned by Alleghany Corporation were also set for a sep arate hearing. This hearing is still pending (R. 1102-1103).

The District Court further held that the claim, so allowed, was prior to the claims of public investors holding MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds (R. 7, 30-33). Petitioner appealed. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit affirmed (R. IV, 28).

MOP Ownership of NOTM, 1924 to Bankruptcy

Under circumstances condemned by the Commission, MOP acquired majority control of NOTM from a banking syndicate in 1924 (R. 9, 11; Control of Gulf Coast Lines by Missouri Pacific R. R., 94 I. C. C. 191, 199-200, 204 (1924).

The price demanded for control of NOTM was more than MOP would pay. To facilitate the purchase, the agreement between MOP and the bankers required NOTM itself to pay part of the purchase price through extraordinary cash dividends to the old NOTM stockholders amounting to $2,475,000. These were in addition to the regular NOTM dividends of $1,010,000 for the year (Ex. 140-144, 197, R. 610, 664, 555-561).

The NOTM income and surplus in 1924 were insufficient to support such dividends (Ex. 197, R. 664). To provide NOTM with the necessary ostensible surplus, a liability of almost $3,000,000 was resurrected and imposed on NOTM's principal subsidiaries—the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Ry. Co., and the Beaumont, Sour Lake & Western Ry. Co.* (hereinafter called Brownsville and Beaumont respectively) (Ex. 181-185, R. 636).

The payment of these resurrected obligations did not provide NOTM with sufficient funds to pay these dividends.

* This represented past due interest which NOTM in 1917 had "waived, cancelled and all things annulled so that neither of said companies shall hereafter be required to pay" (Ex. 180-181, R. 635).

NOTM was obliged to borrow large sums for this purpose * (R. 559-560).

To refinance its purchases of NOTM stock, MOP, in 1926, issued $13,156,000 of its 5¼% Secured Bonds to public investors. In accordance with the trust indenture under which the bonds were issued, 131,560 shares of NOTM stock were pledged by MOP as security for these bonds  (R. 11-12).

MOP continued to acquire NOTM stock until it owned more than 93% upon bankruptcy (Ex. 177, R. 630).

From 1924 until bankruptcy, MOP dominated NOTM and NOTM subsidiaries through common officers and interlocking directorates (R. 11). MOP officers and directors immediately occupied a majority of the NOTM Board and offices. By 1929, every director and principal officer of NOTM was a MOP officer or director.

For example, until 1930, Mr. William H. Williams, Chairman of the Board of MOP with offices in New York, was Chairman of the Board of NOTM, IGN, Brownsville and Beaumont. In 1930, Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen, President of Alleghany Corporation, replaced Mr. Williams as head of all these companies and moved the Chairman's office to Terminal Tower, Cleveland, Ohio.

The other leading MOP officers such as President Baldwin, Vice-Presidents Johnson and Safford and Secretary-Treasurer Wyer all held similar positions in NOTM, IGN, Brownsville and Beaumont (Ex. 39-44, R. 405-406).

* Nevertheless, in NOTM's Annual Report for 1924 to the Commission, NOTM denied that it had borrowed to pay dividends (Ex. 197, R. 664).

 By bankruptcy, the amount of such bonds outstanding and of the stock pledged had been reduced to $12,140,000 and 121,460 shares respectively (Ex. 304, R. 917). Subsequently, the MOP Trustee, pursuant to Court order, purchased $895,000 of these bonds, leaving a total of $11,245,000, presently publicly outstanding (MOP Thirtieth Annual Report (1946), p. 11).

Early in 1929, Alleghany Corporation commenced large scale stock market operations in MOP securities, resulting in the acquisition of majority control of MOP by April, 1930. When Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen took Mr. Williams' place as Chairman of the Board of these five roads, seven of his associates replaced Mr. Williams' associates on the MOP and NOTM Boards (Sen. Rep. No. 714, 77th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 2, pp. 560-564 (1941); Ex. 26-61, R. 405-406, 869).

Throughout its period of control, MOP managed the financial affairs of NOTM for its own benefit. NOTM suffered from the lack of an independent management in the dividend policy imposed by MOP, in the shifting of indebtedness on the MOP books to NOTM, in the huge increase of NOTM indebtedness, in the failure to make provision for sound financing of the NOTM expansion program and in the acquisition with NOTM funds of North Texas "feeder" railroad lines for the benefit of MOP and IGN. All these financial transactions are reflected in the MOP Claim.

The Dividend Policy Imposed on NOTM

Under MOP control, NOTM was compelled to pay dividends in each and every quarter from 1925 through 1931, aggregating $7,267,000. Of these dividends, the sum of $6,473,000 went to MOP (Ex. 177, R. 630, 433). MOP caused NOTM to pay these dividends although NOTM was without funds and already borrowing for an extensive expansion and improvement program.

(a) NOTM Dividends to MOP Exceeded NOTM Earnings

NOTM dividends substantially exceeded income. In only two * of the seven years from 1925 through 1931 was NOTM's income adequate to pay the annual dividends exacted by MOP (Ex. 195, R. 663). This is considering NOTM as a separate corporate entity.

The consolidated earnings of NOTM and its Gulf Coast Lines subsidiaries were even less favorable. Total consolidated earnings were less than NOTM dividends in each year from 1927 to bankruptcy. During this period, NOTM paid twenty dividends totalling $5,190,000 against consolidated earnings of $1,151,000 (Ex. 301, R. 914). Over the full seven-year period, NOTM dividends totalled $7,267,000 against consolidated earnings of $5,481,000 (Ex. 301, R. 914).

NOTM dividends were not merely in excess of income. Mr. Wyer—former Treasurer of MOP and NOTM and the principal witness in support of the MOP Claim —admitted before the United States Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce that 1931 NOTM dividends were paid out of capital.†

* Without the unpaid paper dividends from Brownsville which the Commission later condemned and directed NOTM to write off insofar as then still unpaid, NOTM suffered a substantial loss in 1931 although the books show an ostensible profit for the year (Ex. 62-64, 195, R. 420-422, 663).

 The Institutional Group delayed the presentation of their case so that Mr. Wyer could testify (R. 734). Mr. Wyer remained in the court-room during the proceedings below, advising respondents (R. 458).

(b) Matching of Simultaneous MOP Advances to NOTM and NOTM Dividends to MOP

From the fall of 1928 until bankruptcy—and largely as a result of previous large dividend payments to MOP—the cash position of NOTM was impaired. NOTM lacked funds for its expansion and improvement program and to meet its bond interest, principal and interest on equipment trust notes, and sinking fund obligations (Ex. 281, R. 900).

MOP, nevertheless, forced NOTM to continue regular dividends through the end of 1931.

Commencing in the fall of 1928, NOTM was able to pay such dividends only as a result of matching advances from MOP (Ex. 281, R. 900; Ex. 75-79, R. 453). These MOP advances were paper transactions. MOP advanced sums to NOTM with one hand and took them back almost simultaneously by way of dividends with the other. Most of these paper advances were accomplished by checks drawn by an officer of MOP and then endorsed by the same person acting as an officer of NOTM (Ex. 83, 239; R. 455, 791). These advances are now included in MOP's Claim.

One MOP directive on the same day credited NOTM with an "advance" from MOP and credited MOP with a matching dividend from NOTM. Mr. Wyer, Treasurer of MOP and NOTM, wrote under the MOP letterhead to J. P. Morgan & Co., a depository for both MOP and NOTM. In one paragraph, Mr. Wyer directed the Morgan firm to credit NOTM with an advance of $300,000 on November 29, 1930. In another paragraph, Mr. Wyer advised the Morgan firm to credit MOP on that date with an NOTM dividend in the amount of $243,360 (Ex. 84, R. 456). MOP was thus credited with dividends from NOTM two days before December 1, 1930, the date set for payment (Ex. 281, R. 900).

Without such paper advances, NOTM could not have paid dividends (Ex. 75-79, R. 453). For example, on February 28, 1930, the NOTM Treasurer's account had a cash balance of only $13,565, although on the following day the NOTM quarterly dividend of $259,576 was payable. On February 28 in New York City, Mr. O. B. Huntsman, as Assistant Secretary-Treasurer of MOP, issued a check for $260,000 to NOTM, and then as Assistant Secretary-Treasurer of NOTM endorsed it for deposit in the NOTM account. The NOTM quarterly dividend of $259,576 was paid on the next day with $242,072 going back to MOP (Ex. 75-83, 239, R. 453, 455, 791).

These are typical examples of the matching of advances from MOP to NOTM and dividends from NOTM to MOP. This matching was not an isolated transaction. It followed a consistent pattern. As the following chart shows, this matching was repeated in eleven out of thirteen consecutive quarters from November, 1928 until NOTM paid its last dividend in November, 1931 (Ex. 75-81, 177, 281, R. 19, 453, 630, 900).

Although MOP advanced to NOTM $2,795,000, it received back $2,654,000 in dividends within a few days. The total net advance from MOP to NOTM was only $141,000 ($2,795,000 less $2,654,000).

Yet the Courts below allowed MOP its claim of $2,795,000, plus interest of about $2,000,000,* aggregating about $4,795,000, for this net advance of $141,000. This constitutes a return of over 3400% to a fiduciary parent.

(c) Dividends Drained from Brownsville to Make Possible NOTM Dividends to MOP

Without the paper advances from MOP, payment of NOTM dividends would have been impossible. Without paper dividends drawn from NOTM's principal subsidiary, Brownsville, the ostensible legal basis for declaration of NOTM dividends would have been lacking.

The NOTM quarterly dividends were declared some weeks before the end of each quarter (Ex. 173, R. 617). Several weeks after the close of the quarter, NOTM earnings for the preceding quarter were ascertained. Such earnings were generally insufficient to cover the previously declared NOTM dividend. Consequently, MOP directed Brownsville to declare dividends expressly to cover the NOTM deficits resulting from such dividends.

On at least seventeen occasions from 1926 to 1931, following directives from Mr. Baldwin in St. Louis to Mr. Safford, in Houston, such Brownsville dividends were declared in amounts identical to the dollars and cents required to bring quarterly NOTM income up to the $259,575.75 dividend for such quarter previously paid by NOTM (Ex. 111-112, 123-134, 172, 206; R. 569-601, 616 674).

Brownsville could not make cash payment of its dividends at any time after 1926. Such paper dividends did

* All computations of interest in this Brief have been made at the rate of 5½% per annum from 1933 to 1946, the date of the District Court order.

not improve NOTM's cash position. Thus, NOTM from 1928 through 1931 was caused to borrow $2,795,000 for dividends and several additional millions for other purposes (Ex. 281, R. 900).

Dividends reached a climax in 1931. That was almost a catastrophic year for NOTM.

On April 14, 1931, Mr. Baldwin met with Mr. Van Sweringen and Mr. Wyer in Cleveland at a Brownsville Executive Committee meeting (R. 583-584). Two days later, Mr. Baldwin wrote from New York to Mr. Safford in Houston:

> "* * * I want to impress upon you again the fact that although it may necessitate a much more drastic curtailment of expense than you have ever had or anticipated, the NOT & M must earn and pay its dividend this year and have $100,000 left in addition * * *" (Ex. 135, R. 601). (Italics added.)

Mr. Safford replied that 1931 NOTM earnings were estimated at only 40% of the regular dividend, despite the fact that expenses were "very close to the irreducible minimum unless we make some further drastic reduction in service". Mr. Safford continued that the NOTM "program for Maintenance of Equipment" had been cut to "the lowest expenditure * * * since 1924". He concluded: "* * * We have felt that we have gone as deeply into these expenditures as we could without impairing the standard of service" (Ex. 135-137, R. 601).

Nevertheless, MOP compelled NOTM to pay its dividends regularly through 1931. Brownsville was used to provide the ostensible basis for such NOTM dividends.

On June 7, 1931, Brownville was caused to declare dividends of $655,079 (Ex. 113-119, 206, R. 576, 579, 674).

This was still not enough. Further correspondence passed between Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Safford (Ex. 172, R. 616).

On July 11, 1931—less than one month later—Brownsville, at MOP's dictation, declared a further dividend of 700%, amounting to $3,500,000, an amount greater than the sum of all Brownsville dividends for the preceding fifteen years * (Ex. 106, 206, R. 564, 674).

These Brownsville 1931 dividends totalling $4,155,000 were never paid in full  (Ex. 102, R. 519, 415).

On auditing the NOTM accounts, the Commission held that the interlocking directors and officers knew, at the time, that these Brownsville dividends could not be paid, and that their inclusion in NOTM income was a violation of the Commission regulations. Accordingly, in 1936 the Commission disapproved the dividends and directed NOTM to write them off insofar as they were then still unpaid. NOTM complied (Ex. 62-64, R. 420-422).

Brownsville 1931 dividends were necessary for the continuance of NOTM dividends to MOP. NOTM's 1931 losses and charges to surplus would otherwise have impaired NOTM capital by $800,000 (Ex. 195, R. 663).

These 1931 dividends were declared though Brownsville suffered a deficit for the year and though its current liabilities exceeded current assets (Ex. 305, 309, R. 923, 927). The 1931 and earlier dividends aggregating $8,500,000 were declared though Brownsville's long-past-due indebtedness to NOTM for fuel, materials and supplies had been steadily mounting from less than $1,000,000 in 1924 to over $9,693,000 by 1931 (Ex. 102, 103, 189, 206, R. 519, 538, 660, 674).

Although Brownsville paid all its pre-1931 dividends to NOTM, Brownsville past-due bills to NOTM for essential supplies were left unpaid.

Such selectivity of payment had significant results. Declaration and payment of a Brownsville dividend increased

---

* At the time these dividends were declared, figures were already available revealing that Brownsville income from January 1 to May 31, 1931, was running 55% lower than 1930 (Ex. 312, R. 929).

 Indeed the inability to pay such dividends was the ostensible reason for the Browsville petition for reorganization under Section 77 (R. 444-445).

NOTM's paper income and surplus and made possible dividends to MOP. Payment of these past-due debts to NOTM would not have affected NOTM income or surplus.

(d) The Financial Plight of MOP and Alleghany

The Brownsville 1931 dividends occurred against the following background.

MOP was laboring under a swollen debt structure.

From March, 1927 to February, 1931, MOP sold to the public $206,000,000 of First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds * (Ex. 270-273, 275, R. 888). In 1927, MOP sold $95,000,000 of such bonds; in 1928, $25,000,000; in 1930, $25,000,000; and in 1931, $61,200,000 of such bonds (Ex. 271-275, R. 888). In addition, in 1931, MOP borrowed $23,400,000 in short term loans from J. P. Morgan & Co. (Sen. Rep. No. 25, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 9, p. 14).

To accomplish the flotation of such new bonds, a showing of substantial MOP earnings was required. In addition, MOP annual carrying charges had increased by $7,500,000 in a decade (Sen. Rep. No. 25, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 7, p. 19).

The predecessor of respondent Institutional Group stated that such "capitalization top heavy with debt" was the "major cause of the (MOP) bankruptcy" (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 13, p. 5824 (1939)).

In addition, in the year ending July, 1931, $4,000,000 of MOP funds were used by Alleghany to purchase MOP stocks and IGN bonds. "While these purchases tended to bolster the market price of Alleghany securities, the effect on the carrier (MOP) was disastrous" (Sen. Rep. No. 25, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 11, p. 34).

* A substantial portion of these were used for refinancing both long and short term debt (Ex. 275, R. 888).

 This matter is treated more fully in footnote at page 48, infra.

MOP's position was further weakened in 1930 and 1931 by Alleghany's conduct in imposing "improvident" contracts on MOP involving a cash expenditure of $3,200,000 during this period.*

Under these burdens MOP's financial position had become critical by 1931. Traffic, moreover, was declining and the railroads of the country were in the midst of the depression (Id., Part 11, p. 5).

As of December 31, 1930, MOP's current liabilities exceeded its current assets by more than $4,500,000. At the end of 1931, current liabilities exceeded current assets by almost $6,000,000 (Id., Part 11, p. 5).

Indicative of MOP's straitened condition was the decision of the MOP Board of Directors at meetings in Terminal Tower, Cleveland, Ohio, on May 14 and July 14, 1931, to authorize the MOP Chairman (Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen) or MOP Treasurer (Mr. Wyer) to borrow a total of $7,300,000 to meet MOP's needs for current requirements and dividends (Ex. 156-160, R. 613).

MOP was further subjected to heavy pressure from its parent, Alleghany Corporation. Alleghany's position in 1931 was also serious. Its income from sources other than MOP was declining. Moreover, its control over MOP itself was at stake.

* In re Missouri Pacific R. R., 13 F. Supp. 888 (E. D. Mo. 1935). Payments under this transaction, and the $4,000,000 stock purchase campaign, were concealed (51st Annual Commission Report (1937), pp. 27-28; Sen. Rep. No. 25, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 11, pp. 34, 30-33).

 The Alleghany holdings of MOP securities had been pledged as the principal security for an issue of Alleghany Bonds. Under the Alleghany trust indenture, the right to vote the MOP and other pledged securities passed to the indenture trustee if the pledged securities fell below 150% of the face amount of Alleghany bonds outstanding.

Alleghany thus was vitally concerned in the earnings reported by MOP, lest a drop in MOP income result in a decline in MOP security prices. Such a decline would depress the collateral below the critical 150% mark, and Alleghany would lose control of MOP (Sen. Rep. No. 25, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 9, pp. 5-6).

The needs of MOP and Alleghany persisted until bankruptcy (Ex. 281, R. 900). Even as late as two days before MOP and NOTM filed petitions under Section 77, MOP compelled NOTM to pay $175,000 to MOP (Ex. 239, R. 791).

$7,800,000 of the MOP $10,565,227 claim arose during the period of Alleghany control, i.e., after May, 1930 (Ex. 239, R. 754, 791).

Claim of $1,261,009 Saddled on NOTM

Included in the MOP Intercompany Claim is an item of $1,261,009. This represents a bookkeeping transaction to which NOTM has never consented and from which NOTM has not received a single penny to this date. Although described in the proof of claim as a "cash advance", no cash changed hands (Ex. 1, 240-241, R. 402, 794).

This purported obligation was saddled on NOTM through a series of journal entries in October 1932—in the darkest days of the depression and in the shadow of bankruptcy (Ex. 221-225, 231-232, 240-241, R. 701, 706, 794).

In October, 1932, MOP had unsecured claims against two subsidiaries, NOTM and IGN (Ex. 145, 155, R. 610, 613). In MOP System affairs, IGN was not regarded as a subsidiary of NOTM (R. 603).* The financial position of NOTM was much stronger than that of IGN.

MOP—in need of loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Railroad Credit Corporation (hereinafter called RFC and RCC)—sought to improve its position by shifting debtors. MOP moved the accounts of its subsidiaries like men on a chessboard.

* It should be noted that NOTM itself was acquired primarily because of MOP's desire to obtain control of IGN (R. 603-604).

 Thus, the first Plan made allocations to NOTM stockholders, but none to IGN general creditors (R. 20879, Appendix C).

MOP arbitrarily increased its claim against NOTM by $1,261,009. MOP simultaneously reduced its claim against IGN by the same amount.

As alleged consideration for this write-up of its Claim, MOP planned to have IGN assign to NOTM $1,261,009 of uncollectible claims which IGN had against certain NOTM subsidiaries—IGN sister companies. NOTM had not previously been liable for these claims.*

It was known at the time that these IGN claims were uncollectible. Mr. Eckert, auditor of NOTM, so testified (R. 797, 1043).

Mr. Eckert, the then NOTM auditor and one of the few NOTM officers who was not also an officer of MOP, did not know all the details of this transaction until the District Court hearing, twelve years later (Ex. 52, R. 406). He testified:

> "* * * I have not seen any of these (journal) entries at all, this is news to me" (R. 702).

This transaction followed the usual pattern of MOP decisions with respect to the financial affairs of its subsidiaries.

Mr. Wyer, in Cleveland, wrote a directive on MOP stationery to Mr. Baldwin, pointing out that "the Chairman (Mr. Van Sweringen) has requested me to arrange this matter", and directing what was to be done. The MOP Board of Directors adopted Mr. Wyer's resolution, and the accounts were shifted (Ex. 221, R. 701, 703).

* The only possible claim that IGN may have had against NOTM amounted to $64,129. This was described as "unmatured interest accrued". The nature of this item was never disclosed (Ex. 223, R. 701). Against this, NOTM was not permitted to set off IGN's indebtedness to it in the sum of $41,115 for past-due interest on IGN 6% Adjustment Mortgage Bonds held by NOTM (Ex. 179, R. 632).

 For example, about $800,000 of these claims was due from a road, San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Ry., that had been in default for years on its first mortgage bond interest, which default totalled almost one million dollars at this time (Ex. 179, 223, R. 632, 701).

There was no pretense of corporate action by either NOTM or IGN. Corporate requirements were ignored. The MOP Board unilaterally sought to increase NOTM's indebtedness to it.

In this manner NOTM, with $19,000,000 of past-due indebtedness of its subsidiaries, most of which was uncollectible, was saddled with an additional $1,261,009 of uncollectibles (Ex. 69, 94, R. 432, 486).

Acquisition of North Texas "Feeder" Lines

The record contains evidence of other examples of financial burdens imposed on NOTM by MOP for the benefit of MOP.

NOTM was compelled to borrow and expend more than five and one-half million dollars to acquire North Texas "feeder" lines * for the benefit of MOP and IGN, and not for NOTM (Ex. 193, 233, R. 662). Some of these "feeder" roads do not even connect with NOTM or any of the Gulf Coast Lines, but tie in only with IGN (Ex. 213, R. 605-606, 678). These lines are on IGN territory on the route to St. Louis. As the maps in the record show, they are many miles to the north and well off the route of the Gulf Coast Lines (Ex. 213, R. 678).

It was recognized, as the Commission found, that these five "feeder" lines "were really acquired for the benefit of

* These include the Asphalt Belt Ry., Asherton & Gulf Ry., the San Antonio Southern Ry., the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Ry. and the Sugar Land Ry.

The cost of the Asphalt Belt Ry. Co. is given as $310,000 and that of the San Antonio Southern Ry. Co. as $600,000 (Ex. 193, 233, R. 662). Book value given to the Asherton & Gulf Ry. Co. securities was $439,000; the San Antonio Uvalde & Gulf Co., $3,038,000 and the Sugar Land Ry. Co., $1,163,000 (Ex. 98, R. 488).

 This had been recognized by the predecessor of respondent, Institutional Group (First Amended Plan of Reorganization, Protective Committee for MOP First and Refunding Bonds, p. 61; R. 20882).

the entire (MOP) system, * * * they have usually been operated at a deficit since acquisition" (Missouri Pacific R. R. Reorganization, 239 I. C. C. 7, 71 (1940)).

Mr. Wyer, himself, pointed out that such roads ran at a loss (R. 873).

The District Court, nevertheless, found that the "record contains no evidence tending to show that" such acquisition was "disadvantageous" to NOTM (R. 10).

Such expenditures for new roads were in addition to the millions of dollars of NOTM funds spent in the acquisition of other Texas roads in NOTM territory (Ex. 98, 193, 233, R. 10, 488, 662).

NOTM'S Inadequate Capitalization

Under the policies imposed by MOP, the resources of NOTM proved inadequate for the conduct of its business.

NOTM's resources were weakened by the $2,475,000 extraordinary dividends in 1924, declared as a part of the deal by which MOP acquired NOTM. Thereafter under MOP control, NOTM was further drained of funds by dividends well in excess of earnings.

In that framework, MOP compelled NOTM to embark on an expansion and improvement program.

In Mr. Wyer's elaborate description of the Baldwin Improvement Program, he made it completely clear that such expansion was as an integral part of the MOP System "which was being built up and expanded in a most unusual way". Mr. Wyer showed that the funds for such expansion were raised solely in "financing cycles" resulting in a tremendous increase in debt (R. 880, 888-896, 930-931).

As long as possible, these loans were refunded by public bond issues, with NOTM total bonded indebtedness climbing from $29,382,000 in 1924 to almost $43,000,000 four years later (Ex. 71, R. 432).

After the spring of 1928, NOTM was no longer able to borrow from the public (R. 1023-1024).* About the same time, NOTM became chronically short of cash working capital. Its need for further borrowing persisted.

Under MOP control, NOTM annual interest charges almost doubled, rising from $1,463,000 in 1925 to $2,685,000 in 1932 (Ex. 99, R. 488). At the same time, NOTM consolidated income declined precipitously from an annual average of $2,400,000 for the years 1924 to 1926 to an average of $230,000 for the years 1927 to 1931 (Ex. 301, R. 914).

Despite NOTM's needs, MOP did not invest one additional penny in NOTM. The shares of NOTM stock acquired by MOP were all purchased from New York bankers or on the market; NOTM received no additional capital.

MOP's Domination of NOTM

The fiscal affairs of NOTM were directed by MOP officers and directors more than 1,000 miles from the nearest area served by NOTM.

The NOTM financial offices were not located in the NOTM main offices in Houston, Texas, but in New York City, in the financial offices of MOP. Subsequently, upon acquisition of MOP by Alleghany, the offices were transferred to Terminal Tower, Cleveland—the headquarters of the Van Sweringen-Alleghany empire (R. 590-597). These were the

---

* This was true not only because of changed market conditions. The NOTM First Mortgage Bond Indenture, in effect, made it impossible to sell any additional first mortgage bonds to the public.

 NOTM year-end cash which had averaged $992,000 during the early years of MOP control (1925 to 1927) dropped sharply to an average of $209,000 from 1929 to 1932 (Ex. 69, R. 432).

offices in which the decisions on NOTM financial matters were made * (R. 892).

Every meeting of the Board and Executive Committee of NOTM and Brownsville  was held in New York City until control passed to Alleghany. After April 29, 1930, meetings were held in Terminal Tower, Cleveland (Ex. 173, 188, R. 617, 638).

It was in the New York offices that "the minutes of the meetings of the various companies, programs for the directors" were prepared. Problems such as whether NOTM was to borrow to pay its dividends, were described as the "requirements in the East" (R. 593-594).

The New York and Cleveland offices were in complete charge of the NOTM treasurer's bank accounts (R. 593).

The MOP officers in New York prepared plans, which were kept in MOP files, as to the programs to be imposed on NOTM. Thus, in 1929, Mr. Wyer, at the direction of the MOP chairman, estimated at the start of the year, the amounts to be lent to NOTM in order to enable NOTM to pay dividends to MOP throughout the year (Ex. 280, R. 896). Mr. Wyer estimated that the "advances required from" MOP would be $1,119,000 and that NOTM's "cash requirements" would include $1,038,000 for dividends. Mr. Wyer introduced this estimate as "typical" of the activities of the MOP New York office (R. 896-898).

The only contact that the NOTM main office in Houston, Texas, had with the NOTM financial office in New York and then Cleveland was through the MOP office at St. Louis (R. 500).

* E.g., the MOP Executive Committee met in New York at 11 A. M. on February 4, 1930. The NOTM Executive Committee met at 11.15 A. M. on the same day in the same place; precisely the same people were present at both meetings (Ex. 151, 152, R. 611-612).

 One Brownsville meeting was held in St. Louis.

Mr. Baldwin, president and operating head * of MOP a NOTM, with offices in Saint Louis, testified that his re tions with the financial offices in the East were:

> "• • • quite indefinite. Largely being a good fell I guess • • •" (R. 597).

Indeed, Mr. Eckert, the NOTM general auditor, not know how the NOTM financial office, in charge of Wyer, even functioned. Mr. Eckert never saw or check the books kept in the NOTM financial office. To the exte these books were checked at all, it was done by MOP vi president, F. P. Johnson, and the MOP St. Louis off (R. 497-502, 590-595). Similarly, Mr. Johnson and MOP St. Louis offices issued the instructions which we followed by the NOTM bookkeeping staff in Houston (499, 1022, 1050-1051).

The long series of letters exchanged between Mr. Ba win in St. Louis and Mr. Safford in Houston with resp to dividends is demonstration of the manner in wh MOP officers determined the NOTM and Brownsville di dend policy (Ex. 120, 123-134, 137-140, R. 579, 581, 5 601, 610-616).

The expansion program imposed on NOTM was a cision by MOP officers as a part of the expansion of MOP system. To these officers, such as Mr. Wyer, NOT had no separate existence; it was "simply a part of Missouri Pacific System" (R. 930).

* The Senate Committee described the operating officials of MOP System as "mere supernumeraries". "Even the highest r road executive realized that they were little more than messeng for the holding (Alleghany) company interests" (Sen. Rep. No. 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 10, p. 30).

Mr. Baldwin acknowledged that Mr. Van Sweringen was "boss", and that when Mr. Van Sweringen gave him orders "always carried them out" (Senate Committee Hearings, sup 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 12, p. 5468).

 Some of the books kept in the eastern financial offices were ne audited by the MOP St. Louis office (Sen. Rep. No. 25, 76th Co 3d Sess., Part 11, pp. 17-18).

To finance this expansion program, NOTM had to borrow large sums. This was the policy determined by MOP, and the form such borrowings took—the financing cycles of Mr. Wyer—was determined by MOP officers and cast in the mold of the financing of the vast increase of the debt of MOP itself (R. 895).

When MOP made advances to NOTM, the same person drew the check as an officer of MOP and endorsed it for deposit as an officer of NOTM (Ex. 83, 239, R. 455, 791).

When NOTM made payments to MOP on the open account, MOP officers decided the allocation between principal and interest. The NOTM books were kept accordingly (R. 1022, 1045, 1050-1051).

The fundamental decision whether funds invested by MOP in NOTM should be denominated "advances" or additional stock was the decision of MOP.

In short, every financial act of NOTM was the act of MOP, and MOP determined the form in which intercorporate financial transactions were recorded on the books.

NOTM Open Account Debts Transmuted into Notes

Until a few weeks before bankruptcy, almost all NOTM "indebtedness" to MOP—whether cash advances or paper transactions—were recorded as open book accounts on the records of MOP. When MOP's financial position became increasingly desperate, and MOP could no longer obtain funds by the sale of additional securities or by borrowing from banks, it sought to obtain loans from the RFC and RCC.

For such loans the RFC and RCC required all the collateral on which MOP could lay its hands. When the bottom of the barrel of available collateral was reached in 1933, MOP arranged for the transmutation into two demand notes of open accounts constituting a large portion, but not all, of the MOP Claim. These notes were signed by Mr. William Wyer, as Treasurer of NOTM, and delivered to himself as Treasurer of MOP (Ex. 51-52, 348-349, R. 406).

The larger of these notes, for $7,456,726, was issued four weeks before bankruptcy. It and the other note *—issued shortly before—were immediately pledged, together with other collateral, by MOP to the RFC and RCC (R. 30, 86). $610,000 of the advances comprising the Claim were never pledged.

In ex parte proceedings, a division of the Commission hurriedly approved the issuance of the larger note, the RFC and RCC loans  and the pledge to the RFC and RCC (Missouri Pacific R. R. Reconstruction Loan, 189 I. C. C. 286, 342, 549; New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Notes, 189 I. C. C. 600 (1933)).

After the District Court decision and before the Circuit Court decision in the instant case, the RFC and RCC claims against MOP were paid, pursuant to Court order, and the RFC and RCC claims and collateral, including the two NOTM notes, were surrendered to the Trustee of MOP (R. 1155, 1164). The findings with respect to the RFC and RCC became moot, and the RFC was stricken as a party to these proceedings † (R. 1348).

Physical Operations of MOP and NOTM

The physical operations of NOTM have no necessary relation to MOP's financial mismanagement. Considerable testimony was, nevertheless, presented by the Institutional Group in the District Court in an effort to demonstrate that the physical condition and operations of NOTM had been improved during the years of MOP control.

* This note had been issued for $2,498,500, the maximum amount permitted without consent of the Commission under Section 20(a) of the Transportation Act.

 This application was submitted on December 23, 1932, and decided January 4, 1933. Only MOP appeared (R. 110). MOP representatives included Mr. Wyer and Mr. Herbert Fitzpatrick, the close friend and adviser of Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 74th Cong., 2nd Sess., Part 2, p. 582).

† The RCC never was a party.

The Institutional Group put in evidence testimony and elaborate exhibits covering the operational history of NOTM from 1907. The District Court's findings were in accordance with such testimony (R. 13-17).

Under MOP control, a great improvement in the physical condition of the road had been achieved. This was paid for by a large increase of NOTM indebtedness (R. 13; Ex. 71, R. 432).

MOP engaged in an ambitious expansion and improvement program lasting from 1923 to 1930. This included the acquisition of the Gulf Coast Lines, IGN, and the Denver & Rio Grande Western, all of which were considered necessary for the strategic development of the MOP System (R. 10-11).

The District Court found that "road and equipment" had been "very substantially improved" (R. 13).

The District Court further found that MOP assistance had enabled the Gulf Coast Lines to maintain their competitive traffic position in the Rio Grande Valley and to reduce the schedule running time from the Rio Grande Valley to St. Louis. Under MOP control, the division of revenue received from perishable freight and arrangements for refrigerator cars improved (R. 14-16). The relation of freight car loadings to that of Class I railroads generally improved. Freight loadings from competitors of MOP declined after 1924. Receipts from MOP and IGN increased (R. 16-17).

Messrs. Rodgers, Kirkpatrick and Brown, witnesses for the Institutional Group, testified that an improvement in traffic and in the condition of locomotives, freight and passenger cars, and road had occurred during this period (R. 814-867, 933-954). Some of this testimony emphasized by the Institutional Group included: an increase in the percentage of creosoted ties, and of the tonnage of new rail laid per annum (although the tonnage of rail relaid declined), and a substantial decrease in the number of locomotive failures per mile (Ex. 249-251, R. 815, 829).

Additions and betterments included new lines and extensions, rail renewal projects, ballasting projects, bridges, trestles and culverts, and new station facilities (Exs. 255, R. 832).

Nature of the Proceedings Below

These proceedings involve the validity and priority of the claim asserted herein by MOP against NOTM. The litigation admittedly involves the first judicial determination of MOP's Claim (R. IV, 20-21). This is not a proceeding brought by NOTM to recover anything from MOP.

In the District Court, petitioner Comstock originally petitioned for leave to file objections to the MOP Claim in the name of the Trustee of NOTM (R. 247). He also filed objections to the then pending MOP Plan; of these, objection No. 19 and related objections repeated the objections to the MOP Claim contained in the first petition (R. 227, 232-233).

Counsel for respondents contended that the issues raised by these two documents of petitioner were identical, and that petitioner should be compelled to litigate his objections to the Claim in connection with the hearings on objections to the Plan (R. 338-339, 365-367). The District Court agreed (R. 367).

The validity and priority of the MOP Claim, attacked in Comstock's Objection No. 19, were thereafter the subject of a hearing by the District Court—separated from the hearings on the Plan of Reorganization—and were determined by a separate order, from which a separate appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals was taken (R. 1, 7, 378). The proceedings were separated so that such separate appeal could be taken (R. 731).

The District Court held that the MOP Claim "should be allowed" and that Comstock's "objection to the claim of the Misouri Pacific against the NOTM should be overruled" (R. 31-34, 1111). The Circuit Court affirmed the District Court, holding that "the claim of Missouri Pacific was properly allowed" (R. IV, 27).

This is litigation * over such orders of allowance and is independent of any particular plan of reorganization.

The litigation over the MOP Plan of Reorganization pending at the time of the hearing on the MOP Claim ran its separate course. The District Court approved the Plan and appeals were taken by various parties to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Respondents herein—such as the Institutional Group and the Alleghany Corporation—who had sponsored the Plan before the Commission and in the District Court abandoned the Plan. They informed the Circuit Court of Appeals that the Plan had become "unfair and inequitable". Together with other parties, they requested its remand to the Commission.

At the suggestion of the Circuit Court, the Commission submitted a brief; it urged the Court to remand the Plan for "reconsideration and revision". The Court did so on September 9, 1947. Wright v. Group of Institutional Investors, 163 F. (2d) 1022 (C. C. A. 8th, 1947).

The Commission has not yet held further hearings on this matter. At the request of the Institutional Group and Alleghany Corporation, such hearings have been twice postponed. Hearings are presently set for March 23, 1948.

The history of this Plan closely followed that of its only predecessor. After approval by the District Court, that plan was also abandoned by its sponsors, including the predecessor of the Institutional Group and at their request, in which others joined, remanded by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. Missouri Pacific R. R. v. Protective Committee, 135 F. (2d) 741 (C. C. A. 8th, 1943).

* There were three other related appeals heard with the instant case before the Circuit Court on a consolidated record. Petition for writs of certiorari in these three cases was also granted on January 12, 1948. These three cases (Nos. 452-454 incl., October Term, 1947) are the subject of a separate brief filed herewith. They relate solely to a procedural question—the name in which the appeal from the District Court order of allowance should be taken.

The Errors Which Petitioner Intends to Urge

Petitioner specifies the following errors * which he intends to urge:

1. The court below erred in holding that the $10,565,227 claim of a parent corporation in reorganization against a dominated subsidiary is valid in its entirety and ranks prior to the claim of public investors, who are secured by the parent's pledge of the subsidiary's common stock, when:

(a) $2,795,000 of the Claim is based on eleven "advances" made by the parent over thirteen consecutive quarters which were matched within one to five days by dividends from the subsidiary to the parent in substantially equivalent amounts, which the subsidiary could not have otherwise paid.

(b) The parent did not permit the subsidiary to devote its earnings to its own needs, but caused the subsidiary to pay to the parent twenty consecutive quarterly dividends in excess of earnings, while the subsidiary was already borrowing heavily for an extensive expansion program.

(c) $1,261,009 of the Claim is based on the parent's write-up of the subsidiary's indebtedness through bookkeeping entries made six months before bankruptcy without the consent or approval of the subsidiary—the consideration for such write-up being the alleged assignment

* There were two issues on which respondents in the Circuit Court of Appeals below sought to dispose of the case without an adjudication on the merits of the MOP Claim. These were (a) laches and (b) the pledge by MOP, since redeemed, of two notes representing a portion of the MOP Claim.

The Circuit Court decided the case on the merits and thus, in our opinion, rejected these grounds. For this reason, we do not deem these grounds as errors of the Court below requiring specification. We refer to these matters only to avoid any possible technical contention by respondents. If any contention be made that such specification is necessary, we request this Court to regard this statement as the specification, if any, which may be required by the rules.

to the subsidiary of uncollectible claims in the same face amount, from which the subsidiary has not received one penny to this day.

(d) Much of the Claim represents funds supplied by the parent to the subsidiary, whose resources were inadequate to enable it to finance an extensive expansion program, after public borrowing became impossible, which funds were denominated by the parent as "advances" and never as additional capital investments.

2. The court below erred in allowing the disputed claim of a parent corporation against a dominated subsidiary, both being in reorganization with the identical trustee, over the challenge of public investors, when the subsidiary has never had the protection of a separate and independent trustee.

POINT I

The MOP Claim must be disallowed.

This Court has made it clear that a claim based on parent-subsidiary transactions is "presumptively fraudulent" and requires "rigorous scrutiny" before allowance.

Corsicana National Bank v. Johnson, 251 U. S. 68, 90 (1919);
Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 306 (1939).

In Pepper v. Litton, this Court, speaking of disallowance of claims of controlling stockholders, stated:

> "* * * Their dealings with the corporation are subjected to rigorous scrutiny and where any of their contracts or engagements with the corporation is challenged the burden is on the * * * [controlling] stockholder not only to prove the good faith of the transaction but also to show its inherent fairness from the viewpoint of the corporation and those interested therein. * * * The essence of the test is whether or not under all the circumstances the transaction carries the earmarks of an arm's length bargain. If it does not, equity will set it aside. * * *" (308 U. S. at 306-307).

The MOP Intercompany Claim cannot survive such a test and must be disallowed.

(a) $2,795,000 of the advances in the MOP Claim were only paper transactions. $2,654,000 of such advances were repaid almost immediately.

$2,795,000 of the "advances" included in the Claim are sums which MOP "advanced" NOTM one day, and received back almost immediately in payments which MOP denominated "dividends". Actually, these paper transactions did not constitute advances. They were mere bookkeeping entries.

These paper transactions arose in eleven out of thirteen quarters from 1928 to 1931, when MOP arranged simultaneous MOP "advances" and NOTM "dividends" of approximately equivalent amounts (see pp. 9-11, supra). In these eleven paper transactions MOP advanced a total of $2,795,000, of which $2,654,000 was repaid almost immediately to MOP in the form of "dividends". Only $141,000 of these bookkeeping transactions may still be deemed open.

One example will suffice to demonstrate the invalidity of a claim based on such matching advances. On February 28, 1930, MOP advanced NOTM $260,000 with which NOTM paid its quarterly dividend of $259,576 one day later. Of such dividend, MOP received about $242,072 (Ex. 75-81, 177, 281, R. 453, 630, 900). MOP, however, does not now make a claim for the $18,000 which was not repaid. MOP now claims the full $260,000 together with interest of approximately $185,000, or a total of $445,000 for an advance of $18,000. MOP is seeking such a return as its reward for its stewardship as a fiduciary.

Good faith is no answer to the foregoing. It cannot validate a defective claim or justify a second repayment.

These facts are undisputed. Respondents' own exhibits and the District Court's findings show the dates and amounts of these "advances" and "dividends" (Ex. 281, R. 19, 900). The Circuit Court of Appeals did not discuss this issue.

The allowance of such a claim would be a repudiation of the salutary test enunciated by this Court in Pepper v. Litton.

Moreover, $825,000 of the foregoing $2,795,000 advances included in the MOP Claim were used for the purpose of paying illegal dividends. As Mr. Wyer admitted, the NOTM 1931 dividends—matching these $825,000 advances—were illegal (R. 296). On pages 8, 13, supra, we have shown that the NOTM 1931 dividends were paid out of capital.*

Advances necessary for the payment of such illegal dividends cannot constitute the basis for a valid claim.

(b) $1,261,009 of the claim represents an invalid write-up.

Among the clearest instances of MOP mismanagement is the bookkeeping transaction in October, 1932, by which MOP, less than six months before bankruptcy, sought to saddle NOTM with a $1,261,009 obligation.

MOP wanted to improve its position by shifting debtors. It was dependent on RFC and RCC loans, and sought to dress up its books (Ex. 221, R. 701).

MOP decreased its claim against IGN, a weak debtor, and increased its claim against NOTM a stronger debtor, by the same amount. As alleged consideration for this write-up, MOP planned to have IGN assign to NOTM certain uncollectible claims belonging to IGN of equal amount. We have already seen on page 17 that these claims were uncollectible.

This was accomplished through a series of bookkeeping and journal entries and without one penny of cash changing hands (Ex. 221-225, 231-232, 240-241, R. 701, 706, 794).

The Record contains no evidence that the directors of NOTM and IGN ever took any corporate action. The Record shows only that the MOP Board of Directors approved this transaction (Ex. 226, 232, R. 706). But it is clear that a corporate resolution by MOP alone is not sufficient to bind either NOTM or IGN.

* The impairment of NOTM capital was even greater by reason of the following. The total of debts due NOTM from Brownsville and other subsidiaries had mounted from $2,680,000 in 1924 to over $16,000,000 by 1931 (Ex. 69, 94, R. 432, 486). These past-due debts, totalling 23% of all NOTM assets by 1931, were nevertheless carried at face value on the NOTM books. If even a modest reserve had been set up, NOTM's book surplus would have disappeared.

Unless the party alleged to have become substituted as the debtor so agrees, there obviously can be no novation.

6 Williston, Contracts (Rev. Ed. 1938), § 1870;
M. K. Goetz Brewing Co. v. Waln, 92 Neb. 614, 139 N. W. 230 (1912).

As the Supreme Court of Nebraska said in the Waln case:

> "It is elementary that, in a case of this kind, there can be no novation unless the party whom (sic) it is asserted assumed and agreed to pay the debt became unconditionally bound to the creditor to pay the debt of the original debtor" (92 Neb. at 620).

Even if formal action had been taken, the legality of this transaction would not be assured because of the domination by MOP. It does not carry "the earmarks of an arm's length bargain" required by Pepper v. Litton.

Respondents urged that NOTM had not been damaged by this transaction because the debts were due from NOTM wholly owned subsidiaries, and on a consolidated basis the Gulf Coast Lines owed not one penny more after the transfer (Institutional Group Brief, C. C. A., p. 23). The District Court found that the transaction had not been shown to have "adversely affected" NOTM (R. 22). The Circuit Court below is silent on this matter.

Such conclusions are irrelevant. The transaction allegedly giving rise to MOP's claim is unenforceable. MOP's claim is, therefore, invalid, irrespective of prejudice to NOTM.

As a fact, NOTM was prejudiced. The whole purpose of the transaction was to increase MOP's claim against NOTM. NOTM—not previously liable for these debts—was to be substituted as debtor for another. NOTM was required to bear the risk of uncollectibility of the IGN claims.

At this time, NOTM already had claims against its subsidiaries in excess of $19,000,000 which were long past due and which it was unable to collect (Ex. 69, 94, 202-205, R. 432, 486, 671-672). This transaction added an additional $1,261,009 to its burden.*

The District Court found that all advances from December, 1931, to bankruptcy were for operating expenses, interest and sinking fund installments (R. 19). There is nothing in this bookkeeping entry, included in the claim as a "cash advance", which even remotely justifies such a characterization.

It is immaterial whether or not Mr. Wyer, common treasurer of MOP and NOTM, may have written this transaction into the respective accounts of the two corporations—in keeping with the practice of making the books of MOP and its subsidiaries agree in every minor detail. As Mr. Justice Roberts said in the Deep Rock case:

> "All the documentary evidence came from the books and records of Standard and Deep Rock * * *. The book entries were made under the direction of Standard's Auditing Department, which supervised the Auditing Department of Deep Rock, and it is not surprising, therefore, that the books of the two companies agree with respect to all items" (306 U. S. at 311).

All we have to do is to substitute MOP for Standard and NOTM for Deep Rock and we have the precise situation of the case at bar.

This saddling transaction is but one example of Mr. Wyer's bookkeeping. We have already seen how MOP and Alleghany engaged in bookkeeping devices to the

* NOTM, moreover, owned all the mortgage bonds of these companies, as well as other large claims against them. These were already uncollectible and the stock of these roads was worthless. An addition of further uncollectible items was of illusory value in improving NOTM's position as a stockholder.

detriment of subsidiaries, e.g., imposition of burdensome contracts and MOP's costly purchases of its own securities at Van Sweringen direction (see pp. 14-15). Mr. Wyer's bookkeeping played a prominent role in these transactions. Before the Senate Committee, Mr. Wyer admitted that such bookkeeping had been false in numerous respects (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 12, pp. 5059-5063, 5079).

President (then Senator) Truman, who was conducting the hearing, replied to a comment by Mr. Wyer: "Mr. Wyer • • • this statement is exactly in line with your bookkeeping. I do not think it conveys the truth • • •" (Id., Part 12, p. 5269).

(c) The balance of the Claim must be disallowed.

As we have seen, almost 40% of the MOP Claim is invalid. This consists of the $2,654,000 of matched advances and dividends, and the $1,261,009 bookkeeping entry. We submit that the balance of the Claim must be disallowed.

The fiduciary parent has the burden of establishing its claim. Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 306 (1939).

Part of the remaining advances were made not for the benefit of NOTM but for the benefit of MOP. For example, MOP caused NOTM to acquire a number of North Texas Lines which the Commission recognized "were really acquired for the benefit of the entire MOP system. They have usually been operated at a deficit since acquisition." Missouri Pacific R. R. Reorganization, 239 ICC 7, 71 (1940). Such roads ran at a loss (R. 873).

Part of the MOP advances were made to cover interest on the NOTM bonds issued to acquire these lines and to cover other operating deficits (R. 19). How much of the balance of the Claim is so attributable is not disclosed. One fact is clear; a substantial part of the balance is attributable thereto.

The entire course of the history of the operation of NOTM as a part of the MOP system makes it impossible to determine on the record how much, if any, of the balance of the Claim is valid. The language of this Court in the Deep Rock case is particularly apposite:

> "It is impossible to recast Deep Rock's history and experience so as even to approximate what would be its financial condition at this day * * * had its fiscal affairs been conducted with an eye single to its own interests." Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307, 323 (1939).

Under all the circumstances, we submit that the entire Claim must be disallowed. To the extent, if any, that the Claim is not disallowed, it must be subordinated as we now proceed to show.

POINT II

The MOP Claim, to the extent, if any, not disallowed, must be subordinated.

Under the decision of this Court in the Deep Rock case, Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939), the MOP Intercompany Claim—to the extent, if any, not disallowed—must be subordinated to the claim of public investors holding MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds.

The question before this Court is whether the Deep Rock doctrine—good law and good morals—is to be whittled away.

The Deep Rock case

Both the parent, Standard, and its dominated subsidiary, Deep Rock, had been in Section 77B proceedings.

Standard asserted a claim against Deep Rock for advances totalling $9,300,000. This claim was resisted by the Deep Rock independent trustee and Deep Rock public preferred stockholders. After prolonged hearings, Standard proposed a compromise. It excluded every questionable item and reduced its claim to $5,000,000, based solely on advances for the undisputed benefit of Deep Rock.

After rejecting one Plan based on this compromise, the District Court allocated most of the new Deep Rock common stock to Standard for its compromise claim, and a small portion of new common to the public preferred stockholders. On appeal by a minority group of preferred stockholders, the Circuit Court affirmed.

This Court reversed, holding that it had been an abuse of discretion to fail to subordinate the entire Standard claim to the claim of the public preferred stockholders. The Court concluded:

> "Deep Rock finds itself bankrupt not only because of the enormous sums it owes Standard but because of the abuses in management due to the paramount interests of interlocking officers and directors in the preservation of Standard's position, as at once proprietor and creditor of Deep Rock" (306 U. S. at 323).

The Commonwealth case

The outstanding application of the Deep Rock doctrine is found in the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. (2d) 734 (C. C. A. 7th, 1944).

In the Commonwealth case, the parent corporation, Inland, owning all the stock of its newly organized subsidiary, Michigan, pledged the stock to secure a public issue of Inland bonds.

Years later, Inland (the parent) went into Section 77B reorganization proceedings. It then had a $620,132 claim against Michigan for advances.

The District Court subordinated the parent's claim to the claim of Inland public bondholders holding the pledged Michigan common stock.

The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed, concluding that:

> "Michigan was under the complete control and domination of Inland; that
>
> it was insufficiently capitalized; that
>
> Inland failed to make provision for sound financing for Michigan's extensive rehabilitation and expansion program; and that
> Michigan, upon the demand of Inland, declared dividends which were paid to Inland by open account borrowings from Inland * * *" (141 F. (2d) at 739).

The Circuit Court of Appeals below did not even refer to the Commonwealth case.

The Principles Underlying Subordination

Subordination was decreed in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases because of the parent's violation of its fiduciary obligations towards the dominated subsidiary. As was stated in the Commonwealth case:

> "* * * Inland, by reason of its entire ownership and control of Michigan, occupied a fiduciary position requiring scrupulous observance of its obligations to safeguard and preserve the interest of Inland Bonds and owed to its bondholders a duty not to impair the value of the Michigan stock * * *. And where there is a violation of those principles, equity will undo the wrong" (141 F. (2d) 734, 736-737).

In both cases, the breach of fiduciary duties arose from the parent's mismanagement of the subsidiary's financial affairs.

(1) Control and Domination of the Subsidiary

In the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases, as in the instant case, the parent's control of the subsidiary stemmed from its ownership of all or almost all the subsidiary's voting stock.

In the Deep Rock case, this Court pointed out how Standard—the parent—implemented its control.

> "Standard's officers, directors and agents always constituted a majority of the Board. * * * A majority of Deep Rock's officers were officers or directors of Standard * * *. All of the fiscal affairs of the debtor were wholly controlled by Standard which was its banker and its sole source of financial aid" (306 U. S. at 310-311).

MOP went even farther. Upon acquisition, MOP officers and directors occupied a large majority on the NOTM Board of Directors, and most NOTM offices. By 1929, MOP directors occupied each place in the NOTM Board and all the principal offices of NOTM (Ex. 5-61, R. 403-406).

NOTM had no independent directors or principal officers. Its every act and decision was the act of MOP.

The character of MOP control has been indicated by the predecessor of the leading respondent, Institutional Group, which stated: "Financial management has been unsatisfactory * * *. Furthermore, the interests which took control of the railroad in 1930 (Alleghany) brought about transactions of doubtful legality, which caused great loss" (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 13, p. 5824 [1939]).

(2) Dividends for Benefit of Parent

Outstanding among the financial mismanagement in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases was the continued insistence upon dividends from the subsidiary for the benefit of the parent.

Dividends and borrowing

In the Deep Rock case, this Court emphasized * as a ground of subordination that:

---

* The Court's language makes inapplicable the cases relating to the legality of the payment of dividends to public stockholders out of isolated borrowings from third persons.

> "* * * dividends were declared in the face of the fact that Deep Rock had not the cash available to pay them and was at the time borrowing in large amounts from * * * Standard. * * *
> "It is evident that they would not have been paid over the long course of years by a company on the precipice of bankruptcy and in dire need of cash working capital" (306 U. S. at 317, 323).

The Commonwealth case also involved dividends siphoned from a subsidiary lacking cash and already borrowing large amounts. The technique in the Commonwealth case of matching simultaneous loans from the parent with dividends to the parent finds a striking parallel in the instant case.

Thus, in both the Commonwealth case and the instant case, the parents—Inland and MOP—made "advances", quarter in and quarter out through 1929, 1930 and 1931, to their respective subsidiaries on one day which were matched by "dividends" to the parents in relatively equivalent amounts a few days later.

In the Commonwealth case, this bookkeeping matching occurred as follows:

Amount of Advance	Date of Advance	Payment of Dividend	Amount of Dividend
$29,576	June 25, 1929	5 days later	$29,576
29,576	Sept. 26, 1929	4 days later	29,576
60,000	Jan. 6, 1930	6 days before	51,844
8,000	June 25, 1930	5 days later	7,663
40,000	Oct. 9, 1930	9 days before	38,313
59,000	Mar. 25, 1931	6 days later	34,000
40,000	June 20, 1931	10 days before	34,000
45,000	Sept. 24, 1931	5 days later	34,000
25,000	Dec. 26, 1931	5 days later	34,000
82,500*	Mar. 30, 1932	1 day later	34,000

(S. E. C. Ex. 28, Commonwealth Record, C. C. A. 7th, Vol. II, pp. 985-7.)

* This item bears a notation also referring to bond interest.

On page 10, supra, appears a chart of almost simultaneous MOP advances and NOTM dividends in relatively equivalent amounts. Language cannot state more emphatically than these two charts the parallel between the Commonwealth case and the instant case.

If MOP or Inland had not made these advances, cash payment of the dividends would have been impossible. The same condition existed in the Deep Rock case. NOTM, Michigan and Deep Rock did not have the funds (Ex. 75-79, R. 453; S. E. C. Ex. 28, Commonwealth Record, C. C. A. 7th, Vol. II, p. 986; 306 U. S. at 317, 323).

S.E.C. policy on matching loans and dividends

The S.E.C. condemned such matching loans and dividends in the Commonwealth case.

In its subsequent decision in the Indiana Service case, the S.E.C. again attacked a claim of a parent for loans to a dominated subsidiary, matched by almost simultaneous dividends to the parent. The S.E.C. stated in language strikingly applicable to the case at bar:

> "While some of the loans made by Utilities (the parent) to Indiana Service were more or less contemporaneous with the preferred and common stock dividend payment dates, Utilities (the parent) states that there is no evidence that such advances were made in whole or in part for dividend purposes.
> "• • • We think it is fairly obvious that the loans made to Indiana Service (the subsidiary) concurrently with the payment of common stock dividends to Utilities when Indiana Service was in need of funds for other purposes were for the purpose of converting earned surplus to notes payable. On the basis of the foregoing, we would have no difficulty in finding a proper basis for subordination. • • •" (In re Indiana Service Corporation, S.E.C. Holding Company Act Release No. 7054, December 14, 1946, pp. 33-4).

Ratio of dividends to earnings

In the Deep Rock case, the dividends condemned by this Court as requiring subordination totalled less than 60% of Deep Rock earnings (Deep Rock Record, Sup. Ct., Vol. II, pp. 649-50).

In the Commonwealth case, the Court criticized dividends of 80% of earnings.

The situation in the case at bar is even stronger. During the entire period of MOP control, NOTM was caused to declare dividends of over 133% of its own earnings, and over 130% of consolidated earnings (Ex. 195, 301, R. 663, 914).

From 1927 to bankruptcy, NOTM dividends exceeded consolidated NOTM earnings in each and every year. Such NOTM dividends totalled $5,190,000 or over 450% of the $1,150,000 consolidated earnings for these dividend years (Ex. 301, R. 914).

By compelling NOTM to pay dividends well in excess of earnings, MOP actually decreased its investment in NOTM and prejudiced the equity of the pledged stock, in violation of the provisions of the MOP 5¼% Secured Bond Trust Indenture.*

Dividends paid while subsidiary borrowing for an expansion program

In the Commonwealth case, the Court emphasized the wrongfulness of compelling dividends "at a time when Michigan (the subsidiary) was engaged in an extensive rehabilitation and improvement program which it was unable to finance out of its own income * * *" (141 F. [2d] at 738).

* Article V of such Trust Indenture provided:

"(m) The Railroad Company (MOP) will not do or perform, or voluntarily permit to be done or performed, any act or thing by which the validity or priority of this indenture and pledge hereunder of the Pledged Stock, as herein provided, can or may be in any way or manner impeached" (R. 12).

The Deep Rock case also makes it clear that such dividends by a subsidiary are wrongful when the subsidiary is already borrowing to maintain its operations and an expansion program (306 U. S. at 317).

NOTM, likewise, was caused by MOP to pay dividends when it was already borrowing for an expansion and improvement program directed by MOP.

Compulsory dividends while borrowing for expansion are especially detrimental to the subsidiary. It is prevented from devoting earnings to the expansion program which is straining its resources. Its dependence on borrowed funds is increased.

Not only was MOP's conduct more improper in this respect than that of Standard and Inland, but the 1931 NOTM dividends were actually illegal (R. 296).

This Court made it clear that dividends were wrongful when detrimental to the subsidiary, whether or not they are illegal.

> "Whatever may be the fact as to the legality of such dividends judged by the balance sheets and earnings statements of Deep Rock, it is evident that they would not have been paid over a long course of years by a company on the precipice of bankruptcy and in dire need of cash working capital" (306 U. S. at 323).

Respondents urged in the court below that petitioner cannot be heard to complain because a fraction of the NOTM dividends may have helped MOP to pay interest on the 5¼% Secured Bonds. This is immaterial. This precise situation existed in the Commonwealth case, and did not prevent subordination. Moreover, in the Deep Rock case itself, the millions of dollars of dividends on the preferred stock, cited by the Court as an outstanding example of Standard mismanagement, were paid not indirectly but directly to the very class of holders which later successfully sought subordination of the Standard claim.

(3) Inadequate Capitalization and Unsound Financing for Expansion

Among the elements of the financial mismanagement in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases was the parent's policy of running the subsidiary without resources adequate for the conduct of its business. Such inadequacy of capitalization compelled the continued advances from the parent that marks those two cases and the case at bar. Advances under such circumstances do not attain the status of a debt, prior to the claim of public investors, in the event of reorganization.

Under Standard control, the financial resources of Deep Rock were not adequate, although its original financing provided $6,700,000 cash working capital. Deep Rock was forced to borrow constantly.

This Court made it clear that such continued necessity to borrow was what it meant by inadequate capitalization. It stated:

> "* * * So inadequate was Deep Rock's capitalization that, in the period from organization to 1926, the balance due on open account to Standard grew to more than $14,800,000" (306 U. S. at 315).

The resources of Michigan were also inadequate. Its financial history consisted of a dreary cycle of bank loans and advances from its parent (Inland) which in turn were refunded as long as possible by public security issues. Michigan's publicly held bonds and preferred stock increased. Michigan's cash position was weak and its open account indebtedness to Inland mounted.

Under MOP control, NOTM also suffered from insufficient capitalization. Its dependence on borrowed funds had been intensified by the very transaction by which MOP acquired NOTM, compelling NOTM to borrow to pay the large dividends constituting a portion of the purchase price. Thereafter NOTM was forced to borrow continuously and heavily (Ex. 281, R. 900).

From 1924 to 1928, these sums were raised by public bond issues, increasing NOTM total bonded indebtedness by $13,500,000 or 46% in four years (Ex. 71, R. 432).

After the spring of 1928, NOTM was no longer able to borrow from the public (R. 1023-1024). It could only borrow from MOP and its open account debt to MOP rose steadily (Ex. 239, R. 791). Such NOTM borrowings from MOP ranged from $2,610,000 in 1929, one of the few years in which NOTM showed net earnings, to $1,400,000 in 1930, and almost $3,000,000 in both 1931 and 1932. Such repeated borrowing in good years and bad demonstrated MOP's failure to provide NOTM with sufficient capital to conduct its business (Ex. 281, R. 900).

Mr. Wyer himself stressed that the program imposed on NOTM "required intensive financing with outside capital or new capital" and that the MOP policy was to raise such capital not through additional equity investment, but through "short term loans and ultimately the sale of debt" (R. 930). Thus, in Mr. Wyer's own words, we have a vivid picture of NOTM's lack of resources and MOP's refusal to make any additional equity investment.

In contrast, both Standard and Inland made additional stock investments in their respective subsidiaries. Thus, Standard took additional Deep Rock common stock as payment for advances to Deep Rock totalling more than twice its later claim. Similarly, Inland surrendered advances equal to almost three-quarters of its subsequent claim for additional Michigan common stock.

(4) Other Aspects of Financial Mismanagement

In each of these three cases, the exploitation of the subsidiary was prompted by the needs of the holding company systems of which parent and subsidiary alike were part.

In the Commonwealth case, the parent—Inland—was draining funds from Michigan as a result of the pressure from its parent, a holding company, in the Insull Utility Empire. The Deep Rock case arose out of another utility empire, that of H. M. Byllesby & Co.

As we have seen, the bulk of the MOP Claim arose during the period of Alleghany control of MOP.

The Commission has aptly summarized the type of pressure * exerted by Alleghany. It stated that Alleghany:

> "* * * for its own purposes caused or permitted carrier corporations which it controlled to pay dividends when they were not being earned, or to pay dividends when they were under a heavy burden of debt, when traffic was declining, and earnings were decreasing, notwithstanding scrimping of maintenance." Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Purchase, 261 I. C. C. 239, 255 (1945).

Such mismanagement of NOTM was not restricted to wrongful dividends, lack of adequate resources to conduct its business and failure to provide sound financing for the expansion program.

* The Senate Committee reported on one instance of such pressure as follows:

"Less than half a year after it had procured control of the Missouri Pacific system, Alleghany Corporation * * * used funds from the treasury of the Missouri Pacific itself to purchase Missouri Pacific stocks and the bonds of a Missouri Pacific subsidiary.

"* * * For a year and a half the ownership of the purchased securities was kept in suspense * * *. Thus, if they appreciated in value, the Van Sweringens were free to assign them to a company in which they had a large personal interest; while if the securities declined in value, they could be assigned to a company in which the Van Sweringen interest was attenuated. The securities in fact declined in value; and the Van Sweringens thereafter insisted that they had been purchased for the account of a Missouri Pacific subsidiary * * *.

"To keep the transaction secret a variety of devices was used. * * * the president of the railroad was not informed of the program until it was nearly completed; and the companies engaged in the operations repeatedly and consistently falsified their books.

"* * * On the basis of the false accounting, false reports were submitted to several State public service commissions and to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Material information was withheld from the Interstate Commerce Commission and from the Federal bankruptcy court.

"* * * The Missouri Pacific paid some $4,000,000 for securities, now worth virtually nothing at all to it. Transactions like these helped bring about the insolvency of the railroad" (Sen. Rep. No. 25, Part 11, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., p. 34).

As previously set forth on pages 16-18, the Claim itself is based in part on the invalid bookkeeping transaction, less than six months before bankruptcy, by which MOP wrote up the indebtedness of NOTM by $1,261,009.

A further instance is the expenditure of five and one-half million dollars of NOTM funds for the acquisition of North Texas "feeder" lines for the benefit of MOP and IGN, not that of NOTM, referred to on pages 18-19.

We repeat the language of this Court in the Deep Rock case:

> "It is impossible to recast Deep Rock's history and experience so as even to approximate * * * its financial condition * * * had it been adequately capitalized and independently managed and had its fiscal affairs been conducted with an eye single to its own interests" (306 U. S. at 323).

Unlike the Deep Rock Case, the MOP Claim Is Itself Defective

In the Deep Rock case, every questionable transaction had been eliminated from the Standard claim. This Court, nevertheless, insisted on subordination of its claim consisting solely of undisputed advances for the benefit of Deep Rock.

In the instant case, the MOP Claim is itself defective. As we have seen, it is composed in large measure of illegal and unenforceable items, and must be disallowed in its entirety. To the extent, if any, that the claim is not disallowed, the application of the doctrine of subordination is all the more compelling.

Respondents contended on two grounds that the Deep Rock doctrine is inapplicable in the instant case: (a) the operational benefits to NOTM, and (b) the findings of the Commission.

Operational Benefits No Bar to Subordination

Respondents contended below that the Deep Rock doctrine was inapplicable because of the operational benefits received by NOTM under MOP ownership. These factors, however, are irrelevant.

All these alleged benefits cannot purify one wrongful dividend. This proposition should be obvious. Any other conclusion would create a new principle in our law that the general conduct or good faith of a fiduciary will excuse specific breaches of its fiduciary obligations.

The Baldwin Improvement Program need not have been affected one iota, if not a single dividend was paid by NOTM to MOP. Not one rail less would have been laid nor one trestle less would have been constructed.

Both the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases make it clear that operational benefits do not prevent subordination.

In the Deep Rock case, there was evidence of a considerable physical improvement of Deep Rock. Additional oil properties were acquired and extensions erected for the benefit of Deep Rock (306 U. S. at 317, 319). In 1927 alone, Deep Rock improvements and additions amounted to more than $2,700,000 and in 1928 alone more than $1,700,000 (Deep Rock Record, Sup. Ct., Vol. III, pp. 106, 108; Trustee's Exs. H, I).

Similarly, in the Commonwealth case, there was not one allegation of operational mismanagement. It was not disputed that Michigan had received substantial operational benefits from the Inland "extensive rehabilitation and expansion program". The proponents of the Inland claim strongly argued that the Deep Rock doctrine could therefore not be applied (Middle West Corp. and Bachrach Brief, C. C. A., p. 27). The Circuit Court of Appeals rejected that argument.

Respondents also argued that if MOP had intended to mismanage NOTM, it could have more easily achieved its results through its dealings with NOTM in respect to maintenance, rentals, and traffic (Institutional Group Brief, C. C. A., p. 15). This very type of argument was made in the Commonwealth case. It was argued there that Inland's lack of exploitation of Michigan was demonstrated by the fact it had not despoiled Michigan through unfair leases, management fees, and intercompany security sales (Middle West Corp. Reply Brief, C. C. A., p. 5). This argument was rejected there and should be rejected here.

In any event, the Baldwin-Safford correspondence discloses MOP's primary interest in drawing off dividends from NOTM, not in improving the physical condition of NOTM. Thus, Mr. Safford acknowledged that maintenance and improvement expenditures had been cut to the "irreducible minimum" in an attempt to make possible the continued flow of dividends to MOP (Ex. 135-137, R. 601). (See page 12.)

The Findings of the Commission

Respondents sought below to distinguish the Deep Rock case on the ground that Division 4 of the Commission prior to bankruptcy had made certain findings with respect to the MOP advances (Institutional Group Brief, C. C. A., p. 55). Both the District Court and the Circuit Court relied on such Commission findings (R. 1110, R. IV, 16).

No significance may properly be given to such findings. The fact is that the Commission itself, in considering the MOP Plan of Reorganization gave no weight to the hasty and ex parte findings of Division 4.

The Commission itself said that the determination of the validity of the claim is a matter "for litigation in the Courts" (R. 20842).

An independent judicial determination of the validity and priority of the MOP Claim must be made.

Ecker v. Western Pacific R. R., 318 U. S. 448, 479 (1943);

American United Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Avon Park, 311 U. S. 138, 145-146 (1940).

The Division 4 decision was reached on the basis of financial statements sworn to by Mr. Wyer and criticized by the late Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman and other officials (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 74th Cong., 2nd Sess., Part 2, p. 544 (1938); 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 3, pp. 1116, 1139 [1938]).

The Commission regarded such criticized financial statements of Mr. Wyer as of sufficient importance to be called to the attention of the Congress in its annual report four years later; it stated:

> "The Alleghany Corporation is a holding company which had stock control of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and through a subsidiary purchased certain terminal-railway properties. * * * That railroad company contracted to purchase the properties from the subsidiary subject to our approval, but it made certain payments on the purchase price in advance of such approval and under the contracts it was liable either on the purchase price or as a guarantor against damage in the event of our disapproval for not less than $16,000,000. This liability was not shown in the annual reports filed with us * * *, and in these reports $3,200,000 * * * was shown in * * * 'Special deposits', although it had been paid out and was not on deposit. * * * In connection with applications of the Missouri Pacific for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, balance sheets which failed to disclose the liability under the contracts and included the payments in 'Special deposits' were filed with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and with us and were sworn to by the treasurer of the railroad company. Furthermore, in connection with an application by the latter for authority to issue securities we asked for a breakdown of an estimate of needed capital expenditures, and in a statement filed by the same officer a proposed payment under the above mentioned contracts was included in a total for 'Additions and betterments'. * * *
>
> "As stated above, these are merely illustrations of incorrect and misleading reports out of several disclosed at the hearing."

(51st Commission Annual Report (1937), pp. 27, 28.)

The treasurer above referred to was Mr. Wyer. The MOP applications for RFC loans above referred to are the applications which resulted in the findings on which the Courts below relied.

In the "Terminal Shares" matter in this reorganization, referred to immediately above, the late Judge Faris condemned the management of Alleghany and MOP*; he stated:

> "* * * For me it is plain that the Congress intended to stop a practice among railroads and their exploiters and manipulators, which has had much to do with making the financial history of railroads the most indecent and sordid chapter ever written in the history of this or any other nation." (In re Missouri Pacific R. R. Co., 13 F. Supp. 888, 892 [E. D. Mo., 1935]).

The District Court below said that it was "impressed by the fact that almost all of the transactions of which Comstock complains were entered into only after notice to, and with the approval of, the Interstate Commerce Commission" (R. 1110). This statement is without support. The matching of "advances" and dividends, the 1932 saddling transaction, the Brownsville dividends of 1931, which the Commission itself held to be in violation of regulations, and other instances of MOP mismanagement were all imposed on NOTM without notice to the Commission or its approval.

Damage to 5¼% Secured Bondholders

The Circuit Court was influenced to conclude that the Deep Rock doctrine was inapplicable by the fact that the

---

* This arose on the application of the RFC—then a claimant—to require the MOP Trustee to disavow or rescind what Judge Faris subsequently found to be "improvident, unfair, unlawful and overreaching" contracts imposed on MOP by Alleghany.

The RFC application and brief attacked both Alleghany and Mr. Wyer's testimony in support of such contracts (RFC Brief before Special Master, pp. 66, 77-78).

NOTM stock "has been kept intact and of recognized value through depressions which wiped out vast amounts of such securities" (R. IV, 27).

In the Commonwealth case, however, subordination was decreed although the subsidiary—Michigan—never went into reorganization and although Michigan stock was then being sold for over $1,000,000.

The injury to the 5¼% Secured Bondholders by MOP mismanagement is manifest. MOP's wrongful conduct has unquestionably diminished the size of the NOTM estate and impaired the value of NOTM stock which constitutes the security of such bonds. Such conduct is not cured by the fact that NOTM stock has not been "wiped out".

In the case at bar, the fiduciary parent determined the form and substance of the financial dealings between the parent and the dominated subsidiary. No independent Board of Directors of the subsidiary, NOTM, would have consented to such transactions or undertaken the financial obligations which compose the MOP Claim in suit. MOP, now in bankruptcy proceedings, seeks to insert its claim ahead of the claims of the public investors who claim through NOTM. Under such circumstances, we submit, the MOP Claim must be subordinated.

The decision of the Court below seriously limits the protection extended to public investors by the Deep Rock doctrine. That doctrine should not be impaired.

POINT III

Alleged insolvency of MOP and the fact that the public investors are claiming through NOTM common stock do not prevent subordination of the MOP Claim.

Nothing in the instant case prevents application of the doctrine of subordination.

(a) Parental insolvency and competing creditors

The District Court held that the Deep Rock doctrine could not be applied to the case at bar. This was on the theory that MOP was insolvent, and that innocent MOP creditors, asserting its claim, could not be held responsible for MOP's wrongdoing (R. 1111).

This contention has been rejected in both the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases.

In the Deep Rock case, as the Circuit Court for the Tenth Circuit pointed out, the parent—Standard—was in Section 77B proceedings.

> Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 96 F. (2d) 693, 700 (C. C. A. 10th, 1938).

The advocates of the Standard claim argued before this Court that the Standard claim could, therefore, not be subordinated.* This Court disagreed.

The Commonwealth case arose in the reorganization proceedings of the insolvent parent. The parent's creditors vigorously argued that subordination would work to their prejudice, and was therefore inapplicable. The Seventh Circuit squarely rejected the contention, and subordinated the insolvent parent's claim.

Subordination, despite parental insolvency, has similarly been decreed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

* Standard Brief, Supreme Court, p. 60; id., p. iii, 40.

In re Kentucky Wagon Mfg. Co., 71 F. (2d) 802 (C. C. A. 6th, 1934), cert. denied sub. nom. Laurent v. Stites, 293 U. S. 612 (1934).

The contrary contention that the doctrine of subordination is inapplicable in the event of parental insolvency is based on the equitable maxim of equality between equally innocent creditors. This contention necessarily presupposes an undisputed claim where the sole basis for subordination is the parent's inequitable conduct outside the claim. Further, the contention is that the only basis for subordination disappears when the undisputed claim is asserted by blameless creditors rather than by the wrongdoing parent.

This contention cannot be raised in the case at bar because the MOP Claim is not an undisputed claim. The MOP Claim is itself, in large measure, composed of inequitable and unenforceable transactions. Such defects and infirmities remain whether wrongdoing MOP or its innocent creditors seek to assert the tainted claim.

Even if a portion of the MOP Claim should rest on undisputed advances, the Deep Rock case makes it clear that the Court will not attempt to separate the components of the Claim. It will not reconstruct the subsidiary's financial position, to determine what it would have been "had its fiscal affairs been conducted with an eye single to its own interests". To attempt to do so, would tend to destroy the Deep Rock doctrine, a salutary standard for the conduct of business by fiduciary parent corporations.

The insolvent parent's alleged claim is an asset of the insolvent to which creditors, represented by the bankruptcy trustee, succeed. With respect to this possible asset, as to others, the parent's creditors succeed to the rights of the parent and no more. It is settled that they are not in the position of an innocent purchaser for value; they remain subject to the equities under which the insolvent held the claim.

Zartman v. First National Bank, 216 U. S. 134 (1910);
National Bankruptcy Act, § 70;
2 Scott, Trusts, § 307.

(b) Public investors claiming through common stock

The fact that the public investors urging subordination are claiming through NOTM common stock, cannot prevent application of the doctrine of subordination.

The public investors in the case at bar had no voice in management. NOTM was the instrument of MOP. Indeed, MOP, prior to default, retained all voting rights on the stock pledged to secure the MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds (R. 11).

MOP clearly occupied a fiduciary position with respect to NOTM as a result of its overwhelming stock ownership and the complete domination of its affairs.

MOP further stood in a fiduciary relationship to the holders of MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds as a result of its pledge of NOTM stock to secure such bonds, and its express undertaking, in the MOP 5¼% Secured Bond Trust Indenture, not to impeach the pledge (R. 12). The Courts below so found (R. IV-19).

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in the Commonwealth case, at the urging of the S.E.C., thus decreed subordination in this very situation.

There is, to be sure, a certain mechanical problem in the allocation of new securities, where a parent's claim is subordinated to public investors claiming through the subsidiary's common stock, i.e., what is the extent of the claim of the common stockholder?

In the instant case, however, this mechanical problem does not arise. The public investors—pledgees of common stock—are bondholders with a clearly defined claim for principal and accrued interest on their bonds.

POINT IV

The MOP Claim may not be allowed in the absence of an independent NOTM trustee.

MOP and NOTM have one Trustee, Mr. Guy A. Thompson. This Trustee patently has conflicting loyalties. The performance of his duties as Trustee of MOP in pressing the MOP Claim inescapably clashes with his statutory duty as Trustee of NOTM to resist the Claim (Sec. 47a (8), National Bankruptcy Act). This conflict of interest has deprived NOTM of the full protection to which it is entitled by law, just as much as if it arose from opposing personal financial interests.

See 2 Scott, Trusts, § 170.23.

A conflict of interest on the part of the trustee was condemned by Mr. Justice Van Devanter, who as a Circuit Judge, stated:

> "* * * the trustee's action (in not contesting a claim) was accorded undue consideration, when it is considered that * * * he was represented and presumably advised by counsel who was also representing the creditor whose claim was challenged. Of course, this ought not to have been, no matter what may have been the belief of counsel respecting its propriety. The interests of the creditors were adverse to the bankrupt estate, with the protection of which the trustee was charged, and were in conflict with the interests of others who were represented by the trustee."
>
> In re Stern, 144 Fed. 956, 959 (C. C. A. 8th, 1906).

This principle applies no less to the instant case.

Judge Learned Hand has stated that a conflict in interest in reorganization proceedings on the part of a trustee may not be tolerated.

> Dudley v. Mealey, 147 F. (2d) 268, 272 (C. C. A. 2d, 1945), cert. denied, 325 U. S. 873 (1945).

The Circuit Court of Appeals in the Ninth Circuit held so as well.

Wilson v. Continental Building & Loan Assn., 232 Fed. 824 (C. C. A. 9th, 1916).

But cf.

In re Chicago R. I. & P. Ry., 110 F. (2d) 395 (C. C. A. 7th, 1940).

The lack of an independent NOTM Trustee was especially harmful since the MOP Claim involved parent-subsidiary transactions, which, as we have seen, require vigorous judicial scrutiny before allowance.

Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 306 (1939).

The type of scrutiny required has been indicated by a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

In re Central States Electric Corp., 143 F. (2d) 684 (C. C. A. 4th, 1944).

That Court insisted upon:

> "* * * an investigation of the most complete and thorough-going character, with opportunity to examine under oath those who had knowledge of the corporation's affairs * * * to the end that all the processes of discovery provided by law might be fully used" (143 F. (2d) at 686).

The failure of the NOTM Trustee to oppose the MOP Claim has not been offset by the efforts of petitioner and other public bondholders. Resources available to a trustee for the purpose of investigation obviously are superior to those at the command of scattered public investors. As the accountant for petitioner testified:

> "Mr. Thompson (the trustee) directed me to * * * Mr. Vollmer * (who) * * * stated that they would make records available, but I was not to ask any questions of any of the employees: * * * any direct questioning would have to be done in court" (R. 495).

This is far from the "opportunity to examine under oath" and the full use of "all the processes of discovery provided by law" stressed in the Central States Electric case.

Moreover, in the MOP reorganization, the character of MOP management and the existence of the Trustee's conflict of interest had already been the subject of formal proceedings in the District Court.

The NOTM Bondholders Committee—one of the respondents herein—and the Indenture Trustee of NOTM Bonds had previously filed petitions for the appointment of a separate Trustee for NOTM because of Mr. Thompson's conflict. Such petitions pointed out, among other things, that MOP—instead of having a claim against NOTM—was really indebted to NOTM (R. 87, 101). Hearings on the petitions are still pending (R. 109).

As we have seen, Judge Faris, then in charge of the MOP reorganization, had previously set aside the "improvident, unfair, unlawful and overreaching" Terminal Shares contracts imposed on MOP by Alleghany.

In these proceedings, furthermore, Guaranty Trust Co., which was indenture trustee of two classes of MOP securities, resigned one of its two important trusteeships because of the possibility that a conflict of interest might develop. It sought to avoid the possibility that as trustee for one group of beneficiaries it might be opposing itself as trustee for another (Senate Committee Hearings, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., Part 15, pp. 6671-6672).

* Mr. Vollmer was Executive Assistant to the Trustee (Ex. 56, R. 406).

With this background, the need for an independent trustee of NOTM and for a vigorous scrutiny of the MOP Claim were especially clear.

The common Trustee in the case at bar indicated in the District Court that he did not feel the MOP Claim was especially important; he testified that he always thought that the Claim was "washed out in the Plan, and would be washed out in any Plan" (R. 645). Accordingly, he did not announce whether or not he regarded the MOP Claim as valid until some time after the hearings had commenced in the District Court (R. 646). Previously during the hearings, the Trustee's counsel, who had served in that capacity for many years, was unable to tell the Court the Trustee's attitude on the Claim (R. 392-393).

To permit the validity of the Intercompany Claim of MOP, a fiduciary, to be established in such circumstances, is to deny to NOTM the protection to which it is entitled.

POINT V

An Adjudication on the Merits of the MOP Claim Is Necessary.

Respondents maintained in the Court below that this case may be disposed of on either of two separate grounds without an adjudication on the merits of the MOP Claim. These alleged grounds are:

(a) laches; and

(b) the MOP pledge, since redeemed, to the RFC and RCC of two NOTM notes representing a portion of, but not the entire MOP Claim.

(a) Laches

The Circuit Court opinion demonstrates that laches may not be invoked in this case.

The Circuit Court pointed out that although the District Court had expressed an opinion as to laches, the District Court

> "concluded that judicial adjudication should be made as to the debt and that the court should, and therefore it did, hear the evidence covering the whole period of management of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific, and it tried out the whole case and all the charges presented by Comstock on the merits." (R. IV, 21)

Similarly, the Circuit Court of Appeals gave no weight to the contention of laches and adjudicated the MOP Claim on the merits.

This was the first adjudication of the claim.

This Court has held that such a determination of the validity and priority of the Claim is indispensable for the purposes of the reorganization.

> Ecker v. Western Pacific R. R., 318 U. S. 448, 479 (1943);
> American United Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Avon Park, 311 U. S. 138, 145 (1940).

Without such an adjudication, allocations of new securities—a prerequisite to reorganization—cannot be made.

As the Circuit Court indicated, laches, accordingly, plays no role in the instant case.

(b) MOP's Pledge of the NOTM Notes

Respondents also seek wholly to avoid an adjudication on the merits by reliance on the legal consequences which they would draw from the one-time MOP pledge, since redeemed, of two NOTM notes representing a portion, but not the entire MOP Claim.

The District Court expressly found that only a portion of the $10,565,227 Claim was pledged to the RFC and RCC (R. 19-21). Thus, whatever the legal consequences attributed to the pledge, an adjudication on the merits of the validity and priority of the sizable portion of the MOP Claim which was never pledged cannot be avoided. This, of itself, is a complete answer to respondents' contention.

The former pledge to the RFC and RCC does not even dispose of that portion of the Claim represented by the heretofore pledged NOTM notes. This is elementary Bills and Notes law.

(1) As between the maker (NOTM) and the payee (MOP) of these notes, it is clear that all questions with regard to the transactions surrounding their issuance remain open for determination, irrespective of transfer to a holder in due course or otherwise.

Metropolitan Elevated Ry. v. Kneeland, 120 N. Y. 134, 24 N. E. 381 (1890).
Gates v. Ritchie, 162 Ark. 484, 258 S. W. 397 (1924).

(2) Subsequent to the decision of the District Court in this case, the notes were reacquired by the payee, MOP, through its trustee, which is again the holder (R. 1155). It is settled that a payee reacquiring an instrument—even from a holder in due course—is subject to all the equities and defenses of the maker.

Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law, Sec. 58.*

(3) The RFC and RCC are no longer in the case. The District Court's findings with respect to their position have become moot.

At present no MOP creditor has succeeded to any of their rights. The District Court order, authorizing payment of the RFC and RCC, only subrogated MOP creditors to the rights of the RFC and RCC "to the extent of their respective interests, if any, in the cash used in the purchase of" the RFC and RCC claims (R. 1157, 1165). The District Court to this date has not determined whether respondents or any other MOP creditors had an interest in such cash. Until such determination is made, no creditor can be said to have any interest in the NOTM notes.

Accordingly, it is understandable why the Circuit Court did not regard the legal consequences of the MOP pledge as of sufficient importance to merit discussion.

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully submitted that the order and judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit be reversed and the cause be remanded with directions that the MOP Claim be disallowed or subordinated to the claims of the holders of MOP 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds.

PETITIONERS' BRIEF

Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Section 240(a) of the Judicial Code, as amended. Petition for writs of certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit was granted on January 12, 1948.

The Opinions of the Courts Below

The opinion of the District Court (R. 1089)* is reported in 64 F. Supp. 64. The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit (R. IV-29) is reported in 163 F. (2d) 358.

Summary Statement of the Case

There were four related appeals before the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in the litigation over the validity and priority of the claim of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. (hereinafter called MOP) against the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called NOTM).

Three of these appeals were from Order No. 2604-A of the District Court below, which allowed the MOP Intercompany Claim and overruled objections relating thereto (R. 7). These three appeals were as follows:

(a) in the name of Andrew W. Comstock (Appeal No. 13,376, now Cause No. 451)

---

* References to the transcript of the record are indicated by the letter "R." except for Volume IV thereof which is indicated by "R. IV". Arabic numerals indicate pages.

(b) in the name of NOTM, by Comstock (Appeal No. 13,377, now Cause No. 452)

(c) in the name of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of NOTM, by Comstock (Appeal No. 13,378, now Cause No. 453).

The fourth appeal was that of Comstock in his own name from a subsequent order of the District Court (R. 39) denying his petition for leave to appeal from Order No. 2604-A in the name of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of NOTM (Appeal No. 13,379, now Cause No. 454).

The Circuit Court of Appeals considered Appeal No. 13,376 taken by Comstock in his own name from Order No. 2604-A, and affirmed such order on the merits. This is Cause No. 451 in which this Court granted certiorari on January 12, 1948. The annexed brief relates to this cause.

The Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed the remaining three appeals (Nos. 13,377-79, Causes No. 452-4).

This brief relates to these three causes. In support thereof, we rely also on the annexed brief which is hereby incorporated by reference.

These three causes have been maintained for but one purpose. Petitioners seek an adjudication on the merits of the validity and priority of the MOP Intercompany Claim.

It is desired to eliminate from the litigation any possible procedural question as to whether Comstock should have appealed from the order of allowance of the MOP Intercompany Claim in the name of NOTM or in the name of the Trustee of NOTM rather than in his own.

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully submitted that the orders and judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit be reversed and the cause be remanded with directions that the MOP Claim be disallowed or subordinated to the claims of the holders of MOP 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM H. BIGGS,
Attorney for Petitioners,
Security Building,
St. Louis 2, Missouri.

OCTOBER TERM, 1947

No. 451

ANDREW W. COMSTOCK, a holder of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds, on behalf of himself and others holding upward of $900,000 principal amount of said bonds,

Petitioner,

vs.

GROUP OF INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS, holding First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, et al.,

Respondents.

PETITIONER'S REPLY BRIEF

POINT I

This case presents no factual controversy. Respondents' suggestion that petitioner seeks a new trial is unwarranted.

There is no factual controversy before this Court. Thus, a substantial portion of the claim of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. (hereinafter called MOP) against its dominated subsidiary, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called NOTM), is based on repeated MOP advances to NOTM consistently matched within a few days by NOTM dividends to MOP in substantially equivalent amounts. The District Court so found (R. 19).*

Similarly, another substantial portion of the MOP Claim involves the bookkeeping transaction, six months before bankruptcy, by which MOP wrote up the indebtedness of NOTM to MOP by $1,261,009, without one penny of cash changing hands. The District Court so found (R. 22).

Petitioner is concerned with the legal significance of these undisputed facts. Do such transactions give rise to a valid claim? Do such transactions give rise to a prior claim? These are questions of law.

Most of the remainder of the Claim arises from sums advanced by a parent to its dominated subsidiary to enable it to finance an expansion program dictated by the parent. The subsidiary, then in need of funds, was unable to borrow from the public, and was already borrowing from the parent to pay dividends in excess of earnings. These undisputed facts also present a question of law.

If a substantial part of the MOP Claim is invalid, can the remainder of the Claim—so intimately involved with the dividend program and the write-up—be endowed with validity? Further, may a parent by the facile device of denominating such sums as "advances", rather than as additional capital investments, insert a claim against its dominated subsidiary ahead of the claim of public investors?

The decision of this Court on the validity and priority of the MOP Claim will be of cardinal importance in reorganization law. This Court set up standards of conduct for fiduciary parents in the Deep Rock case. Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939).

The decisions of the courts below whittle away that salutary doctrine. The question before this Court is one of law: will this Court permit the impairment of the Deep Rock doctrine?

POINT II

The Courts below erred in refusing to disallow or subordinate the MOP Claim.

On the record before this Court, the MOP Claim must be disallowed or—to the extent, if any, not disallowed—subordinated.

The Baldwin Improvement Program Cannot Impart Validity and Priority to the MOP Claim.

The Baldwin Improvement Program is the basis of respondents' case and of the decisions of the Courts below. It is asserted as the answer to the charge of MOP mismanagement.

Respondents urge that the men who conceived and carried out the Baldwin Improvement Program—beneficial to NOTM—would not have wanted to mismanage or injure NOTM (Group Brief, p. 58).

We shall not repeat the contention in our main brief that such operational benefits are no bar to disallowance or subordination (pp. 50-51).

We here point out the following:

General beneficence is no justification for a single wrongful act. An improper transaction between parent and subsidiary is not purged because the parent has otherwise benefited the subsidiary or has not overreached the subsidiary by other means.

The test of Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295 (1939), is that each transaction imposed on the subsidiary must have "inherent fairness" and meet the requirements of an "arm's length bargain". This Court expressly held that good faith alone is insufficient (308 U. S. at 306-307).

In urging the invalidity and subordination of the MOP Claim, we are not contending that a parent is a guarantor. We do not seek by way of hindsight to penalize a parent for its mistakes.

We contend that a fiduciary parent does not have a valid and prior claim in reorganization when it has made advances to a subsidiary repeatedly matched by simultaneous dividends to the parent, when it has written up the subsidiary's indebtedness to itself, and when it has caused such a subsidiary in need of funds to finance an expansion program out of further borrowings from the parent.

The validity and priority of the MOP Claim must be determined in the first instance by the legality and fairness of its components. Each of these components must be judged on its own merits.

If a component part of the Claim is illegal or unfair, the Claim must be disallowed or subordinated to that extent. Respondents * so concede (Group Brief, p. 62). Such disallowance or subordination is mandatory, irrespective of the legality and fairness of other transactions between MOP and NOTM and irespective of MOP's alleged good faith.

Furthermore, disallowance or subordination may be required although the components of the MOP Claim are not individually shown to be unlawful or even imprudent or unfair.

Respondents, however, assert that subordination for "alleged wrongful acts of MOP mismanagement, many of which are not even remotely connected with the claim"

---

* This reply brief deals with the joint brief of respondents Group of Institutional Investors, Manufacturers Trust Co. and MOP General Mortgage Bondholders Committee (hereinafter called Group Brief). This renders unnecessary specific reply to the brief of the MOP Convertible 5½% Bondholders Committee.

is unjustified (Group Brief, p. 62). This contention is contrary to the doctrine of the Deep Rock case.*

In the Deep Rock case, the parent's compromise claim, which was in issue before this Court, was composed solely of items which were indisputably both legal and fair. Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939); 96 F. (2d) 693, 700-701 (C. C. A. 10th, 1938). Nevertheless, because of other unfair acts of the parent, its claim, based solely on admittedly lawful and fair transactions, was subordinated.

Continued Advances by a Parent to a Subsidiary to Pay Simultaneous Dividends to the Parent Cannot Give Rise to a Valid Claim.

$2,795,000† of the MOP Claim is based on sums which MOP, in eleven out of thirteen consecutive quarters, advanced to NOTM. All but $141,000 thereof was returned

---

* The Court below speaking through another Judge similarly stated in In re Kansas City Journal-Post Co., 144 F. (2d) 791 (C. C. A. 8th, 1944):

> "The inequity which will entitle a bankruptcy court to regulate the distribution to a creditor, by subordination or other equitable means, need not therefore be specifically related to the creditor's claim, either in its origin or in its acquisition, but it may equally arise out of any unfair act on the part of the creditor, which affects the bankruptcy results to other creditors and so makes it inequitable that he should assert a parity with them in the distribution of the estate; and with the most critical force may the application be made where a fiduciary relation is involved." (144 F. [2d] 791 at 804.)

† Respondents contend that the advances for matching dividends total only $2,082,456. They assert that the MOP advances in November, 1928 and February, 1929, matching simultaneous NOTM advances are not relevant because of NOTM repayment. They also would not include any part of a matching advance in excess of $259,576, the amount of the simultaneous dividend (Group Brief, p. 21n). Respondents, however, overlook the fact that MOP itself dictated the allocation of NOTM repayments among the various MOP advances, and that respondents themselves included—as they had to—such advances in the schedule showing the basis for the MOP Claim (Ex. 239, 281, R. 791, 900).

In urging the invalidity and subordination of the MOP Claim, we are not contending that a parent is a guarantor. We do not seek by way of hindsight to penalize a parent for its mistakes.

We contend that a fiduciary parent does not have a valid and prior claim in reorganization when it has made advances to a subsidiary repeatedly matched by simultaneous dividends to the parent, when it has written up the subsidiary's indebtedness to itself, and when it has caused such a subsidiary in need of funds to finance an expansion program out of further borrowings from the parent.

to MOP within a few days in matching payments, described as dividends.

Mr. Wyer and respondents seek to dismiss the relation of the eleven advances to eleven dividends as a coincidence (R. 901-903; Group Brief, p. 24). How many times must a coincidence occur before it becomes more than a coincidence?

Whether or not the "purpose" of the borrowing was to reimburse the NOTM treasury for expenditures for improvements, as the District Court found (R. 18), the matching dividends were in fact paid out of the advances.

Without such MOP advances, the NOTM dividends could not have been paid; the NOTM Treasurer did not have the available cash (Ex. 75-79, R. 453).

Respondents concede, in effect, that these advances would not have been necessary if NOTM had not declared dividends to MOP (R. 903; Group Brief, p. 24).

We do not take issue with the cases cited by respondents, dealing with an isolated borrowing by an independent corporation from a third party in order to pay an isolated dividend (Group Brief, p. 46). We contend that such cases have no application to a consistent pattern of repeated simultaneous advances and dividends between parent and subsidiary.

NOTM Dividends 450% of Consolidated Earnings.

After 1926, there was not one year in which NOTM consolidated income covered the dividends exacted, quarter in and quarter out, by MOP. During this period, NOTM dividends of $5,190,000 dwarfed consolidated earnings of $1,150,000 (Ex. 301, R. 914). No independent management would have continued the unbroken chain of dividends in excess of earnings over twenty consecutive quarters. No independent management would have paid such dividends in excess of 450% of earnings.

MOP was subjected to intense pressure—from its continued bond flotations and from its parent, Alleghany—to maintain its reported income. Receiving over 90% of each NOTM dividend, MOP insisted on a steady flow of dividends, even when "payment" was possible only through simultaneous paper "advances".

Such NOTM dividends were all the more detrimental since "it was apparent", as respondents point out, "that substantial improvements would be necessary in order to make the GCL a first class railroad system" (Group Brief, p. 12). The time when heavy expenditures are being made for such improvements, as well as for expansion, is not the time for dividends, and certainly not for borrowing to pay dividends in excess of earnings.

After years of draining NOTM dividends in excess of earnings, MOP had to resort to extraordinary efforts to continue NOTM dividends in 1931.

It was already the second year of the depression, and the officers of MOP and NOTM knew that 1931 was going to be a bad year * (Ex. 137, R. 601).

To provide NOTM with an ostensible surplus to permit the declaration of such dividends in 1931, MOP caused NOTM's principal subsidiary, the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Ry. Co. (hereinafter called Brownsville) to declare dividends totalling $4,155,000 in the space of less than one month in 1931.

Brownsville could not pay such dividends, as the officers of NOTM knew at the time. Thus, $3,155,000 of these dividends remained unpaid throughout 1931 (Ex. 311, R. 928). Nonetheless, it was all included in NOTM 1931 income.

When the Commission in 1936 directed NOTM to write off all the Brownsville dividends then unpaid, it did not thereby approve that portion of these Brownsville dividends which were paid after 1931, as respondents suggest (Group Brief, p. 31). The Commission expressly stated:

* There is no basis for respondents' suggestion that the disappearance of earnings was not known until "several months after the end of that year" (Group Brief, p. 56).

> "While it is at this time too late to correct the income accounts which have already been closed, it is not too late to write off the unpaid portion of this dividend * * *" (Ex. 63, R. 421).

Thus, in reconstructing the NOTM 1931 balance sheet in accordance with the decision of the Commission, $3,155,000—unpaid through 1931—must be deducted.* The Commission expressly found that inclusion of the dividends in NOTM income was improper "prior to actual collection" (Ex. 63, R. 421). With such a deduction, NOTM 1931 dividends resulted in an impairment of NOTM capital of $800,000 (Ex. 195, R. 663).

This is what Mr. Wyer meant when he told the Senate Committee that 1931 NOTM dividends were paid out of capital † (R. 296).

Whether or not NOTM dividends in 1931 were illegal is not decisive. As this Court emphasized in the Deep Rock case, the test of dividends is whether or not an independent management "with an eye single to" the interests of the subsidiary would have declared them (306 U. S. at 323). These dividends do not meet such a test.

The MOP Claim Includes an Item of $1,261,009 "Saddled" on NOTM Without Authority or Consideration.

The MOP Claim includes a bookkeeping write-up of NOTM indebtedness amounting to $1,261,009 from which NOTM has not received one penny to this day. This was done on the threshold of bankruptcy.

Respondents seek to justify this transaction on several grounds (Group Brief, pp. 25-27).

---

* Thus, respondents are in error when they attempt to bolster the 1931 NOTM balance sheet by $1,100,000 of these 1931 Brownsville dividends, paid after 1931 (Group Brief, pp. 30-31). (Italics added.)

† Hearings before Sub-Committee of Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce pursuant to S. Res. 71, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 12, p. 5296 (1938).

They assert that the debts of the subsidiaries amounting to $1,261,009 * could not have been permitted to remain unpaid. They overlook the fact that a component of the MOP system—not a member of the public—was the creditor.

If MOP had let matters stand as they were, it would have made no difference whatsoever to the debtor companies.

Respondents maintain that NOTM had to acquire these claims to protect its ownership and control of the Gulf Coast Lines. No reason in support of that contention is suggested. The NOTM position already rested on its ownership of all the mortgage bonds of these roads—superior in lien to these unsecured claims. The stock of these roads had for a long time been of dubious value. These roads ran at a deficit, as Mr. Wyer pointed out (R. 873). The road owing most of these claims had been in default to NOTM for years on its mortgage bond interest (Ex. 179, 223, R. 632, 701). NOTM already held over $19,000,000 of past-due indebtedness of its subsidiaries (Ex. 69, 94, R. 432, 486). Consequently, the addition of $1,261,009 in claims constituted no additional protection to NOTM.

Respondents finally seek to defend this transaction as undoing a violation of NOTM's fiduciary obligations to IGN.

MOP concededly dictated the policies of both NOTM and IGN throughout this period. It was MOP, not NOTM, that dictated the substance and form of all these transactions. One instance of MOP wrongdoing may not be justified by another.†

---

* The only possible claim that International Great Northern Ry. (hereinafter called I-GN) might have had against NOTM amounted to $64,129 (Ex. 223, R. 701).

† Respondents have suggested that all the facts about the MOP Claim were before the Commission. The record before the Commission will be examined in vain to find the details of this "saddling" transaction. These were not brought out until the presentation of petitioner's case in the hearing in the District Court.

Respondents further assert that the $1,261,009 write-up should be allowed, because, indeed, it did not harm NOTM. This is a remarkable shift from respondents' position that all advances were in cash and that NOTM received a full dollar's worth for each dollar of advances (Group Brief, p. 63).

The Significance of Intra-Gulf Coast Lines Transactions.

Respondents contend that an inquiry into the transactions between NOTM and its subsidiaries at the dictation of MOP is "without significance" and irrelevant (Group Brief, pp. 31-32).

It is settled law, however, as respondents concede, that the legality of NOTM dividends to MOP must be judged by NOTM balance sheets, not by the consolidated balance sheets.

The intra-Gulf Coast Lines transactions are significant because they are the device by which MOP increased NOTM book income and ostensibly permitted NOTM to pay dividends to MOP, which it otherwise could not have paid.*

Acquisition of "Feeder" Lines.

Respondents have recognized in their brief—as did their predecessor committee and the Commission †—that the five Texas "feeder" lines acquired by NOTM at the cost of over five and one-half million dollars had been acquired for the benefit of MOP and IGN.

On page 10 of their brief, they admit that the MOP system received benefits from the traffic of these "feeder" roads, and that adjustments in favor of NOTM were necessary. They claim, however, that such adjustments were already made in the allocations of securities in the 1944 Plan—since remanded.

* Thus, the role of Brownsville dividends in the scheme of MOP management is clear. As Mr. Baldwin testified: "That was the only way that I knew to pass money" to NOTM (R. 602).

† Missouri Pacific R. R. Reorganization, 239 I. C. C. 7, 71 (1940); First Amended Plan of Reorganization, Protective Committee for MOP First and Refunding Bonds, p. 61; R. 20882.

This case, however, is concerned with the validity and priority of the MOP Claim, not with the allocation of all new securities in a Plan of Reorganization.

If MOP management imposed such purchases for its own benefit upon NOTM—as is generally recognized—"any adjustments which need to be made" can, in the first instance, properly be made only through the disallowance or subordination of the MOP Claim.

The Findings of the Commission on the MOP Advances.

This Court has clearly established that the determination of the validity and priority of a claim is a judicial and not a Commission function.* Nevertheless, respondents seek to attribute the "greatest weight" to certain findings by the Commission with respect to the MOP advances (Group Brief, pp. 21-22).

These findings were made in connection with MOP's application for further loans from the RFC (Missouri Pacific R.R. Reconstruction Loan, 189 I. C. C. 286 (1933), R. 110-19).

In support of such MOP application, Mr. Wyer submitted sworn financial statements. It was on the basis of such statements that the Commission approved the loan.

Subsequently, the Commission discovered that such financial statements sworn to by Mr. Wyer were "incorrect and misleading". It reported that fact to the Congress (51st Commission Annual Report (1937), pp. 27, 28).

The chief railroad examiner of the RFC stated that it had been on the basis of such sworn papers that the RFC was induced to make the loans to MOP (Senate Com- mittee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 3, pp. 1111-18, [1938]).

Yet, respondents now seek to attribute validity and priority to the MOP Claim by reference to ex parte Commission findings induced by such misrepresentations.

The Deep Rock Case.

Several statements of respondents with respect to the Deep Rock case should not go uncorrected (Group Brief, pp. 43-46).

Respondents stress the place that the Bradstreet property transaction played in the decision of the Court. Although this was an important instance of Standard mismanagement, it was not the decisive feature in the case.*

The continued payment of dividends out of borrowed funds when Deep Rock was already borrowing for other purposes, and the failure to provide Deep Rock with resources adequate for the conduct of its business, not the Bradstreet transaction, occupied the leading role.

This Court left no doubt that subordination was ordered because the "fiscal affairs" of Deep Rock had not "been conducted with an eye single to its own interests" (306 U. S. at 323).

Respondents have misconceived the meaning of inadequate capitalization. They assert that adequacy of capitalization of a subsidiary is tested solely by the sufficiency of the parent's investment in the stock through which it exercises control (Group Brief, p. 49). They stress the amount of total GCL assets. Such assets, however, did not relieve either NOTM or its subsidiaries from the constant necessity of borrowing millions and millions of dollars throughout the period of MOP control. Nor did such assets suffice to stave off bankruptcy.

To avoid inadequacy of capitalization, the subsidiary must be capitalized at a level which provides it with sufficient funds to conduct its business. Thus, where the debt of the subsidiary steadily increases and where it is forced to borrow continually, in good years and bad, to carry out a program dictated by the parent, it is inadequately capitalized. This is what this Court had in mind when it criticized the inadequate capitalization of Deep Rock (306 U. S. at 315).

* In its discussion of the salient facts of the Deep Rock case, the Court in the Commonwealth case did not think the Bradstreet transaction sufficiently important to warrant mentioning.

Respondents point out, in another connection, that the parent "could have made additional investments in the capital stock of the subsidiaries * * * to finance improvements" (Group Brief, p. 28). This is precisely what MOP should have done with NOTM. Its failure to do so is one of the compelling reasons for subordination of the MOP Claim.

An independent board managing NOTM would either not have embarked on such an expansion and improvement program, or, if it had, it would have financed it, not solely through borrowing, but with new equity money.

Respondents defend the lack of additional equity investment on the ground that the Commission authorized the issuance of certain bonds to finance a portion of the expansion and improvement program (Group Brief, p. 52). The Commission, however, was not considering the significance in a bankruptcy proceeding of such bond issues in the light of the entire financial and dividend program imposed on NOTM during this entire period. The Commission, in passing on the legality of a bond issue in 1925 or 1927, was not passing on the priority of subsequent NOTM advances under the rule of the Deep Rock case.

The doctrine of subordination is not limited to preventing intentional preferences, as respondents suggest (Group Brief, p. 50). There is no basis for such restriction. When a parent advances sums to a dominated subsidiary, whose resources are inadequate to enable it to carry on its business and finance expansion, the doctrine of subordination protects public investors, if bankruptcy or reorganization intervenes. The doctrine will not permit the parent—irrespective of its intentions—to acquire a prior claim against the subsidiary by denominating such sums as "advances" or "debt" rather than as additional capital investment.

The Courts will not permit bankruptcy results to be determined by the label which the parent—in unrestrained control of the situation—chooses to affix to the transaction.

The Commonwealth Case.

Respondents seek to dispose of the Commonwealth case by emphasizing the initial capitalization of Michigan, the subsidiary (Group Brief, p. 45). Respondents, however, do not point out that Michigan—unlike Inland (its parent) and MOP and NOTM—never went into reorganization. Whatever one may say about such initial capitalization, it was obviously sufficient to avoid bankruptcy.

Respondents do not discuss the other aspects of the Commonwealth case in which the very techniques of MOP mismanagement in issue appear with surprising duplication of detail.

Thus, in both cases, the parents—under holding company pressure—caused the subsidiaries from 1929 through 1931 repeatedly to pay them dividends out of sums simultaneously advanced by them.

Similarly, both subsidiaries, NOTM and Michigan, were compelled to continue to pay such dividends while they were already borrowing for expansion and other purposes.

The doctrine of the Commonwealth case and our position are not flatly that "a corporation borrowing to finance an expansion program may not pay dividends", as respondents suggest (Group Brief, p. 47).

The doctrine is that a subsidiary borrowing from its parent to finance an expansion program may not further borrow consistently from the parent to pay it dividends, and particularly to pay it dividends in excess of earnings.

The Presence of MOP Creditors Asserting the Claim Cannot Prevent Subordination.

Respondents urge that the balance of equities is in favor of MOP creditors and that therefore subordination should not be decreed (Group Brief, p. 61).

There is a claim in issue before this Court. If the claim is tainted—if it is invalid or inequitable—it cannot survive, irrespective of the innocence of the persons who may be asserting it.

Respondents concede that the position of MOP creditors cannot purify a tainted claim. They admit:

> "If a claim against a subsidiary is defective or its priority was obtained in breach of a fiduciary duty, disallowance or adjustment of priority would seem to be appropriate * * *" (Group Brief, p. 62).

MOP creditors are thus not in a superior position as to the $2,795,000 of advances of which $2,654,000 was returned to MOP almost simultaneously in dividends.

There can be no superior equities of the MOP creditors for the $1,261,000 "saddling" transaction. This was not an advance, cash or otherwise, and NOTM received no conceivable benefit therefrom.

Respondents urge, however, that advances from MOP in the years 1932 and 1933 were for the benefit of NOTM and that it would have been improper to use MOP funds as a capital contribution to NOTM. They disregard the fact that NOTM's needs for funds during 1932 and 1933 were the direct product of MOP mismanagement throughout its period of control. This contention of respondents relates, moreover, to only $2,230,000 * of the MOP Claim. Whatever its merits, it cannot affect the determination with respect to the overwhelming bulk of the Claim.

* This figure does not include the $1,261,009 October, 1932 "saddling" transaction, which does not represent any advance by MOP during 1932, and is a "defective" component of the Claim.

Over 38% of the Claim clearly rests on invalid and inequitable items. In the circumstances, this Court will not attempt to separate the components of the Claim and recast or reconstruct the subsidiary's financial position to determine what would have been the case, if the subsidiary had been managed by an independent Board.

The contention of competing equities derives from a misconception of the underlying basis of the Deep Rock doctrine. Under circumstances such as in the case at bar, a detailed analysis and specification and measuring of injuries and balancing of equities will not be made. For it is impossible to reconstruct the situation. An attempt to do so is fraught with so many difficulties that it may defeat the salutary purposes of the doctrine. That is why the Deep Rock rule is not based on meticulously analyzing isolated acts and weighing the injuries resulting from subserviency of dominated subsidiaries. In short, it is a rule to enforce proper standards of business conduct by fiduciary parents.

To hold otherwise and permit the Deep Rock doctrine to be whittled down would speedily mean its destruction as an effective standard for business management.

Respondents also assert that the equities are in favor of MOP creditors because petitioner and other 5¼% Secured Bondholders are secured by a "junior security" and "accepted the risks inherent in such a security" (Group Brief, p. 63). This can in no way excuse any violation of MOP's conceded fiduciary obligations. It is not the law that public investors in a subsidiary are required to accept the risks of a parent's wrongdoing.

MOP's creditors cannot rise above the equities of NOTM. The Claim is an asset of the MOP estate to which the creditors succeed. They succeed to the rights of the parent and no more.

Respondents have conceded that this is the general rule (Group Brief, p. 62). They have failed to demonstrate that it should not be applied herein.

POINT III

The rights of MOP 5¼% Secured Bondholders are unaffected by MOP's transfer to RFC and RCC of two NOTM notes. The rights of the RFC and RCC have been extinguished.

The District Court found that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Railroad Credit Corporation * (hereinafter called RFC and RCC, respectively) were bona fide pledgees for value of two NOTM notes representing the bulk of the Claim (R. 19-21). This pledge was subsequently redeemed (R. 1155, 1164). Respondents contend that such one-time transfer to RFC and RCC cut off the equities of the 5¼% Secured Bondholders on this part of the Claim (Group Brief, pp. 34-42). We submit that this contention is without merit.

(a) A determination of the MOP Claim is admittedly necessary to the extent of over $1,000,000.

As the District Court found, $610,000 principal amount of the MOP Claim was never pledged (R. 19-21).

Thus, whatever the consequences of the one-time pledge, an adjudication of that portion of the MOP Claim which was never pledged—amounting with interest to more than $1,000,000—cannot be avoided.

Respondents so concede (Group Brief, p. 42).

* The RCC held a second lien on the NOTM notes held by the RFC.

(b) The rights of the RFC and the RCC in the NOTM notes have become moot. What classes, if any, of MOP creditors succeed to the rights of the RFC and RCC has not yet been determined.

Several months after the order in issue adjudicating the MOP Claim, the District Court authorized the Trustee of MOP to purchase and settle the RFC and the RCC Claims (R. 1155, 1164). The RFC and the RCC surrendered their claims, together with all collateral, including the NOTM notes, to the Trustee of MOP.*

The findings of fact and conclusions of law of the District Court relating to the RFC and the RCC (R. 19-21, 30-2) have thus become moot. This was impliedly recognized by the Court below.

The orders of the District Court do not subrogate respondents or any other class of MOP creditors to the rights of the RFC and RCC. These orders do not determine the equitable owners of the cash in the MOP estate used in the settlement of the RFC and RCC Claims—the only basis for subrogation. This question was expressly reserved for future adjudication.† Such a determination of fact obviously cannot be undertaken by this Court.

(c) MOP, as claimant, always remained subject to the rights of MOP 5¼% Secured Bondholders.

Irrespective of any alleged consequences flowing from the pledge of the two NOTM notes, MOP—the payee in the notes and the claimant herein—at all times remained subject to the rights of MOP 5¼% Secured Bondholders.

---

* The RFC was then stricken as a party herein (R. 1348). The RCC never was a party (R. 369-70).

† The orders specify "to the extent of their * * * interests, if any" (R. 1157, 1165). (Italics added.)

A wrongdoing payee may subject a maker of a note to liability by negotiating it to a holder in due course. Although such holder receives perfect title, such transfer does not protect the wrongdoing payee.

As between the maker (NOTM) and the payee (MOP), all questions with regard to the transactions surrounding issuance of the notes remain open for determination, irrespective of negotiation subjecting the maker to liability to a holder.

Gates v. Ritchie, 162 Ark. 484, 258 S. W. 397 (1924).
Bourke v. Spaight, 80 Kan. 387, 102 Pac. 253 (1909).

Whatever the rights of the RFC and RCC on these notes, MOP, the claimant, has always remained subject to the rights of NOTM.

(d) The NOTM notes have been reacquired by the payee-claimant; NOTM defenses are not cut off.

The RFC and RCC have surrendered the NOTM notes. Said notes are again in the possession of the payee, MOP, through its Trustee.

It is settled law that a wrongdoing payee reacquiring an instrument—even from a holder in due course—is subject to all the equities and defenses of the maker.

Even if the District Court should subsequently rule that any class of MOP creditors has a lien on the notes held by the reacquiring payee, through its Trustee, such lien would be an equitable lien.*

Such equitable lien, however, can give MOP creditors no better rights against NOTM than those of the payee, MOP. Moreover, the NOTM equitable defenses arose first and must prevail.

Respondents also argue that as a result of the orders on the RFC and RCC claims, the MOP creditors claiming rights by way of subrogation "acquired perfect title" to the NOTM notes under said Section 58 (Group Brief, p. 41).

This contention is erroneous. As we have seen, there has been no determination as to what class of MOP creditors, if any, is entitled to subrogation. Moreover, Section 58 extends only to holders. Under Section 191 such creditors are not holders since they are not in possession of the notes. The holder is the Trustee of the reacquiring wrongdoing payee, barred from the protection of Section 58.

(e) The doctrine of marshalling protects MOP 5¼% Secured Bondholders.

The bankruptcy doctrine of marshalling of assets also protects the equities of MOP 5¼% Secured Bondholders. Assets must be marshalled where a creditor holds the obligations of two debtors, one of which is entitled to be reimbursed by the other. Under such circumstances the common creditor is required to proceed first against the assets of the wrongdoing debtor. This was long ago settled.

---

* Respondents concede that their alleged interest in the cash used by the Trustee—the alleged basis for subordination—was only an equitable lien (Group Brief, p. 40).

The RFC and RCC were secured by a large amount of MOP collateral, other than the NOTM notes (R. 1185, 1187). Under the doctrine of marshalling, the RFC and RCC would have been first required to apply the other MOP collateral to the satisfaction of their claims. Recourse to the NOTM notes would be permissible only if such other collateral proved insufficient.

Such other collateral was more than sufficient.* The District Court, on testimony ascribing no value to the NOTM notes (R. 1178), accordingly found:†

> "That the fair market value of the collateral pledged as security for said (RFC) claim is substantially in excess of the amount proposed to be paid RFC in compromise and settlement of its claim" (R. 1156).

Respondents argue that the market value of such collateral is of little importance for valuation purposes, and that earning power is critical.‡

In the New Haven reorganization, the Second Circuit held that market value is the measure of valuation of freely traded securities. The Court expressly held that

---

* It included securities actively traded on the New York Stock Exchange with a market value of over $41,500,000 in contrast to the $26,033,000 for which the RFC Claim was settled (R. 1178, 1185).

† An identical finding was made with respect to the RCC (R. 1164).

‡ Respondents cite the last paragraph of Section 77(e), the Ecker and Milwaukee cases, and a recent Second Circuit decision in the New Haven reorganization.

None of these relates to the basis for valuation of securities freely traded on the market. The reference to earnings in the last paragraph of Section 77(e), for example, is expressly limited to the valuation of "property used in railroad operation".

the earnings of the properties underlying such securities were of no importance.*

In re New York, N. H. & H. R. R., 147 F. (2d) 40, 47-48 (C. C. A. 2nd, 1945), cert. denied, 325 U. S. 884 (1945), reh. denied, 326 U. S. 805 (1945).

Respondents maintain, furthermore, that marshalling is controlled not by this recent valuation of the District Court, but by a 1944 Commission valuation (R. 20762) (Group Brief, pp. 36-7).

When the District Court, however, found that the value of the RFC and RCC collateral (other than the NOTM notes) was substantially in excess of the loans, it was necessarily finding that the 1944 Commission valuation was then out of date. This subsequent adjudication must control.

Respondents seek to claim benefits under the orders relating to the RFC and RCC Claims but refuse to accept the valuation finding on which the orders were based. If respondents claim to have the right to be subrogated under such orders, they must concede that such other RFC and RCC collateral substantially exceeded the loans, with its corollary that marshalling is required herein.

POINT IV

The MOP Claim must be adjudicated on the merits. The Court below so ruled.

Neither petitioner nor other public holders of MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds are barred by laches.

Respondents' contention that laches is applicable because of the death of several possible witnesses is incongruous

* The recent New Haven decision cited by respondents involves marketable securities, but does not involve the measure of valuation. The doctrine of the earlier decision cited in the text is not questioned in any way. Old Colony Bondholders v. New York, N. H. & H. R. R., 161 F. (2d) 413, 419-422 (C. C. A. 2nd, 1947), cert. denied 331 U. S. 858 (1947).

in the face of the record of many volumes, which the two Courts below felt more than adequate for an adjudication on the merits of the MOP Claim.

There are further incongruities in respondents' contention. Laches is not invoked by petitioner defending NOTM against its fiduciary parent's claim. It is not invoked by the fiduciary claimant or its Trustee. It is invoked by a number of bondholders of the claimant who have conceded that they lack any "financial interest" in the Claim (Group Brief, Dist. Ct., p. 2).

(a) An adjudication of the MOP Claim is indispensable for reorganization.

An adjudication on the merits of the validity and priority of the MOP Claim is indispensable for the purposes of the reorganization.

> Ecker v. Western Pacific R. R., 318 U. S. 448, 479 (1943).
> American United Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Avon Park, 311 U. S. 138, 145 (1940).

Without such an adjudication the reorganization cannot be completed. The reorganization court will be unable to make the finding required for approval of any plan of reorganization—that it is fair and equitable.

The Circuit Court indicated in its opinion that the doctrine of laches accordingly cannot be invoked to prevent an adjudication of the Claim (R. IV, 20-1).

(b) Laches may not be invoked since the Claimant could have moved for allowance of its Claim.

The MOP Claim resting on transactions between a fiduciary parent and its controlled and dominated subsidiary was "presumptively fraudulent" and required "rigorous scrutiny" before allowance.

Corsicana National Bank v. Johnson, 251 U. S. 68, 90 (1919).

Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 306-307 (1939).

Furthermore, the petitions filed in the District Court by the NOTM Bondholders Committee and Indenture Trustee, and still pending, had put the fiduciary claimant on notice that its claim was subject to question (R. 87, 101, 109).

The fiduciary claimant, MOP, through its trustee, could have requested the Court to determine the validity of its presumptively suspect claim at any time.

For its failure to do so, it has only itself to blame and cannot complain.

Cf. Dudley v. Mealey, 147 F. (2d) 268 (C. C. A. 2nd, 1945), cert. denied, 325 U. S. 873 (1945).

As Judge Learned Hand said in Dudley v. Mealey, a case involving a fiduciary claimant:

> "It would have been quick and cheap to obtain a ruling from the court upon the propriety of the * * * (fiduciary's claim); there was no need to wait until the Plan came up for approval; for any prejudice that may now result from the delay the parties (pressing the claim) have themselves to thank" (147 F. (2d) at 272).

Where a party might himself have moved for a judicial determination of the issue in dispute, and has failed to do so, he may not invoke laches.

Faced with a "presumptively fraudulent" claim of a fiduciary parent against a subsidiary, deprived of the protection of an independent trustee, it was the duty of the District Court, sua sponte, to adjudicate the claim.

Cf. Dudley v. Mealey, 147 F. (2d) 268 (C. C. A. 2nd, 1945), cert. denied, 325 U. S. 873 (1945).
3 Collier, Bankruptcy (14th ed.), pp. 216-17.

Such duty on the District Court was emphasized by the attack on the character of MOP management of NOTM in the petitions filed by the NOTM Bondholders Committee and Indenture Trustee (R. 87, 101).

The disposition of a parallel problem by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Dudley v. Mealey, supra, is pertinent.

In that case, Judge Learned Hand, speaking for the Court, condemned a Plan permitting a trustee to profit by its breach of fiduciary loyalty.

He stated that this was a matter "such that the judge might, and perhaps should, have taken notice * * * sua sponte". Judge Hand emphasized the Court's duty by directing it to "itself conduct the inquiry into the conduct of the * * * [Trustee, if the single isolated objector] should default" (147 F. (2d) at 270, 273).

In no event is laches applicable herein. The doctrine consists of two essential elements: lack of timeliness and prejudice. Neither element is present.

(c) Petitioner's objections were timely.

The order in issue of the District Court below was the first order of allowance of the MOP Claim. That the MOP Claim had not previously been allowed is clear from the form of such order which concluded that the MOP Claim "should be allowed" (R. 31). The Circuit Court below similarly recognized that not until the District Court order below had there ever been a "judicial determination upon the validity of the" MOP Claim (R. IV, 20-1). It affirmed, holding that "the claim of Missouri Pacific was properly allowed" (R. IV, 27).

(1) Objections to a claim are timely before allowance.

Allowance of a claim does not arise automatically from the filing of the proof of claim. A judicial order of allowance is necessary. Until such order, objections to the claim are timely.

In re Branner, 9 F. (2d) 883 (C. C. A. 2nd, 1925).
In re Tower Magazines, Inc., 16 F. Supp. 894 (M. D. Pa., 1936).

The two cases * cited by respondents for the proposition that laches may bar objections to a claim are not in point (Group Brief, p. 70). They relate to allowed claims, with a definitely established prejudicial change of position following upon allowance.

Such decisions have no relevance to the instant case involving the first judicial determination of a claim.

Petitioner was timely under the orders of the District Court as well.

Order No. 19 of the District Court prescribed the procedure for filing objections to claims in these proceedings. Such orders provided that the objections might be filed within the time fixed by the Special Master (R. 72). No limit has ever been fixed either by the Court or Special Master; † the time for filing has not expired.

* In re American S. S. Nav. Co., 14 F. Supp. 106 (E. D. Pa., 1933), aff'd sub nom. Cooper v. Rauch, 82 F. (2d) 1005 (C. C. A. 3rd, 1936); In re Nichols, 166 Fed. 603 (N. D. N. Y., 1909).

† Other claims against the debtors in the instant proceedings were still undisposed of at the time of the hearings in the Court below (R. 257). The Special Master has died, and no successor has been appointed.

(2) Objections to a claim may be made after allowance in the absence of a prejudicial change of position.

Even if the MOP Claim be viewed as an allowed claim —a point of view which cannot be sustained—laches cannot apply.

Allowance of a claim, of itself, does not bar objections. Thus, order No. 235 of the District Court expressly established a procedure with respect to objections to allowed claims (R. 79). No time limit for filing such objections has ever been fixed.

Laches may be invoked to bar such objections only if allowance of a claim is followed by a prejudicial change in position.

Without prejudice, allowed claims may be reconsidered until the close of the estate.

> Section 57k, National Bankruptcy Act.
> Section 2a(2), National Bankruptcy Act.

Respondents, however, contend that Section 57k is inapplicable to the instant case (Group Brief, p. 79). At one point, they appear to say that Section 57k does not apply to Section 77. There is, however, no support for such a suggestion. Cf. In re Denver & R. G. W. R. R., 27 F. Supp. 983 (D. Col., 1939); National City Bank v. O'Connell, 155 F. (2d) 329, 332 (C. C. A. 2nd, 1946).

Elsewhere, respondents appear to indicate that Section 57k cannot be applied because of petitioner's "dilatory conduct". Laches, however, is a question of prejudice as well as of delay.

Respondents, moreover, ignore Section 2a of the Bankruptcy Act, which this Court has held to be applicable to Section 77.

> Continental Illinois N. B. & T. Co. v. Chicago, R. I., & P. R. R., 294 U. S. 648, 675-6 (1935) (Sec. 2a(15) case).

(d) There was no prejudice.

The mere lapse of time is insufficient to justify the application of laches. The lack of timeliness, if any, must be prejudicial.

Northern Pacific R. R. v. Boyd, 228 U. S. 482, 509 (1913).

Penn. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 698 (1898).

As this court said in the Penn. Mutual Life Ins. case:

> "The reason upon which the rule (of laches) is based is not alone the lapse of time during which the neglect to enforce the right has existed, but the changes of condition which may have arisen during the period in which there has been neglect. In other words, where a court of equity finds that the position of the parties has so changed that equitable relief cannot be afforded without doing injustice or that the intervening rights of third persons may be destroyed or seriously impaired, it will not exert its equitable powers in order to save one from the consequences of his own neglect" (168 U. S. at 698).

Respondents have failed to demonstrate such injustice or change of position. Relying solely on the testimony of one witness—Mr. Railey—they contend that they have been prejudiced in only one respect: the presentation of the case in support of the MOP Claim. (R. 191-207, 744-62; Ex. 360-2) (Group Brief, pp. 67-71).

It is argued that records have been destroyed (Group Brief, p. 70). The District Court did not so find (R. 28). Mr. Railey was asked whether "all the records and books of account giving rise to * * * (the MOP) claim are available at the present time". He answered in the affirmative (R. 197, 203).

The only other basis of prejudice alleged by respondents is the death of several possible witnesses.

The death of material witnesses, or even of parties, does not of itself constitute sufficient prejudice to invoke laches.

Laches may be applied only if the death of such witnesses makes so much testimony unavailable that the Court is precluded from reaching a "safe" conclusion.

Bickel v. Argyle Inv. Co., 343 Mo. 456, 121 S. W. (2d) 803, 807 (1938).

Consolidated Placers, Inc. v. Grant, 48 N. Mex. 340, 349, 151 P. (2d) 48, 54 (1944).

Shirley v. Van Every, 159 Va. 762, 167 S. E. 345 (1933).

Wood v. Sanders, 247 Ala. 492, 496, 25 So. (2d) 141 (1946).

Petitioner's case rests primarily on documentary evidence. These include corporate records, balance sheets, books of account, minutes and official reports submitted to the Commission. Consequently, the facts in this case are almost entirely undisputed, despite the size of the Record.

The District Court did not find the many hundred pages of testimony and the 180 exhibits in the Record insufficient to reach a "safe" conclusion. On the contrary, the District Court termed the evidence "extensive" and "voluminous" and adjudicated the MOP Claim on the merits (R. 1109). Its detailed findings of fact on the merits cover seventeen pages of the Record (R. 8-25).

After rejecting the contention of laches, the Circuit Court also adjudicated the claim on the merits. Thus, the Courts below unmistakeably demonstrated that the wealth of evidence before them was adequate for a "safe" adjudication on the merits.

This action of the Courts below disposes of the contention of laches.

The conduct of respondents themselves fortifies the conclusion that laches is inapplicable. Respondents have never suggested that the evidence is insufficient.* The number and character of the witnesses testifying for them in the District Court and respondents' decision not to call numerous other available witnesses affirmatively demonstrate that the death of a few possible witnesses caused no gaps in the testimony.

* Respondents themselves asserted in the Court below: "It is only reasonable to presume that all of the available facts relating to the intercompany claim are in the record" (Group Brief, C. C. A., p. 76).

Respondents' main witness was Mr. William Wyer, Treasurer of MOP and NOTM and the architect of most of the transactions complained of. With his testimony covering 142 pages in the record, Mr. Wyer, testified in detail on MOP and NOTM financial affairs dating as far back as 1917 (R. 867-933, 960-1016, 1018-38).

There was hardly anything of a financial nature to which he did not testify. He even testified that he knew what was in the minds of MOP and NOTM directors, what information they looked at, and what governed their decisions (R. 985, 892, 912).

The District Court found:

> "He probably knows as well as anybody what was going on. * * * He was in touch with everything that was going on * * * " (R. 882).

Further detailed testimony on financial matters was given by Mr. Martin Eckert, general auditor after 1918 of NOTM, Brownsville and Beaumont. Mr. Eckert, whose testimony occupies almost 200 pages of the Record, testified that he had general supervision of the accounts and ledgers of these roads, as well as the reports submitted to the Commission, during the entire period of MOP control (R. 496-571, 629-37, 660-738, 790-814, 1040-61).*

* Other financial witnesses included Mr. Amos T. Cole, Treasurer and/or Assistant Secretary of NOTM from 1923 to 1933, Assistant Secretary of MOP in 1932, and occupying similar offices in NOTM subsidiaries throughout this period (Ex. 4-58; R. 403-406, 571-89). Another was Mr. Edwin Wagner, Assistant Secretary and Assistant Treasurer of NOTM and subsidiaries after 1926 (R. 589-95).

Nor was testimony received on financial matters alone. Messrs. Kirkpatrick, Rodgers, Brown and Bradley—men with up to thirty and forty years' experience with these roads—testified in detail on the physical condition and operations of MOP and NOTM, as far back as 1907 (R. 814-67, 933-60, 1016-18).

In addition, numerous other officers of MOP, NOTM and NOTM subsidiaries—participants in the transactions in issue—were available. The failure of respondents to call them can only mean that respondents did not believe that further testimony was necessary.

1. Mr. L. W. Baldwin had been President of MOP, NOTM and NOTM subsidiaries throughout this period. Petitioner called Mr. Baldwin to the stand. Respondents did not cross-examine Mr. Baldwin, nor call him subsequently as their own witness (R. 596-608). They assert that they did not want to divert Mr. Baldwin's attention to these matters during the War (Group Brief, p. 70). This is a bit disingenuous. They forget that Mr. Baldwin was an interested spectator during the course of the District Court hearings (R. 606).

If Mr. Baldwin could not have added to respondents' case, what could have been added by those of his subordinates who had died? There has been no suggestion that they knew more about it than he.

2. Mr. W. G. Vollmer had been assistant to Mr. Baldwin. His hand appears in many transactions. His name and initials appear on many of the letters introduced by petitioner relating to NOTM and Brownsville dividends (Ex. 125-31, 137, R. 600-1). Mr. Vollmer was present in the District Court (R. 653). Yet, he was not called by respondents.

3. Mr. Leonard P. Ayres, a member of the MOP and NOTM Executive Committees, was also present in the District Court (Ex. 33-58, R. 406). Mr. Ayres was very close to Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen, Chairman of the Board of MOP and NOTM, lunched with him daily, and knew his plans (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., Part 12, pp. 5209, 5431 (1938)). Respondents did not put Mr. Ayres on the witness stand.

4. Mr. Herbert Fitzpatrick had been Vice-President of MOP, NOTM, Brownsville and Beaumont (Ex. 39-61, R. 406). Mr. Wyer described him as the close friend and advisor of Mr. Van Sweringen (Senate Committee Hearings, supra, 74th Cong., 2nd Sess., Part 2, p. 582 [1938]). Mr. Fitzpatrick had undertaken to get Commission approval of MOP's applications to borrow from RFC, and of NOTM's application to issue one of the pledged notes (Missouri Pacific R. R. Reconstruction Loan, 189 I. C. C. 286, 342, 549; New Orleans, T. & M. Ry. Notes, 189 I. C. C. 600 [1933]). Respondents did not call Mr. Fitzpatrick.

Respondents, disregarding such available witnesses, complain of the death of others.

1. Thus, respondents point to the death of Mr. Safford, Vice-President of MOP and NOTM (Group Brief, pp. 67-68). Mr. Baldwin, who gave Mr. Safford his orders, was present in court. Mr. Railey admitted that Mr. Eckert had full knowledge of all the financial and auditing matters and that assistants to Mr. Safford were living (R. 756-757; R. 203). Respondents did not call any of them.

2. Another person whose death is complained of is another MOP and NOTM Vice-President, Mr. F. P. Johnson (Group Brief, p. 68). Respondents assert that Mr. Baldwin relied on Mr. Johnson for "information and advice". Respondents did not call Mr. Baldwin. Yet, they seek now to ascribe importance to Mr. Johnson because of his relationship to Mr. Baldwin. Secondly, respondents state that several letters with respect to NOTM dividends contained Mr. Johnson's initials. Mr. Baldwin's and Mr. Vollmer's initials and names appear on even more letters of that general character. Yet, respondents did not call either.

3. Respondents also complain of the death of Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen. They ignore the fact that Mr. Wyer, who testified at great length, had been Mr. Van Sweringen's assistant. Moreover, Mr. Ayres and Mr. Fitzpatrick, close associates of Mr. Van Sweringen, were available, but respondents failed to call them.

4. The death of Mr. Frank Andrews * is complained of. Mr. Andrews, however, was only one of "the lawyers and auditing department (to whom the MOP and NOTM Boards left it) to see that dividends * * * conformed with the requirements of the law" (Group Brief, pp. 32-33). The men who gave Mr. Andrews his orders, such as Mr. Baldwin, were available. The head of the auditing department, Mr. Eckert, testified at length. What could Mr. Andrews have added to these?

5. The death of Mr. E. J. White is complained of as well. Mr. Railey conceded that the knowledge of Mr. White was "rather restricted" (R. 760). Moreover, Mr. White's assistant from 1915 until bankruptcy was available; this assistant was none other than Mr. Railey, himself (R. 191).

Thus, respondents' own conduct of the trial demonstrates that the death of several witnesses did not interfere with the effective presentation of their case.

Laches accordingly can have no application herein.

---

* Members of the firm of the general counsel of NOTM during the period of MOP control were not only available at the hearings, but were and are counsel for one of the respondents herein—the NOTM Bondholders Committee. Respondents did not call them.

POINT V

Petitioner's personal status does not prevent disallowance or subordination of the MOP Claim.

That petitioner's securities were acquired after bankruptcy at a discount does not place him beyond the pale of judicial protection.

There is no doctrine of law or equity which restricts the free marketability of securities of a corporation in reorganization. Throughout the period since bankruptcy, there has been a substantial turnover in MOP securities. Such subsequent purchasers acquire the rights of their assignors.

Cf. Wade v. Chicago, S. P. St. L. R. R., 149 U. S. 327, 343 (1893).

In re H. E. Page Motor Car Co., 251 Fed. 318 (D. Mass., 1918).

The personal status of an individual creditor is of little legal significance. Subordination of the MOP Claim will not benefit petitioner alone. It will benefit each and every publicly held MOP 5¼% Secured Bond in equal measure. The interest of an entire class of creditors is at stake.

In fact, the personal status of petitioner is unassailable. There has been no suggestion of fraud, bad faith or other misconduct on the part of petitioner.

Under such circumstances, no less than six different Circuit Courts of Appeal have rejected the contention that a creditor's purchase of bonds at less than face value during, or immediately before, reorganization, has any significance whatsoever with respect to his participation in the reorganization.

Not merely one bondholder—but a substantial group—has joined in protecting the NOTM estate against the MOP Claim. Petitioner is also the representative of holders of over $900,000 principal amount of MOP 5¼% Secured Bonds (R. 227). Petitioner's objections to the MOP Claim have further been adopted by the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. 5¼% Serial Bondholders Committee holding an additional $315,000 principal amount. (Interstate Commerce Commission Report, October 15, 1947, pp. 2-3.) This amounts to about 11½% of such bonds publicly outstanding.

As a matter of law, it is settled that the number of public investors who have taken upon themselves the burden of opposing the MOP Claim has no bearing in the case at bar.

Case v. Los Angeles Lumber Products Co., 308 U. S. 106, 114-15 (1939) (holder of $18,500 of $2,565,000 bonds outstanding was the sole objector).

Dudley v. Mealey, 147 F. (2d) 268 (C. C. A. 2d, 1945), cert. denied, 325 U. S. 873 (1945) (holder of $1,000 of $1,120,000 bonds outstanding was the sole objector).

Controversies involving fiduciary claimants involve such fundamental principles of bankruptcy administration that there is a duty on the Court to act irrespective of the status or number of objectors.

POINT VI

The orders of the Courts below constitute the first adjudication of the MOP Claim. The District Court order on the 1940 Plan has no effect herein.

Respondents now argue for the first time that, since the invalidity or subordination of the MOP Claim might have been raised in connection with the 1940 Plan, the order of the District Court approving that Plan is final and conclusive with respect to these matters (Group Brief, p. 77).

In support of their contention, respondents cite cases involving the doctrine of res judicata.

These cases are not in point, since they were concerned solely with the effect to be given to final judgments.

The order on the 1940 Plan is not a final judgment, since it was rendered nugatory by the subsequent action of the Circuit Court in remanding the proceeding.*

In re Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co., 135 F. (2d) 60 (C. C. A. 3rd, 1943).

* Missouri Pacific R. R. v. Protective Committee, 135 F. (2d) 741 (C. C. A. 8th, 1943).

Because of such remand, the order on the 1940 Plan cannot even be considered as the law of the case.

Leader v. Apex Hosiery Co., 108 F. (2d) 71 (C. C. A. 3rd, 1939), aff'd 310 U. S. 469 (1940).

In any event, the doctrine of the law of the case does not bar contentions which could have been, but were not, raised in connection with the prior proceeding.

Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hill, 193 U. S. 551 (1904).
Connett v. City of Jerseyville, 110 F. (2d) 1015 (C. C. A. 7th, 1940).
Chase v. United States, 261 Fed. 833 (C. C. A. 8th, 1919).

The District Court itself clearly did not regard its order on the 1940 Plan as constituting a bar. The District Court felt it necessary to try out the whole case on the merits and held that the claim "should be allowed" (R. 31).

Similarly, the Circuit Court stated in its opinion below: "No judicial determination upon the validity of the debt had ever been made * * *" (R. IV, 20), and then it also determined the issue on the merits.

POINT VII

This case is not moot.

This litigation is concerned with orders of allowance of the MOP Claim (see page 25, supra).

We have already demonstrated on pages 26-27 of our main brief how the hearing, order and appeal in this litigation were kept separate from the then pending Plan, and how petitioner's objections to the MOP Claim happened to arise in relation to such Plan.

The orders of allowance of the MOP Claim in issue will determine the ultimate disposition of the assets of MOP and NOTM, when the reorganization is concluded. Such orders patently have significance, irrespective of any particular plan.

Cf. Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307, 324 (1939).

The determination on the merits of this case will settle this matter for any future plan of reorganization. The case is therefore in no sense moot.

This is clearly demonstrated by the conclusion of Judge Learned Hand, speaking for the unanimous Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Knight v. Wertheim, 158 F. (2d) 838 (C. C. A. 2d, 1946), cert. denied sub nom. McGuire v. Equitable Office Bldg. Corp., 331 U. S. 818 (1947).

Respondents conclude their brief with an appeal to this Court to bar consideration of the merits of the MOP Claim because of the length of time the debtor railroads have been in reorganization proceedings. However, the decision of this Court on the merits obviously will not involve any delay.

The delay in these reorganization proceedings has not been caused by petitioner or by the litigation on the intercompany claim.

Respondents bear the responsibility. Twice—in 1943 and 1947—they themselves abandoned plans of which they had been the leading proponents, and requested the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to remand the plans—approved by the District Court—to the Commission.

If any comment on this situation be called for, it should not be with respect to petitioner who has sought an adjudication of a claim asserted by a fiduciary parent against a dominated subsidiary deprived of the protection of an independent trustee.

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully submitted that the order and judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit be reversed and that the cause be remanded with directions that the MOP Claim be disallowed or subordinated to the claims of the holders of MOP 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds.

Respectfully submitted,

ANDREW W. COMSTOCK, etc.,
Petitioner,

vs.

GROUP OF INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS, holding First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, et al.,
Respondents.

BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

Respondents file this brief in opposition to the petition of Andrew W. Comstock for a writ of certiorari to review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit which affirmed a separate order of the District Court overruling Comstock's Objection 19 and held that the intercompany claim was valid and ranked in priority to the common stock of the New Orleans.

Opinions Below

Circuit Court —Comstock v. Group of Institutional Investors, et al., 163 F. 2d 350 (C.C.A. 8th, 1947) (R. IV, 13-27).

District Court—In re Missouri Pacific R.R. Co., 64 F. Supp. 64 (E.D. Mo. 1945) (R. 1089).

Jurisdiction

Petitioner invokes the jurisdiction of this Court under Section 240(a) of the Judicial Code, as amended. 28 U.S. C.A. §347(a).

POINT I

The petition fails to set forth grounds for the exercise by this Court of its discretionary power to review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

A. The Petition presents a factual controversy upon which two courts have ruled adversely to the Petitioner.

The District Court made detailed and specific findings of fact (R. 8-30). In his appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals the petitioner made 115 assignments of error in his points on appeal, most of which pertained to the findings of fact of the District Court (R. 40). However, in his brief and in argument before the Circuit Court of Appeals the petitioner made no effort to sustain his assignments of error as to the findings of fact. Instead he proceeded to argue his case upon his own statement of the facts which differed radically from the findings made by the District Court. The Circuit Court of Appeals recognized that it was bound by the District Court's findings unless they were shown to be clearly erroneous (Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 52(a)). After careful examination of the record the Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that the findings of fact should not be disturbed. With respect to these matters the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, referring to Judge Moore who presided in the District Court proceedings, states:

> "* * * His findings of facts and conclusions of law were drawn with care and thoroughness, and appear to us to be responsive to all the issues presented by the objections here involved and the evidence that was adduced, and the appellant has not called our attention to any refusal on the part of the court to make findings in respect to any other issues claimed to have been presented. * * * (R. IV, 23)
> "On this appeal the case is stated for the appellant in substantial disregard of the findings of the trial court and practically as though the case was here to be tried by this court de novo on the voluminous evidence. This court must decline to assume that function. We may not set aside the findings of facts which have been made by the trial court, who in this case had more than ordinary opportunity to judge of the credibility of the witnesses, unless such findings were clearly erroneous. F.R.C. 52a; General Orders in Bankruptcy Nos. 36 and 49, 11 U.S.C.A. following Section 53. Though we have considered the appeal sufficient in form to require a complete study of the record and evidence, we are forbidden by the rule to upset those findings which are supported by substantial evidence and are not clearly erroneous nor induced by error of law. * * * " (R. IV, 25-26)

The petitioner in his petition for certiorari and brief has proceeded in much the same manner as he did in the Circuit Court of Appeals. He has stated his own version of the facts in "substantial disregard" of the findings of fact. It is significant that in his petition for certiorari and brief there is only one citation to the findings of fact and only one additional reference to them is made. The petitioner's brief asserts:

> "Petitioner seeks no re-examination of the facts. To a remarkable extent the facts, arising almost entirely from books of account and corporate records, are undisputed." (Italics supplied) (Brief, 33)

Heretofore petitioner has been unwilling to accept the facts as shown in the books of account and records to which he refers. He has contended throughout that the books and records in evidence were improperly kept and concealed the true condition of the New Orleans (R. 240, 516; Par. 73, R. 50). The statement of facts in the petition and brief, which conflicts in many important respects with the findings of fact, is a refutation of the petitioner's assertion that there is no dispute as to the evidence. It is clear that the petitioner is unwilling to present his case to this Court on the facts as found in the District Court. Of necessity this is true. The findings of fact of the District Court do not warrant the granting of the subordination which the petitioner seeks.

A petition for review which merely presents what is essentially a factual controversy fails to state grounds which justify this Court in exercising its power to grant a review.

General Talking Pictures Corp. v. Western Electric Co., et al., 304 U.S. 175, 178 (1938);

Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Dumore Co., 282 U.S. 813 (1931);

Southern Power Co. v. North Carolina Public Service Co., 263 U.S. 508 (1924).

This is especially true where the petitioner fails to point out wherein the trial court erred in making findings of fact.

B. No Conflict of Decisions is Presented.

The petitioner contends that the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is in conflict with a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. 2d 734 (1944) and with the decision of this Court in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U.S. 307 (1939). (See Questions 1, 2 and 3, Petition pp. 13-14 and Reasons 1, 2 and 3, Petition pp. 14-15.)

This contention is based in part on petitioner's assertion that the decision in each of these cases required subordination of the claim of an insolvent parent against a subsidiary (Questions 2 and 3; Petition pp. 14, 28). The petitioner has misconceived the decision of the courts below. The holding was that the Missouri Pacific in its dealings with the New Orleans had complied with its fiduciary obligations as a controlling stockholder (CL. 11, 13, R. 32, 33; FF. 33, R. 24-25). Because there was no ground for subordination, it was unnecessary for the courts below to decide the interesting questions set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 at page 14 of the petition.

Petitioner's statement of the facts is an effort to fit them into the mold of the decisions in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases. His method is to select facts from those cases for special emphasis and to compare them with his version of the instant case which is incomplete and differs substantially from the findings of fact and the evidence. Such a method fails to establish a conflict of decisions. In reality the asserted conflict "arises from differences in states of fact and not in the application of a principle of law." See Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Dumore Co., 282 U.S. 813 (1931). This is particularly true of cases such as Deep Rock and Commonwealth. In those cases it was the cumulative effect of all the facts which controlled the decisions. This Court in Pepper v. Litton, speaking of the subordination granted in the Deep Rock case, stated:

> "* * * This was based on the equities of the case—the history of spoliation, mismanagement and faithless stewardship of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the detriment of the public investors. * * *" (308 U.S. 295, 308)

A brief supplemental statement of the facts dealt with in the cases relied on by petitioner will demonstrate how widely they differ from the facts in the instant case.

Petitioner omits to mention a transaction to which about two and one-half pages of the opinion in the Deep Rock case (306 U.S. 317-320) are devoted. This transaction involved the acquisition and subsequent manipulation of the "Bradstreet properties" and a cracking plant. The $9,000,000 of "advances" to Deep Rock referred to in the petitioner's brief contained such items as interest compounded monthly, management fees, and rental of properties which Standard had purchased for account of Deep Rock. Although the assets of Deep Rock appear never to have been in excess of $17,000,000, total debits against Deep Rock were $52,000,000, against which there were credits of $43,000,000. Total indebtedness of Deep Rock from 1925 to the time of bankruptcy was in excess of its assets. Deep Rock was continuously "two jumps ahead of the wolf" (306 U.S., at 310).

No such facts exist in the instant case.* Quite the contrary is shown. The Missouri Pacific control resulted in substantial benefits to the New Orleans. Its competitive position was strengthened (FF. 10, 11 and 12, R. 13-15), its properties greatly improved (FF. 9, R. 13), efficiency of operations increased (FF. 10 and 12, R. 13-15; R. 820, 821, 830 and 831; Ex. 249) and a foundation was laid which enabled the New Orleans expeditiously and profitably to handle the great increase in traffic which occurred during the War and thereafter (R. IV, 26; R. 1015). In further contrast to the situation in the Deep Rock case, the courts below found that the Missouri Pacific in its dealings with the New Orleans was careful to observe its fiduciary obligations as controlling stockholder (FF. 13-16, 33, R. 15-17, 24 and 25; CL. 11 and 13, R. 32 and 33).

In the Commonwealth case, the parent, Inland, sold an issue of bonds, referred to in the opinion as the "Inland bonds", which were secured by the pledge of all of the outstanding common stocks of five subsidiary operating companies, including Michigan. The balance sheet of Michigan at its organization represented this stock as having a stated value of $1,250,000 (141 F. 2d, at 738). The fact was, however, that if an initial unjustified write-up of $1,966,509 had been eliminated, Michigan's indebtedness would have exceeded the investment in the properties involved to the extent of $162,069. Against this investment of $2,203,845, Michigan had outstanding $2,000,000 of bonds and owed its parent, Inland, $365,914 (ibid., at 737). This initial deficiency in the stated value of the stock wronged the Inland bondholders and was never corrected. Every loan thereafter made to Michigan and every dividend which it declared merely served to aggravate the original wrong done to the Inland bondholders.

Nothing comparable to these facts can be shown in the instant case. The consolidated balance sheet of the New Orleans and its subsidiaries as of December 31, 1925, the year in which it assumed control of the New Orleans, shows total assets of $60,000,000, capital of $15,000,000 and surplus of $7,000,000 (R. 266, 267). The consolidated balance sheet of the New Orleans and its subsidiaries as of August 31, 1931, near the end of the dividend paying period, shows total assets of $87,000,000, capital of $15,000,000 and surplus of approximately $8,000,000 (R. 81). As stated by the court below, the stock of the New Orleans pledged to secure the petitioner's Secured Serial Bonds "has been kept intact through depressions which wiped out vast amounts of such securities and of recognised value"* (R. IV, 27).

In his statements with reference to the intercompany claim and the adequacy of the capitalization of the New Orleans, the petitioner entirely omits to mention the supervision which the Commission exercised over the New Orleans under Section 20a of the Transportation Act (49 U.S.C.A. §20a). During the period of Missouri Pacific control, the New Orleans could not issue any of its First Mortgage Bonds without Commission approval. Issuance of the note representing $7,456,726 of the intercompany claim was authorized by the Commission under Section

* At the end of November, 1947, the New Orleans Common Stock was quoted at 105 bid, 112 asked and the Secured Serial Bonds were quoted at 106 bid, 108 asked (Bank and Quotation Record (W. B. Dana Co., New York, Dec. 6, 1947) pp. 53, 55).

20a (R. 86, 20839-20840). New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company Notes, Finance Docket No. 9817; 189 I.C.C. 600 (1933). In passing on the propriety of such authorization, the Commission was advised of the remaining notes evidencing the balance of the intercompany claim which had been issued under Section 20a(9). In granting such authority the Commission was required to and did find

> "* * * that such issue * * *: (a) is for some lawful object within its corporate purposes, and compatible with the public interest, which is necessary or appropriate for or consistent with the proper performance by the carrier of service to the public as a common carrier, and which will not impair its ability to perform that service, and (b) is reasonably necessary and appropriate for such purpose." (49 U.S.C.A. §20a(2))

The courts below understood the rule of the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases. Those cases involved a long history of mismanagement and faithless stewardship. In the instant case the courts below found the opposite to be true (FF. 33, R. 24; CL. 11, 13, R. 32-33). It seems clear that the conflict of decisions asserted by the petitioner "arises from differences in states of fact and not in the application of a principle of law." Accordingly, no question is presented which would warrant the granting of the writ.

C. The Contention that the New Orleans should have a Separate Trustee Presents no Important Question.

Point V of the petitioner's brief seems to suggest that a separate trustee for the New Orleans should be appointed, that he conduct a re-examination of the facts and that there be a new trial of the issues. Presumably the petitioner would suspend the proceedings on the plan of reorganization, now scheduled for hearing before the Commission on January 27th next, while the issues revolving about the intercompany claim are being redetermined. This would almost inevitably be the result of following such a procedure since it would be difficult to formulate a plan without determination of the position of the intercompany claim among the hierarchy of claims. Such a result would not be in the public interest or in the interest of any of the creditors.

Neither the appointment of a separate trustee nor a retrial of the issues is necessary. The findings show that Mr. Thompson, as Trustee, made a very full and careful examination in the fulfillment of his duty under Section 77(c)(9) (FF. 34-37, 39, R. 25-27; CL. 17, R. 33). Moreover, the petitioner was given every opportunity both before and at the trial of the issues to obtain all of the available information bearing on his case (FF. 44, R. 29). This controversy involving the intercompany claim has already taken up a disproportionate amount of time in these proceedings. To further delay the reorganization by another trial of the same issues is unthinkable.

The petitioner fails to specify with any degree of particularity how he has been prejudiced by the fact that Mr. Thompson occupies dual offices. It is not asserted that Mr. Thompson has failed to act impartially or that his investigation pursuant to Section 77(c)(9) was inadequate.

Upon analysis Point V of the petitioner's brief presents no substantial issue of fact or of law. It is a mere complaint against Mr. Thompson, as Trustee, which, because of its errors and omissions, is not supported by the findings or the evidence. Certainly it presents no important question which would justify granting the writ.

POINT II

Determination in favor of the Petitioner of the questions presented by the petition will not result in a reversal of the decisions below.

This Court will consider only questions presented by the petition.

> Supreme Court Rules, Rule 38(2);
> General Talking Pictures Corp. v. Western Electric Co., et al., 304 U.S. 175, 177-179 (1938);
> Connecticut Railway & Lighting Co. v. Palmer, et al., 305 U.S. 493, 496 (1939).

The decisions below are based on two separate grounds not included in the four questions set forth on pages 13 and 14 of the petition. The omission of these grounds from the petition is tantamount to a concession by petitioner that they are not of such a nature as to justify granting the writ.

One of these grounds is laches (FF. 34-45, R. 25-29; CL. 15, R. 33; R. IV, 20, 23). The holding that the petitioner is barred by laches completely disposes of his case and is in itself a sufficient basis for the decisions below. The other separate ground on which the decisions below were based rests upon the District Court's findings that the RFC and RCC were bona fide pledgees for value of $9,555,226.78 principal sum of the intercompany claim (CL. 3, 4 and 7, R. 30, 31). Although the RFC and RCC claims have since been paid, the order authorizing payment subrogated the First and Refunding Mortgage bondholders and other Missouri Pacific creditors to the extent of their interest (R. 1188, Ex. 335-357), to the lien of the RFC and the RCC on the pledged collateral, including the pledged portion of the intercompany claim (R. 1157 and 1165).

Thus, a determination in favor of the petitioner of the questions presented in the petition for certiorari will not result in a reversal of the order overruling the petitioner's Objection 19. It is not believed that this Court will wish to add to its already crowded docket a case which presents questions, the answering of which will not decide the ultimate issue. Boskey, Mechanics of the Supreme Court's Certiorari Jurisdiction, 46 Col. L.R. 255, 259 (1946).

POINT I

The petition fails to set forth grounds for the exercise by this Court of its discretionary power to review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

A. The Petition presents a factual controversy upon which two courts have ruled adversely to the Petitioner.

The District Court made detailed and specific findings of fact (R. 8-30). In his appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals the petitioner made 115 assignments of error in his points on appeal, most of which pertained to the findings of fact of the District Court (R. 40). However, in his brief and in argument before the Circuit Court of Appeals the petitioner made no effort to sustain his assignments of error as to the findings of fact. Instead he proceeded to argue his case upon his own statement of the facts which differed radically from the findings made by the District Court. The Circuit Court of Appeals recognized that it was bound by the District Court's findings unless they were shown to be clearly erroneous (Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 52(a)). After careful examination of the record the Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that the findings of fact should not be disturbed. With respect to these matters the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, referring to Judge Moore who presided in the District Court proceedings, states:

> "* * * His findings of facts and conclusions of law were drawn with care and thoroughness, and appear to us to be responsive to all the issues presented by the objections here involved and the evidence that was adduced, and the appellant has not called our attention to any refusal on the part of the court to make findings in respect to any other issues claimed to have been presented. * * * (R. >
> "On this appeal the case is stated for the appellant in substantial disregard of the findings of the trial court and practically as though the case was here to be tried by this court de novo on the voluminous evidence. We may not set aside the findings of facts which have been made by the trial court, who in this case had more than ordinary opportunity to judge of the credibility of the witnesses, unless such findings were clearly erroneous. F.R.C. 52a; General Orders in Bankruptcy Nos. 36 and 49, 11 U.S.C.A. following Section 53. Though we have considered the appeal sufficient in form to require a complete study of the record and evidence, we are forbidden by the rule to upset those findings which are supported by substantial evidence and are not clearly erroneous nor induced by error of law. * * *" (R. IV, 25-26)

The petitioner in his petition for certiorari and brief has proceeded in much the same manner as he did in the Circuit Court of Appeals. He has stated his own version of the facts in "substantial disregard" of the findings of fact. It is significant that in his petition for certiorari and brief there is only one citation to the findings of fact and only one additional reference to them is made. The petitioner's brief asserts:

> "Petitioner seeks no re-examination of the facts. To a remarkable extent the facts, arising almost entirely from books of account and corporate records, are undisputed." (Italics supplied) (Brief, 33)

Heretofore petitioner has been unwilling to accept the facts as shown in the books of account and records to which he refers. He has contended throughout that the books and records in evidence were improperly kept and concealed the true condition of the New Orleans (R. 240, 516; Par. 73, R. 50). The statement of facts in the petition and brief, which conflicts in many important respects with the findings of fact, is a refutation of the petitioner's assertion that there is no dispute as to the evidence. It is clear that the petitioner is unwilling to present his case to this Court on the facts as found in the District Court. Of necessity this is true. The findings of fact of the District Court do not warrant the granting of the subordination which the petitioner seeks.

A petition for review which merely presents what is essentially a factual controversy fails to state grounds which justify this Court in exercising its power to grant a review.

General Talking Pictures Corp. v. Western Electric Co., et al, 304 U.S. 175, 178 (1938);

Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Dumore Co., 282 U.S. 813 (1931);

Southern Power Co. v. North Carolina Public Service Co., 263 U.S. 508 (1924).

This is especially true where the petitioner fails to point out wherein the trial court erred in making findings of fact.

B. No Conflict of Decisions is Presented.

The petitioner contends that the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is in conflict with a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. 2d 734 (1944) and with the decision of this Court in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U.S. 307 (1939). (See Questions 1, 2 and 3, Petition pp. 13-14 and Reasons 1, 2 and 3, Petition pp. 14-15.)

This contention is based in part on petitioner's assertion that the decision in each of these cases required subordination of the claim of an insolvent parent against a subsidiary (Questions 2 and 3; Petition pp. 14, 28). The petitioner has misconceived the decision of the courts below. The holding was that the Missouri Pacific in its dealings with the New Orleans had complied with its fiduciary obligations as a controlling stockholder (CL. 11, 13, R. 32, 33; FF. 33, R. 24-25). Because there was no ground for subordination, it was unnecessary for the courts below to decide the interesting questions set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 at page 14 of the petition.

Petitioner's statement of the facts is an effort to fit them into the mold of the decisions in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases. His method is to select facts from those cases for special emphasis and to compare them with his version of the instant case which is incomplete and differs substantially from the findings of fact and the evidence. Such a method fails to establish a conflict of decisions. In reality the asserted conflict "arises from differences in states of fact and not in the application of a principle of law." See Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Dumore Co., 282 U.S. 813 (1931). This is particularly true of cases such as Deep Rock and Commonwealth. In those cases it was the cumulative effect of all the facts which controlled the decisions. This Court in Pepper v. Litton, speaking of the subordination granted in the Deep Rock case, stated:

> "* * * This was based on the equities of the case—the history of spoliation, mismanagement and faithless stewardship of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the detriment of the public investors. * * *" (308 U.S. 295, 308)

A brief supplemental statement of the facts dealt with in the cases relied on by petitioner will demonstrate how widely they differ from the facts in the instant case.

Petitioner omits to mention a transaction to which about two and one-half pages of the opinion in the Deep Rock case (306 U.S. 317-320) are devoted. This transaction involved the acquisition and subsequent manipulation of the "Bradstreet properties" and a cracking plant. The $9,000,000 of "advances" to Deep Rock referred to in the petitioner's brief contained such items as interest compounded monthly, management fees, and rental of properties which Standard had purchased for account of Deep Rock. Although the assets of Deep Rock appear never to have been in excess of $17,000,000, total debits against Deep Rock were $52,000,000, against which there were credits of $43,000,000. Total indebtedness of Deep Rock from 1925 to the time of bankruptcy was in excess of its assets. Deep Rock was continuously "two jumps ahead of the wolf" (306 U.S., at 310).

No such facts exist in the instant case.* Quite the contrary is shown. The Missouri Pacific control resulted in substantial benefits to the New Orleans. Its competitive position was strengthened (FF. 10, 11 and 12, R. 13-15), its properties greatly improved (FF. 9, R. 13), efficiency of operations increased (FF. 10 and 12, R. 13-15; R. 820, 821, 830 and 831; Ex. 249) and a foundation was laid which enabled the New Orleans expeditiously and profitably to handle the great increase in traffic which occurred during the War and thereafter (R. IV, 26; R. 1015). In further contrast to the situation in the Deep Rock case, the courts below found that the Missouri Pacific in its dealings with the New Orleans was careful to observe its fiduciary obligations as controlling stockholder (FF. 13-16, 33, R. 15-17, 24 and 25; CL. 11 and 13, R. 32 and 33).

In the Commonwealth case, the parent, Inland, sold an issue of bonds, referred to in the opinion as the "Inland bonds", which were secured by the pledge of all of the outstanding common stocks of five subsidiary operating companies, including Michigan. The balance sheet of Michigan at its organization represented this stock as having a stated value of $1,250,000 (141 F. 2d, at 738). The fact was, however, that if an initial unjustified write-up of $1,966,509 had been eliminated, Michigan's indebtedness would have exceeded the investment in the properties involved to the extent of $162,069. Against this investment of $2,203,845, Michigan had outstanding $2,000,000 of bonds and owed its parent, Inland, $365,914 (ibid., at 737). This initial deficiency in the stated value of the stock wronged the Inland bondholders and was never corrected. Every loan thereafter made to Michigan and every dividend which it declared merely served to aggravate the original wrong done to the Inland bondholders.

Nothing comparable to these facts can be shown in the instant case. The consolidated balance sheet of the New Orleans and its subsidiaries as of December 31, 1925, the year in which it assumed control of the New Orleans, shows total assets of $60,000,000, capital of $15,000,000 and surplus of $7,000,000 (R. 266, 267). The consolidated balance sheet of the New Orleans and its subsidiaries as of August 31, 1931, near the end of the dividend paying period, shows total assets of $87,000,000, capital of $15,000,000 and surplus of approximately $8,000,000 (R. 81). As stated by the court below, the stock of the New Orleans pledged to secure the petitioner's Secured Serial Bonds "has been kept intact through depressions which wiped out vast amounts of such securities"* (R. IV, 27).

In his statements with reference to the intercompany claim and the adequacy of the capitalization of the New Orleans, the petitioner entirely omits to mention the supervision which the Commission exercised over the New Orleans under Section 20a of the Transportation Act (49 U.S.C.A. §20a). During the period of Missouri Pacific control, the New Orleans could not issue any of its First Mortgage Bonds without Commission approval. Issuance of the note representing $7,456,726 of the intercompany claim was authorized by the Commission under Section

* At the end of November, 1947, the New Orleans Common Stock was quoted at 105 bid, 112 asked and the Secured Serial Bonds were quoted at 106 bid, 108 asked (Bank and Quotation Record (W. B. Dana Co., New York, Dec. 6, 1947) pp. 53, 55).

20a (R. 86, 20839-20840). New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company Notes, Finance Docket No. 9817; 189 I.C.C. 600 (1933). In passing on the propriety of such authorization, the Commission was advised of the remaining notes evidencing the balance of the intercompany claim which had been issued under Section 20a(9). In granting such authority the Commission was required to and did find

> "* * * that such issue * * *: (a) is for some lawful object within its corporate purposes, and compatible with the public interest, which is necessary or appropriate for or consistent with the proper performance by the carrier of service to the public as a common carrier, and which will not impair its ability to perform that service, and (b) is reasonably necessary and appropriate for such purpose." (49 U.S.C.A. §20a(2))

The courts below understood the rule of the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases. Those cases involved a long history of mismanagement and faithless stewardship. In the instant case the courts below found the opposite to be true (FF. 33, R. 24; CL. 11, 13, R. 32-33). It seems clear that the conflict of decisions asserted by the petitioner "arises from differences in states of fact and not in the application of a principle of law." Accordingly, no question is presented which would warrant the granting of the writ.

C. The Contention that the New Orleans should have a Separate Trustee Presents no Important Question.

Point V of the petitioner's brief seems to suggest that a separate trustee for the New Orleans should be appointed, that he conduct a re-examination of the facts and that there be a new trial of the issues. Presumably the petitioner would suspend the proceedings on the plan of reorganization, now scheduled for hearing before the Commission on January 27th next, while the issues revolving about the intercompany claim are being redetermined. This would almost inevitably be the result of following such a procedure since it would be difficult to formulate a plan without determination of the position of the intercompany claim among the hierarchy of claims. Such a result would not be in the public interest or in the interest of any of the creditors.

Neither the appointment of a separate trustee nor a retrial of the issues is necessary. The findings show that Mr. Thompson, as Trustee, made a very full and careful examination in the fulfillment of his duty under Section 77(c)(9) (FF. 34-37, 39, R. 25-27; CL. 17, R. 33). Moreover, the petitioner was given every opportunity both before and at the trial of the issues to obtain all of the available information bearing on his case (FF. 44, R. 29). This controversy involving the intercompany claim has already taken up a disproportionate amount of time in these proceedings. To further delay the reorganization by another trial of the same issues is unthinkable.

The petitioner fails to specify with any degree of particularity how he has been prejudiced by the fact that Mr. Thompson occupies dual offices. It is not asserted that Mr. Thompson has failed to act impartially or that his investigation pursuant to Section 77(c)(9) was inadequate.

Upon analysis Point V of the petitioner's brief presents no substantial issue of fact or of law. It is a mere complaint against Mr. Thompson, as Trustee, which, because of its errors and omissions, is not supported by the findings or the evidence. Certainly it presents no important question which would justify granting the writ.

POINT II

Determination in favor of the Petitioner of the questions presented by the petition will not result in a reversal of the decisions below.

This Court will consider only questions presented by the petition.

> Supreme Court Rules, Rule 38(2);
> General Talking Pictures Corp. v. Western Electric Co., et al., 304 U.S. 175, 177-179 (1938);
> Connecticut Railway & Lighting Co. v. Palmer, et al., 305 U.S. 493, 496 (1939).

The decisions below are based on two separate grounds not included in the four questions set forth on pages 13 and 14 of the petition. The omission of these grounds from the petition is tantamount to a concession by petitioner that they are not of such a nature as to justify granting the writ.

One of these grounds is laches (FF. 34-45, R. 25-29; CL. 15, R. 33; R. IV, 20, 23). The holding that the petitioner is barred by laches completely disposes of his case and is in itself a sufficient basis for the decisions below. The other separate ground on which the decisions below were based rests upon the District Court's findings that the RFC and RCC were bona fide pledgees for value of $9,555,226.78 principal sum of the intercompany claim (CL. 3, 4 and 7, R. 30, 31). Although the RFC and RCC claims have since been paid, the order authorizing payment subrogated the First and Refunding Mortgage bondholders and other Missouri Pacific creditors to the extent of their interest (R. 1188, Ex. 335-357), to the lien of the RFC and the RCC on the pledged collateral, including the pledged portion of the intercompany claim (R. 1157 and 1165).

Thus, a determination in favor of the petitioner of the questions presented in the petition for certiorari will not result in a reversal of the order overruling the petitioner's Objection 19. It is not believed that this Court will wish to add to its already crowded docket a case which presents questions, the answering of which will not decide the ultimate issue. Jurisdiction.

Petitioner invokes the jurisdiction of this Court under Section 240(a) of the Judicial Code, as amended. 28 USCA §347(a).

Preliminary Statement.

There are two matters which require consideration before taking up the facts.

Nature of the Proceedings.

These are proceedings for the reorganization under Section 77 of the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans and affiliated railroad corporations. Pursuant to Section 77(d), the Commission certified a second plan of reorganization in October 1944. (R. 20892) Petitioner, Comstock, and others filed a number of objections to the 1944 Plan. Comstock's Objection 19 (R. 232, 237-247) asserted that the 1944 Plan was unfair and inequitable because, in the allocation of new securities to the Secured Serial Bonds, the Commission failed to treat the intercompany claim as invalid or subordinate to the New Orleans capital stock.[1] In January and March 1945, the district court held hearings[2] on objections to the 1944 Plan as required by Section 77(e). In accordance with the opinion of the district court (R. 1089) two orders were entered on January 22, 1946; one, No. 2604-A (R. 34), overruling Comstock's Objection 19, and the other, No. 2604-B (R. 1126), approving the 1944 Plan generally. The writ herein was granted

[1] Other Comstock objections, numbered 1-8, 13 and 26, are based in whole or in part upon his Objection 19. (R. 228-230, 231, 234)

to review an order of the court below (R. IV, 28), entered on August 28, 1947, affirming Order No. 2604-A.[1]

Petitioner's brief treats the proceedings in the district court involving his Objection 19 as if they were hearings on objections to the intercompany claim. The Petitioner persisted in this attitude at the hearing despite the refusal of the district court to so narrowly limit the issues. (R. 386-390, 585, 694, 711-712, 714-735) Order No. 2604-A is based only in part upon a conclusion of law that the intercompany claim ought to be allowed. (CL. 8, R. 31) The district court in overruling Objection 19 determined a more comprehensive issue, namely, that, in so far as that objection is concerned, the 1944 Plan is fair and equitable. (CL. 18, R. 33-34)

At the request of the court below, the Commission filed a brief in the appeals from Order No. 2604-B approving the 1944 Plan generally, suggesting that, because of substantial changes in conditions, said Plan required further review by the Commission. On September 9, 1947—two years and eleven months after the Commission certified the 1944 Plan—the court below, pursuant to the suggestion of the Commission and with the approval of the appellants and appellees, entered an order vacating and setting aside Order No. 2604-B and directing that the district court return the 1944 Plan to the Commission for "further investigation, consideration and recommendation".[2] Further hearings on the plan before the Commission are scheduled to begin on March 23, 1948.

[1] Writs were also granted to review three orders, entered in the court below on August 28, 1947, dismissing protective appeals which Petitioner had taken in the names of Mr. Thompson, as Trustee, and the New Orleans from Order No. 2604-A and an appeal from an Order of the district court denying permission to appeal from order No. 2604-A in the name of Mr. Thompson, as Trustee. (R. IV, 31, 33, 34)

[2] Wright v. Group of Institutional Investors, 163 F. 2d 1022 (C.C.A. 8th, 1947).

Petitioner's Improper Use of Matter Outside the Record.

The Petitioner stated in his reply brief in support of his application for certiorari that he accepted the findings of the courts below. (p. 2) His statement on this subject was:

> "We assume the findings of the District Court. Our challenge is directed only to the legal import of these unchallenged facts."

In his brief on the merits Petitioner utterly ignores this statement. His main brief is devoted largely to argument of the facts. Again and again throughout the brief this Court is asked to go through the record and to find the facts in accordance with Petitioner's version.

Petitioner is not satisfied with the record upon which the findings are based. To support his conclusions as to the facts, he relies on a miscellaneous collection of documents not in the record, which include a Senate committee report, a transcript of hearings before a Senate subcommittee and a report of the Commission to Congress. If these extraneous documents are to be included, this Court will have before it what is in effect a new record which neither of the courts below considered in connection with the findings. Petitioner in reality is asking for a new trial in this Court upon a new record.

The documents dehors the record are cited on the mere pretext that this Court will take judicial notice of them. Whether or not this Court will take judicial notice of these documents is irrelevant. They are cited to establish the truth of the facts therein recited or to discredit one of the witnesses. Petitioner offered some of these documents at the hearing before the Commission on the 1944 Plan. The trial officer properly excluded them. (R. 160-161) Petitioner made no effort to have these documents admitted in evidence at the trial although an unsuccessful attempt was made to use them for the purpose of impeaching a witness. (R. 962-968) Because of the obvious impropriety of citation to documents outside the record, we will ignore them.

It seems to us that the Petitioner has not fulfilled the statements made to this Court as to the nature of the issues to be presented on this review. This Court presumably granted the writ for the purpose of considering certain questions of law. Instead, Petitioner is asking for a new trial. For the reason stated in Point I of this brief, the Petitioner is not entitled to a new trial. Accordingly, the writ should be dismissed without examining the merits of the Petitioner's contentions.

The Facts.

The Petitioner's brief is largely predicated upon the theory that the facts of this case call for application of the principles of the Deep Rock[1] case. His statement of the facts is an effort to fit them into the mold of that decision. The result is a one-sided statement containing errors and omissions. As already noted, the findings are to a large extent ignored. Consequently, we find it necessary to restate the facts and to integrate our statement with the findings.

Petitioner charges that the Missouri Pacific management dominated and controlled the New Orleans, caused it to pay illegal and improper dividends, made improper loans to it, imposed unfair transactions upon it, and generally mismanaged it. In order to understand the matters of which Petitioner complains, it is necessary to examine the setting in which they occurred. An improvement program or any other single feature of railroad operations cannot be considered separately in abstract. A dividend policy or the propriety of borrowing cannot be judged on the basis of the books of account alone as the Petitioner has tried to do in his brief. This is particularly true in considering issues of the kind presented by the record now under review. These issues involve an attempt to determine, after the lapse of many years, the motives and purposes of the men who constituted the Missouri Pacific management. Many of these men were dead at the time of the trial. In passing judgment on the Missouri Pacific management during the years 1925-1932, it is necessary to understand some of the basic facts relating to the railroad system they were operating and what they were trying to accomplish. One of the most important and far-reaching developments in the history of the Missouri Pacific System since 1917, and one which is a clear indication of the purposes of that management, was the adoption of the Baldwin Improvement Program.

The Baldwin Improvement Program 1923-1930.

The late Mr. L. W. Baldwin came to the Missouri Pacific as president in 1923. He saw that large sums of money would have to be spent to make it a first class railroad system, and it was decided by the management to put Mr. Baldwin in a position to make the Missouri Pacific such a railroad. The improvement and expansion program, inaugurated in 1923, came to an end in 1930. Over $200,000,000 was spent in carrying it out. The program included acquisition of the GCL, which controlled the I-GN, and a fifty per cent. interest in the Denver & Rio Grande Western. These were considered necessary for the strategic development of the system. The results of this program were notable. At the beginning of the period Missouri Pacific's share of southwestern business was approximately 22%. At the close of this period this had increased to 27%, a shift which Mr. Wyer[1] described as revolutionary. (R. 880-882) Group Exhibit 25 (column 12) shows what was done in this period. (Ex. 269, R. 883-885) From 1917 to 1922 average annual expenditures for additions and betterments were $7,118,000. During the Baldwin Improvement Program they averaged $23,785,000 per annum. In 1931-1939 they averaged $5,988,000, and for the War period, 1940-1943, the average was $10,293,000. In the whole history of the Missouri Pacific since 1917 there is nothing at all comparable to the Baldwin Improvement Program. (R. 884; FF. 5, R. 10)

Acquisition of the GCL-1924.

In 1924 the Missouri Pacific purchased the controlling capital stock interest in the New Orleans. This purchase was financed in part by an issue of fifteen-year sinking fund notes of the Missouri Pacific. The unpaid portion of these 7% notes was refunded in 1926 by the sale of the Secured Serial Bonds in the principal amount of $13,156,000. (R. 630-631) These bonds were secured by the pledge of $1,000 par value of New Orleans capital stock for each $1,000 principal amount of outstanding bonds. (Ex. 146, 177; R. 611, 630; FF. 6, 7, R. 11)

[1] Mr. William Wyer was called as an expert witness by the Group. He had been Secretary and Treasurer of the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans. At the time Mr. Wyer testified he was Chief Executive Officer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Mr. Wyer is a member of a firm of railroad consultants who have been retained in a number of railroad reorganizations, including the Wabash, Alton, Chicago & Northwestern, Denver, Rio Grande & Western, Erie, New Haven, Seaboard, Central of Georgia, and the Florida East Coast. (R. 868-870)

Description of the GCL.

The fifteen companies in the GCL system operate approximately 1,736 miles of railroad, the principal lines of which extend from the lower Rio Grande Valley in Texas around the Gulf Coast to Anchorage and New Orleans, Louisiana. (Ex. 267, R. 870; Ex. 268, R. 873; FF. 8, R. 12)

The Missouri Pacific System map opposite this page[1] shows that the railroad of the GCL connects with the Missouri Pacific at Kinder, Louisiana. This connection provides the shortest route from points along the Gulf Coast Lines to St. Louis, Chicago and the east. Control of Gulf Coast Lines by Missouri Pacific R. R., 94 ICC 191, 199 (1924). Another connection with the Missouri Pacific is made via the lines of the I-GN from Houston to Longview, Texas, and the lines of the Texas & Pacific, a Missouri Pacific subsidiary, from Longview to Texarkana. These afford a route to Kansas City, Omaha and points to the north and west.

The New Orleans itself operates only about 11% of the total GCL mileage. (R. 874; FF. 8, R. 13) It is primarily a holding company owning all of the stock and bonds of the other fourteen companies. (R. 874; FF. 3, R. 9-10) It is the only one of the GCL group which had any securities outstanding in the hands of the public.[2] The railroad of the Brownsville extending from Houston to Brownsville, Texas, is the most important of the group.

The Brownsville operates one-third of the GCL mileage and, during the period with which we are concerned, contributed from 61% to 84% of the income of the group. (R. 927; FF. 8, R. 12) It is not surprising, therefore, to find that the greater part of the New Orleans income is derived from its investments in the securities of the GCL subsidiaries.

Seven of the fourteen GCL subsidiaries were not a part of the GCL system in 1924, these having been acquired by the New Orleans during the period 1925-1931. (Ex. 98, R. 488; FF. 3, R. 9-10) Although not urged in his petition for certiorari Petitioner charges that five of these seven GCL subsidiaries were acquired by the New Orleans for the benefit of the Missouri Pacific System. These five subsidiaries are referred to as "North Texas Feeder Lines", although none of them is located in north Texas, as the map opposite page 8 will show. It is stated that the acquisition of the five short lines by the New Orleans resulted in injury to it and benefit to the Missouri Pacific and the I-GN. (Petitioner's brief, pp. 18 and 19) It is also asserted that "some" of these short lines do not even connect with the Gulf Coast Lines. Two of them have no direct connection with the Gulf Coast Lines. One, the Asherton & Gulf, is a 32-mile branch line extending to the north of the I-GN route between Gardendale, Texas and the Mexican border. The other, the Sugar Land, owns a 19-mile branch line connecting with the I-GN near Houston, Texas. (Ex. 268, R. 873) Petitioner offered no proof at the trial to show in what directions traffic from these five short lines flows. Nor is there any proof showing the proportion of traffic originating on these short lines delivered to the Gulf Coast Lines. Nor is there any proof showing that the GCL traffic originating and terminating on these lines is profitable or unprofitable. Petitioner, instead, builds a whole structure of assumptions upon Mr.

Baldwin's statement that some of the short lines "tie in" with the I-GN. (R. 605-606) It might just as well be assumed, for example, that the Asherton & Gulf runs to a rock quarry which is a source of supply for GCL ballast.

The I-GN itself was a subsidiary of the New Orleans. This had been true since prior to the Missouri Pacific's acquisition of the New Orleans. It is immaterial that, from an operational standpoint, Mr. Baldwin looked upon the I-GN as a Missouri Pacific subsidiary. (R. 603-604)

The comments of the Commission, only partly quoted at pages 18 and 19 of Petitioner's brief, suggest no impropriety in the acquisition by the New Orleans of the short lines. (239 ICC at 71) As Mr. Wyer testified, branch lines frequently operate at a deficit. Their value is in the traffic contributed to the main line. (R. 873)

It was proposed by way of compromise in the plans discussed by the Commission that the deficits of the short lines be allocated over the system in accordance with the benefits derived from traffic obtained from the short lines. These and other adjustments formed the basis for allocation of new securities to the New Orleans security holders. After considering these matters, the Commission certified its 1940 Plan and thereafter its 1944 Plan. Thus, the 1944 Plan now under review has already given effect to any adjustments which need to be made. Nevertheless Petitioner seeks to obtain a further advantage, by way of subordination, on the basis of these same facts.

This matter of the short lines serves to emphasize the importance of what is said in Point VI of this brief. (p. 76, infra) Matters such as this were gone into in great detail at the first hearings before the Commission on the 1940 Plan. At that time it would have been appropriate for Petitioner to have raised his subordination issue. Matters such as these are within the field of the Commission's expert knowledge. Its findings would have been an essential prerequisite to a consideration of these matters by the district court. Yet Petitioner asks this Court to try these issues upon the incomplete facts in the record.

The Petitioner was required by the order setting the date for the 77(e) hearing on the 1944 Plan and by the provisions of Section 77(e), to specify in detail his objections to the 1944 Plan.[1] No mention of the short lines is made in his objections and, aside from a few questions addressed to Mr. Baldwin at the district court hearing, the Petitioner gave no indication that he had any objection pertaining to acquisition of the five short lines. (R. 243-244, 605-606) These omissions are inexcusable. The transcript of the proceedings before the Commission on the 1940 Plan was available to Petitioner and so was the Commission's 1940 Report from which he quotes. Moreover, his witness Delaney spent a month in the St. Louis and Houston offices of the debtors going over their books. (R. 477, 495) The first statement of his objections concerning any of the short lines appeared in the Petitioner's district court brief after the record had been closed. The proponents of the plan were at least entitled to know the issues which they were required to meet. In this state of the record the district court was bound to find against the Petitioner. (FF. 3, 4, R. 9, 10)

Comparison of the GCL before and after Missouri Pacific Acquisition.

In making his charges of mismanagement and overreaching, Petitioner completely ignores facts which show

[1] "§77(e). Upon the certification of a plan by the Commission to the court, the court shall give due notice to all parties in interest of the time within which such parties may file with the court their objections to such plan, and such parties shall file, within such time as may be fixed in said notice, detailed and specific objections in writing to the plan and their claims for equitable treatment."

a scrupulous regard for the separate rights of the New Orleans and its security holders. He also brushes aside the great improvement in physical condition and traffic which occurred in the GCL during the Missouri Pacific regime. In dealing with this aspect of the case, we will consider, first, physical condition, and, second, traffic, in each case making comparisons between the period when the GCL was under independent management and the period after the Missouri Pacific acquired control.

(1) Physical Condition.

At the time arrangements were made for acquisition of the controlling interest in the capital stock of the New Orleans in the spring of 1924, it was apparent that substantial improvements would be necessary in order to make the GCL a first class railroad system. These properties had emerged in 1920 from Federal control in an unsatisfactory condition. They had been undermaintained (R. 829-830) and the condition of track and roadbed was such that the high-speed trains, which were put into operation in later years for the handling of perishable traffic from the Valley, could not have been operated. (R. 831) There was much old and obsolete equipment. The exhibits of Messrs. Rodgers[1] and Kirkpatrick[1] give a fair indication of the condition of the GCL road and equipment at the time the Missouri Pacific acquired control of the New Orleans. (Ex. 249, 251-253, R. 815, 829; see also R. 814-815, 819-823, 828, 832, 834; FF. 9, R. 13)

---

[1] Mr. D. Rucker Rodgers, of the Mechanical Department, was called as a witness by the Group. He had had approximately 42 years of railroad experience. (R. 814) Mr. C. S. Kirkpatrick, Chief Engineer of the GCL since 1916 and of the I-GN since 1925, was called as a witness by the Group. He had been engaged in railroad location, construction and maintenance work since 1900. (R. 827-828)

At the end of 1923 only 16.6% of GCL ties were creosoted. This compares with 87.7% at the end of 1931. (Ex. 251-253, R. 829) New rail laid in the period prior to 1924 averaged 3,594 tons per annum. This compares with an average of 5,760 tons per annum for the period after 1924. (Ex. 251-253, R. 829)

If a similar comparison is made of the equipment data for the two periods, the result is likewise favorable to the second period. (Ex. 249, R. 815) Locomotive failures averaged 21,000 miles per failure in the earlier period, 111,000 miles in the second period and 302,000 and 204,000 miles, respectively, in the last two years of the second period. (Ex. 249, R. 815) Testing the condition of locomotives on the basis of inspection by the Commission's inspectors, the second period likewise shows very great improvement. The data shown on Group Exhibit 16 (Ex. 249, R. 815) with respect to freight cars and passenger cars indicates that the condition of this equipment was substantially better in the second period than in the first. (R. 821, 822)

The effect of the Baldwin Improvement Program upon the GCL after its acquisition by the Missouri Pacific in 1924 is also notable. Group Exhibit 37 (Ex. 297, R. 910) shows what was done in the way of improvement on the GCL during the period of the Baldwin Improvement Program. It also furnishes a basis for comparison with the previous period beginning in 1916 when the GCL was under independent management. Of the $32,000,000 expended by the GCL for additions and betterments during the fifteen-year period 1916-1931, about $22,000,000, or nearly 70%, was expended during the six years 1925-1930. (R. 911) Mr. Kirkpatrick's exhibit (Ex. 255, R. 832) briefly describes the major additions and betterments to road and equipment during the period 1925-1932. The record convincingly demonstrates the very substantial improvement in the physical condition of the GCL which occurred after the Missouri Pacific acquired a controlling interest in the New Orleans. (FF. 9, R. 13)

This improved physical condition had an important effect upon GCL traffic.

(2) Traffic.

Mr. J. A. Brown, the General Freight Agent and Freight Traffic Manager of the GCL from 1912 until 1927 and Chief Traffic Officer of the Missouri Pacific at the time of his retirement in June 1944, was called as a witness by the Group. (R. 840-841) He described some of the difficulties which the GCL encountered in dealing with other carriers prior to 1924. (R. 844-848) The lower Rio Grande Valley is an important citrus and vegetable producing region. (R. 842-843) Beginning in 1912 the GCL made various arrangements with connecting carriers for the handling of the perishable traffic beyond its lines. (R. 843-848) Prior to 1921 none of these arrangements was satisfactory. Either the division allowed to the GCL was too low or there was an inability to obtain the necessary supply of refrigerator cars to handle the perishable traffic. (R. 843-848) The above cited portions of the record clearly demonstrate that prior to 1924 the GCL was not in a strong position to bargain with other carriers. (FF. 10, R. 13-14)

For a number of years Mr. Brown had endeavored to make arrangements with the Illinois Central for the handling of the perishable traffic northward from Baton Rouge. In 1921 such an arrangement was consummated. It was considered by the independent management of the GCL as entirely satisfactory. (R. 848) It should be noted here that the running time for trains handling the perishable traffic between the Valley and St. Louis was 102 hours in 1924. (R. 850) The Baton Rouge route involved ferrying the trains across the Mississippi at Anchorage, Louisiana. The average train required three river crossings which consumed six hours. (R. 850-851) After this traffic began to move via Kinder and the Missouri Pacific, these schedules were reduced as follows:

January 1, 1925....97 hours
October 21, 1927....72 hours
October 30, 1929....64½ hours
October 22, 1932....61½ hours (FF. 10, R. 14; R. 858).

In 1927 the Southern Pacific extended its line to the lower Rio Grande Valley and obtained initially about 20% of the perishable traffic moving out of the Valley by railroad. The GCL was able to hold the Southern Pacific to this ratio thereafter. Mr. Brown stated that without the aid of the Missouri Pacific the GCL could not have maintained its position against this competition. (R. 861-862; FF. 11, R. 15)

After 1927 a considerable amount of the perishable traffic began to move to Kansas City and beyond. The Southern Pacific and its connections have a shorter route to Kansas City than the Missouri Pacific System lines. The Missouri Pacific and its affiliate, the Texas & Pacific, together with the New Orleans and its subsidiary, the I-GN, established schedules from Houston to Kansas City which enabled the GCL to hold its position with respect to this traffic. Mr. Brown stated that this could not have been done without the aid of the Missouri Pacific. (R. 851-853; FF. 12, R. 15)

As noted, after acquisition of the GCL by the Missouri Pacific the perishable traffic moving to St. Louis and the east was delivered to the Missouri Pacific at Kinder. Mr. Brown testified as to the manner in which the divisions of the revenue from this traffic were made up. (R. 851-853)

The vegetable traffic will serve as an example. When this traffic moved via Baton Rouge the GCL received about 74% of the revenue. After it started moving through Kinder, Mr. Baldwin requested Mr. Perkins of the Missouri Pacific and Mr. Brown of the GCL to work out new divisions. He instructed them to make sure that the arrangements would be "liberal in favor of the GCL". (R. 853-855; FF. 13, R. 15) The negotiations between Mr. Brown and Mr. Perkins resulted in a division that gave to the GCL an advantage of about $5 per car over the arrangement which had theretofore existed between the GCL and the Illinois Central. (R. 854-855; FF. 13, R. 15) A few years later the advantage to the GCL in using the Kinder route as compared with the Baton Rouge route was even more marked as the result of the decision of the Commission in the Southwestern Rate Divisions case. After that decision, the advantage to the GCL on citrus amounted to $32 per car and on vegetables $27.82 per car. (R. 855-856; FF. 13, R. 16)

Another instance of the benefit to the GCL of its relationship with the Missouri Pacific is the arrangement which the GCL made with the American Refrigerator Transit Company for the supply of refrigerator cars. This Company is owned by the Missouri Pacific and the Wabash. In the handling of the perishable business it was important that the GCL have an adequate supply of refrigerator cars. The perishable traffic is seasonal, beginning in September and continuing through the spring months. (R. 844-845) It would have been too costly and quite impracticable for the GCL to have maintained its own supply of refrigerator cars. During the period prior to 1924 the GCL experienced serious refrigerator car shortages. (R. 844-845, 847-848) After 1924 no such difficulties were experienced. (R. 861) Thus, the GCL was greatly benefited and substantial savings were effected by having an adequate supply of refrigerator cars available to meet this seasonal demand. In addition to this, the American Refrigerator Transit Company made a special arrangement with the GCL whereby the refrigeration charge to the shipper accrued to the GCL, the latter being obligated to pay the actual costs of icing the refrigerator cars. This resulted in a profit to the GCL during the period 1924-1932 of $6,171,876. (R. 860; FF. 14, R. 16)

Thus far we have dealt with the perishable traffic moving out of the Valley. Group Exhibits 21 and 22 (Ex. 265, 266, R. 856, 861) deal with GCL traffic generally. The first of these exhibits compares the interchange at Kinder with the interchange at Baton Rouge for the years 1922-1931. It will be noted that, although Missouri Pacific deliveries to the GCL at Kinder increased substantially in the 1925-1931 period, the GCL continued to receive from the Illinois Central at Baton Rouge the greater portion of the traffic which it had theretofore received. This indicates that the diversion of the perishable traffic to the Missouri Pacific at Kinder did not have any serious results on the traffic received from the Illinois Central at Baton Rouge. The net effect was greatly to the advantage of the GCL. Group Exhibit 22 (Ex. 266, R. 861) compares for the years 1922-1931 total carloadings for all United States Class I railroads with total carloads received by the GCL from (1) all roads, (2) the Missouri Pacific and the I-GN, and (3) all roads other than the Missouri Pacific and the I-GN. It is significant that in every one of the years after 1924 the GCL was in a relatively better position from a traffic standpoint than the railroads of the United States generally. It should also be noted that, although the GCL received somewhat less traffic from non-System lines after 1924, this was more than made up by the receipts from the Missouri Pacific and the I-GN. Group Exhibits 21 and 22 (Ex. 265, 266, R. 856, 861) demonstrate that from a traffic standpoint the GCL's relationship with the Missouri Pacific was of great benefit to the GCL. (FF. 15, R. 16)

We have dealt with some of the direct traffic benefits which the GCL derived from its relationship with the Missouri Pacific. There were also indirect benefits which are difficult to measure in dollars and cents. The Missouri Pacific widely advertised the products of the Rio Grande Valley. In addition to newspaper and magazine advertising, a special car was sent throughout the United States for the purpose of exhibiting the products of the Valley. (R. 859) The Missouri Pacific also maintained experimental farms in the Valley for the purpose of aiding the growers in improving the quantity and quality of their products. (R. 858) The purpose of these activities was, of course, to secure additional traffic for the System. (FF. 16, R. 17)

These improvements in roadbed, equipment and service were not only of benefit to security holders but also to the communities which the GCL served. As an example, the products of the lower Rio Grande Valley are in competition with perishable products from other sections of the United States. This competition was importantly affected by the length of time required for the movement of the perishables from the Valley to market. It seems obvious that the competitive position of the Valley producers was greatly improved as a result of the steps taken by the Missouri Pacific management to shorten train schedules and to see that an adequate supply of refrigerator cars was maintained. Thus did the Missouri Pacific contribute to the building up of the Gulf Coast territory and the creation of greater traffic for the GCL.

These are considerations which must be taken into account in passing judgment on the Missouri Pacific management. What we have shown is entirely inconsistent with the Petitioner's charges of mismanagement and overreaching. If there had been any disposition on the part of the Missouri Pacific management to take advantage of the GCL, they could have accomplished it most easily in their dealings with the GCL in respect of maintenance and traffic matters. It would have been quite simple to continue maintenance at substantially the levels which prevailed prior to the acquisition of the GCL. Also, in the matter of divisions the Missouri Pacific management could have taken advantage of the GCL if they had had the motives attributed to them in the Petitioner's brief. By such means the Missouri Pacific could have improved its earnings quite as effectively as by the declaration of the New Orleans dividends. Instead we find that the Missouri Pacific management leaned over backward in their dealings with the GCL.

Method of Financing Improvements.

As already noted, the Missouri Pacific spent over $200,000,000 on the Baldwin Improvement Program. (p. 6, supra) Such a program had to be financed. From 1917 to 1928 the Missouri Pacific put back into its improvement program approximately $49,000,000 available for dividends. (R. 887)

The remainder of the improvement program had to be financed through borrowing. It was not feasible to issue a few bonds each time that more funds were needed. Instead short term borrowings to finance the improvement program were allowed to accumulate to a point where they could be refunded by a bond issue large enough to be saleable. (R. 887) Group Exhibits 26, 27 and 28 illustrate the policy which was followed on the Missouri Pacific. (Ex. 271, 273, 275, R. 888; R. 887-890; FF. 17, R. 17)

The same pattern was followed by the GCL. Group Exhibit 29 shows a typical GCL financing cycle which ended in February 1928. (Ex. 277, R. 890) During that cycle $6,683,739 was spent by the GCL for additions and betterments. From time to time, as funds were needed for additions and betterments, the GCL obtained them by means of short term borrowings. After the short term borrowings had accumulated to approximately $4,500,000, an issue of first mortgage bonds was sold to underwriters and the short term loans were refunded. (R. 887, 893-896; Ex. 277, R. 890) The new cycle which began in 1928 was interrupted by the depression. The advances which the Missouri Pacific had made to the New Orleans in this new cycle could not be refunded due to the fact that market conditions in 1931 rendered it impossible to sell long term obligations. (R. 896, 1022-1026; FF. 17, R. 17)

Advances by the Missouri Pacific to the GCL.

Following the refunding of the short term borrowings in 1928, the Missouri Pacific continued to make advances to the New Orleans. The net principal sum of these advances as of the date of bankruptcy amounted to $10,565,227. (Ex. 239, R. 791) These advances fall into two categories, (1) those made during the period when dividends were being paid on the capital stock of the New Orleans, and (2) those made after that time and prior to bankruptcy. (R. 900-901; FF. 18, R. 18) The last dividend was declared on October 13, 1931. (Ex. 173, R. 617)

Petitioner asserts that approximately $2,795,000 of the intercompany claim is made up of advances for dividends.

(Petitioner's Brief, p. 10, 11) This assertion, upon any theory of the facts, is incorrect.[1] Petitioner ignores the basic considerations which controlled the making of the advances. Mr. Wyer, who participated in the proceedings of the directors throughout almost the entire period of the new financing cycle which began in 1928 (R. 892, 893, 896, 918), gave a very clear statement of the basic policy which was followed by the Missouri Pacific in making the advances. (R. 887-910) He testified that until near the end of 1931 the advances were geared to the GCL capital expenditures. The Missouri Pacific directors were kept advised in detail as to the progress of additions and betterments, and Mr. Wyer left no doubt that the basic purpose of the advances was to enable the GCL to proceed with its improvement program. (Ex. 281, 297, R. 900, 910)

There is another consideration bearing on the purposes and propriety of these advances. The Missouri Pacific and the GCL were railroad corporations subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In December 1932, the Missouri Pacific applied to the Commission for authority to borrow from the RFC and to pledge to the RFC, among other collateral, $9,955,226.78 of the intercompany claim and advances of $2,486,000 made by the Missouri Pacific to the I-GN. (R. 119) With respect to this collateral the Commission made the following finding:

[1] The total of $2,795,000 at the foot of column 1 in the table on page 10 of the Petitioner's brief erroneously includes (1) advances of $300,000 and $250,000 made on November 30, 1928 and February 28, 1929, which were repaid on June 4, 1930, December 28, 1931 and February 27, 1932 (Ex. 239, R. 791) and (2) the full amount of six advances which were in excess of the so-called "matching" quarterly dividends of $259,576 each. (Ex. 301, R. 914) If these errors be corrected, the aggregate of all of the advances contained in the intercompany claim which could have been used for "matching" dividends is $2,082,456. Furthermore, this computation takes no account of the fact that the Missouri Pacific received only a part of these dividends.

> "The advances aggregating approximately $12,441,000, upon which interest is being currently paid at the rate of 6% per annum, represent open account indebtedness to the applicant by two of its controlled companies accumulated over a period of five years. All of these advances were used to pay for additions and betterments to the properties, except that during the last two years certain of the advances to the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company were made to overcome operating deficits. In the case of both of the controlled companies the obligations to repay the advances lie between their first mortgage bonds and their capital stock. In the case of the International-Great Northern Railroad Company they are senior as to the payment of interest on $17,000,000 of adjustment mortgage bonds, but junior to that bond issue as to security." (R. 117).

The Commission authorized a further loan from the RFC to the Missouri Pacific and the pledge of collateral to secure the RFC loans which included $9,955,226.78 of the intercompany claim.

Section 20a(2) of the Interstate Commerce Act (49 USCA, §20(2)) provides:

> "It shall be unlawful for any carrier to issue * * * any * * * evidence of * * * indebtedness of the carrier * * *, unless and until, and then only to the extent that, upon application by the carrier, and after investigation by the commission of the purposes and uses of the proposed issue and proceeds thereof, * * *, the commission by order authorizes such issue * * *. The commission shall make such order only if it finds that such issue * * *: (a) is for some lawful object within its corporate purposes, and > compatible with the public interest, which is necessary or appropriate for or consistent with the proper performance by the carrier of service to the public as a common carrier, and which will not impair its ability to perform that service, and (b) is reasonably necessary and appropriate for such purpose."

Subsection (9) of Section 20a excepts from the provisions of subsection (2) notes of a carrier maturing not more than two years after the date thereof and aggregating not more than 5% of the par value of the securities of the carrier then outstanding.

In February 1933, the New Orleans applied to the Commission under Section 20a for authority to issue $7,456,726.78 face amount of its notes to the Missouri Pacific. (R. 86) In its application the New Orleans showed that it was indebted to the Missouri Pacific for advances in the sum of $10,355,226.78, of which $400,000 was then represented by a promissory note, and that it had been requested by the Missouri Pacific to issue demand notes in the amount of $9,955,226.78 as evidence of the then remaining balance of indebtedness for advances. The application further recited that in partial compliance with that request the New Orleans had issued a demand note in the sum of $2,498,500, which together with the $400,000 note, exhausted its power to issue short term obligations under Section 20a(9) of the Transportation Act. The applicant sought authority to issue to the Missouri Pacific a promissory note bearing interest at the rate of 5½% per annum for the remainder of this indebtedness ($7,456,726.78). In complying with its statutory obligation, the Commission found:

> "* * * that the issue by the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company of a note or notes in an aggregate amount not exceeding $7,456,726.78, as aforesaid, (a) is for a lawful object within its corporate purposes, and compatible with the public inter> est, which is necessary and appropriate for and consistent with the proper performance by it of service to the public as a common carrier, and which will not impair its ability to perform that service, and (b) is reasonably necessary and appropriate for such purpose." New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company Notes, Finance Docket No. 9817; 189 ICC 600, 601 (1933) (R. 86, 20839-20840).

Petitioner's contention of borrowing to pay dividends is based entirely upon the near coincidence as to the dates of certain dividends and advances. This is quite superficial and ignores basic principles of accounting. It is not customary for any corporation, railroad or otherwise, to keep two separate cash accounts, one in which income is deposited and the other in which capital items are kept. Instead, cash income and proceeds of borrowing are mingled in a single cash account. This cash is drawn upon from time to time to meet cash requirements whether chargeable to capital or otherwise. However, the auditor, in applying the accounting rules to these receipts and disbursements, will treat separately the capital and income items. To illustrate, let it be assumed that the New Orleans receives $200,000 in cash on January 31st and that the cash represents net earnings. At the time of receipt of this cash the New Orleans needs $200,000 to pay a bill for a capital item such as a new freight yard. The officers know that on the succeeding April 1st they will need $100,000 in cash to pay a dividend. Instead of borrowing to pay for the new freight yard, the officers use the $200,000 of cash income to pay for it. Then, three days prior to the dividend date the officers borrow $100,000 to reimburse the treasury in part for the investment in the new freight yard. In handling the matter in this way the officers save the New Orleans about two months' interest on $100,000 of the money spent for the new freight yard. (R. 901-903)

The court below found that until near the end of 1931 the immediate purpose of the advances in question was to reimburse the New Orleans treasury for expenditures for additions and betterments and that the basic and underlying purpose of the advances during that period was to enable the GCL to make additions and betterments to its properties. (FF. 18, R. 18) These findings are amply supported by the evidence reviewed in the foregoing discussion of the advances. (Ex. 281, 297, R. 900, 910)

The advances made in the latter part of 1931 and thereafter were to cover operating expenses and interest and sinking fund requirements of the New Orleans first mortgage and equipment trust obligations. The net advances made during this period amounted to $3,148,683. Clearly these advances were of benefit to the Secured Serial bondholders. (FF. 18, R. 18, 19)

Petitioner's charges of mismanagement are based in part on the inclusion in the intercompany claim of an item of $1,261,009.84. (Petitioner's brief, pp. 16-18, 34-37) This item originally represented indebtedness due from the New Orleans and its subsidiaries to the I-GN, also a subsidiary of the New Orleans. With the exception of $211,218.90 of "interest on unpaid bills" owing by the GCL to the I-GN, the sum of $1,261,009.84 represented an advance of cash items such as fuel and supplies by the I-GN. (Ex. 221-225, R. 701, 697-705; R. 793-797, 1041, 1048) At the same time the I-GN was indebted to the Missouri Pacific in an amount in excess of $1,261,009.84. There was no sound reason why the I-GN should be carrying the New Orleans and its subsidiaries. (R. 797) The result of the transaction complained of was that the New Orleans became obligated to the Missouri Pacific in the sum of $1,261,009.84 and the Missouri Pacific cancelled a like amount of indebtedness owing by the I-GN to it. At the same time the obligations of the New Orleans and its subsidiaries to the I-GN were cancelled. The transaction is evidenced by appropriate ledger entries on the books of each of the Companies affected.[1] (Ex. 221-225, R. 701 as corrected at R. 793-797; Ex. 240, R. 794; R. 1043, 1048-1049) It is asserted that this transaction "saddled" the New Orleans with uncollectible claims of the I-GN. The purported basis for this assertion is a reference to Mr. Eckert's testimony to the effect that the GCL could not pay the I-GN. (Petitioner's brief, p. 17) It is clear from his testimony on redirect that he had no intention of suggesting that the obligors were insolvent and could not ultimately pay their debts to the I-GN. (R. 1048-1049; see also R. 797, 1043; Ex. 240, R. 794) There is no basis in the record for the assertions in Petitioner's brief that the obligations of the GCL subsidiaries were uncollectible in whole or in any substantial part. This subject is dealt with at pages 28-30, infra. In any event the New Orleans had to protect its ownership and control of the GCL subsidiaries. The properties of the GCL subsidiaries constituted 89% of the GCL mileage. These bills for fuel and supplies were of direct benefit to the New Orleans and it could not have permitted them to remain unpaid.

The Petitioner has entirely overlooked the fiduciary obligation of the New Orleans to its subsidiary, the I-GN. If in fact some of these items owing to the I-GN were "uncollectible", it would have been a violation of New Orleans' fiduciary obligation to have "saddled" them on its subsidiary, the I-GN. Thus, if we assume Petitioner's version of the facts, he is complaining of a transaction which relieved the I-GN of a saddling operation.

In any event the transaction had not the slightest effect upon the GCL system. It owed $1,261,009.84 prior to the transaction and not a penny more thereafter. Clearly the holders and pledgees of the New Orleans capital stock were not prejudiced in the slightest by the transaction.[1] (FF. 28, R. 22)

Dividends Declared and Paid on the Capital Stock of the New Orleans.

Despite the findings of two courts to the contrary, Petitioner asserts that the New Orleans paid dividends out of capital. (FF. 31, R. 23-24, R. IV, 26) In considering this matter, which is largely factual, it is necessary to have an understanding of the method by which the accounts of the GCL subsidiaries of the New Orleans were handled.

(1) Indebtedness of the GCL Subsidiaries to the New Orleans.

Petitioner asserts that the income account of the New Orleans was improperly stated. His reasons for this assertion are that no reserve was established for past due obligations owing by the GCL subsidiaries to the New Orleans, and that some or all of the Brownsville dividends constituted mere "paper income". (Petitioner's brief, pp. 33-34, 13-14)

---

[1] Petitioner's Objection 19 fails to mention the "saddling" transaction, although he was required by Section 77(e) to specify his objections in detail. (R. 232, 237, 247) The only suggestion of an objection at the trial was the emphasis put upon the fact that no cash changed hands. (R. 706, 792-795, 1041-1043, 1048) As noted in connection with the short lines matter (p. 11), supra), the proponents of the 1944 Plan were entitled to know the case they had to meet.

The past due indebtedness of various subsidiaries to the New Orleans largely consisted of advances made to these subsidiaries, interest on indebtedness and items which the witnesses referred to at the hearing as "family line bills". (R. 505-507) The family line bills were items owing by the GCL subsidiaries to the New Orleans for joint expenses, per diem, fuel, materials, supplies, etc. It is pointed out that this indebtedness to the New Orleans increased substantially over the period 1925-1932. (Petitioner's brief, footnote, p. 34) It is asserted that this indebtedness was not worth its face value for the reason that a large part of it was past due.

Mr. Wyer explained these items and the reason why they continued to accumulate. (R. 918-923) The New Orleans, although it operated only 11% of the GCL mileage, was banker for the entire GCL system. As noted at page 8, supra, it was the only one of the GCL companies which had any securities outstanding in the hands of the public. In carrying out the extensive improvement program which was in effect throughout the period 1925-1930, the GCL subsidiaries were not in a position to finance their own improvements except out of earnings and by borrowing from the New Orleans. The New Orleans could have made additional investments in the capital stock of its subsidiaries in order to finance these additions and betterments. Instead, however, the New Orleans continued the system which was in effect when the Missouri Pacific acquired control of the GCL. Earnings of the subsidiaries of the New Orleans were insufficient to meet their obligations for operating expenses, dividends and the cost of the heavy improvement program, with the result that some of these items had to be deferred. Group Exhibit 40 shows that the expenditures for additions and betterments on the GCL during the period 1925-1930 were running from 10.8% to as high as 31.8% of total operating revenues. (Ex. 301, R. 914-915) A large part of the freight revenues of these subsidiaries was cleared through the New Orleans and, as these items were received by the New Orleans, they were credited against family line bills and other obligations owing by the subsidiaries. However, since the total requirements of the subsidiaries for operating expenses, etc. and for the improvements was in excess of these receipts, some bills had to go unpaid. No matter what particular items remained unpaid, the existence of the unpaid items was fundamentally caused by the improvement program. Thus, the accumulating indebtedness of the GCL subsidiaries in large part represented advances by the New Orleans to its subsidiaries for improvements. Group Exhibits 43 and 44 support this conclusion. (Ex. 305, 307, R. 923, 926) These exhibits are an analysis of the balance sheets of the Brownsville and the Beaumont for the period 1924-1931. The last four lines of these exhibits compare increase in net investments with increase in debt for the period. It will be noted that funded debt remained substantially unchanged during this period, the increase in debt being represented largely by family line bills. As of December 31, 1930, the end of the improvement program, the net increase in investments of the Brownsville was substantially in excess of the cumulative increase in debt. (Ex. 305, R. 923) As of the same date, the increase in debt of the Beaumont was running somewhat ahead of its increase in investment. However, this cannot be attributed to dividends. The Beaumont paid no dividends after the Missouri Pacific acquired control of the GCL. Although the court below and Mr. Thompson gave the Petitioner every opportunity to obtain the information he wanted from the trustee's officers,[1] he put in evidence only the balance sheets of the Beaumont and the Brownsville. (FF. 44, R. 29) In the absence of the facts which these balance sheets would show, he seeks to prove his case by drawing inferences which are quite inconsistent with the facts reviewed above.

[1] The quotation from Mr. Delaney's testimony at page 60 of Petitioner's brief contradicts that witness' previous testimony and the statements of Petitioner's counsel. (R. 495, 433, 472, 527)

It is plain from the foregoing that until the latter part of 1931 the increase in indebtedness of the GCL subsidiaries to the New Orleans represented an additional investment of the New Orleans in its subsidiaries which was devoted to improvements. Thus, there is no substantial basis for the statement that the age of various items of this indebtedness is an indication that they were not worth their face value. Whatever merit there might be in aging bills due from outsiders, it has no valid application to bills from wholly owned subsidiaries whose condition is fully known to the parent creditor and whose assets could at any time be called upon for payment of the debt.

The fact that the New Orleans acted as banker for its subsidiaries also explains the so-called "paper dividends" of the Brownsville about which Petitioner complains. As already noted, the New Orleans collected a large part of the freight revenues of its subsidiaries. Thus, when the Brownsville declared a dividend, payment was often effected by setting-off the dividend against freight revenues owing to the Brownsville. There can be no doubt that such a set-off accomplished legal payment of the Brownsville dividend.

(2) 1931 Brownsville Dividends.

On June 17, 1931 the Brownsville declared two dividends aggregating $655,079, vouchers for which went into the family line accounts and were not paid. (Ex. 311, R. 928) On July 11th of the same year another dividend of $3,500,000 was declared by the Brownsville, of which

$1,400,000 was not paid. (Ex. 311, R. 928) The remaining $2,100,000 of the July 11, 1931 dividend was paid in installments over a period of one year and five months following the declaration. (Ex. 311, R. 928) Even if the unpaid $2,055,079 of dividends declared by the Brownsville in 1931 be eliminated, the balance in the earned surplus of the New Orleans at the end of 1931 would still be approximately $300,000 after payment of all dividends declared by the New Orleans. (Ex. 71, R. 432) The court below found that none of the New Orleans dividends were paid out of capital. (FF. 31, R. 23) It is significant that the letter from the Commission's Bureau of Accounts with respect to this matter required the New Orleans to write off only $1,400,000 of the $4,155,079 of dividends declared by the Brownsville in 1931. (Ex. 62, 63, R. 420, 421; R. 928-929, 1034-1035)

(3) Transactions within the GCL are without Significance.

Petitioner took up much of the trial in delving into various and sundry transactions between the New Orleans and the GCL subsidiaries. Although two courts have rejected his contentions, Petitioner still insists upon dragging these controversial factual matters into the case. We contend that the transactions within the GCL are without significance. As noted at page 30, supra, the New Orleans was the only company in the GCL group which had securities or indebtedness outstanding in the hands of the public. Thus, from the standpoint of a stockholder of the New Orleans, the posture which Petitioner assumes, it is without any consequence whether the assets of the New Orleans consist of family line bills, advances, past due indebtedness or any other obligation owing by its subsidiaries or by shares of stock of the subsidiaries. Nor is it of any consequence to a New Orleans stockholder whether the dividends declared by the GCL subsidiaries in favor of the New Orleans were advisable or inadvisable. The passing of a dividend[1] or any other payment from one of the GCL subsidiaries to the New Orleans did not change the value of the New Orleans capital stock by one penny. As long as these subsidiary companies were efficiently operated, of which the record affords abundant evidence, a common stockholder of the New Orleans would not be affected by any kind of financial transaction within the group. If Petitioner were a creditor of one of these subsidiaries, the intercompany transactions might be of some importance. As a stockholder of the New Orleans, they are of no concern to him. It is for this reason that we contend that there is no significance whatever to the vast amount of irrelevant matter which Petitioner has injected into these proceedings pertaining to transactions between the New Orleans and its subsidiaries.

(4) The Consolidated figures.

For the same reason we contend that the only true picture of the New Orleans and its subsidiaries is given by the consolidated balance sheets (R. 81) and the consolidated income statements. (Ex. 299, R. 912) These consolidated figures eliminate all of the intercompany items and show the actual assets and earnings. Consolidated figures were chiefly used by the Commission in its reports approving the plans of reorganization. Mr. Wyer testified that the board of directors of the New Orleans, recognizing the significance of the consolidated figures, was concerned primarily with them. (R. 912) The board left it to the lawyers and the auditing department to see that dividends from the subsidiaries and other intercompany transactions conformed with the requirements of law.[1]

[1] During the period 1925-1931 the Brownsville was the only GCL subsidiary of the New Orleans which paid any dividends on its capital stock. (Ex. 199, R. 666)

The consolidated income account of the GCL shows that the earnings were ample to cover the dividends declared by the New Orleans. (Ex. 299-301, R. 912, 913, 914) Net income available for dividends from March 1, 1916 to December 31, 1931 amounted to $15,986,390. The dividends declared during this period, including the extraordinary 1924 dividend, amounted to $13,646,191. There is no support for the statement that dividends were paid by the New Orleans out of capital. (FF. 31, R. 23; CL. 14, R. 33)

This leaves for discussion only the question of the propriety of maintaining regular dividends throughout the period 1925-1931. That subject will be dealt with in Point III of the argument.

It seems to us that an impartial examination of the facts of this case will demonstrate beyond any doubt that at the end of 1931 the GCL was a vastly better railroad than it was in 1924 when the Missouri Pacific acquired control, that its service to the public had been greatly improved during the Missouri Pacific regime, and that, in its dealings with the New Orleans, the Missouri Pacific showed a scrupulous regard for the obligations which it had assumed as a majority stockholder of the New Orleans.

[1] Mr. Frank Andrews, of Houston, Texas, was general solicitor and Mr. Carl de Gersdorff, of New York, was general counsel for the New Orleans during the greater part of the period in question. (Ex. 6-34, R. 403-406, 912, 535)

POINT I

The findings of fact of the District Court will be accepted by this Court unless clear error is shown.

Following a full hearing on the factual issues, the district court made findings. These findings, concurred in by the court below, will be accepted by this Court without re-examination of the evidence, in accordance with the "two-court" rule. Page v. Arkansas Gas Corp., 286 U.S. 269, 271 (1932); Williams Co. v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 316 U.S. 364, 367 (1942).

This rule is particularly appropriate in a case such as this. Judge Moore, who presided at the trial in the district court, has supervised the administration of the estates in bankruptcy of the Missouri Pacific, the GCL and their affiliates for a number of years. Over this long period he has acquired an intimate knowledge of the affairs of these debtors, the manner in which their properties were operated and their finances handled. He has also supervised administration of the Frisco and Cotton Belt estates. The knowledge of railroad operating, financing and accounting matters which he has gained in this wide experience specially qualified him to try the issues here involved.

POINT II

The District Court properly held that the pledgees' lien of the RFC and the RCC upon $9,955,226.78 principal sum of the intercompany claim was valid as against any equities in favor of holders and pledgees of the capital stock of the New Orleans. The First and Refunding Bondholders and other lien creditors of the Missouri Pacific have been subrogated to the extent of their interests, respectively, to said pledgees' lien.

We have noted that the Commission authorized the Missouri Pacific to pledge with the RFC, among other collateral, $9,955,226.78 principal sum of the intercompany claim. (p. 22, supra) Until sometime after May 29, 1946 the RFC held this collateral to secure loans made to the Missouri Pacific in 1932 and 1933 in the principal sum of $23,134,800. (R. 1129-1137) The pledged portion of the intercompany claim is represented by two negotiable notes. (Ex. Vol. II, 358, 359) The RCC also made loans to the Missouri Pacific in 1932 which were secured by pledged collateral and a second lien on the collateral pledged by the Missouri Pacific with the RFC. (R. 1159) As of May 29, 1946, the RCC loans, with interest, amounted to over $1,900,000. (R. 1160) Until Petitioner filed his Statement of Points on May 13, 1946 (R. 40, 41, 48), there had not been even so much as a suggestion that the RFC and the RCC were not bona fide pledgees for value of $9,955,226.78 of the intercompany claim. Indeed, at the opening of the hearing in the district court, Petitioner's counsel in effect agreed that the RFC was a bona fide pledgee holder of the New Orleans notes and freely conceded that said notes "in the hands of the RFC or its assigns constitute the valid, legal and binding obligations of the New Orleans to the extent required to satisfy the RFC's loans". (R. 382-386, 334; see also R. 176-177, 186-187) This is a concession which had to be made. The rule that the pledge of a negotiable instrument to a bona fide pledgee cuts off all equities of third parties is firmly established in our law.[1] Thus, the pledge by the Missouri Pacific of the two New Orleans notes in negotiable form aggregating $9,955,226.78 in principal sum, as security for the loans made to the Missouri Pacific by the RFC and the RCC, operated to cut off any defenses or equities which might have been asserted by or through the New Orleans.

However, Petitioner took the position that the market value of the RFC collateral, exclusive of the intercompany claim, was at the time of the trial in excess of the amount due on the loan. Accordingly, he urged that under rules of marshaling the RFC would be required to satisfy its claim out of its other collateral. (R. 384-386; see also R. 1255) This contention is without merit. For the purpose of allocating new securities in reorganization, market value, and particularly market value at a given date, is of little importance. Value for purposes of reorganization is based upon a number of factors, the most important of which is earning power.[2] For purposes of the 1944 Plan and this review, a valuation of the RFC and the RCC collateral has been made by the Commission. In its Supplemental Report of July 4, 1944 approving the 1944 Plan, the Commission made the following finding:

> "It may be added that certain of the junior creditors also contend that the excess in value, if any, of collateral securing the Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and bank loans also fall within the category of free assets. The value of this collateral is discussed hereinafter. The Railroad Credit Corporation has a second lien upon all collateral securing the Finance Corporation loans. Such of the collateral as has a market value is subject to wide fluctuations in price. The record does not warrant a finding of any excess value of the collateral securing

This also applies to the finding of the district court as to the market value on a particular date of the RFC and the RCC collateral. (R. 1156, 1164, 1177)

these loans over the amount of the loans". (R. 20761-20762)

Such a finding of value may not be challenged except by showing that the Commission acted arbitrarily or in contravention of law.[1] None of Petitioner's objections pertains to this finding. (R. 227) He offered no evidence at the trial to refute it. Therefore, the above quoted finding of the Commission conclusively determines that the RFC and the RCC needed all of the collateral pledged with them to support the new securities allocated to them under the 1944 Plan. So long as this finding stands, all questions as to marshaling are eliminated.

Accordingly, the district court correctly affirmed the action of the Commission allocating new securities, based on the pledged portion of the intercompany claim, only to the RFC and the RCC. (FF. 23, R. 20; CL. 9 and 10, R. 31-32) Thus, in so far as the pledged portion of the intercompany claim is concerned, Petitioner's Objection 19 was properly overruled.

On May 29, 1946, over four months after entry of the order overruling Petitioner's Objection 19, the district court entered two orders. One authorized Mr. Thompson, as trustee of the Missouri Pacific, to purchase the RFC claim and the collateral securing the same for the sum of $26,033,385.[2] (R. 1155) The other authorized him to purchase the claim of the RCC and the collateral securing the same for the sum of $1,934,507.[2] (R. 1164) These two orders are based on petitions of the trustee for instructions. (R. 1129, 1158) At the hearing on these petitions the First and Refunding and the General Mortgage and the petition of the trustees of the First and Refunding Mortgage for sequestration of income were admitted in evidence without objection.[1] (R. 1190-1191) The chief accounting officer of the Missouri Pacific trustee in bankruptcy testified that substantially all of the surplus funds in the Missouri Pacific estate available for settlement with the RFC and the RCC were derived from property subject to the First and Refunding and General mortgages. (R. 1188)

Petitioner served no answer to either of the above mentioned petitions of the trustee in bankruptcy. He was represented at the May 9, 1946 hearing on these petitions but offered no evidence. (R. 1169) His counsel made a statement at the close of this hearing urging that the RFC and the RCC loans be paid. (R. 1253) It was also urged on Petitioner's behalf that the district court should defer determining the rights of the First and Refunding bondholders with respect to the RFC and RCC collateral and the funds to be used for the paying of their claims. (R. 1254-1257)

The District Court did not undertake to determine the nature and extent of the liens on the funds to be used for purchase of the Missouri Pacific notes held by the RFC and RCC. It did, however, insert provisions in each of the above mentioned orders for the protection of the interests of the lien creditors in these funds. Except for the reference in the quotation below to the RFC, paragraph 2 of each of the orders is the same:

> "That the notes and collateral so acquired from R.F.C. shall be held by Trustee for the benefit of the holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds outstanding, and for the benefit of any other creditors of said Debtor Company, to the extent of their respective interests, if any, in the cash used in the purchase of said notes and collateral as the same may appear or may be hereafter determined by the Court or any Reorganization Plan, such holders or other creditors being hereby subrogated to the interest, rights, liens, and benefits of the R.F.C. under its said claim and in and to such notes and the collateral pledged as security therefor, to the end that their respective rights and interests may be fully protected in any marshaling of the assets of the Debtor Company or under the terms of any Plan of Reorganization that may be finally confirmed in these proceedings; and the Court hereby expressly reserves jurisdiction to make from time to time such further order or orders as may be deemed necessary or appropriate to protect and enforce the rights and equities of said bondholders and such other creditors in the premises". (R. 1157, 1165)

Petitioner did not appeal from either of these two orders.

The granting clauses of the First and Refunding Mortgage contain a pledge of "tolls, income, rents, revenues, issues and profits" from the mortgaged property. (Ex. Vol. II, 314) Article Eight of the First and Refunding Mortgage grants to the trustees of said mortgage the right to enter upon the mortgaged property, operate it and collect and receive all tolls, earnings, income, rents and profits thereof upon the happening of specified events of default, including a default in the payment of any installment of interest on any of the First and Refunding Bonds which continues for a period of three months. (Ex. Vol. II, 315-322) Similar provisions are contained in the Missouri Pacific General Mortgage. (Ex. Vol. II, 327-333) On June 7, 1933, the trustees of the First and Refunding Mortgage filed a petition in the court below requesting sequestration of income. (Ex. Vol. II, 335-351)

There can be no doubt that the surplus funds derived from the property subject to the liens of these two mortgages are also subject to those liens. In some jurisdictions a bankruptcy trustee or receiver collecting income from mortgaged properties after default acts, from the day of appointment, for mortgage creditors in the order of their pledge priorities regardless of whether they formally demand sequestration.[1] In other jurisdictions it is required that the mortgagee first demand sequestration.[2] The trustees for the First and Refunding Mortgage, no doubt out of abundant caution, complied with the stricter rule. (Ex. Vol. II, 335) Thus, it is clear that the First and Refunding and General Mortgage bondholders had first and second liens, respectively, upon substantially all of the funds used by the trustee in bankruptcy in purchasing the RFC and RCC claims.[3] The other creditors, who may have a minor interest in these funds, are the Central Branch Union Pacific First Mortgage bondholders, the Little Rock, Hot Springs & Western First Mortgage bondholders and the Cairo & Thebes First Mortgage bondholders. (R. 1188)

If it should become necessary, the district court will determine the extent of the liens of the First and Refunding and the other mortgage creditors upon the surplus funds. However, we do not believe that a precise determination of these matters will ever be necessary. That would involve a long and wasteful accounting proceeding. The law and the facts just reviewed are sufficiently clear to enable the Commission and the Courts to determine the fairness of any plan for reorganization of the Missouri Pacific System.

[3] The order (Ex. Vol. II, 354) entered upon the sequestration petition did not require an impounding of the income from the property subject to the First and Refunding Mortgage. It directed that separate accounts be kept so as to show such income. Thus the lien of that mortgage upon the income may not be a full legal lien, but rather an equitable one, arising from the obligation of the trustee in bankruptcy to account for the funds coming into his hands.

As a result of the two above mentioned orders of May 29, 1946, the First and Refunding bondholders and other creditors have been subrogated to the rights of the RFC and the RCC in the Missouri Pacific notes formerly held by them and in the collateral securing said notes. Thereby these creditors as pledgees acquired perfect title to the pledged New Orleans notes.[1] Mr. Thompson, as trustee of the Missouri Pacific, holds these Missouri Pacific notes and the collateral securing them, not as a part of the general assets of the Missouri Pacific estate, but as trustee for the First and Refunding and other lien creditors subject to the terms of the subrogation orders.

Since no appeals were taken from these orders, they have become the law of the case, binding on Petitioner and all other Secured Serial bondholders.

The plan has been returned to the Commission for further proceedings in accordance with Section 77(d). In these proceedings the Commission will no doubt review its finding as to the value of the collateral formerly held by the RFC and the RCC. As noted at page 37, supra, the Missouri Pacific trustee used a total of $27,967,892 in cash which constituted income derived from property subject to the lien of the First and Refunding and certain first lien divisional mortgages, to satisfy the RFC and RCC claims. These lien creditors are now entitled to receive an allocation of new securities as nearly equivalent to $27,967,892 in cash as the collateral formerly held by the RFC and the RCC will justify. If all of that collateral is needed to support such an allocation, there can be no subordination of the pledged portion of the intercompany claim. Only if the Commission finds that the pledged portion of the intercompany claim or some part thereof is not required to support such an allocation will any question concerning such subordination arise. In the present state of the record, Petitioner's case revolves about the $610,000 principal sum of the intercompany claim which was not pledged with the RFC and the RCC.

POINT III

The Courts below properly held that the intercompany claim should not be subordinated.

Petitioner relies upon Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307 (1939) and In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. 2d 734 (C.C.A. 7th, 1944), contending that these decisions require that the intercompany claim in its entirety be subordinated to the interests of the holders and pledgees of the capital stock of the New Orleans. His brief selects facts from these cases for special emphasis. These are compared with Petitioner's version of selected facts from the record herein. As a result, his brief omits to state, or lightly passes over, several of the important facts which we think influenced the decisions in the cases upon which he relies. It is, therefore, necessary to supplement Petitioner's statement of these cases.

The Deep Rock Case.

Petitioner's brief omits to mention a transaction between the Deep Rock and its parent, Standard, to which about two and one-half pages of Mr. Justice Roberts' opinion is devoted. (306 U.S. 317-320) This transaction involved acquisition of the "Bradstreet properties" and a cracking plant in the names of dummies. Deep Rock was charged with the advances made by Standard for their acquisition. Subsequently Standard, through another subsidiary, acquired the properties and credited back to Deep Rock the amount of these advances. Standard thereby controlled the Bradstreet properties and cracking plant without which Deep Rock could not function. Deep Rock was then required to lease these properties for a term of years during which they were operated at a heavy loss. Nevertheless, Standard caused Deep Rock to renew the lease, which resulted in further heavy losses. The records contained inconsistent statements as to who was the real owner of the properties.

The $9,000,000 of open account indebtedness owed by Deep Rock to Standard at the time of bankruptcy included such items as interest compounded monthly, management fees charged by one of the Byllesby affiliates of Standard and rental of properties which Standard had purchased for the account of Deep Rock. The debits amounted to over $52,000,000, against which there were credits in Deep Rock's favor of $43,000,000.

It is not possible to reconstruct the Deep Rock balance sheets from the facts given in the Court's opinion. However, enough is shown to indicate that during most of the period from 1919 to the date of bankruptcy in 1933 publicly held indebtedness and preferred stock of Deep Rock, together with its indebtedness owing to Standard, were so large as to leave no equity for the common stock through which Standard exercised its control over Deep Rock. One of Standard's officials admitted that during most of the period following its organization Deep Rock was "two jumps ahead of the wolf". (306 U.S. at 310)

Petitioner cites the Deep Rock record to show that during this period Deep Rock had earnings substantially in excess of its dividends. However, these were earnings shown by the unaudited books of Deep Rock which were under the control of Standard. Mr. Justice Roberts' opinion suggests some skepticism as to the reliability of these books. This doubt seems justified by the fact that the income tax returns of Deep Rock for the same period reported a deficit of $9,000,000. (Deep Rock Record, Supreme Court, Vol. III, Ex. 93) In contrast it should be noted that the books of the GCL were required to be kept in accordance with elaborate regulations of the Commission. The Bureau of Accounts of the Commission made frequent and thorough audits of the GCL books. (R. 681-683; FF. 30, R. 23)

There can be no doubt that mismanagement and overreaching permeated the whole relationship between Standard and Deep Rock.

The Commonwealth Case.

In the Commonwealth case the parent, Inland, sold an issue of bonds, referred to in the opinion as the Inland bonds, which were secured by the pledge of all the outstanding common stocks of five subsidiary operating companies, including Michigan. The balance sheet of Michigan at organization represented this stock as having a stated value of $1,250,000. (141 F. 2d, at 738) The fact was, however, that if an unjustified initial write-up of $1,966,509 had been eliminated, Michigan's indebtedness would have exceeded the investment in the properties involved to the extent of $162,069. Against this investment of $2,203,845, Michigan had outstanding $2,000,000 of bonds and owed its parent, Inland, $365,914. (ibid., at 737) This initial deficiency in the stated value of the stock wronged the Inland bondholders and was never corrected. Every loan thereafter made to Michigan and every dividend which it declared merely served to aggravate the original wrong done to the Inland bondholders. In contrast to the facts of the Commonwealth case, we find that in the instant case the New Orleans, at the time of its acquisition by the Missouri Pacific, was adequately capitalized (R. 266-267) and furthermore that the character and amount of its capitalization was thereafter to a large extent subject to supervision and control of the Commission. Unlike the instant case, the master who tried the facts in the Commonwealth case found overreaching and mismanagement.

Analysis of Petitioner's Contentions.

Petitioner's charges as to acquisition of the short lines, the saddling transaction and dividends out of capital have been dealt with in the preceding statement of facts. He has failed to show that the findings as to these matters were clearly wrong. These are factual questions which require no further consideration.

Before proceeding to the fundamentals, it is necessary to consider Petitioner's argument which proceeds from the premise that borrowing to pay dividends is improper. Contradicting the findings (FF. 18; R. 18) Petitioner asserts that certain of the advances to the New Orleans were for the purpose of financing dividends. Much of Petitioner's argument is based on this contention. The argument only results in confusing the real issues. It substitutes a phrase for thoughtful analysis. There are statements in the Deep Rock case which imply that there may be some impropriety in borrowing to pay dividends. In the circumstances of that case borrowing for such a purpose was obviously improper. Certainly it was not the intention of this Court to lay down the rule that borrowing to pay dividends is illegal or improper per se. The real objection in the Deep Rock case was that funds were borrowed to pay improper dividends. The borrowing was merely one of a number of circumstances which led to the conclusion that the dividends were improper. This interpretation of the language of Mr. Justice Roberts in the Deep Rock case is consistent with established rules of corporate law.[1]

In the Commonwealth case the court, in describing the conduct of Inland, stated:

> "• • • Also, Michigan, not of its own volition but upon the demand and under the domination of Inland was required to declare and pay in dividends approximately 80% of its income, at the time when Michigan was engaged on an extensive rehabilitation and expansion program which it was unable to finance out of its own income.* * *" (141 F. 2d, at 738)

Later in the opinion the Michigan dividends are criticized. We do not attempt to justify the Michigan dividends. However, Petitioner seems to construe the Commonwealth decision as holding that a corporation borrowing to finance an expansion program may not pay dividends. We disagree with Petitioner's interpretation of the decision. If a rule such as is suggested by Petitioner had been in effect, it would have prevented the construction of a very large part of the productive facilities of the United States. Few corporations today can meet such a test. It would tend to hinder equity financing. The propriety of dividends in such situations depends upon a number of factors. Important among these would be the amount of surplus on hand at the time of declaration, working capital, and past and prospective earnings. If adequate provision is made for amortization of debt, the mere fact that a corporation is borrowing ought not to preclude payment of dividends.

This leaves for consideration the real basis upon which Petitioner must predicate his contention that the intercompany claim should be subordinated. Upon analysis the contention rests upon three grounds: (1) control of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific, (2) the alleged inadequate capitalization of the New Orleans, and (3) the alleged improper dividends paid by the New Orleans.

(1) Missouri Pacific control. We freely concede that the element of control exists in the instant case. As the controlling stockholder of the New Orleans, the Missouri Pacific was a fiduciary. The word "fiduciary" has frequently been loosely used, indicating that its meaning is not always understood. There are various kinds of fiduciaries. The obligations of a controlling stockholder are, for example, not the same as those of a testamentary or express trustee. All fiduciaries have one common attribute. They exercise powers to deal with property or affect rights of those to whom they stand in a fiduciary relationship. Such powers may not be exercised in a manner which will give an advantage to the fiduciary. Thus, the Missouri Pacific, as a majority stockholder, had an obligation to deal fairly with the New Orleans and to do nothing which would improperly prefer it over the holders and pledgees of the securities of the New Orleans.

The Missouri Pacific acquired its controlling interest in the GCL in accordance with an expressed policy of Congress. 49 USCA §5(2); Control of Gulf Coast Lines by Missouri Pacific R. R., 94 ICC 191 (1924). These carriers operate connecting railroads. Thus, it was inherent in the relationship from its inception that there should be a continuing flow of business transactions between them. Such extensive dealings would not be tolerated between a testamentary or express trustee and his cestui.

That the Missouri Pacific was a fiduciary does not mean that it was a guarantor of the successful outcome of all transactions in which it and the New Orleans participated. Nor does it mean that the Missouri Pacific was required to subordinate its own interests to those of the New Orleans or that it was expected to exercise superior judgment. The law permits a fiduciary to make honest mistakes. The test of the conduct of the Missouri Pacific as a fiduciary is whether or not it acted in good faith and exercised the judgment which would be expected of an independent management of the New Orleans. This test does not require the Missouri Pacific to be vindicated by subsequent events or that, in judging its conduct, hindsight is to be substituted for foresight.[1] Application of this test imposes a difficult burden as there is an almost irresistible temptation to allow the transactions under scrutiny to be colored by events which followed.

(2) Capitalization of the New Orleans. The contention that the New Orleans was inadequately capitalized is based primarily on the substantial increase in the New Orleans debt over the period 1924-1932 and the fact that there was no increase in its capital stock during that period. The amount of indebtedness or increase of indebtedness alone is certainly not evidence of inadequate capitalization. The adequacy of the capitalization of a corporate enterprise is tested by whether or not there has been a sufficient investment in the junior stock through which control is exercised, having in mind the risks of the business and the total amount invested in the enterprise. The decisions may be searched in vain for a standard by which to test adequacy of capitalization. No rigid standard has been established. Each case presents a different situation which must be judged upon its own facts.

An examination of the GCL consolidated balance sheet as of August 1, 1931 (R. 81) shows an investment in the common stock of $15,000,000, to which should be added corporate surplus of approximately $8,000,000. This total equity of about $23,000,000 was more than two times the principal sum of the advances about which Petitioner now complains. Clearly the obviously inadequate capitalizations dealt with in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases will not bear comparison with the capitalization of the GCL.

Petitioner criticizes the Missouri Pacific advances to the New Orleans. He suggests that, instead of the advances, the Missouri Pacific should have made contributions to capital of the New Orleans. As previously noted, financing of the improvement program followed an established policy. Initially the improvements were financed by short term borrowings. When these were of sufficient size they were refunded by issuance of long term obligations. This method of financing the improvement program operated successfully until it was halted by the depression. (see p. 20, supra) Nothing in these facts suggests that the Missouri Pacific was seeking to prefer itself over others in anticipation of bankruptcy.[1] The record furnishes an example which makes it possible to apply the arm's length test to the policy adopted for the financing of the GCL improvements. We find that the Missouri Pacific adopted the same policy in financing its own improvements. (Ex. 271-277, R. 887-896) This refutes any suggestion that the financing of the GCL improvements was done in bad faith and in disregard of fiduciary obligations. Even if it could be shown that this financing contributed to the ultimate filing under Section 77 by the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans, it is perfectly apparent that the Missouri Pacific suffered greater injury than the New Orleans. The Commission has found the Missouri Pacific to be insolvent (R. 20801-20813, 20863, 20956), whereas it determined that the New Orleans common stock has value (R. 20955).

There can be no real objection to the short term ad-

[1] Further substantiation of this is found in the fact that throughout the entire period of Missouri Pacific control it continued to buy in outstanding shares of New Orleans common stock. Between January 15, 1925, approximately the date when the Missouri Pacific assumed control, and the date of bankruptcy the Missouri Pacific holdings of New Orleans common stock increased from 69.38% to 93.15%. As late as 1930, the Missouri Pacific paid $142,905.26 for 1,193 shares of this stock, or an average of about $120 per share. (Ex. 177, R. 630) vances. It would have been wasteful for the New Orleans to have anticipated the cash requirements of its improvement program by issuing long term bonds several years in advance of the actual expenditures for that purpose. The funds would have remained idle until they could be used, thus building up unnecessary interest charges.

The real question presented by these facts has little to do with the advances. They served only a temporary purpose. Rather the question is whether or not the Missouri Pacific management acted properly in financing the improvement program by the creation of additional debt. In considering this question it is important to note that every dollar of long term debt issued by the New Orleans after 1924 required Commission approval under Section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act. 49 USCA §20a.

The advances made after the full force of the depression began to be felt were to aid the New Orleans in overcoming deficits. These advances were used to pay such items as interest on funded debt and sinking fund instalments. (FF. 18, R. 18-19) Advances for such purposes were beneficial to the New Orleans and its stockholders. A lenient creditor was substituted for those who would not wait. In such circumstances it is inconceivable that anyone dealing at arm's length with the New Orleans would have supplied the needed funds by subscribing to capital stock of the New Orleans. The propriety of these later advances may be tested by comparing the Missouri Pacific's conduct with what others did under similar circumstances. As late as 1932 and 1933 the RFC and the RCC were making advances to the Missouri Pacific for similar purposes. (R. 110, 1159) In the footnote other instances are cited.[1]

There can be no doubt that the advances which now constitute the intercompany claim will meet the test of fairness.

We have heretofore referred to the provisions of Section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act. That section was designed to give the Commission a large degree of control over the capitalization of railroad corporations. (49 USCA §20a) During the period of Missouri Pacific control, the New Orleans was not permitted to issue, except as provided in §20a(9), any of its first mortgage bonds or other securities without Commission approval.[1] The authorization by the Commission of $7,456,726 of the intercompany claim has already been noted. (pp. 23-24, supra) In passing upon the propriety of authorizing the issuance of this note, the Commission was fully advised as to the remainder of the intercompany indebtedness which had been issued under Section 20a(9). New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company Notes, Finance Docket No. 9817, 189 ICC 600 (1933). This action of the Commission is entitled to the greatest weight in passing judgment on the adequacy of the New Orleans capitalization and the propriety of the Missouri Pacific advances. (See R. 1110)

It seems to be perfectly clear that Petitioner has failed to make out any sort of a case on the inadequacy of the New Orleans capitalization.

[1] The suggestion that the proceedings before the Commission resulting in the authorization of securities were ex parte and, therefore, entitled to no weight is without merit. The Commission kept itself informed as to the affairs of the GCL through frequent and thorough audits of its books and by detailed reports made by the New Orleans to the Commission's Bureau of Valuation. (FF. 30, R. 23; R. 955-956) At each proceeding for the authorization of funded debt the New Orleans was required to submit a mass of material as to additions and betterments in support of its application. (R. 889-890, 908; see, also R. 1018-1019) In such proceedings the Commission performed a statutory duty. Its decisions in such matters are binding. Moreover, the Commission stated in its report on the 1944 Plan that it was well acquainted with the basis of Petitioner's charges. (R. 20841)

(3) The New Orleans Dividends. In considering the New Orleans dividends it is pertinent to first note that the Secured Serial bondholders were pledgees of New Orleans common stock. The indenture under which their bonds were issued permitted the payment of dividends by the New Orleans. (FF. 7, R. 12) They were advised in the prospectus by which their bonds were offered that dividends at the rate of 7% per annum were being paid. (FF. 7, R. 11) These facts would, of course, not justify improper dividends, but they do show that the Missouri Pacific had a clear right to all dividends which would meet the fairness test. Any dividend of the New Orleans would reduce its assets. That result, however, would not give the Secured Serial bondholders just cause for complaint.

Petitioner seeks to show that there was less justification for the New Orleans dividends than there was for the dividends dealt with in the Deep Rock and Commonwealth cases. In the Deep Rock case there was doubt as to whether reported earnings were not, in reality, a deficit of $9,000,000. This Court described the dividends as having been paid over a long course of years by a company "on the precipice of bankruptcy". In the Commonwealth case dividends amounted to 80% of reported earnings. However, because of the deficiency in the stated value of the common stock of Michigan, it was improper to pay any dividends.

The consolidated income account[1] of the GCL from March 1, 1916 to December 31, 1944 is shown on Group

[1] For the reasons stated at page 32, supra, the consolidated earnings of the GCL are important in considering the propriety of the New Orleans dividends. No dividends paid by the New Orleans were based on the undistributed surplus of the GCL subsidiaries. Appendix II of this brief supplements Group Exhibit 38 (Ex. 299, R. 912) by bringing the consolidated earnings of the GCL down to December 31, 1947.

Exhibits 38 and 39. (Ex. 299, 300, R. 912, 913) Consolidated net income of the GCL from March 1, 1916 to the end of 1931 and accumulated net income at December 31 of each of the years during that period are shown on Group Exhibit 40. (Ex. 301, R. 914) This exhibit also shows all dividends declared by the New Orleans from March 1, 1916 to December 31, 1931. There are various methods by which the dividends and income of the GCL may be stated. Petitioner has stated them in a biased manner. The table below shows in condensed form most of the pertinent figures which bear on the dividends.

5. Ex. 301, R. 914. Cumulative from 1916 to the end of the year shown in first column.

It will be noted that in each year during the period 1925-1930 accumulated earnings exceeded all dividends there-tofore paid by more than $4,500,000. On December 31, 1924, the approximate date when the Missouri Pacific assumed control of the GCL (FF. 6, R. 11), accumulated earnings exceeded dividends by $4,125,087. At December 31, 1930 accumulated earnings exceeded dividends by $4,500,819. In the period 1925-1930 there was only one year in which the GCL sustained a deficit. That was in 1927 when the GCL was seriously affected by floods. It was not likely that such floods would recur for a number of years. (R. 912) In view of the ample surplus of cumulative earnings in 1927, there was no impropriety in continuing the dividend in that year. Also bearing on the propriety of the dividends during the period 1925-1931 was the fact that charges to operating expenses in connection with the heavy improvement program averaged more than $470,000 per year. By way of comparison, during the succeeding nine years these charges dropped to an average of $183,715 per annum. (Ex. 303, R. 915-916) In the light of these facts we think there can be no criticism of the New Orleans directors in declaring regular dividends throughout the period 1925-1930. On facts like these we think this Court will be reluctant to substitute its judgment for that of the management, especially after the lapse of more than seventeen years. The two courts below refused to do so. There can be honest differences of opinion about these facts. They do not, however, suggest any impropriety.

There remains to be considered the year 1931. That was the last year in which dividends were declared on the New Orleans capital stock. The regular 7% dividend was paid in that year, although the GCL sustained a deficit in excess of $1,000,000. (Ex. 301, R. 914) With the benefit of hindsight, it would appear that maintenance of the dividend in 1931 was inadvisable. However, the decision of the board in this regard may not be judged by what happened afterward. In determining whether or not the

New Orleans board acted in good faith, they may be judged only by the facts which were available to them at that time. Several of the members of the board were dead at the time of the hearing and it is impossible to determine all of the considerations they had in mind in continuing the regular dividend throughout 1931.

It is a well known fact that when business conditions are changing from prosperity to depression the change is revealed only gradually. The full results of operations in 1931 were not known until several months after the end of that year. We know that at the end of April 1931 Mr. Safford, the chief operating officer in Houston, was estimating net income of $457,000 for that year. (Ex. 137, R. 601) Mr. Baldwin was taking steps to see that the dividend would be earned. (Ex. 135, R. 601)

It is unlikely that the directors of the New Orleans were aware in 1931 that they were entering a period of one of the deepest depressions in history. There is nothing in the Baldwin-Safford correspondence in April 1931 which indicates that they were aware of the oncoming depression. (Ex. 135, R. 601) The Court will take judicial notice of the fact that businessmen generally were of the opinion in 1931 that the depressed conditions prevailing in the latter part of that year were temporary. Barlow v. Budge, 127 F. 2d 440, 443 (C.C.A. 8th, 1942), cert. den. 317 U.S. 647 (1942). The President of the United States thought so and requested businessmen to act accordingly. As events turned out, the Missouri Pacific directors and many other businessmen were mistaken in their judgment, but, as already noted, a fiduciary is not a guarantor.

As to the dividends under review, the position of the Missouri Pacific, as a majority stockholder of the New Orleans, was not greatly different from that of a stockholder in any independently managed corporation. Directors of any corporation are elected by stockholders who have a natural desire for dividends. Conflicting with this desire is another —that the business be preserved on a sound financial basis. These conflicting influences, selfish though they may be, serve to create a balance. Where such influences are allowed free play, the courts have refused to substitute their judgment for that of the elected management.[1] Similar influences were at work in the relationship between the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans. Missouri Pacific paid a very substantial sum for the common stock of the New Orleans. (Ex. 177, R. 630) The railroads of the Missouri Pacific and the GCL are end to end. The map opposite page 8, supra, indicates how the lines of the GCL complement those of the Missouri Pacific. The GCL lines, extending along the Texas and Louisiana gulf coast, serve a large agricultural area and a territory rich in natural resources. As far back as the 1920's, this area was developing rapidly. Group Exhibit 20 illustrates how the citrus and vegetable business was increasing in those years. (Ex. 263, R. 843; see also Group Exhibit 21; Ex. 265, R. 856) It is apparent that the chief interest of the Missouri Pacific was in the interchange of traffic with the GCL.[2] Dividends of $1,000,000 per annum were considerably less important than the Missouri Pacific's own revenues from this traffic. Thus, the Missouri Pacific had its own special reasons for wishing to preserve the GCL on a sound financial basis. To do otherwise would have risked foreclosure of the New Orleans first mortgage and possible sale of the property

[2] In 1924 the Missouri Pacific estimated that the revenues from traffic to be delivered to it by the GCL would be not less than $3,000,000 annually. *Control of Gulf Coast Lines by Missouri Pacific R. to others. No stockholder of an independently managed corporation could have had greater reasons for desiring financial strength. In these circumstances it is unreasonable to assert that the Missouri Pacific caused the New Orleans dividends to be paid recklessly and in disregard of the effect such dividends would have on its own stockholding in the New Orleans.[1]

Conclusions to Be Drawn from All of the Facts.

The conclusion to be drawn from all of the facts bearing on the relationship of the Missouri Pacific with the GCL is widely at variance with the impression which Petitioner seeks to create. We have noted that the GCL was brought into the Missouri Pacific System as a part of a long-range program to make that system a first class railroad. We have also noted the vast sums which were expended in the improvement program to bring about that result. It is incredible that the men who conceived and carried out this program would wish to mismanage and injure the GCL—one of the vital elements of the system. We have seen that immediately upon acquisition the GCL maintenance expenditures were substantially increased, an extensive improvement program was inaugurated and that active steps were taken to increase GCL

[1] These conclusions are valid even if Petitioner's borrowing to pay dividends theories be accepted. As we have seen, the plan of the Missouri Pacific was to fund the advances whenever they were of sufficient size to warrant the public sale of bonds. Such bonds would, of course, take priority over the stock interest of the Missouri Pacific in the New Orleans. The funding of advances made to permit improper dividends would thus have been inconsistent with the vital interest of the Missouri Pacific in the New Orleans. But, of course, the Commission would never have permitted the funding of advances for dividends. This demonstrates again the utter futility of the borrowing to pay dividends discussion in Petitioner's brief.

traffic. We have also seen that in its dealings with the GCL in connection with divisions and traffic matters the Missouri Pacific made sure that the GCL was fairly and generously treated. Indeed, if we consider the advantages which the GCL obtained from the special arrangements made with the American Refrigerator Transit Company (pp. 16-17, supra) and the savings on the vegetable traffic diverted through Kinder (pp. 15-17, supra), these two items alone in dollars and cents will approximately equal all of the dividends received by the Missouri Pacific from the New Orleans in the entire period 1925-1931. These considerations cannot be brushed aside with the assertion that they are not "financial" matters. (Petitioner's brief, p. 24) A railroad can have no finances without traffic, nor can it have profitable traffic without a well-maintained roadbed and an adequate supply of equipment. All are intimately interrelated. This background of facts aids in reaching a conclusion regarding the conduct of the Missouri Pacific with respect to such matters as capitalization, the advances and the dividends. As to each of these, we have seen that the conduct of the Missouri Pacific, though not free from mistakes, will meet the test of fairness. There is abundant evidence to support the findings and conclusions of the courts below that the Missouri Pacific complied with its obligations as a majority stockholder. (FF. 33, R. 24)

Subordination Must Be Commensurate with the Injury.

The Petitioner's brief makes no attempt to deal with the fundamental principles which control the granting of the remedy of subordination. It is an equitable remedy designed to achieve equity. The Petitioner insists upon the complete subordination of the intercompany claim, but he makes no attempt to demonstrate that such a result would be equitable. The reason for full and complete subordination in the Deep Rock case was that mismanagement and overreaching permeated the relationship between Deep Rock and Standard. It was impossible to untangle the many transactions between them so as to permit an approximation of the damage. Standard was responsible for the situation which prevented the making of a fair estimate as to the amount of the injury. As a result, the only available remedy was complete subordination of the parent's claim. This conclusion is confirmed by the opinion in Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295 (1939). Speaking of the subordination granted in the Deep Rock case, Mr. Justice Douglas wrote:

> "* * * This was based on the equities of the case—the history of spoliation, mismanagement, and faithless stewardship of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the detriment of the public investors. * * *" (308 U.S. at 308)

As we have seen, the record now under review presents no such state of facts as the Deep Rock case presented.

Of course, if Petitioner were able to demonstrate that any of the Missouri Pacific loans to the New Orleans had been made in breach of fiduciary duty or that an improper preference had been obtained by making such loan, there would be a basis for subordination or adjustment of the priority of that loan. That, however, would not justify subordination of the entire intercompany claim. Subordination will be made commensurate with the wrong. This principle is clearly stated in an opinion of the court below:

> "* * * since bankruptcy, as we have suggested, is a final liquidation, the power of subordination necessarily must be measuredly and not blankly exercised. It must have a sound regard for the distribution results that will be produced to the creditor whose claim is being subordinated, as well as to the other creditors. It should not operate to take away anything punitively to which one creditor is justly entitled in view of the liquidation finality, and bestow it upon others, who in the relative situation have no fair right to it. It can therefore ordinarily go no farther than to level off actual inequitable disparities on the bankruptcy terrain for which a creditor is responsible, to the point where they will not create unjust disadvantages in claim positions and liquidation results. And most especially, where there is an attempt to adjust equities between creditors of different legal classes, such as a lienholder and general creditors, must any subordination made of a higher legal right be scrupulously measured and fitted to the actual injury that has been done or the unjust enrichment that is involved." (In re Kansas City Journal-Post Co., 144 F. 2d 791, 800-1 (C.C.A. 8th, 1944))

The Equities in Favor of Missouri Pacific Creditors.

Thus far subordination has been considered without reference to the creditors of the Missouri Pacific. The Commission has found that the Missouri Pacific is insolvent and that there are insufficient assets to satisfy the claims of all its creditors. (R. 20801-20813, 20863, 20956) These creditors are innocent of any of the alleged wrongs done to the New Orleans. The Missouri Pacific management stood in a fiduciary relationship to these creditors also. It would have been a breach of this fiduciary duty in the circumstances existing during the years 1932 and 1933 to have used Missouri Pacific funds as a capital contribution to the New Orleans or to have otherwise wasted Missouri Pacific assets in improper dealings with the New Orleans. The fact is that the New Orleans and its GCL subsidiaries received a dollar or dollar's worth for every one of the advances that constitute the intercompany claim. (Ex. 239, R. 791, 809; Ex. 221-225, R. 701) These are dollars upon which the Missouri Pacific creditors were entitled to rely for the satisfaction of their claims.

We do not assert that insolvency of a parent will in all cases preclude the subordination of its claim against a subsidiary.[1] There may be circumstances in which it would be inequitable to allow such a claim. If a claim against a subsidiary is defective or if its priority was obtained in breach of a fiduciary duty, disallowance or adjustment of priority would seem to be appropriate except where there is a change of position or a situation like that discussed in Point II supra. But the Petitioner makes out no such case. The fundamental basis upon which his request for subordination rests is that he and the New Orleans have been injured by various alleged wrongful acts of mismanagement, many of which are not even remotely connected with the intercompany claim. Subordination on such a basis would simply be the setting-off of a claim for damages to the New Orleans against the intercompany claim. Courts of bankruptcy refuse to grant such a set-off.[2] Nor will they presume that the Missouri Pacific

[1] So far as we are aware, this Court has had no occasion to consider the interests of creditors of an insolvent parent in a case involving subordination. In making this statement we are aware of the argument made in the brief filed on behalf of Standard which is cited in the footnote on page 55 of Petitioner's brief. It is true that proceedings for the reorganization of Standard had been pending under old Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. In re Standard Gas & Electric Co., 26 F. Supp. 636 (1939). Prior to the argument of the Deep Rock case in this Court the reorganization proceedings involving Standard had been terminated. The plan merely extended maturities and did not eliminate the interest of Standard's stockholders. The district court described the proceedings as "not a genuine reorganization". 26 F. Supp. 636, 641. We do not find that any of the creditors of Standard participated in the Deep Rock litigation in this Court. Therefore, this Court had no occasion seriously to consider the interest of Standard's creditors. estate in bankruptcy is enhanced by assets obtained from the New Orleans, however wrongfully. The fact must be established by tracing.[1] Even a cestui may not be preferred over other creditors in the distribution of the bankrupt estate of a defaulting trustee. Subordination may not be used to circumvent the long established rules for the equitable distribution of the assets of a bankrupt.

Aside from these considerations there is a balance of equities in favor of the Missouri Pacific creditors. The Secured Serial bondholders took as collateral for their bonds the most junior security in the New Orleans capitalization. Thereby they accepted the risks inherent in such a security. The real cause of their loss, if any loss there be,[2] was a world-wide economic depression to which the railroads of the west and southwest were particularly sensitive. This was one of the assumed risks. There is abundant evidence in the record to support the findings that the benefits to the New Orleans resulting from its affiliation with the Missouri Pacific far outweigh all of the New Orleans dividends. (FF. 33, R. 24) This is true of the measurable dollars and cents benefits without taking into account intangibles. We have also seen that the New Orleans received a full dollar's worth for each dollar of the advances. These facts weigh heavily in favor of the Missouri Pacific creditors.

It thus becomes clear that Petitioner's effort to subordinate the intercompany claim is a mere attempt to prefer himself over other innocent creditors of the Missouri Pacific who had no part in the alleged breaches of fiduciary duty. Thus revealed, there is no equity in his plea. It should be rejected.

The courts below properly held that the Secured Serial bondholders are not entitled to have the intercompany claim, or any part thereof, subordinated to the capital stock of the New Orleans. (CL. 12, R. 32)

POINT IV

The District Court properly overruled Objection 19 on the ground of laches.

The district court, after review of the pertinent evidence, overruled Objection 19 on the ground of laches. (FF. 35-43, R. 25-29; CL. 15, R. 33; see also R. IV, 20)

If timely objection is made to the claim of a fiduciary against a debtor in reorganization proceedings, it becomes the duty of the court to carefully scrutinize such a claim before approving a plan. Also, if timely objection is made to such a claim in reorganization proceedings, determination of the validity and rank of such a claim must be made as a prerequisite to the formulation of a plan. These propositions are fundamental and we do not question them.

However, an objection is not timely merely because it is raised prior to approval of a plan under Section 77(e). That is especially true in a case such as this in which the order approves a second plan of reorganization in the proceedings. The doctrine of laches is equitable in nature. It recognizes that injuries and injustices may result from inexcusable delay in asserting rights. A brief review of the facts will indicate both inexcusable delay in asserting Petitioner's Objection 19 and the serious prejudice which has resulted therefrom.

These proceedings were commenced March 31, 1933 by the filing of the petitions of the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans and the I-GN under Section 77. (R. 173) The principal debtor filed a plan on October 1, 1935. The Commission held Section 77(d) hearings on that and other plans of reorganization, commencing in February 1936 and continuing intermittently thereafter until September 1937. (R. 175) During these hearings the debtor Missouri Pacific and security holders of the New Orleans placed in evidence detailed information about the GCL, which included much of the material upon which Petitioner now relies. (R. 159-160, 175, 387, 397, 20839-20843) The dates of the Missouri Pacific advances to the New Orleans and the dates and amounts of the New Orleans dividends were put in evidence at these hearings. (R. 83-87, 20839-20841) On January 10, 1940 the Commission's report and order approving the 1940 Plan was promulgated. (R. 20725) In July and October 1940 the court below held hearings on the 1940 Plan. In July 1941 the 1940 Plan was approved. (R. 124) Seven or eight appeals from the approval order were remanded on May 8, 1943 (R. 122) and the 1940 Plan was returned to the Commission. (R. 137) Further hearings were held by the Commission in Brooklyn in October 1943. (R. 141) Up to that time no representative of any Secured Serial bondholder had questioned the validity or propriety of the intercompany claim. (FF. 39, R. 27) The Petitioner appeared at the Brooklyn hearings for the first time in the proceedings. He was represented by counsel. The transcript of these proceedings shows quite plainly that Petitioner did not come to that hearing prepared to present evidence in support of his objection to the intercompany claim. (R. 154-164, 20840) He made an attempt to cross-examine Mr. Wyer upon some of the matters, later included in his Objection 19, which had no relation to his direct testimony. (R. 157-162) The examiner in charge of the hearing declined to permit such cross-examination. (R. 162, 20841-20842) Petitioner made no attempt to call witnesses of his own for the purpose of introducing evidence bearing on the intercompany claim. (R. 20840)

A few days prior to the commencement of the Brooklyn hearing in October 1943, Petitioner wrote to the trustee demanding that he object to the intercompany claim. (FF. 41, R. 27, 655-658) Petitioner did nothing further until more than a year later when he filed a petition asking leave to object to the Missouri Pacific claim for advances. (R. 247) This petition was denied without prejudice on December 26, 1944. (R. 367) A similar petition had been filed by Petitioner's counsel on behalf of one Foley in July 1944. (R. 166)

As previously noted, the three principal grounds upon which Petitioner seeks subordination of the intercompany claim are (1) Missouri Pacific control of the GCL, (2) inadequacy of the New Orleans capitalization, and (3) the dividends paid by the New Orleans. (p. 47, supra) The basic facts with respect to all of these matters have been available to all parties since the inception of the proceedings. (R. 159-161, 20837-20842) Much of Petitioner's evidence was obtained from the GCL reports to the Commission which have been accessible since 1933. (R. 399-489) Mr. Thompson, the trustee in bankruptcy of the Missouri Pacific and the GCL, testified that early in 1934 he retained Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co. to make a thorough investigation of the affairs of the GCL. Price, Waterhouse & Co. completed their audit and prior to July 8, 1935 copies of it were filed with the court below and mailed to all parties who appeared in the proceedings, including Mr.

Brandwen who represented Petitioner at the trial below and who at that time represented a dissident committee of First and Refunding Mortgage bondholders. (FF. 25, R. 25, 659-660) This report included consolidated statements and statements for the individual companies. (R. 659-660) The Price, Waterhouse report disclosed the fact that the Missouri Pacific owned over 90% of the New Orleans stock, the details of the GCL capitalization and the fact that the New Orleans had paid regular dividends at the 7% rate throughout the period 1925-1931. It also disclosed the advances, as does the proof of claim filed by the Missouri Pacific in August 1933. (Ex. 1, R. 402) Thus, the basic facts upon which Comstock rests his case have been matters of record from the inception of these proceedings.

Since these proceedings were commenced at least seven representatives of various groups and individuals holding New Orleans securities have appeared before the Commission or the court below. Of these, five represented one or more Secured Serial bondholders or holders of common stock of the New Orleans. (FF. 38, R. 26) Petitioner refers to the petitions filed by the New Orleans First Mortgage trustee and committee. (Petitioner's brief, p. 60) It is significant that these petitions were never pressed.

It is obvious that Petitioner and his predecessors in interest have been guilty of inexcusable delay in presenting Objection 19.

There is ample evidence that the delay in presenting the matters which are the subject of Objection 19 has seriously prejudiced other Missouri Pacific creditors. The district court so found. (FF. 42, R. 28) Petitioner relies heavily on the correspondence between Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Safford, vice president and chief operating officer of the GCL. This correspondence is cited to show that the Missouri Pacific's primary interest in the GCL was in obtaining dividends. (Petitioner's brief, pp. 14-18) Mr. Safford died in April 1943. (Ex. Vol. II, 361) When we attempted to bring out a conversation between Mr. Kirkpatrick, the chief engineer of the GCL, and Mr. Safford concerning conditions in 1931, Petitioner objected. (R. 832-833) Mr. Safford's first-hand knowledge of the GCL would have been an invaluable aid in explaining the conditions which prevailed in 1931. His views and judgment as to maintenance, new facilities, traffic and prospective revenues and net earnings undoubtedly influenced the decisions of the board of directors of the New Orleans. What information Mr. Safford gave to Mr. Williams or to Mr. Van Sweringen and the extent to which it influenced their judgment are matters which probably would have had an important bearing on the issues here involved.

Mr. F. P. Johnson, who was vice president and chief financial officer of the Missouri Pacific and the GCL for a number of years, died on April 11, 1938. (Ex. Vol. II, 361) Mr. Baldwin relied on Mr. Johnson for information and advice concerning certain aspects of the GCL dividends. Many of the letters in the Baldwin-Safford correspondence show that they were referred by Mr. Baldwin to Mr. Johnson and bear Mr. Johnson's initials. (Ex. 124-132, R. 598, 599, 601) Mr. Johnson was also familiar with the transaction which Petitioner describes as "saddling" the New Orleans with uncollectible debts of the I-GN. (R. 697-699) Mr. Johnson, if he had been alive, would probably have been the most important witness at the trial below. He undoubtedly knew more about the transactions complained of in Objection 19 than any other man in the Missouri Pacific System. Mr. Eckert tried to substitute for Mr. Johnson as a witness. However, Mr. Eckert's memory was faulty. Moreover, Petitioner, in discussing the "saddling" transaction, makes much of the fact that Mr. Eckert testified he had not seen the Missouri Pacific book entries pertaining to it. (Petitioner's brief, p. 17, R. 702-703) It was Mr. Johnson who determined system accounting policies. Mr. Eckert, who was in the Houston office of the New Orleans during the period in question, could not possibly supply the Missouri Pacific side of the case. Much of Petitioner's case is based on inferences which he draws from entries in the books. Mr. Johnson could have done much to explain these entries.

Mr. Frank Andrews, a member of the New Orleans board until 1929 and its general solicitor, died in December 1936. He was referred to in the testimony on several occasions as having passed on matters which have an important bearing on Objection 19. (R. 535, 605; Ex. 113, 122-124, R. 576, 583, 598; Ex. Vol. II, 362)

Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen, chairman of the boards of the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans in 1930 and following, died in 1936. Petitioner's brief demonstrates how important his testimony would have been. (Ex. Vol. II, 360)

Mr. E. J. White, vice president and general solicitor of the Missouri Pacific, was familiar with many of the matters involved in Petitioner's Objection 19. He died on December 29, 1935. (Ex. Vol. II, 362)

Other witnesses mentioned by Mr. Railey certainly would have been called if they had been alive, and, as Mr. Railey indicated, their testimony would have been helpful to the district court in determining the issues presented by Petitioner's Objection 19. (Ex. Vol. II, 362, R. 191-207)

The Petitioner has heretofore suggested several persons who might have been called as substitutes for those who are now dead. Mr. Baldwin was called by Petitioner. It will be pointed out that Respondents did not interrogate him. His testimony clearly indicated that he was interested primarily in building a railroad and operating it. (R. 596-

608) He relied on Mr. Williams and Mr. Van Sweringen and the board of directors to supply him with the needed funds. Moreover, the trial was held in January and March 1944. It was not our wish to ask Mr. Baldwin to divert his attention from his important war job. It seems obvious that there could have been no substitutes for the deceased witnesses mentioned above. In any event the Petitioner is entitled to no presumption in his favor in this matter. The situation exists because of Petitioner's inexcusable delay.

Not all of the documentary evidence was available. Under regulations of the Commission various documents may be destroyed after the lapse of specified periods of time. Such destroyed documents contained evidence supporting the book entries. (R. 193-194, 196-197, Ex. Vol. II, 362) Petitioner does not accept the book entries at face value. He seeks to show that some of them were false.

Petitioner is in a court of equity asking for subordination, an equitable remedy. The doctrine of laches is also designed to achieve equity. A court of equity frowns upon a stale demand and, if it be coupled with change of position on the part of third parties or serious prejudice to those who must defend against such a demand, the court will leave the parties where it finds them.[1]

The doctrine of laches is applied in courts of bankruptcy.[2]

Laches may operate as a bar to the making of objections to a claim filed in bankruptcy.[3]

Some of the transactions now questioned occurred over twenty-two years ago. None of them is less than fifteen years old. Petitioner's case is largely based on old records and the testimony of witnesses whose memories are dimmed by the passage of time. (R. 548, 551, 552, 576, 589, 598) It seems obvious that the proponents of the Plan were seriously prejudiced by the long and inexcusable delay in presenting Objection 19.

The following comments of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit made in 1942 aptly apply to the facts just reviewed:

> "We do not wish to be understood as holding that the mere lapse of 19 years prior to the bringing of this action is sufficient, in itself, to deny relief on the ground of laches. Our point is that, after having carefully considered the background and history of this case in all of its peculiar aspects, we feel the interests of justice would best be served by our holding that the action is barred by unreasonable delay. The many difficulties of the appellee railroad inherent in the delayed defense of this action at this turbulent period in our national existence more than outweigh the alleged equity of restitution to appellants for the alleged nefarious acts committed by appellee two decades ago. This is in accord with the firmly imbedded principle that equity will not aid a plaintiff whose unexcused delay, if the action were allowed, would be unduly prejudicial to the defendant." Barnhart v. Western Maryland Ry. Co., 128 F. 2d 709, 715 (C. C. A. 4th, 1942); cert. den. 317 U. S. 671 (1942).

It would be difficult to imagine a state of facts that would present a stronger appeal to a court of equity for the application of the doctrine of laches than is presented here. We conclude, therefore, that Petitioner's objection was properly overruled on the ground of laches. (CL. 15, R. 33; R. IV, 20)

POINT V

The courts below properly held that the trustee in Bankruptcy of the Missouri Pacific and the Gulf Coast Lines has discharged his duty with fidelity and in conformity with the Bankruptcy Act.

Petitioner's Point IV seems to suggest that another three years should be spent delving into dusty records and trying again the issues of this case. It is apparently of no consequence to him that this would involve delay of the reorganization for several more years. No plan for these debtors can be formulated as long as there is any uncertainty concerning the intercompany claim. Although we held different views at one time (R. 722), we now believe it to be practically impossible to devise a plan with alternative allocations which would anticipate all of the possible ways in which the issues presented by this record can be disposed of.

The statements in the Petitioner's brief concerning Mr. Thompson are most unfair. These statements leave the impression that Mr. Thompson has been indifferent to the affairs of the New Orleans and that no investigation was made. The statements in their entirety misrepresent Mr. Thompson's position.

In 1934 Mr. Thompson with the acquiescence of his then co-trustee, Mr. L. W. Baldwin, retained Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co. to audit the books of the Missouri Pacific and the GCL. From time to time as the audit progressed he conferred with the auditors. He was advised by Price, Waterhouse & Co. after they had completed their investigation of the GCL that they found nothing questionable concerning the intercompany claim. (R. 646-648) Petitioner has heretofore taken the position that the investigation of the GCL was not a matter for auditors. However, he contends that the only matters relative to the issues presented by Objection 19 are financial. (Petitioner's brief, pp. 24, 50) The great bulk of Petitioner's case at the trial below was the testimony and exhibits of two auditors, Mr. Delaney, a certified public accountant retained by Petitioner (R. 398-496), and Mr. Eckert, formerly the auditor of the GCL and at the time he testified the chief accounting officer of the System. (R. 496-570, 629-637, 660-711)

Mr. Thompson had retained special counsel, Judge Fred L. Williams, to review the Price, Waterhouse reports and to advise the trustee as to whether anything disclosed in the audit should be investigated further. (R. 648) In July 1935 Mr. Thompson called a conference of the interested parties. It was attended by counsel for various mortgage trustees and protective committees, including Mr. Brandwen who at that time represented a First and Refunding committee and who was Petitioner's attorney at the trial below. (R. 648-653) At this conference the work of investigation which Judge Williams had conducted was reviewed. At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Thompson requested any suggestions which counsel might have concerning other matters that ought to be investigated. No suggestions having any bearing on the matters complained of in Objection 19 were ever received by Mr. Thompson in response to this request. (R. 653)

Subsequently an order was entered authorizing examinations under Section 21a of the Bankruptcy Act, an order which Mr. Brandwen had frequently requested Mr. Thompson to obtain. No one made any suggestion that the 21a examination should be directed toward the intercompany claim. (R. 653) In 1936 Mr. Thompson filed a motion in which he reported that he had found no irregularities of the kind now complained of by Petitioner. (R. 654) Nevertheless, he suggested that the Commission be asked for information which it might have requiring further investigation. The order entered upon this motion requested the Commission's suggestions. (R. 654-655) The Commission's reply contained no suggestions. (FF. 37, R. 26) Petitioner's brief does not mention the investigation by Judge Williams or the trustee's report to the court concerning irregularities. To us it is significant that after this careful investigation the trustee's report contained nothing that would give support to the subordination claims contained in Objection 19. It also refutes the statement that Mr. Thompson first announced his position at the trial below. (Petitioner's brief, p. 61)

Petitioner refers to the petitions filed in 1937 by the New Orleans first mortgage committee and the trustee of that mortgage. (R. 87, 101) These petitions show that Mr. Thompson, after investigating various matters complained of therein, made certain adjustments but refused to make others which those petitioners demanded. Yet Petitioner creates the impression that Mr. Thompson did nothing.

In addition to all this, the Commission had received voluminous evidence pertaining to the GCL, the advances and the dividends at its hearings on the first Plan of Reorganization. (R. 83, 159, 160, 208-209, 211, 20839-20843) The representatives of the New Orleans security holders had retained competent experts (R. 208-209) and were represented by able counsel at those hearings.

The record is in complete contradiction to the statements and suggestions in the Petitioner's brief that there has been an inadequate investigation of the affairs of the GCL. It is perfectly plain that Mr. Thompson's conduct in these proceedings has conformed with the highest standards of a fiduciary. Two courts, after having examined the merits of Objection 19, have said so. (FF. 45, R. 29; CL. 17, R. 33; R. IV, 27)

None of the decisions upon which Petitioner relies in Point IV of his brief is in point. (Petitioner's brief, pp. 58-59) They deal with a situation quite different from a trusteeship under Section 77. It has been the practice in proceedings under Section 77 to appoint a common trustee or trustees for all of the debtors within a single system. This practice is contemplated by the provisions of Section 77(a) which authorizes subsidiaries to file petitions in proceedings involving the parent. This practice is in the public interest. It facilitates the continued operation of a railroad system as an integrated unit. To have separate trustees for the New Orleans and Missouri Pacific, each competing with the other as to traffic and other matters, could result in serious consequences. Its effect on both public and private rights cannot be estimated. Certainly no such far-reaching decision ought to be made on the basis of the record now under review. An effort similar to Petitioner's was made in the Rock Island reorganization. There the same trustees were appointed for each of the debtors in the Rock Island system. These trustees declined to affirm a lease of property of one of the subsidiaries (Rock Island, Arkansas and Louisiana Railway Co., referred to as "Rial") to the parent and refused to pay rents under the lease. Bondholders of the subsidiary asked the court to remove the trustees on the ground of conflicting interests. In affirming the order denying the motion to remove, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit stated:

> "It is further contended by appellants that there is such a conflict of interest here presented as to preclude the trustees of the principal debtor from fairly representing Rial, and that the District Court should have removed them and should have appointed another trustee or trustees for Rial. It is quite true that a case of this character always involves many conflicting interests. Similar conditions nearly al> ways arise in equity receiverships. But that fact alone has seldom, if ever, been used as a reason for appointing more than one set of trustees. If appellants' contention in this respect were permitted with respect to all of the subsidiaries, it would be most difficult indeed to make any progress whatever in accomplishing the thing which Congress obviously intended." In re Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 110 F. 2d 395, 401. (C. C. A. 7th, 1940)

If a court is capable of dealing impartially with the affairs of several debtors, there appears to be no reason why the court's officer, a trustee in bankruptcy, who has no personal interest in any of their affairs, is not also capable of acting with complete impartiality. The record is convincing proof that Mr. Thompson has done so in this case. The courts below so determined. (FF. 45, R. 29; CL. 17, R. 33; R. IV, 27)

POINT VI

The decision below should be sustained on the ground that the order of the District Court approving the 1940 Plan was final and conclusive as to the validity and priority of the intercompany claim.

In Point IV supra we reviewed the history of these proceedings. There it was noted that in the Section 77(d) and (e) proceedings before the Commission and the district court, which resulted in approval of the 1940 Plan by the district court, there was not so much as a suggestion that anything was wrong with the intercompany claim. (R. 20839-20840) The Commission's report on the 1940 Plan indicated clearly that the allocations of new securities to the Secured Serial bondholders and the New Orleans Common stockholders were based on the conclusion that the intercompany claim was valid and ranked in priority to the New Orleans Common Stock.[1]

All interested parties were duly notified of and given an opportunity to participate in the proceedings which resulted in approval of the 1940 Plan by the district court. In these circumstances the district court's order of approval was final and conclusive as to all issues of law and fact which could have been, but were not, raised in those proceedings.[2] The petitioner and other Secured Serial bondholders having failed to urge invalidity or subordination of the intercompany claim and to present supporting proof were, as to such matters, bound by the district court's order approving the 1940 Plan.

It is immaterial that appeals from the approval order were remanded without passing on the merits of the appeals and that the district court, as permitted by Section 77(e),[3] returned the 1940 Plan to the Commission for further proceedings in accordance with Section 77(d). (R. 122) The opinion and order of the district court returning the proceedings to the Commission clearly indicate that the 1940 Plan failed of confirmation because of changed conditions and the lack of certain findings not related to th intercompany claim. (R. 124-139) It was not the purpos of Section 77, in permitting plans of reorganization to b returned to the Commission for further proceedings, t afford parties a second opportunity to try issues whic through lack of diligence they failed to present to th Commission at the prior hearings on the plan. The Peti tioner suggests no reason why he or his predecessors i interest did not present their objections to the intercom pany claim and supporting proof prior to the time whe the district court approved the 1940 Plan. They had seve years in which to do so—1933-1940. The basic facts wer all available prior to the date of the approval order an most of them were a matter of public record. (See pp 65-67, supra) Thus, in the further proceedings on the pla the Petitioner had no right to present evidence or be hear on any issue pertaining to the validity or priority of th intercompany claim. That issue had been disposed of b the order approving the 1940 Plan. The Commission un doubtedly had these considerations in mind when it state in its report approving the 1944 Plan:

In the event of such a reference back to the Commission, the proceedings with respect to any modified or new plan shall be governed by the provisions of this section in like manner as in an original proceeding hereunder."

> "• • • Although more than 12 years hav elapsed since the Missouri Pacific made its advance of cash to the New Orleans, as above stated, th invalidity of any part of these advances has neve been established and we will assume for the pur poses of this proceeding that they are valid obliga tions of the New Orleans in determining the righ of, and extent to which, holders of Missouri Pacifi 5¼-percent bonds and the New Orleans stockholder should participate in the plan of reorganization." (R. 20842, see also R. 20837-20842, 154, 161)

These conclusions are not founded upon mere techni calities. They are supported by the necessity for an orderl and expeditious procedure in the disposition of railroa reorganizations. There is an important public interest in these reorganizations. One of the chief reasons for the enactment of Section 77 was to do away with the delays of the equity receivership procedure. This Court has stated that the parties are bound to exercise the highest degree of diligence in expediting the reorganization proceedings and that it is the duty of the courts and the Commission to see that they do.[1]

Section 57k of the Bankruptcy Act[2] is inapplicable to the situation presented by this record. That section will not be applied if to do so would thwart one of the underlying purposes of Section 77, namely, the reorganization of carriers as expeditiously as is consistent with giving all interested parties an adequate opportunity to be heard.[3]

Unless the courts insist on some reasonable adherence to an orderly and expeditious procedure, one of the important purposes sought to be achieved by the enactment of Section 77 will have failed.

The conduct of Petitioner in these proceedings is a striking example of the effect of dilatory conduct. Petitioner's first statement of his objections to the intercompany claim was made at the Commission's second hearings in October 1943. As already noted, he did not come prepared to present substantial proof in support of his objections. (R. 141-165) The subsequent attempts to obtain a hearing on the intercompany claim in the district court after approval of a revised plan by the Commission, if successful, would have delayed the proceedings further. (R. 166, 247) At the hearings in the district court on the plan in January and March 1944, most of the time was occupied with Petitioner's Objection 19. The voluminous and complicated record made at that hearing undoubtedly explains to a large extent the reason why the district court required almost a year to decide the issues. It was not until January 22, 1945 that the orders approving the plan and overruling Objection 19 were entered. By the time Petitioner's four appeals had been decided by the court below—almost four years after close of the Commission's second hearings—the 1944 Plan was obsolete. Accordingly, at the suggestion of the Commission the court below remanded the proceedings for the preparation of a third plan of reorganization. (See p. 3, supra) Even now the pendency of this cause will probably require the Commission to delay its approval of the third plan of reorganization until this Court finally determines the issues.

This is not all. At the Commission's second hearings in October 1943, Petitioner for the first time raised another issue involving subordination. (R. 154; see also his Objections 20-23, inclusive R. 233) At the hearings on the 1944 Plan the district court ordered these issues segregated for separate trial. (R. 736-737, 776) To date the Petitioner has not brought these issues on for trial. Unless this Court clearly indicates its disapproval of such dilatory conduct, Petitioner may be expected to urge the same or some other objections in the further proceedings before the Commission which are now scheduled to commence on March 23, 1948. If the pattern of the instant case be followed, the issues thus raised are likely to be presented to this Court for determination four years hence. Meanwhile holders of millions of dollars of securities of the Missouri Pacific System may be required to stand by, deprived of the income on their new securities and the benefits of a management unhampered by the burdensome restrictions that the bankruptcy proceedings of necessity impose.

Certainly it was not the intention of Congress that the federal bankruptcy courts should be used as a means of hindering and delaying creditors in any such manner as is disclosed by the record under review. Petitioner's conduct in these proceedings has been in complete disregard of the interest of the public which this great railroad system serves and of creditors of the system who throughout the 77 proceedings have been stayed from enforcing their legal rights. The instant case affords this Court a most suitable opportunity to restrain parties whose dilatory conduct has contributed substantially to the extension of these proceedings over a period of almost fifteen years and to put real meaning into the words of the Rock Island and Milwaukee decisions.

No injustice will be done to the Petitioner in denying the relief which he requests. He and all other Secured Serial bondholders were given a full opportunity to present their objections to the intercompany claim. Fairness and justice do not require more than this.

CONCLUSION.

The Petition should be dismissed or the order of the Court below should be affirmed.

APPENDIX I

Excerpts from Section 77

(d) . . . After the filing of such a plan, the Commission, unless such plan shall be considered by it to be prima facie impracticable, shall, after due notice to all stockholders and creditors given in such manner as it shall determine, hold public hearings, at which opportunity shall be given to any interested party to be heard, and following which the Commission shall render a report and order in which it shall approve a plan, which may be different from any which has been proposed, that will in its opinion meet with the requirements of subsections (b) and (e) of this section, and will be compatible with the public interest; or it shall render a report and order in which it shall refuse to approve any plan. In such report the Commission shall state fully the reasons for its conclusions.

The Commission may thereafter, upon petition for good cause shown filed within sixty days of the date of its order, and upon further hearings if the Commission shall deem necessary, in a supplemental report and order modify any plan which it has approved, stating the reasons for such modification. The Commission, if it approves a plan, shall thereupon certify the plan to the court together with a transcript of the proceedings before it and a copy of the report and order approving the plan. No plan shall be approved or confirmed by the judge in any proceeding under this section unless the plan shall first have been approved by the Commission and certified to the court.

(e) Upon the certification of a plan by the Commission to the court, the court shall give due notice to all parties in interest of the time within which such parties may file with the court their objections to such plan, and such parties shall file, within such time as may be fixed in said notice, detailed and specific objections in writing to the plan and their claims for equitable treatment. The judge shall, after notice in such manner as he may determine to the debtor, its trustee or trustees, stockholders, creditors, and the Commission, hear all parties in interest in support of, and in opposition to, such objections to the plan and such claims for equitable treatment. After such hearing, and without any hearing if no objections are filed, the judge shall approve the plan if satisfied that: (1) It complies with the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, is fair and equitable, affords due recognition to the rights of each class of creditors and stockholders, does not discriminate unfairly in favor of any class of creditors or stockholders, and will conform to the requirements of the law of the land regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders . . .

. . . If the judge shall confirm the plan, he shall enter an order and file an opinion with a statement of his conclusions and his reasons therefor. If the judge shall not confirm the plan, he shall file an opinion, with a statement of his conclusions and his reasons therefor, and enter an order in which he shall either dismiss the proceedings, or, in his discretion and on the motion of any party in interest, refer the case back to the Commission for further proceedings, including the consideration of modifications of the plan or the proposal of new plans. In the event of such a reference back to the Commission, the proceedings with respect to any modified or new plan shall be governed by the provisions of this section in like manner as in an original proceeding hereunder.

If it shall be necesary to determine the value of any property for any purpose under this section, the Commission shall determine such value and certify the same to the court in its report on the plan. The value of any property used in railroad operation shall be determined on a basis which will give due consideration to the earning power of the property, past, present, and prospective, and all other relevant facts. In determining such value only such effect shall be given to the present cost of reproduction new and less depreciation and original cost of the property, and the actual investment therein, as may be required under the law of the land, in light of its earning power and all other relevant facts. . . .

MOTION TO DISMISS APPEALS

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that the undersigned will move this Court on March 8th, 1948 at the Courthouse thereof upon the opening of argument of these appeals for an order dismissing said appeals pursuant to Rule 7 of the Rules of this Court, on the following grounds:

1. That Andrew Comstock, petitioner, a bondholder of Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. has no legal capacity to appeal "on behalf of himself and others" alleged holders of 5¼% Secured Serial Gold bonds; (Appeal No. 451), nor in behalf of NOTM (Appeal No. 452).

2. That Andrew Comstock, petitioner, has no legal standing or right to appeal in the name of Guy A. Thompson as Trustee of NOTM; (Appeal No. 453).

3. That Andrew Comstock, petitioner, is not an aggrieved party (Appeal No. 454).

In support of said motion, the annexed statement will be submitted to the Court.

Statement in Support of Motion to Dismiss Appeals

This statement is submitted to this honorable Court in support of the motion by Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents, to dismiss these appeals pursuant to Rule 7 of the Rules of this Court.

The four self-serving captions of these appeals (Nos. 451, 452, 453, and 454) used or adopted herein by counsel for petitioners do not ipso facto adjudge Comstock's right to use these imposing titles.

As to Appeals Nos. 451 and 452

As to appeals taken by the petitioner, Andrew Comstock allegedly "on behalf of himself and others holding upwards of $900,000. principal amount of said (5¼%) bonds" (Appeal No. 451).

The petitioner has no right to represent any group of persons in this proceeding or upon this appeal except pursuant to subsection (p) of Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act after permission is granted by the I. C. C.

Permission to intervene personally in the reorganization proceeding was granted to petitioner Andrew Comstock by the I. C. C. but denied as to "others holding upwards of $900,000. principal amount of said (5¼%) bonds".

Furthermore the petitioner Andrew Comstock has been given no authority by law, or by the District Court, and he, therefore, has no right, to appeal in the self-styled caption used in Appeal No. 451.

Petitioner has also brought an appeal (No. 452) in the name of NOTM. Petitioner is an alleged creditor of MOP, and he or the "others" have presumably accepted interest on the 5¼% bonds from MOP since the issuance of said bonds and ratified and approved MOP's alleged management of NOTM. He is, if anything, a creditor of MOP and not of NOTM. Hence he has no standing in Court to sue in the name of NOTM.

These appeals should be dismissed.

As to Appeal No. 453

As to appeals taken by petitioner, Andrew W. Comstock allegedly on behalf of Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of NOTM.

In this self-styled caption, as well as in Appeals Nos. 451 and 452, petitioner Comstock asserts he represents holders of MOP's 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds.

As pointed out above, petitioner Comstock has no legal capacity to appeal in behalf of NOTM or on behalf of other holders of MOP's 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds.

The I. C. C. denied Comstock the right which he appropriated to represent other holders of 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds and no appeal from the adverse ruling and order of the I. C. C. has been taken to the District Court or to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and the time to do so has expired.

Petitioner by the same token has no authority in law, from the District Court, or from the Trustee, Guy A. Thompson, to adopt the title used in this appeal, and he, therefore, has no right to appeal on behalf of "Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of the NOTM".

Moreover, there never was any question about the propriety of Guy A. Thompson acting as Trustee of NOTM and MOP. He was appointed as such Trustee by an order of the District Court from which no appeal was taken by petitioners. The order of his appointment has not been rescinded, nor was Mr. Thompson requested by bona fide NOTM creditors or stockholders to resign from NOTM trusteeship because of prejudice or inconsistent or divergent interests. The claims alleged by Comstock are simply matters of bookkeeping, accounting and administration of the MOP properties, in which Comstock has no interest as a matter of law.

Regardless of Comstock's designation of the title of these appeals, he represents only himself (See R. IV, p. 31).

The Trustee of MOP however, represents all creditors.

In re Lewensohn (C. C. A. 2d Circ.), 121 Fed. R. 538, certiorari denied 189 U. S. 513, at page 539 of the Reporter, the Court said:

> "The trustee represents every creditor. The orderly conduct of the administration requires that a proceeding for the re-examination of the claim should be taken in the interests of all the creditors and not be permitted at the instance of any one creditor unless demanded by the interests of all. If the trustee should, without sufficient reason, refuse to proceed, the Court, by its order, could compel him to do so or remove him for disobedience."

The Court said further on page 540:

> "We cannot believe it was within its intention (referring to general order 21 Cl. 6, 32 C. C. A. XXIII, 89 Fed. X) to permit the trustee and creditors concurrently to pursue a re-examination of a claim, or to permit a creditor to do so when the trustee, for sufficient reason, does not approve, or when, in the interests of all it is desirable that the trustee should conduct the proceeding."

To the same effect and citing many authorities is Maryland Casualty Co. v. Freeman, 71 Fed. (2d) 1011.

In the case of Fred Reuping Leather Co. v. Fort Greene Nat. Bank of Brooklyn, N. Y.; In re Honesdale Union Stamp Shoe Co., Inc., Circuit Court of Appeals, 3d Circuit (1939), 102 Fed. (2d) 372, at page 372, the Circuit Court said:

> "• • • the trustee represents all the creditors and may therefore be relied upon to press all proper objections to the claims of those whose standing is questionable. If he defaults in his duty the court may upon application direct him in his duty or, if he be recalcitrant, remove him for disobedience, or permit a creditor to act in his name. To allow any creditor, without such leave, to institute proceedings to reject the claims of other creditors, will not, as Judge Wallace pointed out in Re Lewensohn, supra, 121 F. 539, 'subserve any necessary purpose, and open the door to grave abuse. It enables one creditor at his own pleasure to subject any one of the other creditors, or all the other creditors, to the inconvenience and expense of unnecessary litigation, and to unduly protract the settlement of the estate. It is not allowed, in terms, by any provision of the bankrupt act.' 'Furthermore', as Judge Thayer said in Chatfield v. O'Dwyer, supra, 101 F. page 709, 'if one creditor of a bankrupt may prosecute an appeal under section 25 of the bankrupt law (11 U. S. C. A. par. 48), from the allowance of a claim, then any other creditor may take a like appeal upon the same or different grounds, and this court may be required to entertain a number of appeals, all of which are brought to test the validity of the same demand'." (Italics ours.)

These are the same cases relied on by Comstock in the District Court (D. C. Brief, pp. 65-66).

It follows that the order of the District Court and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit, was right.

Petitioner Comstock has no legal standing or right to appeal in the name of Guy A. Thompson as Trustee of NOTM. To hold otherwise is to license every creditor in this proceeding to test the validity of any claim real or imaginary before the reorganization Court. No plan of reorganization could ever be concluded in such event. The Trustee alone represents all creditors.

These appeals must, therefore, be dismissed.

As to Appeal No. 454

As to appeal taken by the petitioner Andrew W. Comstock in his own name.

Comstock's appeal in his own name as a creditor holding 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds of MOP, the principal debtor, has no superior standing to that of any other 5¼% Secured Serial bondholder and his claim cannot be singled out from those claims, if any, which other 5¼% bondholders have as a class.

Comstock may speak only for himself on this appeal. But to do so he must show that he is a bona fide bondholder of said bonds in due course, before maturity and for value and without knowledge of any infirmity in the Secured Serial bonds. This he cannot demonstrate. On the contrary, it has been established that he was aware of the infirmities, if any, which he alleges are inherent in this bond issue and nevertheless purchased these bonds in 1940 after default in the payment of interest thereon (See R. IV, p. 20).

Petitioner Comstock does not claim he purchased these bonds before default in the payment of interest thereon, for were he to do so, he would be bound to a ratification of all the acts of overreaching claimed to have been perpetrated by MOP, since the funds so obtained by MOP were concededly used for the specific purpose of meeting MOP's system obligations and dividends.

This honorable Court should not take jurisdiction it is respectfully submitted, to hear petitioner Comstock, on an individual complaint, i. e., his Objections "Numbered 19 and related objections" to the 1940 approved plan of reorganization, on an intercompany claim because the same is now moot. There is no approved plan of reorganization and this objection may never again arise if for one reason or another a final plan of reorganization is not adopted, or if as is claimed by this petitioner NOTM is declared to be solvent.

Therefore, this petitioner is not now an aggrieved party as there is no final determination or adjudication of the treatment of his bonds by an adopted or approved plan of reorganization.

Moreover, should this honorable Court set the precedent of permitting an individual bondholder of a principal Debtor to appeal from an interlocutory order of the District Court or of the I. C. C., other bondholders and claimants may swamp the Courts with other demands to test the validity of their particular claims upon intercompany matters.

Finally, there is not a scintilla of evidence in the record by Comstock to show that he is a bona fide bondholder or that he has suffered any damages as a result of his purchase of MOP 5¼% serial bonds.

The contrary is the admitted fact as the record will disclose. Comstock became a bondholder of MOP in 1940, years after the commencement of this proceeding in 1933 by buying bonds at ten cents on the dollar (R. IV p. 20).

These bonds have since been selling in the open market at or close to par. They are now selling for far more than Comstock paid for them.

The several appeals taken by Comstock must therefore be dismissed.

Dated, February 28, 1948.

BRIEF OF CONVERTIBLE BONDHOLDERS, RESPONDENTS

Introductory Statement

This brief is filed with this Court on behalf of the Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents, constituting 21 individual owners and holders of the 5½% Convertible Gold Bonds of the principal Debtor, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, parties and the original representatives of this class of security to participate in this proceeding. Authority to intervene was given by order of the I. C. C. pursuant to subsection (p) of Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act.

The 5½% Convertible Gold Bonds hereinafter referred to as Convertible bonds, constitute a $45,493,000 issue of the principal Debtor sold to the public in May 1929 and secured by the entire equity of the principal Debtor, MOP.

As of January 1, 1948, these bonds with accrued and unpaid interest represented a claim against the Debtor estate of $83,441,744, the second largest creditor claim in this proceeding.

The Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents, have no other security interests in this proceeding and own no other securities of the principal Debtor.

Comstock, petitioner* herein, holds some MOP 5¼% serial bonds and hence represents only himself, in this proceeding, as we have shown in the forepart of this brief in the Statement in Support of Motion to Dismiss these Appeals supra, pages 3 to 9. He is nevertheless endeavoring by this appeal to subordinate the MOP claims against NOTM properties to the entire $13,156,000 issue of 5¼% serial bonds.

NOTM Mortgage and Income Bondholders Committee are respondents herein. Insofar as the Institutional Group of First and Refunding Bondholders of MOP are concerned, they are also respondents herein. It is clear that their interest is in behalf of consummating a plan of reorganization without injury to their priority. Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents herein, generally support the views of the Institutional Group of First and Refunding Bondholders, respondents herein, upon this appeal and as set forth in the Motion to Dismiss. Respondents maintain that Comstock's objections,* if valid, must be subordinated to the Convertible Bondholders' claims.

At no time have the Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents, had any connection with the management of MOP, the principal Debtor or any subsidiary thereof. It is important to call this fact to the attention of this Court for the treatment to be accorded to the bona fide Convertible Bondholder's claims under any approved plan of reorganization may be innocently but materially affected by a reversal of the order appealed from.

As the original and only independent representative Group of Convertible Bondholders in this proceeding directly concerned, a reply to the Comstock brief is therefore here independently required to be made on behalf of the Convertible Bondholders, respondents herein, to the end that the orders of the District Court and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals 8th Circuit be affirmed.

Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked by petitioners under Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended, but it is respectfully submitted by these respondents that jurisdiction of this honorable Court is lacking.

The date of the unanimous opinion, order and judgment of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit affirming the order and judgment of the District Court was August 28, 1947. Petition for certiorari was granted by this Court on January 12, 1948.

Opinions Below

The opinion of the District Court is reported in 64 F. Supp. 64. The opinion of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit unanimously affirming the order and decree of the District Court is reported in 163 F. (2d) 350; also see R. IV pp. 13-27.

Statement of the Case

The principal Debtor, MOP, acquired the controlling interest in the capital stock of the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, NOTM, at the end of 1924 and at the times relevant here owned from 58 to 93 percent of the total $15,000,000 par value of such stock and from January 1925 until simultaneous commencement of reorganization proceedings in bankruptcy of both corporations in 1933, the affairs of MOP and NOTM were managed by the same officers. See transcript of proceedings in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit Volume IV page 15 referred to herein as "R. IV p. ".

It appears that thereafter and in 1926, MOP issued and caused to be sold to the public the 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds in the amount of $13,156,000 of the kind allegedly held by petitioner Comstock. The security behind the 5¼% Serial Bonds is the pledge of the capital stock of NOTM in the same face amount as the face amount of such bonds, (R. IV p. 17). Appellant was not at that time or since, a holder or owner of NOTM stock.

On May 1, 1929, MOP issued and caused to be sold to the public the 5½% Convertible Gold Bonds Series A, in the amount of $46,392,000 to become due on May 1, 1949 of the kind held by Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents herein. $45,493,000 in amount of said bonds were issued and are outstanding in the hands of the public. These Convertible bonds are a direct obligation of MOP. However, the Convertible bonds were issued by MOP to pay off $30,551,000 outstanding St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company River & Gulf Divisions unifying and refunding mortgage 4% Gold Bonds which matured July 1, 1929 and to reimburse the treasury for capital expenditures theretofore made. (Report of Bureau of Valuation of I. C. C. filed by direction of I. C. C. Division 4, pursuant to order of the Commission entered January 19, 1948 and paragraph 11, of subsection (c) of Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act of the United States, as amended, and forming part of the record before this Court pursuant to said order and the provisions of law). The security behind the Convertible Bonds in this proceeding if equitably considered is therefore definitely a superior and prior lien to that of the 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds. The 5½% Convertible Gold Bonds are also the direct obligation of MOP and hence are necessarily secured not by the capital stock of any subsidiary but by all the capital stock of the principal debtor MOP.

Petitioner Comstock who became a MOP bondholder after 1936 filed his objections to the then approved (1940) plan of reorganization for the principal Debtor MOP for the first time on November 22, 1944. The objection was to the allowance on August 28, 1933 of a MOP claim against the NOTM properties in the amount of $10,565,226.78. Certain of his objections in support of disallowing said MOP claim contained charges of mismanagement of the Missouri Pacific to his detriment as a creditor of MOP, but the separately numbered objections related to wrongs which he alleges were done by the Missouri Pacific to NOTM to the detriment of his interest in the stock of the subsidiary NOTM (R. IV p. 17). In 1935, the MOP claim was upon request re-examined and approved by the District Court.

The Nature of Comstock Objection No. 19 and Related Objections

At this point, it is pertinent to remind this Court that the order of the reorganization Court approving the 1940 plan of reorganization was reversed by the order of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit, by order made and entered September 9, 1947 and the proceeding to formulate a new plan of reorganization or to revise the 1940 plan of reorganization was, for reasons appearing in said order (not including Comstock's objections to the plan No. 19 and related objections) referred back to the I. C. C. which has set public hearings to formulate and adopt a new or revised plan of reorganization for MOP. Comstock's attorneys consented in open Court to the making and entry of said order. Hearings on a plan are now scheduled for March 23rd 1948.

Hence Comstock's objections to the old plan "Numbered 19 and related objections" which are urged here on appeal have become and now are academic and moot.

When and if a new plan is adopted, petitioner Comstock, may find his objections have been obviated, for if all the creditors' claims of MOP of principal and interest are fully compensated under a new plan of reorganization, Comstock surely can have no complaint. Much of MOP's bonded indebtedness has been paid off and a considerable amount is current.* At present as the proceeding now stands Comstock cannot claim to be an objectant or an aggrieved creditor.

Comstock's objection "Numbered 19 and related objections" charged that during the period when the affairs of Bank Debt	5,850,000.

R. C. C. claim	2,487,000.

Boonville, St. Louis & Southern bonds	210,500.
NOTM 5% income bonds	2,354,000.

Besides the foregoing, the District Court also authorized and the Trustee has paid off $19,093,665 in interest on three bond issues:

$11,159,525 on MOP first and refunding bonds for the Sept. 1, 1939 and March 1, 1940 coupons,

6,324,140 on first mortgage and NOTM income bonds, for the period to October 1, 1947,

1,610,000 on first mortgage bonds of the International Great Northern RR (IGN) for the year 1939 to 1940.

$19,093,665 total.

"Extensive expenditures have also been made for improvement of the property * * * these problems arising out of the substantial changes in conditions since the approval of the plan justify its further review * * * the Commission is of opinion that the present plan should be returned to it for reconsideration and revision, and it so recommends." Quoted from I. C. C. brief, filed in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit, about August 28, 1947. On September 9, 1947, the Circuit Court entered an order vacating the District Court order approving the plan and referred the matter back to the I. C. C. Hearings are now scheduled for March 23, 1948, to adopt a plan of reorganization.

NOTM were controlled by MOP, that is between the end of 1924 and the bankruptcy in 1933, the Missouri Pacific management caused its subsidiary NOTM to pay to it dividends illegally out of capital and to improvidently declare and pay dividends unjustified by the business and conditions of NOTM (R. IV pp. 17-18).

A $200,000,000 expansion program was carried on by MOP for its properties including its NOTM properties (R. IV, p. 26). $10,355,226.78 of advances made by MOP for NOTM developments remained unpaid and thus NOTM notes in the sum of $9,955,226.78 evidencing the advances were credited to MOP.

At the time of the commencement of this proceeding the notes evidencing advances to NOTM for such purposes aggregated $10,355,226.78. This indebtedness was reported to the I. C. C. and deemed valid by it. Under authorization of the I. C. C. granted after hearing, MOP pledged two of the notes aggregating $9,955,226.78 as security for loans made to it by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. An additional pledge was made to Railroad Credit Corporation (R. IV, p. 16). The RFC and RCC claims have since been paid from earnings of the entire Debtor's estate, without objection from Comstock, and the order authorizing payment by the Trustee subrogated the First and Refunding Mortgage bondholders and other MOP creditors including 5¼% Serial bonds held by Comstock, to the extent of their interest (R. 1188, Ex. 335-357), to the lien of the RFC and the RCC on the pledged collateral, including the pledged portion of the intercompany claim (R. 1157 and 1165).

Thus a determination in favor of Comstock, by this honorable Court of the questions presented will not result in a reversal of the order, overruling petitioner Comstock's Objection 19, since petitioner Comstock concedes that the RFC and RCC collateral notes of $9,955,226.78 of the total $10,355,226.78 in these inter-company claims which have been satisfied of record, are valid. (R. 382-386, 334.) If $9,995,226.78 of the $10,355,226.78 in said notes are valid, then the balance of said notes given as part of said intercompany claims must also be conceded as valid.

The attention of this honorable Court is called to the fact that "the items which made up the total $10,565,226.78 were clearly specified and evidence of the validity of the debt as consideration for the notes were adduced before the Commission at an early stage of these Section 77 proceedings, and the obligation was deemed to be valid and ahead of New Orleans' (NOTM) stockholders interest in all of the accountings, computations and adjustments resulting in the plan of reorganization determined by the Commission and approved by the Court in 1940" (R. IV, pp. 16-17).

Facts Regarding Comstock's Claims

Petitioner Comstock owns some of said 5¼% Serial bonds. From the testimony given before the District Court, it clearly appears that as to the case presented on the objections to the old approved plan of reorganization, Comstock had, after the report of the Senate subcommittee which criticized the MOP management of NOTM and in 1940 (7 years after the commencement of these proceedings) bought these MOP bonds at about 10 cents on the dollar and then employed an accountant to make studies of the accounts, records and reports of MOP management of the NOTM properties with a view toward bolstering a law suit. Comstock's charges are based entirely on his accountant's interpretation of MOP's figures (See R. IV, p. 20). These studies were not designed to reflect the system character of all the Gulf Coast Lines held under MOP ownership but rather to develop NOTM as a completely independent unit, neither asking nor requiring to give financial or other support for the benefit of the entire MOP System.

The alleged "mismanagement" of NOTM, if any, took place from 1925 to 1933 and hence the claimant Comstock under any circumstances was guilty of laches in presenting his objection. Furthermore, Comstock's champertous conduct in buying into a lawsuit should not commend itself to this Court of equity. The object of such litigation can only be to delay final reorganization of the Debtor.

The testimony on behalf of respondents was supported by many accountants and summarizing exhibits all to the effect that MOP management of NOTM properties was honest and was beneficial to NOTM.

It is respectfully submitted that notwithstanding such proofs respondents were not required to show benefits accruing to NOTM, since an identical set of officers managed MOP and NOTM and other branch lines of MOP. The important question was whether MOP as a railroad system and overall operating company benefited and not whether each of its subsidiaries or each branch line prospered. In this connection, the attention of this honorable Court is called to the fact that the petitioner Comstock "did not assert or tender evidence to show that any specified individuals working for NOTM or MOP or both companies has misappropriated or wrongfully diverted to their own use any of the assets or business of the NOTM to the detriment of stockholders. He tendered no evidence to show that the plan of MOP System expansion, including expansion and improvement of the New Orleans (NOTM) and for the financing thereof, adopted and carried through by the Missouri Pacific (MOP), was in itself fraudulent or reckless and improvident" (R. IV, pp. 19-20).

District Court's Findings and Findings by the Circuit Court of Appeals

The District Judge heard testimony on Comstock's objection to the plan of reorganization for two weeks. His questions, comments and directions reflect his close attention to and understanding of the testimony and its application through the trial. His written opinion is reported in 64 F. Supp. 64. His findings of fact and conclusions of law were drawn with care and thoroughness, and are responsive to all the issues presented by the objections. No claim is made of any refusal on the part of the court to make findings in respect to any other issues claimed to have been presented.

That MOP drew on the NOTM properties and financed the same may be conceded. That is the reason MOP as previously constituted, purchased or acquired control of NOTM, viz., for the enlargement and unification of the present MOP System. We respectfully submit that there was no illegality in this.

The disputes and conflicts of testimony in respect to the allowance of the MOP claim as reflected by the accounts and the inferences to be drawn were all issues of fact. The findings unanimously sustained by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit cover many printed pages of the record and to discuss them in connection with the contrary inferences which petitioner contends should be drawn from particulars of evidence would serve no useful purpose. MOP's $200,000,000 expansion and improvement program and the accounting system that was used and by which the directors were kept informed for management purposes (which accounting system was under I. C. C. supervision) and the whole course of the management of NOTM is revealed in the evidence. There was no desire or intent on the part of MOP's Trustee or the present operating officers to conceal or withhold any information.

The findings indicate the opposing contentions made on the trial and cover the particulars of the evidence and indicate the bases of the court's action.

The Circuit Court of Appeals 8th Circuit, carefully considered the record in the District Court and in a well reasoned opinion declared that it too was satisfied from its examination thereof that the findings of the trial court were not erroneous and that on the facts as found the claim of MOP was properly allowed and the petitioner's objections and claims for special treatment were properly denied (R. IV, pp. 14-27).

Petitioner Comstock has suffered no damage. On the contrary he has a handsome profit on his speculation.

Therefore what purpose he has in prosecuting this appeal is not clear, unless it is to endeavor to place himself in a bargaining position so he can unnecessarily protract this proceeding to reorganize MOP. However, a reading of the opinions of both Courts will demonstrate that Comstock received the benefit of the kind of judicial decision to which he was entitled—an application of the law to the facts of the case. Fairness and justice do not require more than this.

The judgments of the courts below should be affirmed.

ARGUMENT

Summary of Points of Fact

The salient facts concerning the objections which are the subject of this appeal, filed in the District Court by Comstock, to the last plan of reorganization, which facts are not disputed, are as follows:

1. There is no approved plan of reorganization for MOP at the present time.

2. The facts as to "domination" of NOTM by MOP as claimed by petitioner Comstock took place in 1924. The claim as to domination ignores the fact that MOP is an integrated railroad system of which NOTM is a part; officers for NOTM and MOP until bankruptcy, were the same; the Trustee is the same. NOTM shared in a $200,000,000 expansion and improvement program designed to benefit the entire MOP System.

3. Comstock bought a few of MOP 5¼% serial bonds in 1940 but waited until November 22, 1944 before presenting his objections to the then approved plan of reorganization. Comstock admittedly paid about 10 cents on the dollar for these bonds. He cannot show that he has been damaged in his speculation. Comstock owns no stock in NOTM.

4. There is no illegality claimed or shown in MOP's acquisition of the NOTM properties. Petitioners are not minority or dissenting NOTM stockholders of that transaction. Even if petitioners were bona fide bondholders of MOP following acquisition of the NOTM properties, they must be deemed to have ratified MOP's management, control, etc. of NOTM's properties.

5. The I. C. C. has declared valid a loan transaction with the R. F. C. and the R. C. C. whereby MOP pledged as collateral $9,955,226.78 of its $10,355,226.78 claim against the NOTM properties. Hence the claim has been adjudicated valid.

6. Convertible Bonds represented by the undersigned respondents are secured by the entire equity of MOP necessarily including equities of all subsidiary properties. The MOP 5¼% serial bonds held by Comstock are secured only by a pledge of NOTM stock.

7. Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents herein are bona fide bondholders and are not allied in interest with any persons who composed the management of MOP, and who may have (if indeed anyone has) benefited from the NOTM transactions. Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents have a right to assume that all subsidiary property of MOP will be used for the benefit of MOP creditors.

8. The interpretation of the accounting practices of MOP as made by Comstock is in disregard of the best interests of System operation of MOP and the benefits accruing to MOP as a whole and contrary to the rules prescribed by the I. C. C.

SUMMARY OF POINTS OF LAW

Point I

The District Court and the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Were Justified in Overruling Petitioners' Contentions. It is not the Practice of this Court to Try Any Case de Novo.

Point II

Petitioner Comstock, as Owner of Secured Serial 5¼% bonds of MOP the principal Debtor, cannot now be heard to complain because the results of MOP's management of its NOTM properties were not profitable.

Point III

Even if Petitioners Were in Position of NOTM stockholders, they Could not Be Heard to Complain against Respondents.

Point IV

If the facts alleged by Comstock are found by this Court to warrant equitable redress, the Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents, are nevertheless entitled to have the benefit of the allowance of the said claim of $10,565,226.78 plus interest. Petitioner's claim or dispute is with Alleghany Corporation only.

Point V

Comstock's objections were properly overruled as against the Convertible Bondholders Group on other grounds.

Point VI

Taylor* v. Standard Gas Co., 306 U. S. 307, principally relied on by petitioners is clearly distinguishable and inapplicable to the case at bar.

POINT I

The District Court and the United States Circuit Court of Appeals were justified in overruling petitioners' contentions. It is not the practice of this Court to try any case de novo.

Putting aside for the moment the stubborn fact that the Comstock objectants took no steps for more than 11 years to invalidate the proof of claim which was filed and allowed by the Trustee on August 28, 1933 against NOTM properties in the amount of $10,565,226.78 and later re-examined by the Trustee and allowed in 1935, the District Court was justified in refusing to accept Comstock's 1946 version of the MOP claim.

Comstock's objections against allowance of the MOP claim can relate only to the treatment which he ultimately receives under an approved plan as holder of MOP 5¼% serial bonds. The objections which petitioners assert, however, are against the treatment which NOTM minority stockholders received under the old plan as a result of the allowance of said MOP claim. In so doing, these petitioners' claims are not only premature and lacking in legal authority (Comstock owns no NOTM stock), they are inconsistent as well. The two matters are entirely unrelated; the two positions they assume are contradictory. The treatment of an NOTM stockholder under an adopted plan of reorganization will be necessarily different from that accorded a MOP 5¼% serial bondholder.

The Trustee for the entire MOP System is best qualified and is required by law to determine the merits of Comstock's and any other asserted claims or objections to claims and whether to overrule or to allow them.

Comstock challenged the validity of the proof of claim filed and allowed against the NOTM properties by the Trustee for the principal debtor MOP. He claims that the MOP Trustee, being also Trustee of NOTM, could not give NOTM the "vigilant protection of an independent Trustee". Comstock asked the District Court to again re-examine the claim and that it be disallowed.

To argue thus, Comstock petitioners overlook the fact that they are MOP bondholders and not NOTM bondholders. Secondly, as such MOP bondholders, these objectants must consider the System nature of their obligation and not the individual properties which make up the MOP System.

Furthermore, it was affirmatively established before the District Court by Guy A. Thompson, the Trustee for MOP, that said objectants knew the merits or demerits of the MOP claim against NOTM as long ago as 1935 and were then given an opportunity to contest said claim, yet they made no objection thereto and took no appeal from the Court order allowing the same.

The allowance of the claim in 1933 and again in 1935 made it a fait accompli, and it is grossly unfair to public investors in MOP securities in the light of the merits of the claim to require such a reversal on the part of the Trustee or the Courts as will result in depriving them of substantial property rights which would result if any decision should now be made re-examining said claim in accordance with petitioners' proposed bookkeeping methods, and adversely determining the same.

There never was any question about the propriety of Guy A. Thompson acting as Trustee of MOP and NOTM properties. He was appointed as such following the identical officer management for MOP and NOTM prior to 1933. He was appointed as such Trustee by an order of the District Court from which no appeal was taken by these petitioners. The order of his appointment has not been rescinded, nor was Mr. Thompson requested by bona fide NOTM creditors or stockholders to resign from NOTM trusteeship because of inconsistent or divergent interests.

The claims alleged by Comstock are simply matters of accounting and administration by MOP of its subsidiary properties. Comstock's interpretation of MOP's accounting methods and his characterizations simply ignore the MOP accounting system (prescribed by the I. C. C.) and exaggerates and distorts the importance of NOTM properties in a unified system.

The Trustee of the principal Debtor MOP represents all creditors.

It was so held in In re Lewensohn, supra (C. C. A. 2d Circ.) 121 Fed. R. 538, 539, 540 cert. denied 189 U. S. 513.

Also in Maryland Casualty Co. v. Freeman, 71 Fed. (2d) 1011, supra, citing many authorities.

Also please see Fred Reuping Leather Co. v. Fort Greene Nat. Bank of Brooklyn, N. Y., In re Honesdale Union Stamp Shoe Co., Inc. (C. C. A. 3d Circ.) (1939), 102 Fed. (2d) 372, supra.

Despite the legal and the factual situation obviating any need therefor, a hearing on Comstock's Objection No. 19 and related objections to MOP's claim, before the District Court, was nevertheless allowed. It lasted two weeks. The District Judge in charge of this proceeding heard the testimony, etc. and made findings of fact and conclusions of law "drawn with care and thoroughness" (R. IV, p. 23) and "responsive to all the issues presented by the objections here involved and the evidence that was adduced." The District Court overruled the petitioners' contentions.

The vast extent of the railroad business carried on by the MOP during the long past period of alleged mismanagement and the intricate corporate structures of the MOP system of railroads inevitably presented most serious problems in the attempts of accountants to picture what their course of operations and financial transactions had been (R. IV, p. 23).

The NOTM properties had in some respects the character of a holding company in that it operated itself only a small fraction (around 11%) of the railroad mileage of its railroad system, but owned the stocks and securities of some 14 other railroad companies in the same area.

For financing purposes, the individual roads comprising the NOTM group were dependent upon NOTM which acted for the group in respect to financing, and presented the necessary unitary functioning principal.

It was for the District Court to draw the inferences from the conflict in testimony with regard to the true financial condition of NOTM at different times within the period and to establish and present the financial results of the railroad operations that were carried on. It was through the use of the consolidated balance sheets that NOTM properties were treated as a unit in the financing of the companies through MOP management. Petitioner before the District Court insisted upon a "break down of the figures" to the smallest branch line of the NOTM properties to support his version of the figures that the finances of said branch line had been mismanaged.

But the disputes and conflicts of testimony and documents in respect to the accounts and the inferences to be drawn therefrom were all issues of fact. From the order of the District Court overruling Comstock's objections, petitioners took an appeal to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit.

The Circuit Court of Appeals was satisfied, however, from their examination of the voluminous record that the findings of the trial court were not erroneous and that on the facts as found the claim of MOP was properly allowed and the objections and claim for special treatment asserted by Comstock were properly overruled and the order appealed from was unanimously affirmed.

Petitioners here again have stated the case in substantial disregard of the findings of the trial court and practically as though the case was here to be tried by this Court de novo on the evidence submitted.

This Court must decline to assume that function. This honorable Court may not and should not set aside the findings of fact which have been made by the trial court and confirmed by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Allen v. Trust, 326 U. S. 630, 636;
U. S. v. O'Donnell, 303 U. S. 501, 508;
Goodyear Co. v. Ray-O-Vac. Co., 321 U. S. 275, 278;
General Orders in Bankruptcy Nos. 36 and 49 (11 U. S. C A 53 post.);
First Nat'l v. Littlefield, 226 U. S. 110, 112.

The findings thus sustained by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals cover many printed pages of the record, and to discuss them in connection with the contrary inferences which these petitioners contend should be drawn from particulars of evidence would serve no useful purpose (R. IV, p. 26). Petitioners' objections do not aid in completing the reorganization of the MOP System which is the subject of this proceeding.

The judgment of the Trustee, of the District Court and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit was right. The judgment and order appealed from should be affirmed.

POINT II

Petitioner Comstock, as owner of secured serial 5¼% bonds of MOP, the principal debtor, cannot now be heard to complain because the results of MOP's management of its NOTM properties were not profitable.

The purposes for which MOP issued the serial 5¼% bonds cannot be traced directly and exclusively to the purchase by MOP of NOTM stock. In other words, it is not the claim of Comstock that he was an original owner of NOTM stock and that he was induced to exchange the same dollar for dollar for MOP 5¼% serial bonds. Comstock does not profess to be a minority stockholder of NOTM. Comstock does not claim any fraud in the transaction whereby he became a MOP 5¼% bondholder.

There is no privity of contract between NOTM stockholders and the petitioner Comstock or with any other 5¼% serial bondholder. Comstock was never a holder of NOTM stock. The transaction (i. e. pledge of NOTM stock to purchasers of MOP serial 5¼% bonds) was not shown to be unprofitable for such bondholders at the time when such bonds were received. Nor did these petitioners or any other holder of 5¼% serial bonds at any time thereafter disaffirm their transaction upon learning of the alleged malfeasance of MOP either at the commencement of the reorganization proceedings or after the report of the U. S. Senate subcommittee.

The above statement is made not in defense of wrongdoing, if any took place, but rather to demonstrate to this honorable Court that these petitioners in any view of their complaint, are not before this Court with clean hands and that they have slept on their rights so long that an abnegation of MOP's claims at this late date will adversely affect the interests of innocent and bona fide holders of the 5½% Convertible bonds which were sold to the public in the sum of $45,493,000 after May 1, 1929.

The matters about which Comstock complains, took place in 1924.

Since then MOP bond issues have been sold to the public with the approval of the I. C. C. MOP's credit has thereby been pledged to bona fide purchasers of MOP bonds who purchased same before maturity and without knowledge of any alleged infirmities. These persons, members of the public, have vested valid property rights which must not be avoided at this late date.

Therefore, even if all the facts stated by Comstock were true (which we deny), it would be impossible, not to say unfair, to restore the equities of the parties to their original status for it is impossible to recast NOTM's history and experience so as to even approximate what might be its financial condition at this date, had NOTM been independent of the MOP system.

Moreover, the acceptance by other MOP 5¼% serial bondholders of interest payments on these obligations paid regularly by MOP, on and after December 1, 1926 when these bonds were issued and sold to the public until the commencement of this proceeding, must be deemed a ratification by said bondholders of the System operation of the MOP properties. Having accepted these benefits and the obligation of MOP, they cannot now disavow the diminished or impaired value of their collateral security as a result of the System operation of the MOP properties and, now for the first time, demand that the entire situation be disregarded in the interest of NOTM.

The inequalities or inequities which may have existed for NOTM stockholders from 1924 to 1926 under MOP's domination and control of NOTM properties were cancelled and released in the transaction by which NOTM stockholders received cash notes or MOP 5¼% serial bonds for their holdings.

Only lien bondholders of NOTM have a right to complain of irregularities or imprudence in the management of their affairs by MOP, for only NOTM creditors have (if the facts regarding NOTM as alleged by petitioners be true) lost the right of recoupment. This is not true, however, of NOTM stockholders who as we have said, upon MOP's purchase of NOTM control, either received cash or notes or 5¼% serial bonds of MOP for their stock. Comstock is not a NOTM creditor, and the NOTM Mortgage and Income Bondholders Committee are respondents on this appeal.

The inducing causes or the statements made upon which Comstock relied in buying 5¼% serial bonds were not established before the District Court. Such evidence was not offered by said petitioner. Yet this would be vital to any claim of fraud or overreaching.

There was no irregularity in the transaction whereby MOP purchased a 93% stock interest in NOTM properties and dominated that railroad. Control of NOTM properties by MOP carried with it the right to operate NOTM for the benefit of the entire system.

Petitioners, therefore, have no legal or equitable right to disavow legal claims against NOTM properties because of MOP's past or present management of said properties for the benefit of the MOP System, since respondents had no part in the management of its properties and such management as existed was also for the benefit of petitioners.

Petitioners' objections are without warrant in fact or law.

The orders of the Courts below should be affirmed.

POINT III

Even if petitioners were in position of NOTM stockholders, they could not be heard to complain against respondents.

Comstock holds no original NOTM stock. But even if the NOTM stock was declared forfeit under the provisions of the indenture, if any, securing the 5¼% serial bonds, the NOTM stockholders have no cause for complaint against other MOP creditors for the management of NOTM properties since MOP creditors, respondents herein, did not share in MOP management.

It should also be noted that:

(a) The matters complained of allegedly took place more than twenty (20) years ago and any complaint based thereon is barred by the Statute of Limitations.

(b) Petitioners are not NOTM minority stockholders.

(c) These petitioners are in a dual conflicting position, on the one hand attacking the transaction whereby MOP allegedly exercised unlawful dominion and control of NOTM properties yet (according to Comstock) accepting dividends declared from NOTM properties, which were used to pay MOP's interest on secured serial 5¼% bonds.

(d) If ownership of NOTM stock is claimed, the date of acquisition of such stock (whether before or after 1924) would be important, for if such stock was purchased after 1926, it was bought presumably with the knowledge that NOTM was part of the MOP system.

(e) Comstock must elect whether he contests the allowance claim as NOTM stockholder or pledgee, or as a MOP bondholder. His present position is inconsistent and confusing on the matter of treatment of his objections and the assets from which he claims payment.

Since NOTM stockholders, therefore, would have no legal standing, how can Comstock claimants who are MOP bondholders and only pledgees of such stock (and not owners thereof) be heard to dispute any valid claim against NOTM properties?

Appellant's appeal is not brought in good faith.

POINT IV

If the facts alleged by Comstock are found by this Court to warrant equitable redress, the Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents, are nevertheless entitled to have the benefit of the allowance of the said claim of $10,565,226.78 plus interest. Petitioner's claim or dispute is with Alleghany Corporation only.

Assuming Comstock's argument is correct, which we deny, he does not show how this honorable Court can, at this date, be expected to put him back in status quo? How can this Court be expected to now determine and to separate that part of NOTM earnings which in 1924 and 1933 were considered the subject of prudent management by MOP and that part of earnings which it is now alleged were imprudent?

Aren't MOP minority stockholders and the Convertible Bondholders also victims of any misfeasance or malfeasance in management of MOP as alleged by Comstock?

Petitioner claimed throughout the lengthy hearings before the District Court that Alleghany Corporation as principal MOP stockholder was responsible for the alleged inequities against NOTM.

Assuredly Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents herein, who purchased these bonds in the open market are free of any knowledge of wrongdoing by MOP and in no circumstances, are answerable for any irregularities or defalcations brought about by Alleghany Corporation while controlling MOP.

This honorable Court has held that the debtor's securities remain in the custody of the reorganization Court, irrespective of where the property may be located, and that the Court has full jurisdiction over all questions respecting the title to such property.

Gardner v. State of New Jersey (1947), 329 U. S. 565.

Comstock does not claim that Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents, are particeps criminis with Alleghany Corporation and hence allowance of this claim cannot be disturbed, but may be set-off or assessed against all Alleghany's security holdings in MOP since 1933.

POINT V

Comstock's objections were properly overruled as against the Convertible Bondholders Group on other grounds.

The Convertible Bondholders Group, Respondents, whose interests have been and are independent of the Alleghany Corporation, respectfully submit that there are additional grounds which require the affirmance of the orders of the District Court and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. These are:

1. Petitioner Comstock is not the proper legal party to assert said objection. He has not the legal capacity to sue in the form and style adopted by him in these appeals. Comstock does not represent the Trustee nor has he obtained a prior order of this or any lower Court permitting him to do so; nor does he legally represent any intervening group of serial 5¼% bonds; nor has he obtained the consent of the Trustee to bring or assert this claim, which by law, Comstock is obliged to do as a prerequisite. By his own admission, Comstock does not stand herein in this Court in any representative capacity. The I. C. C. denied his application to do so. Unless petitioner obtains these prerequisites, he can have no standing in this Court. Otherwise, the Courts will be constantly besieged by a multiplicity of unnecessary or vexatious suits brought either with or without cause at the instance of any one and there would never be a final determination of any issue or a final reorganization of a debtor in a Section 77 proceeding.

2. This petitioner has no legal interest in the claim he asserts. He purchased his securities in 1940, for ten cents on the dollar, years after the allowance of said claim against NOTM properties, and he has failed, therefore, to show vigilance or good faith in the prosecution of objections to said claim. Said petitioner failed to show that he sustained any damage.

3. Comstock has acquiesced in the allowance of said claim as a matter of law. Said petitioner affirmatively established before the District Court by Guy A. Thompson, the Trustee for MOP that he knew about the allowance of the MOP claim against NOTM as long ago as 1935 yet purchased the serial 5¼% bonds of the debtor in 1940, obviously for the purpose of making this belated objection. That petitioner intends to further unnecessarily delay this reorganization, see his brief, page 4, third footnote.

4. Security holders of MOP and those who became security holders of MOP after the allowance of said claim against NOTM properties have obtained as a result thereof certain vested property rights. The previous determination of the Trustee for MOP to allow said claim cannot now be upset by this creditor. To do so would be to deprive all subsequent MOP security holders of their property rights without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

5. Petitioner's version of the facts is not in accordance with the proof.

Although petitioner claims "there is remarkably little in the record which is disputed" (Petitioner's Brief, p. 2), he proceeds to give a distorted version of "MOP ownership of NOTM, 1924 to Bankruptcy" (Petitioner's Brief, pp. 5-7). It will serve no useful purpose to here review these facts herein at length.

It is clear that petitioners purposely ignore the System character of MOP's bookkeeping methods and criticize "the dividend policy imposed on NOTM" (Petitioner's Brief, pp. 7-8) and the alleged "matching of simultaneous MOP advances to NOTM and NOTM dividends to MOP" as having been "drained from Brownsville to make possible NOTM dividends to MOP" (Petitioner's Brief, pp. 9-11).

Petitioner would have every ticket office and every facility in the myriad operations of the MOP system pay to itself and only for itself in complete disregard to the welfare or necessities of the entire railroad system MOP functioning as a whole (Petitioner's Brief, pp. 24-26; pp. 28-29).

6. Petitioner's version of the law does not apply to the facts adduced before the District Court.

Petitioner considers the separate units of MOP as being the cestuis que trustent, in a fiduciary relationship with MOP management.

We do not so interpret the facts. NOTM properties owed MOP every loyalty of a fiduciary but the reverse is not true. While NOTM was and is being operated as an integral part of the MOP System, MOP was under no reciprocal duty to NOTM.

The burden of petitioner's argument is that Alleghany Corporation's management of MOP was disastrous for MOP and all its subsidiary properties (Petitioner's brief, pp. 14-16; pp. 20-23). To the extent that such was the fact, we have no objection to also charging the $10,565,226.78 claim with interest against Alleghany's securities or interest in MOP, but we respectfully submit, that said claim must be enforced as already allowed and found, viz., against the NOTM properties.

7. Petitioners admit that a portion of the $10,565,227 claim ($9,955,226.78 thereof) was validly pledged as security for loans made to MOP by the RFC and the RCC. (R. 19-21; Petitioners' Brief, p. 62; also R. 176-177; 186-187; 382-386.)

Under authorization of the I. C. C., granted after hearing, MOP pledged two notes evidencing such debt to the RFC and the RCC. The RFC and the RCC claims have been paid by the Trustee for MOP (see footnote, p. 16, supra), without objection from petitioners and the order authorizing payment by the Trustee subrogated the claims of the 5½% Convertible Bondholders to the extent of their interest (R. 1188, Ex. 335-357) to the lien of the RFC and the RCC on the pledged collateral, including the pledged portion of the intercompany claim (R. 1157 and 1165).

"The items which made up the total $10,565,226.78 were clearly specified and evidence of the validity of the debt as consideration for the notes was adduced before the Commission at an early stage of these Section 77 proceedings, and the obligation was deemed to be valid and ahead of New Orleans' (NOTM) stockholder interest in all of the accountings, computations and adjustments resulting in the plan of reorganization determined by the Commission and approved by the Court in 1940. It has also been so considered by the Commission in the plan of reorganization before the court at the time of the hearing and order now appealed from." Quoted from opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals. (R. IV, pp. 16-17.)

Obviously, if $9,955,226.78 of the $10,355,226.78 in said notes are valid, then the balance of said notes evidencing said intercompany claims for "cash advances for operation, interest payments, etc., at various times from March 1929 to February 1933, both inclusive", must also be conceded as valid. (R. IV, p. 16.)

8. The evidence adduced by petitioner failed to make out a case for legal or equitable relief before the District Court.

With the cooperation from the Trustee and the unusual patience and latitude shown, the District Court allowed petitioner unrestricted right to introduce evidence covering transactions of the principal debtor which occurred 36 years ago to wit, from 1912. The result is an unnecessarily voluminous record. Under the ancient documents rule such transactions should not now be disturbed or questioned in any way. Any oral evidence sought to be elicited thereon or any inferences of improper conduct sought to be drawn from parts of such evidence or from witnesses now dead or whose whereabouts are unknown was and is legally incompetent.

The petitioner despite the Court's indulgence failed to make out a claim by clear, competent proof.

Judgment of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals must be affirmed.

POINT VI

Taylor* v. Standard Gas Co., 306 U. S. 307, principally relied on by petitioners is clearly distinguishable and inapplicable to the case at bar.

The petitioners have strenuously urged that the decision of this Court in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307, requires reversal herein.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, however, ruled that this Court there had to deal with a situation entirely different. (R. Vol. IV, p. 27.) This Court later said concerning its decision in that case as to the subordination which it there imposed on a parent corporation's claims against the subsidiary:

> "This was based on the equities of the case • • • the history of spoliation, mismanagement, and faithless stewardship of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the detriment of the public investors."
>
> Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, P. C. 308.

"Here", to quote the United States Circuit Court of Appeals,

> "the trial court has found on substantial evidence an exactly contrary situation. The stock of the New Orleans (NOTM) has been kept intact and of recognized value through depressions which wiped out vast amounts of such securities, and on full investigation of the facts the court has found the Missouri Pacific's (MOP's) stewardship was faithful and there was no mismanagement or spoliation.
>
> We find no error in the trial court's findings against Comstock in respect to his charges of dereliction of duty by the trustee of the New Orleans (NOTM). Those charges are without merit" (R. IV, p. 27).

There are many other distinctions between the situation presented here and the Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co. case. The following are the more obvious:

In the first place, the question presented was based on a plan of reorganization under § 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. The Circuit Court of Appeals by a divided court, approved the District Court's order.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Nos. 451–454.—October Term, 1947.

Andrew W. Comstock, Petitioner, 454 v. Guy A. Thompson, Trustee of the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Company, Debtor, et al.

[June 21, 1948.]

Mr. Justice Jackson delivered the opinion of the Court.

Since 1933 the Missouri Pacific, the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Co. and a number of affiliated rail-

"Comstock's contention that the court erroneously put the burden of proving his charges on him rather than requiring the Missouri Pacific to proceed first to disprove them, is without merit. As the execution of the promissory notes was admitted and at least formal proof of all of the items of advancements making up the debt had been in the record of the Section 77 proceedings for many years before the hearing, the court required only that all the records of the transactions that were questioned be made available for the hearing so that there was the equivalent of a full disclosure by the Missouri Pacific before Comstock was required to proceed with his proof of the charges. In its findings the court stated the facts as it found them to be proven by the whole evidence. It found in detail and in effect that the Missouri Pacific had administered the affairs of the New Orleans in good faith to the advantage of that company; had made the advancements to it for proper purposes; had not caused dividends to be paid out of capital or improvidently in bad faith, and that the asserted indebtedness arose from advancement made by Missouri Pacific to New Orleans for betterments and additions and was valid and should be allowed in items specified, and that the plan of reorganization based as it was in part on recognition of the existence of the debt in question, was fair and equitable and conformable to the requirements of law regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders."

We are confronted at the outset with petitioner's delay and conduct and its effect on the duty of this Court and that below to pass on the merits of his objections. Comstock, apparently with general knowledge of the conduct he alleges to be a wrong toward the securities which he now holds, bought them at about 10 cents on the dollar nearly seven years after the alleged misconduct had ended. Thus, it was not Comstock who was a victim of any wrongdoing but those in whose hands the securities depreciated to the low point at which Comstock bought. It is apparent that Comstock bought a grievance to exploit and to reap the advantage of its rectification. Those who realised the loss through sales to Comstock could, in no event, be indemnified in this proceeding. From every viewpoint, the delay in asserting these claims is unusual. The District Court found it also prejudicial due to the death of six named witnesses and participants, among others, whose testimony would be important. While it considered the objections barred by laches, it nonetheless adjudged their merits.

We think that, in the reorganization proceeding, the courts may entertain on their merits objections to a plan even if made by one who might be barred from asserting a cause of action in his own behalf, if the subject-matter of the objections is such that it goes beyond the objector's individual interests and affects the fairness and equity of the plan. In view of the amount and position of the claim involved, we do not disagree with the Court of Appeals that such was the case here.

It also is true, as the court below indicates, that this objector made no effort to exhaust or to avail himself of administrative remedies in support of his objection. Neither the objection nor the evidentiary support for it were laid before the Interstate Commerce Commission in its hearings on successive plans of reorganization. The requirement that the Commission "hold public hearings, at which opportunity shall be given to any interested party to be heard and following which the Commission shall render a report" to the court is not provided without a purpose and is not to be ignored by persons with claims or objections to be heard. This issue involved matters with which the Commission and its staff are especially

In the case at bar, there is no approved plan of reorganization. There was unanimous affirmance of the District Court's order.

Secondly, Standard Gas & Electric Co. then had investments in various utility properties but had never been interested in oil. (The Deep Rock Oil Corp.)

In the case at bar NOTM is a vital part of MOP's railroad system.

In the next place, petitioner has not established that a fiduciary relationship exists between MOP and its creditor Comstock. There was a definite fiduciary relationship in the Taylor v. Standard Gas Co. case.

The right of intervening bona fide bondholders was not there involved and the claim made fell on the wrongdoers. Petitioners, by their inaction after knowledge of alleged wrongdoing involved the rights of innocent creditors and this situation has no counterpart in the case cited by petitioners.

In the case at bar no MOP creditor (except, possibly Alleghany Corp'n) has benefited from the alleged wrongdoing. MOP has been insolvent since 1933. Taylor was not suing as a creditor of Standard but as a minority dissenting stockholder. Comstock is not even a bondholder in due course.

Particularly Convertible Bondholders Group, respondents and other security holders who appear in these proceedings independently of Alleghany Corporation and who were not identified with its management or operation of MOP from 1924 to 1933 and who purchased MOP securities in good faith and for value, surely are guilty of no wrongdoing.

The judgment and decrees of the courts below must be affirmed.

CONCLUSION

The appeals should be dismissed and judgment and orders appealed from should be affirmed.

PETITION FOR LEAVE TO FILE BRIEF AS AMICUS CURIAE.

To the Supreme Court of the United States:

Now come Mord M. Bogie, Avery Brundage, Leo J. Sheridan, De Lancey C. Smith and Paul E. Kling, as a Protective Committee for the Holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company 5½% Secured Serial Gold Bonds, (hereinafter called the "Committee") and respectfully request that they be permitted to file their brief in this cause as amicus curiae. In support of their request the Committee shows:

The Committee is acting under and pursuant to an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission dated October 31, 1947, which provided, in part, that "Mord Bogie, Avery Brundage, Leo J. Sheridan and Paul E. Kling, as a protective committee for holders of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company 5½% secured serial gold bonds, are hereby authorized, pursuant to section 77(p) of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, 11 U. S. Code, sec. 205, to solicit from holders of such bonds their authorizations for the committee to act for and represent them, without deposit of the bonds, in accordance with the provisions of the authorization described in the report, in connection with the consummation of a plan of reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, debtor, in proceedings No. 6935 for reorganization under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act now pending in the District Court of the United States, Eastern Division, Eastern Judicial District of Missouri, or in any receivership proceeding against the debtor which may follow such pending proceeding but precede consummation of a reorganization of the debtor, or in any matters relating thereto now pending or hereafter instituted, and to use, employ, or act under or pursuant to such authorizations, as the representatives of such holders, in such proceedings."

Mr. De Lancey C. Smith recently has been elected a member of the Committee, and has accepted such election, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission pursuant to petition for approval now pending.

The Committee has solicited and is now soliciting authorizations to represent holders of said 5½% Serial Bonds, and has filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and the District Court, Eastern Division, Eastern District of Missouri, petitions for leave to intervene in the reorganization proceedings of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and affiliated debtors.

The Committee presently represents over $1,000,000 principal amount of said 5½% Serial Bonds and expects ultimately to represent a substantially greater principal amount thereof. The interests of all such bondholders are identical.

The Committee does not desire to file a long brief duplicating those already on file, but believes that a short brief placing particular emphasis on one line of thought will be helpful to the Court in reaching its decision herein.

Wherefore, the undersigned Committee requests leave to file a brief herein as amicus curiae.

Respectfully submitted, road corporations have been in reorganization under the Bankruptcy Act, 11 U. S. C. § 205. A second plan of reorganization, approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, was before the District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri. Comstock then, in 1944, made objection to allowance of a claim of approximately 10 million dollars by the Missouri Pacific, one debtor corporation, against another, the New Orleans, which, during the 10 years of proceedings, had been unchallenged. The issues raised by his objection were severed from other problems of reorganization which do not concern us here. After full hearing the District Court made findings and wrote an opinion, In re Missouri Pacific R. Co., 64 F. Supp. 64, overruling his objections. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit affirmed. Comstock v. Group of Institutional Investors, 163 F. 2d 350.

The issues of fact, contested in a long hearing, are not before us for review. Petitioner assured us, in support of the petition for certiorari here, that "there is no factual controversy before this Court" and "we assume the findings of the District Court. Our challenge is directed only to the legal import of these unchallenged facts."

Much of petitioner's argument seems to depart from these assumptions and to invite us to reach conclusions from the voluminous record in the case, contrary to those reached by the two courts below. This we cannot do. A seasoned and wise rule of this Court makes concurrent findings of two courts below final here in the absence of very exceptional showing of error. Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1; Brainard v. Buck, 184 U. S. 99; First National Bank v. Littlefield, 226 U. S. 110; Baker v. Schofield, 243 U. S. 114; Second Russian Insurance Co. v. Miller, 268 U. S. 552; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Brotherhood of Clerks, 281 U. S. 548; Page v. Arkansas Natural Gas Corp., 286 U. S. 269; Pick v. General Motors Corp., 299 U. S. 3; Virginia R. Co. v. System Federation, 300 U. S. 515; United States v. O'Donnell, 303 U. S. 501; Anderson v.

Abbott, 321 U. S. 349; Allen v. Trust Co., 326 U. S. 630; United States v. Dickinson, 331 U. S. 745. No such error is claimed by petitioner.

Since we are concluded by such concurrent findings, we can do no better than to adopt the statement of facts made in the opinion of the Court of Appeals, on the basis of which petitioner's propositions of law are predicated and must be decided. The essential facts so recited are:

> "It appears that the Missouri Pacific acquired the controlling interest in the capital stock of the New Orleans at the end of 1924 and at times relevant here owned from 58 to 93 percent of the total $15,000,000 par value of such stock, and from January 1925, until simultaneous commencement of reorganization proceedings in bankruptcy of both corporations in 1933, it managed the affairs of the New Orleans through Missouri Pacific officers who were given corresponding positions in the New Orleans corporation. An expansion program for both companies was carried on and throughout the course of operations the Missouri Pacific made advancements for improvements and betterments to the New Orleans. Some were repaid, but in February 1933, the New Orleans filed its application with the Interstate Commerce Commission under Section 20a of the Transportation Act (49 U.S.C.A. Sec. 20a (2)), showing that it was indebted to the Missouri Pacific for an accumulation of such advances over a period of years remaining unpaid in the sum of $10,355,226.78, and that it had been requested by the Missouri Pacific to issue demand notes therefor in the amount of $9,955,226.78 to the Missouri Pacific. It had partially complied by issuing one such note for $400,000.00, and one for $2,498,500, and after hearing the Commission made its finding as required by the statute,[1] 49 U.S.C.A. Sec. 20a (2), and authorized New Orleans to issue to the Missouri Pacific a note for the remaining $7,456,726.78. So that at the time of the bankruptcy of the New Orleans on the same date as that of the Missouri Pacific the notes of the New Orleans to the Missouri Pacific in the sum of $10,355,226.78 were outstanding and unpaid. Under authorization of the Interstate Commerce Commission, granted after hearing, the Missouri Pacific had pledged two of the notes aggregating $9,955,226.78 as security for loans made to it by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. An additional pledge was made to Railroad Finance Corporation.

"After appointment of the trustees for the railroads and on August 29, 1938, an officer of the Missouri Pacific filed claim for that company against the New Orleans for the amount of the notes, plus an item of advancement of $210,000.00, aggregating the amount of $10,565,226.78, describing the consideration as 'cash advances for operation, interest payments, etc., at various times from March 1929 to February 1933, both inclusive.' The items which made up the total $10,565,226.78 were clearly specified and evidence of the validity of the debt as consideration for the notes was adduced before the Commission at an early stage of these Section 77 proceedings, and the obligation was deemed to be valid and ahead of New Orleans' stockholder interest in all of the accountings, computations and adjustments resulting in the plan of reorganization determined by the Commission and approved by the court in 1940. It has also been so considered by the Commission in the plan of reorganization before the court at the time of the hearing and order now appealed from.

"It appears that in 1926 the Missouri Pacific issued and caused to be sold to the public its 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds in the amount of $13,156,000, secured by the pledge of $1000.00 par value of New Orleans capital stock for each $1000.00 principal amount of outstanding bonds, so that the officers who were put in charge of the affairs of both corporations came under fiduciary obligation to the creditors and the stockholders of each company to handle honestly the affairs of each.

"Comstock owns some of said 5¼% Secured Serial Bonds so secured by the pledge of the New Orleans capital stock, and by virtue of his ownership of said bonds he has an interest as a creditor of the Missouri Pacific in the payment of his bonds and the interest thereon, and also an interest in the capital stock of the New Orleans pledged to secure the bonds. On November 22, 1944, he filed his objections to the plan of reorganization and plea for equitable treatment on the basis of those interests. Certain of his objections contained charges of mismanagement of the Missouri Pacific to his detriment as a bondholding creditor of that corporation, but the separately numbered objections here involved relate to wrongs which he alleges were done by the Missouri Pacific to the New Orleans to the detriment of his interest in the pledged stock of that company.

'By his objections 'Numbered 19 and related objections,' Comstock charged that during the period when the affairs of the New Orleans were controlled by its majority stockholder the Missouri Pacific, between the end of 1924 and the bankruptcy in 1933, the Missouri Pacific management caused the New Orleans to pay dividends illegally out of capital and to improvidently declare and pay dividends unjustified by the business and condition of the New Orleans; improperly loaned money to it for the purpose of enabling it to pay dividends; involved it (the New Orleans) in expansion and improperly made advancements to it and caused it to assume indebtedness growing out of expansion; caused it to be operated with unfair advantage to the Missouri Pacific and loss to itself, and generally mismanaged it and committed spoliation and waste of its property and interests to the financial detriment of the New Orleans and for the benefit of the Missouri Pacific. There is also a charge that the trustee for the New Orleans, who is also trustee for the Missouri Pacific, failed to perform his duties as trustee for the New Orleans, to the detriment of New Orleans stock interest. Although an Exhibit 'A' attached to the objections assumed to set forth details, the charges remained sweeping and general in form with few exceptions.[2]

"The objector prayed that the Missouri Pacific claim for $10,565,227 and interest against the New Orleans be disallowed; that it be determined that the New Orleans was not indebted to the Missouri Pacific, and in the alternative, that all claims of the Missouri Pacific against the New Orleans be subordinated in the reorganization to the New Orleans capital stock interest.

"The allegations of breaches of obligations on the part of the Missouri Pacific were traversed in pleadings of other parties in interest. The main burden of producing witnesses and evidence to justify the handling of the affairs of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific during the period of Missouri Pacific management and to prove the $10,565,226.78 indebtedness of the New Orleans to the Missouri Pacific was carried at the trial by the Group of Institutional Investors Holding First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and The Protective Committee for the holders of General Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. They recognized fully the fiduciary nature of the obligation which law and equity attributed to the Missouri Pacific by reason of its pledge of the capital stock of the New Orleans to secure the 5¼% Serial Bonds while the New Orleans was under its management as majority stockholder, and that by the terms of the pledge the Missouri Pacific was entitled to receive itself only the dividends (lawfully and properly declared) of the New Orleans stock and was required as to the corpus of said stock to honestly manage the corporate affairs and to exercise honest judgment and good faith to preserve the stock interest inviolate.

"Comstock did not question or deny that the New Orleans had executed its negotiable promissory notes to the Missouri Pacific which were outstanding at the time of the trial drawing interest, and conceded that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as an innocent holder thereof in pledge could hold the New Orleans for their face amount and interest, but his contention was that by reason of its wrong-doings the Missouri Pacific either had no valid claim or that such claim as it had should be subordinated to the capital stock interest. He did not assert or tender evidence to show that any specified individuals working for the New Orleans or the Missouri Pacific, or both companies, had misappropriated or wrongfully diverted to their own use any of the assets or business of the New Orleans to the detriment of stockholders. He tendered no evidence to show that the plan of Missouri Pacific system expansion, including expansion and improvement of the New Orleans, and for the financing thereof, adopted and carried through by the Missouri Pacific, was in itself fraudulent or reckless and improvident. As to the New Orleans, the plan contemplated that the Missouri Pacific would advance money to the New Orleans for betterments and additions on short time loans, and that at intervals when the indebtedness became of sufficient size bond issues would be sold to refund it. The worst of the depression came coincidentally with the time when such refunding was expected to be made and made the refunding impossible.

"From testimony frankly given by himself, and on the face of the record, it clearly appears as to the case Comstock presented to the court on the objections herein involved that after the report of the Senate subcommittee which criticized the Missouri Pacific management of the New Orleans, and in 1940, Comstock bought a few of the 5¼% Serial bonds at about 10 cents on the dollar and then employed an accountant to make studies of the accounts, records and reports of Missouri Pacific management of the New Orleans and based his charges on the accountant's studies. He tendered no extraneous or newly discovered evidence. As the period of Missouri Pacific alleged mismanagement of the New Orleans (1925 to 1933) had expired many years before Comstock acquired his interest in New Orleans stock, a court would not ordinarily have felt obliged at his instance to try the merits of charges of mismanagement committed in long past years and claimed to be provable by contemporaneous records which were at all times accessible. It would not sanction such buying into a lawsuit.

"But here the plan for Missouri Pacific reorganization was before the court to be approved or disapproved, according to whether it was or was not fair and equitable. The proposed plan included as one of its essential postulates that the New Orleans was indebted to the Missouri Pacific in a sum which with accumulated interest amounts to around eighteen million dollars. No judicial determination upon the validity of the debt had ever been made in any adversary proceedings throughout the thirteen year course of the Section 77 proceedings and bonds like Comstock's are outstanding in many hands aggregating some $13,500,000. Although the court was of opinion that not only Comstock but all other owners of the Missouri Pacific 5¼% Serial Bonds secured by New Orleans stock who had at all times trustee representation and in great part representation by counsel, had been guilty of laches in failing for so many years to assert and present proof and try out before the Commission and the court the alleged invalidity of the debt almost entirely evidenced by the notes,[3] it concluded that judicial adjudication should be made as to the debt and that the court should, and therefore it did, hear the evidence covering the whole period of management of the New Orleans by the Missouri Pacific, and it tried out the whole case and all the charges presented by Comstock on the merits.

"The expert accountant called by Comstock produced a large number of exhibits which he had prepared from the books, records and reports of the individual companies and explained in connection with them the inferences he had drawn from his studies and expressed his opinions tending to support the Comstock charges. He centered his attack largely on that part of the accounting system of the railroads through which the New Orleans and its fourteen subsidiary railroads had been treated as a unit for financing purposes and the financial condition indicated by consolidated balance sheets. By disregarding the system character of all the Gulf Coast Lines held under New Orleans ownership he inferred a much less favorable financial position for the New Orleans than was shown by its consolidated balance sheets. He had no personal knowledge of the railroad operations or transactions covered by his testimony.

"The Group of Institutional Investors Holding First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of Missouri Pacific and The Protective Committee for the holders of General Mortgage bonds of Missouri Pacific to sustain the burden of Missouri Pacific defense called as their witnesses on the trial the railroad men who had engaged, each in his own department, in all of the transactions and railroad operations and the records made thereof throughout the period involved, and they testified of and concerning matters with which they were intimately familiar. Also Mr. William Wyer, who after his graduation from Yale and Massachusetts Institute of Technology served in railroad construction and operation for the government during World War I, and in U. S. Railroad Administration during Federal Control, and afterwards in various positions in the Division of Operations, Division of Accounts and Assistant to the Comptroller. From 1920 to 1927 he occupied important positions with the Southern Railroad Company and the Denver Rio Grande and Western, the latter being 'fifty percent. owned by the Missouri Pacific so it was considered a part of the Missouri Pacific System.' In February, 1929, he became Assistant to the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Missouri Pacific who was also Chairman of the Board of the New Orleans, and later in the year he became Secretary and Treasurer of the Missouri Pacific and an officer on all the subsidiaries, except as to the Texas and Pacific he was such officers for only six years. He handled a great many of the financial matters involving the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans under the supervision of the Chairman of the Board of the Missouri Pacific. In 1933 he started studies which have provided substantially all of the studies upon which the various plans of reorganization have been based. He was at the time of testifying the chief executive officer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. He was thoroughly informed and conversant with the Missouri Pacific policies of system operation and of expanding and financing, and with the railroad operations and the financial transactions upon which the validity or invalidity of the debt in controversy depend, as well as the accounting and reporting system maintained for disclosing and reporting them. He had an important part in what was done, was in touch with substantially the whole course of the management of the New Orleans under attack and he gave his extensive testimony upon direct and cross examination with obvious understanding of its relevancy and importance. His testimony, supported by many accounting and summarizing exhibits, was to the effect that Missouri Pacific management of New Orleans was honest and was beneficial to New Orleans.

"Judge Moore, presiding at the trial, has exercised the jurisdiction in these Section 77 proceedings through most of their course, and his questions, comments and directions reflect his close attention to and understanding of the testimony and its application through the trial. His written opinion is reported 64 F. Supp. 64. His findings of facts and conclusions of law were drawn with care and thoroughness, and appear to us to be responsive to all the issues presented by the objections here involved and the evidence that was adduced, and the appellant has not called our attention to any refusal on the part of the court to make findings in respect to any other issues claimed to have been presented. The vast extent of the railroad business carried on by the Missouri Pacific and the New Orleans during the long past period of alleged mismanagement and the intricate corporate structures of the railroads, inevitably presented most serious problems in the attempts of accountants to picture what their course of operations and financial transactions had been. The New Orleans had in some respects the character of a holding company in that it operated itself only a small fraction (around 11%) of the railroad mileage of its railroad system but owned the stocks and securities of some fourteen other railroad companies and was the only one of the group of railroads comprising its railroad system which had any relatively substantial amount of securities outstanding in the hands of the public. For financing purposes the individual roads in the group were dependent upon the New Orleans which, acting for the group in respect to financing, presented the necessary unitary functioning principal. There was fundamental controversy as to what inferences should be drawn from the available accounts to establish the true financial condition of the New Orleans at different times within the period and to establish and present the financial results of the railroad operations that were carried on. Mr. Wyer testified that the identified consolidated balance sheets compiled under direction of the Missouri Pacific and New Orleans officers were the summarizing records which were submitted to the Board of Directors to keep its members informed in the discharge of their duties. It was through the use of the consolidated balance sheets that the New Orleans and its affiliated railroads were treated as a unit in the financing of the companies throughout Missouri Pacific management. Though he could not say what went on in the minds of others, his testimony leaves no room to doubt that the Board members well understood how the computations were arrived at and that the members relied on them in the usual course of the financing of the business. He was intimately familiar with all phases of the accounting in which they culminate, and although he admitted that perfection was never attained, his testimony together with that of the railroad officers and employees who did the work, fully justified the trial court's reliance upon the consolidated balance sheets in his findings and conclusions. But the disputes and conflicts of testimony in respect to the accounts and the inferences to be drawn were all issues of fact. The court recognized fully all the burden of obligation imposed by law upon the Missouri Pacific in respect to its management of the New Orleans and that if the Comstock charges could be proved and the indebtedness in issue was invalid or ought not in equity to be enforced against New Orleans stockholders, the then pending plan of reorganization could not stand.

qualified to deal. It has had no opportunity to express a view on this issue, which was allowed to go by default before it, and the courts do not have the benefit of the Commission's informed judgment on the matter involved. To by-pass the Commission and make the court the original forum for such contentions is not to be encouraged.

But the court did not refuse to hear the objections on their merits. In view of the functions cast upon the court in such cases, we cannot say that it may not, in its discretion, consider objections on their merits even though they have not been presented to the Commission. Some circumstances might be disclosed to indicate a remand for their consideration by the Commission. They might indicate that the courts would withhold approval, not out of deference to the objecting parties' rights but because of the broad responsibility laid upon the court for the equity and fairness of the plan as a whole. The court will be diligent to protect itself and the public from approval of unfair plans, even by default, and may take for its own use evidence no party would have a right to force upon it. The court below evidently considered the circumstances of this case to warrant such inquiry into the merits, and we do not inquire whether the discretion was wisely exercised.

The case on the merits presents, as to several different and complicated transactions, a single question of law. It is said that our decision in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., 306 U. S. 307, requires that the claim of Missouri Pacific against the New Orleans be disallowed and petitioner's objections sustained. In that case this Court reformulated for application to reorganization cases a wholesome equity doctrine to the effect that a claim against a debtor subsidiary be disallowed or at least subordinated when the claimant corporation has wholly dominated and controlled the subsidiary and in the transactions creating the debt has breached its fiduciary duty and acted both to its own benefit and to the detriment of the debtor. As we later said of the decision, "This was based on the equities of the case—the history of spoliation, mismanagement and faithless stewardship of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the detriment of the public investors." Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 308.

Petitioner asks us to declare the same result in this case despite explicit and unchallenged findings that, in its dealings with New Orleans during the period involved, "the Missouri Pacific acted in good faith and with due regard to its obligations, legal and equitable, to the New Orleans and its security holders," that the "effect of the control by the Missouri Pacific of the Gulf Coast Lines was beneficial and advantageous to the New Orleans and the holders and pledges of its securities," that all dividends in question "were paid either out of the earned surplus of the New Orleans available for dividends or out of the net income of the New Orleans after payment of all prior charges against income," and that the subordination of the claim as asked "would unjustly enrich the holders of the capital stock of the New Orleans and the holders of the Secured Serial Bonds," as well as other more detailed findings to the same effect.

In the case before us there was domination of the subsidiary, a relationship between corporations which the law has not seen fit to proscribe. By the application of long-standing principles of equity this Court fashioned the rule in the Taylor case to prevent a fiduciary in such a position from enriching itself by breach of its trust. It is not mere existence of an opportunity to do wrong that brings the rule into play; it is the unconscionable use of the opportunity afforded by the domination to advantage itself at the injury of the subsidiary that deprives the wrongdoer of the fruits of his wrong. On the findings in this case, the claim of Missouri Pacific was the outgrowth of complicated but legitimate good faith business transactions, neither in design or effect producing injury to the petitioner or the interests for which he speaks.

Special emphasis has been placed on the fact that under control of the Missouri Pacific dividends were paid by the subsidiary at a time when it was borrowing money represented by this claim. It is clear from the findings that the dividends were paid out of current earnings or surplus, and not in violation of law or contract. Only in 1929 did New Orleans earn currently sufficient to pay its dividends. Nevertheless in all three years there was sufficient earned surplus legally to permit dividends. Heavy investments in improvements may require borrowings for dividends; but no law or public policy requires a corporation to finance capital additions out of earnings or to pass dividends because of low current earnings when past earnings are available for dividend purposes. These past earnings may be used to compensate the capital that produced them, and capital additions may be made from funds borrowed or raised by issues of capital securities, so long as the authorizations required in the case of railroads are obtained. No question is raised as to the authority to borrow.

While the contemporaneous borrowing to pay for capital additions, and payment of dividends, is not in itself illegal, it would, of course, come under the ban of the Taylor decision if it were carried out in breach of good faith for the advantage of the holding company to the detriment of the subsidiary. But the findings of good faith, fair dealing and freedom from fraud or overreaching cover the dividend policy as well as other questioned transactions. Such being the facts, the allowance of the claim is not error of law.

The findings here do not stop with holding that the questioned transactions were intended to and did benefit the system as a whole. An over-all benefit to the system might be attained at the injury of one of its units and the security holders of that unit. But here the finding of good faith and of benefit applies to the New Orleans and its security holders as well as to the system generally. The finding is unequivocal that the control of Missouri Pacific not only "was in good faith and with due regard to its obligations, legal and equitable, to the New Orleans and its security holders," but also that its control of the Gulf Coast Lines "was beneficial and advantageous to the New Orleans and the holders and pledgees of its securities." The criticised transactions are thus not only exonerated of evil or illegal intent but are also established as beneficial rather than injurious to the interests which now challenge them. The findings to that effect are entitled to special weight where, as here, they are based on the District Judge's complete familiarity with the case. Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Denver & Rio Grande Western R. Co., 328 U. S. 495, 533. Affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, they are, under the rule concerning concurrent findings, and on the basis of our grant of certiorari, conclusive in this Court.

Disallowance of petitioner's objections on such findings was not error of law. In this view of the case we need not consider questions tendered as to validity or effect of the issuance of notes or of their pledge.

The judgment below in No. 451 is Affirmed.

Petitions in Nos. 452, 453 and 454 were addressed to dismissals by the Court of Appeals from the same order as No. 451 but taken in different names. The petitions were filed as safeguards against procedural objections to review of the order. The writs in these cases are dismissed.

On Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

[June 21, 1948.]

Mr. Justice Murphy, with whom Mr. Justice Black, Mr. Justice Douglas and Mr. Justice Rutledge agree, dissenting.

The rule that makes concurrent findings of fact by two courts below binding on us in the absence of some very exceptional error is a wise one. But it is not a rule to be applied in a blind manner simply because a case involves a complex factual situation. In my view, there is an exceptional error involved in the conclusions reached by the District Court and affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, an error that is apparent on the face of the District Court's findings. And since this error is not sufficiently illuminated by the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, as quoted by the majority in this Court, I deem it essential to make an independent statement of the relevant facts as found by the District Court.

This case grows out of the joint reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company and affiliated railroad corporations under § 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, 11 U. S. C. § 205. It involves a claim of $10,565,226.78 filed by the Missouri Pacific against one of its subsidiaries which was also undergoing reorganization and the application to that claim of the so-called Deep Rock doctrine enunciated in Taylor v. Standard Gas Co., 306 U. S. 307.

It is unnecessary for present purposes to detail the long, complicated and still unfinished proceedings which have marked the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific railway system. The instant proceeding is directly related to a revised plan of reorganization approved in 1944 by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The District Court below then heard objections to the plan by various parties in interest. Included among them was the petitioner Comstock. He stated that he owned $80,000 principal amount of the 5¼% Secured Serial Gold Bonds of the Missouri Pacific. His objections were filed on behalf of himself, of fourteen other public investors holding in excess of $900,000 additional principal amount of these bonds, and of all other owners and holders of the bonds. A committee of these bondholders, representing an additional $315,000 principal amount of the bonds, also joined in Comstock's objections. Of the total principal amount of these bonds publicly outstanding, about 11½% were specifically represented by Comstock.

Comstock's objection No. 19, which is our sole concern, related to the validity and priority of a $10,565,226.78 claim filed by the Missouri Pacific (hereinafter called MOP) against its subsidiary New Orleans, Texas and Mexico Railway Co. (hereinafter called NOTM) in the joint reorganization proceedings. It appears that MOP had acquired the controlling interest in NOTM's common stock in 1924 and had completely dominated and controlled NOTM until the reorganization proceedings began in 1933. MOP's claim against NOTM was based upon "cash advances for operation, interest payments, etc., at various times from March, 1929, to February, 1933, both inclusive." Most of the NOTM stock which MOP held was pledged as security for the class of MOP 5¼% secured bonds which Comstock owned, the pledge constituting 82% of the outstanding shares of NOTM's sole class of stock. MOP sought to put its claim against NOTM ahead of the claims of the holders of these MOP bonds who looked to the NOTM common stock for security. The revised plan of reorganization gave effect to MOP's desire in this respect.

A separate hearing was held by the District Court on Comstock's objection No. 19. After carefully considering the voluminous and complicated evidence adduced at this hearing, the court entered a separate order overruling the objection and holding that the $10,565,226.78 claim should be allowed in full; with interest, this claim now aggregates more than $18,000,000. The court further held that this claim, so allowed, was entitled to priority over the claims of the public investors holding MOP 5¼% secured bonds. In addition, the court felt that objection No. 19 was not timely and should be barred from consideration under the doctrine of laches.

At the same time, the District Court entered another order overruling the other objections raised by Comstock and the other parties in interest and approving the revised plan of reorganization. An opinion was then filed detailing the reasons for the two orders. In re Missouri Pacific R. Co., 64 F. Supp. 64. Comstock appealed from the order dismissing his objection No. 19.[1] The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the District Court's action on this objection, holding that the findings of that court were not clearly erroneous. Comstock v. Group of Institutional Investors, 163 F. 2d 350. At the suggestion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Circuit Court of Appeals then remanded the revised plan of reorganization back to the Commission for reconsideration and revision. Wright v. Group of Institutional Investors, 163 F. 2d 1022. The Commission has not yet disposed of the matter.

I.

For somewhat different reasons than those advanced by the Court, I agree that a judicial consideration of Comstock's objection No. 19 is not now precluded by the doctrine of laches.

The joint reorganization proceedings commenced in 1933. Comstock did not purchase any of the MOP 5¼%

[1] The leading party opposing Comstock on this appeal was the Group of Institutional Investors, holding first and refunding mortgage bonds of MOP. This group represented less than 10% of such bonds and admitted that it had "no financial interest in the controversy revolving about" the MOP claim, its only interest being to expedite a reorganization plan then under consideration. But this group offered the only evidence in the District Court in support of the MOP claim. Another party was the NOTM mortgage and income bondholders committee, which also admitted it had no direct interest in the MOP claim litigation. Other parties included MOP, the MOP common and preferred stockholders committees, the MOP trustee, Alleghany Corporation, and certain groups of creditors and indenture trustees. These parties are now respondents before us.

secured bonds until 1940, soon after a Senate subcommittee investigating railroads issued a report criticizing the MOP management of NOTM. S. Rep. No. 25, Part 9, 76th Cong., 3d Sess. He then bought some of the bonds at about 10 cents on the dollar and employed an accountant to study the relationships between MOP and NOTM prior to 1933. Not until 1943 did Comstock suggest that there might have been some irregularities on the part of MOP. And not until November, 1944, when he filed his objection No. 19 to the revised plan of reorganization, did he really press his allegations.

Prior to Comstock's objection, more than a decade of the reorganization process had produced no charge or revelation of impropriety as to MOP's $10,565,226.78 claim against NOTM. Numerous investigations and hearings had been held during that long period concerning the pre-reorganization administration of the affairs of MOP and its subsidiaries. The public holders of the MOP 5¼% secured bonds and other creditors had ample opportunity to question the allowance of the claim. But no charges were made until after Comstock purchased his bonds and conducted his own investigation. Many of the events to which objection No. 19 relates took place more than twenty years ago; and some of the persons who had personal knowledge of those events and who might have been able to testify in regard thereto are now dead.

I do not believe, however, that the doctrine of laches is properly applicable to the facts of this case. The District Court had before it a revised plan of reorganization of MOP and its subsidiaries, a plan which recognized that NOTM was indebted to MOP and which permitted MOP to collect that debt without subordination to other creditors. That court was duty bound to test this portion of the plan by the fair and equitable rule and to approve it only if the rule was found to be satisfied. American Ins. Co. v. Avon Park, 311 U. S. 138, 145–146. The court's duty was nonetheless existent because an attack on the MOP claim came late in the day. Comstock's objection served only to emphasize the circumstances surrounding this indebtedness and to give the court an opportunity to inquire into the matter more fully than it might otherwise have done. Moreover, the fact that this objection had not previously been raised and adjudicated in the § 77 proceedings added to the appropriateness of a judicial determination of the validity of the debt at this juncture. Only by examining the matter now could the court be certain whether the treatment accorded the debt by the reorganization plan was fair and equitable.

The motives which led Comstock to acquire his bond holdings and to raise his objection No. 19 are not pertinent to the performance of the District Court's duty of testing the fairness of the reorganization plan. Nor is it decisive under these circumstances that the objection might have been raised earlier by Comstock or some other bondholder. It is enough that the matter was presented in an appropriate fashion at a time when the court was compelled to pass judgment upon the reorganization plan and at a time when no prejudicial change in the position of other parties had yet occurred.

In this connection, it is noteworthy that the Interstate Commerce Commission at an early stage in the § 77 proceedings held that the validity of the MOP claim is a matter "for litigation in the Courts." Thus Comstock would likely have been unsuccessful had he attempted to secure a determination of his objection by the Commission before going to court. The Court today, however, expressly holds that the Deep Rock issues raised by Comstock involve matters over which the Commission has jurisdiction and with which it is especially qualified to deal. See Schwabacher v. United States, 334

U. S. —. On this phase of the case, I am in agreement with the Court. The Commission should determine the applicability of the Deep Rock doctrine to railroad reorgazination plans which it formulates. But since the Commission had previously refused to adjudicate the merits of the MOP claim and since Comstock's objection has been thoroughly aired in the District Court, it is inappropriate to remand the case now to the Commission for an expression of its views.

Despite the claimed difficulties due to the age of the pertinent events and the death of some of the witnesses, the District Court was able to give a comprehensive treatment to Comstock's objection and to render an informed judgment on the fairness of MOP's claim against NOTM. Many of the issues revolved about written evidence and statistics. And the court was able to draw upon its intimate knowledge of the MOP-NOTM relationships, knowledge gained from long association with the reorganization proceedings. Hence the court could and did perform fully its function as to that portion of the revised reorganization plan with which objection No. 19 was concerned.

In this situation, the desirability and necessity of determining the fairness and equitableness of MOP's claim far outweigh any possible inconvenience caused by the late presentation of the matter.

II.

In Taylor v. Standard Gas Co., supra, this Court established the principle that where a parent corporation has not only dominated but has mismanaged a subsidiary corporation, which is presently in bankruptcy or reorganization, and where the parent has a claim which is intimately related to the mismanagement, a court may refuse to permit the parent to assert the claim as a creditor except in subordination to the claims of the subsidiary's other creditors and preferred stockholders. This principle, which has become known as the Deep Rock doctrine, is equitable in nature. As explained in Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 308, the doctrine was applied in the Taylor case on the basis of "the equities of the case—the history of spoliation, mismanagement, and faithless stewardship of the affairs of the subsidiary by Standard to the detriment of the public investors."

The fulcrum of Comstock's objection No. 19 is the Deep Rock doctrine. The argument is that the items constituting the $10,565,276.78 claim filed by MOP against NOTM are impregnated with MOP's alleged mismanagement of NOTM and that the claim should therefore be subordinated to the claim of the public investors in the MOP 5¼% secured bonds, who are secured by MOP's pledge of the NOTM common stock.

It is no answer to Comstock's claim that the District Court found that the transactions giving rise to the MOP claim were carried out in good faith. The equities which form the Deep Rock doctrine relate not alone to matters of bad faith. They are also concerned with the essential fairness and propriety of transactions from an objective standpoint. Pepper v. Litton, supra, 306. Like negligence, inequity may be present where there is the utmost subjective good faith. If there is mismanagement and if there is undue harm to the creditors and preferred stockholders of the subsidiary, the Deep Rock doctrine dictates subordination of the parent's claim. And if there be good faith on the part of the parent's officers, it hardly justifies ignoring the injury to the subsidiary's creditors and stockholders. Equity looks in all directions. Only in that way can the various interests in the corporate community be adequately protected.

Moreover, the issues raised by Comstock are not resolved by the District Court's finding that operational benefits accrued to NOTM and its subsidiaries by virtue of the transactions underlying MOP's claim. These transactions were undoubtedly tied in with the expansion program which MOP was undertaking during this period. But a breach of fiduciary obligations is not to be condoned by the presence of accompanying benefits where the subsidiary's assets are depleted to the injury of the stockholders and creditors of the subsidiary.

Nor does the fact that MOP, the parent, is insolvent bar an application of the Deep Rock doctrine to the facts of this case. The insolvency of the parent and the consequent effect of subordination upon the parent's innocent creditors are certainly factors to be considered. See Consolidated Rock Co. v. Dubois, 312 U. S. 510, 524; Prudence Corp. v. Geist, 316 U. S. 89, 97. But they are not necessarily decisive in all cases. The equities of a particular situation may turn upon something more than the solvency or insolvency of the parent. It may well be that a balancing of competing equities reveals that it is unjust to permit the advantages arising from the parent's breach of fiduciary duties to adhere to the benefit of the innocent creditors of the insolvent parent. Some other innocent parties may have an overriding interest which justifies subordination of the claim. Or the claim itself may be so tainted with inequity and unenforceability as to require subordination regardless of the parent's insolvency. And so the Deep Rock doctrine is as broad and as narrow as the equities in each case.

In this instance, I believe that the public holders of the MOP 5¼% secured bonds have a sufficiently direct and overriding interest in the financial well-being of NOTM to justify subordinating the MOP claim should it appear that this claim is intimately associated with a breach of MOP's fiduciary duties. MOP secured these bonds with a pledge of the NOTM common stock and expressly undertook not to impeach the pledge. Any wrongful conduct by MOP which diminished the size of NOTM assets would impair the value of the NOTM stock. Subordination of the claim would thus tend to make the NOTM stock more valuable and to make possible a realization of MOP's express pledge to its bondholders. True, creditors of MOP other than the bondholders would be unable to benefit from whatever could be collected on the claim. But they were not the recipients of a pledge of NOTM stock and they lacked the immediate interest that the bondholders had in a proper performance of MOP's fiduciary duties. The indirect loss they would suffer by subordination is outweighed by the direct injury to the bondholders as a result of allowing the claim.

It is therefore essential to study the various transactions in detail to determine whether they represent the type of mismanagement by a parent which leads to subordination of the resulting claim against the subsidiary.

III.

The District Court found that during the period from March, 1929, to February, 1933, MOP advanced to NOTM the net sum, after deducting principal payments, of $10,565,226.78—which constitutes the claim in issue. Included in these advances was the greater portion of the $2,795,000 loaned to NOTM between November 30, 1928, and November 27, 1931, to make additions and improvements to the railroad properties of NOTM and other related subsidiaries. But each time one of these advances was made, there was an almost simultaneous payment of a dividend by NOTM on its stock, which was largely owned by MOP. This phenomenon is demonstrated in the following table:

Dates of—		Advances by MOP to NOTM	Dividends by NOTM
Advances	Dividends		Total amount	Amount to MOP
Nov. 30, 1928	Dec. 1, 1928	$300,000	$259,576	$223,231

*It is contended by the respondents that this figure should be reduced to $2,662,436, since the first two advances in November 1928, and February 1929, were repaid and since the excess of the advances over the dividends should not be counted.

It is said, however, that MOP's action in making these loans and receiving back the dividends followed a natural pattern of a company devoted to improving the properties of its subsidiaries, there being merely a "near coincidence as to the dates of certain dividends and advances." Reference is made in this respect to the relationship which MOP bears to the various companies in the Gulf Coast Lines system (hereinafter called GCL). In 1924, MOP acquired a controlling interest in NOTM and thereby inherited complete control of the GCL system, the rail lines of which are interlaced with others in the MOP system. NOTM at all times has been primarily a holding company owning all the stocks and bonds of the fourteen subsidiary companies constituting the GCL group, NOTM itself operating only about 11% of the total GCL mileage. Of the GCL operating companies, the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railway Co. (hereinafter called Brownsville) is the most important, operating about one-third of the GCL mileage and contributing from 61% to 84% of the group's income during the period in question. NOTM is the only one of the GCL group which has securities outstanding in the hands of the public.

According to the District Court findings, MOP's policy in advancing the $2,795,000 to NOTM was to reimburse NOTM's treasury for additions and betterments to the properties of the GCL system. NOTM acted as banker for that system. The GCL subsidiaries were not in a position from 1925 to 1930 to finance their own improvements except out of earnings and by borrowing from NOTM. Most of their freight revenues were cleared through NOTM; as these items were received by NOTM, they were credited against the obligations created by the loans from NOTM to the subsidiaries. But since the total requirements of the subsidiaries for operating expenses, dividends and improvements were in excess of the receipts, the unpaid accounts mounted. Finally MOP had to begin loaning money to NOTM to cover these accounts. It is in this way that MOP's advances are said to have been directed toward the improvement program of the GCL system.

It is vigorously denied that these MOP advances were in any way used to pay for the almost simultaneous dividends from NOTM to MOP, such a contention being termed "superficial" and contrary to "basic principles of accounting." In support of that denial, an illustration is used. Assume that NOTM receives $200,000 cash from net earnings on January 31, when it is known that this amount will be needed to pay a bill for a new freight yard for a subsidiary. NOTM also knows that on April 1 a $100,000 cash dividend to MOP will be due. Instead of borrowing to pay for the new freight yard, NOTM uses the $200,000 cash for that purpose. Then, three days prior to the dividend date, NOTM borrows $100,000 from MOP to reimburse the NOTM treasury in part for the investment in the new freight yard. This saves NOTM about two months' interest on $100,000 of the money spent for the freight yard. The fact that a $100,000 cash dividend is paid three days after the $100,000 loan is thought to be a mere coincidence, the dividend and the loan having no connection.

But in this illustration it is obvious that NOTM has insufficient cash to finance both the $200,000 freight yard and the $100,000 dividend. It has to borrow money for one purpose or the other. But to say that it here borrows $100,000 to help pay for the freight yard is unrealistic. NOTM has enough cash to pay for the freight yard and it uses the cash just for that purpose. Two months later it has the choice of (1) borrowing $100,000 and paying the dividend, or (2) not borrowing the money and not paying the dividend. It chooses the former course of action. By such action, NOTM has borrowed money to pay a dividend.

The foregoing illustration indicates what the record in this case amply demonstrates—namely, that the MOP advances found by the District Court to have been for the payment of GCL improvements were in reality advances for the payment of dividends by NOTM, dividends which for the most part went to MOP. Considered as a separate entity, NOTM rarely had enough income from the time MOP acquired control in 1924 to the start of reorganization in 1933 to pay the regular dividends; loans were essential if MOP was to continue to receive its share of these dividends.

*After deduction of $3,155,000 for that portion of the dividends on Brownsville stock held by NOTM which was unpaid in 1931.

After studying these dividends from NOTM to MOP, the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce investigating railroads (composed of Senators Wheeler and Truman) concluded as follows:

"The N. O. T. & M. itself never earned enough to pay these dividends. In none of the 6 years, 1926 through 1931, did the N. O. T. & M. earn more than $605,000 (exclusive of dividends from its subsidiary, the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico). In 3 of the 6 years, the road showed a deficit after fixed charges. For the 6-year period considered as a whole its stated net income totaled a bare $90,000 (as against dividend declarations totaling $6,300,000).

"Even the $90,000 net income figure was a considerable overstatement. Each year the N. O. T. & M. regularly included in its operating expenses a certain sum for depreciation of its equipment. Consistently, year after year, the amount charged for depreciation was inadequate. A statement from the files of the railroad itself shows that for the period 1926 through 1930 the N. O. T. & M.'s net income was overstated (through understatement of depreciation) by more than $411,000. If the railroad's depreciation had been adequately charged, it would have shown a deficit for the 6 years 1926–1931 of $321,000 after fixed charges. Yet during this period the Missouri Pacific took $5,580,000 in dividends out of the N. O. T. & M." S. Rep. No. 25, Part 9, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., pp. 2–3.

The consolidated picture of NOTM and its GCL subsidiaries was equally indicative of the lack of an ability to pay dividends to MOP without borrowing.

Care was taken, however, to avoid the appearance of borrowing from MOP to pay dividends to MOP, a practice of doubtful legality. Whenever it was found that NOTM had inadequate income to meet a prospective dividend payment, MOP officers would direct Brownsville, NOTM's principal subsidiary, to take steps to declare a dividend on its stock, all of which was held by NOTM. Usually this dividend was the precise amount by which NOTM lacked money to pay its own dividend.[2] But Brownsville invariably was unable to

[2] The method by which MOP would bring about the Brownsville declaration of dividends is shown by the following typical exchange of letters between NOTM and MOP officials:

"Houston, January 10, 1931.

"Mr. L. W. Baldwin: The net income of the NOT&M for the three months ending November 30th, 1930, reflects a deficit of $56,613.10, which is $316,188.85 short of quarterly dividend requirements of the NOT&M due December 1st, 1930.

"I am attaching hereto statement showing result of operations for the months of September, October, and November 1930.

"Following past practice, we will arrange for Mr. Cole to list for action at the next meeting of the Board of Directors of the StLB&M [Brownsville], a resolution providing that dividend be declared out of the surplus of the StLB&M in favor of the NOT&M.

"H. R. SAFFORD.
"F."

The reply to the foregoing letter follows:

"St. Louis, Mo., January 13, 1931.

"Mr. Safford: Referring to your letter of January 10th, file 482-2, with reference to declaring dividend out of the surplus of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railway Company in favor of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Company.

"It will be satisfactory to handle this in line with your letter.

"L. W. BALDWIN,
"Per C. D. P."

On June 17, 1931, Brownsville declared a dividend of $316,188.85, the precise amount of the NOTM deficit; the dividend was declared effective as of November 30, 1930, one day prior to the dividend date for NOTM's stock.

make a cash payment of its dividends to NOTM and many of its pre-1931 dividend declarations were considered collected by NOTM only at the expense of leaving unpaid Brownsville's debts to NOTM for essential supplies. These paper dividend declarations were capped in 1931 when Brownsville was ordered to declare dividends to NOTM of $4,155,090; in that year Brownsville earned but $398,000. The Bureau of Accounts of the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1936 informed NOTM that these 1931 dividends were declared at a time when NOTM was aware that Brownsville "was without funds to pay it, and even on the basis of past experience the earnings of the company, had business continued good, would not have been adequate to make the payment until some future date." This fact rendered the dividends improper under Commission rules. And while it was too late to correct the income accounts of NOTM which had already been closed, NOTM was directed to write off the unpaid portion of the 1931 dividends (some $1,400,000) through profit and loss.

This 1931 incident grew out of the fact that NOTM was operating that year at a great loss. It began that year with a profit-and-loss balance of only $709,000 and operated at a loss of $606,000. It also had to charge off $875,000 to correct its former inadequate depreciation accruals. By the end of 1931, NOTM would have shown a debit profit-and-loss balance of $772,000 or more. MOP, of course, was demanding payment of the usual $1,038,000 dividend for the year. "The problem was solved as it had been solved in previous years—by milking the Brownsville. But this time the milking would have to be thorough. . . . The solution found was to cause the Brownsville to declare an extraordinary dividend of $3,500,000—a dividend seven times the par value of the stock upon which it was declared. Other Brownsville dividends to the N. O. T. & M. brought the total for the year to $4,155,000, enough to fill up the N. O. T. M.'s profit-and-loss deficit and to enable the latter to declare a $1,038,000 dividend in favor chiefly of the Missouri Pacific." S. Rep. No. 25, Part 9, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., p. 10.

Thus the Brownsville dividend declarations gave NOTM earned surpluses on [illegible] without giving it any cash with which to pay its dividends to MOP. Dividends declared by Brownsville were entered as income to NOTM even though they were not paid. An ostensible legal basis was thereby established for a declaration of dividends to MOP. NOTM would then borrow money from MOP to pay for those dividends. This again was largely a paper transaction. The earned surplus upon which the Court today places great reliance in affirming the District Court's findings was but a figment of the MOP imagination. "The intricate accounting devices evolved by railroad and holding company officials in an attempt to legalize dividend payments unjustified by earnings resulted, both in 1930 and 1931, in the payment of N. O. T. & M. dividends out of capital, a procedure disguised in 1930 behind faulty bookkeeping and in 1931 behind an out-and-out violation of Interstate Commerce Commission accounting regulations." S. Rep. No. 25, Part 9, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., p. 14.

By advancing to NOTM $2,795,000, MOP received back $2,654,000 in dividends within a few days after the various loans, making a total net advance of $141,000. MOP's cash position was unaffected by these various transactions, the NOTM dividends merely giving it a paper profit and loss balance out of which to declare its own dividends. Hence MOP, like NOTM, was forced to borrow money; it did so from outside sources. Yet MOP now seeks to claim nearly all of the $2,795,000 plus interest, an aggregate of about $4,795,000, for engaging in these bookkeeping transactions and for extending credit to the extent of $141,000.

NOTM's fiscal affairs in this respect have certainly not "been conducted with an eye single to its own interests" within the meaning of the Deep Rock doctrine. Taylor v. Standard Gas Co., supra, 323. Nor can these transactions be said to meet the test of "inherent fairness" and the requirement of an "arm's length bargain," which are essential ingredients of that doctrine. Pepper v. Litton, supra, 306–307. Here, as in the Taylor case, dividends were declared in the face of the fact that NOTM had not the cash available to pay them and was, at the time, borrowing in large amounts from MOP. And see In re Commonwealth Light & Power Co., 141 F. 2d 734, 738. Compelling a subsidiary to pay dividends under these circumstances is the type of mismanagement by a parent which leads to the subordination of the resulting indebtedness.

IV.

Another part of the $10,565,226.78 MOP claim related to an intercompany adjustment of $1,261,009.84 made during October, 1932, at the height of the depression and shortly before the § 77 proceedings began.

The International-Great Northern Railroad Co. (hereinafter called the I-GN) was a subsidiary of NOTM, although not deemed a part of the GCL system. I-GN had advanced cash or delivered materials to ten of NOTM's GCL subsidiaries; as of October 31, 1932, these ten companies were indebted to I-GN in the sum of $1,261,009.84 on account of these transactions. On the same date, I-GN was indebted to MOP in an amount in excess of $1,261,009.84.

It was known at this time that the I-GN claims against the NOTM subsidiaries were presently uncollectible. It was also apparent that NOTM was in better financial health than I-GN. MOP, which was then in need of loans from outside sources, sought to improve its own financial condition by shifting debtors. It did this by increasing its claim against NOTM by $1,261,009.84 and by decreasing its claim against I-GN by that same figure. To make this bookkeeping shuffle possible, I-GN credited NOTM and its other subsidiaries with the payment of the $1,261,009.84 debt which those subsidiaries owed. MOP then credited I-GN with payment of a like amount, crediting it against I-GN's debt to MOP. NOTM thereby found itself obligated to pay MOP an additional $1,261,009.84. Appropriate entries were made, of course, in the journals of the affected companies.

NOTM had not previously been liable to pay this amount to MOP; nor did it receive anything of value from MOP in return for assuming the debt. Yet no valid reason is suggested why NOTM should have been forced to shoulder this obligation, thereby decreasing the assets available to its creditors and stockholders. Certainly it was not essential, as has been claimed, that NOTM acquire the debt to protect its ownership and control of its GCL subsidiaries. NOTM was invulnerable in that respect, owning all the securities of the subsidiaries, and the addition of this debt added no new protection. The contention is also made that NOTM owed a fiduciary obligation to I-GN, its subsidiary, and that it was NOTM's duty to relieve I-GN of any uncollectible items owed by other NOTM subsidiaries. The fiduciary obligation grows out of the fact that NOTM owned all the securities of its GCL subsidiaries. This contention is closely allied to the theory that NOTM and the subsidiaries are a single financial entity and that it is immaterial which company within that entity is liable for the debt. But the close relationship of NOTM and its GCL subsidiaries does not legitimatize the intercompany adjustment from an equitable point of view. In this situation, we are dealing with the rights of creditors and stockholders who are directly interested in the financial well-being of NOTM as an enterprise separate and distinct from its subsidiaries. Hence it is necessary here to recognize and give effect to the corporate distinctions between NOTM and its GCL subsidiaries.

The resulting picture is one of a bookkeeping write-up of NOTM indebtedness at a time when NOTM was on the threshold of reorganization. NOTM received nothing whatever to compensate for the increase in its debt structure. The increase served only to enable MOP, the parent, to possess what was thought to be a more favorable creditor's position. Such treatment of a subsidiary's debt structure does not square with a parent's fiduciary position. A subsidiary is entitled to be saddled by a parent only with those debts which may fairly be allocated to it, debts which grow out of legitimate business transactions. To transfer debts promiscuously from one subsidiary to another merely to augment the parent's creditor status is to inflict an injustice upon the creditors and stockholders of the subsidiary to which the debt is shifted. It is a type of mismanagement of a subsidiary which properly calls the Deep Rock doctrine into operation, causing the subordination of the parent's claim for the amount of the transferred debt.

V.

The remainder of the $10,565,226.78 claim concerned the advances made by MOP to NOTM to acquire five Texas "feeder" railroad lines at a cost of over $5,500,000.

Comstock's contention in this respect is that the acquisition of these lines was for the sole benefit of MOP and

I-GN, rather than for NOTM or the GCL system. Reference is made to a statement of the Interstate Commerce Commission that these "feeder" lines "were really acquired for the benefit of the entire MOP system. They have usually been operated at a deficit since acquisition." Missouri Pacific R. Co. Reorganization, 239 I. C. C. 7, 71. Moreover, some of the "feeder" lines are said not to connect at all with the lines of NOTM or its GCL subsidiaries. And it is thought that some of the MOP advances were used to cover operating deficits of the acquired property. Such is the basis of the objection to the recognition of MOP's claim against NOTM for the cost of the "feeder" lines.

There is nothing in the record to support an application of the Deep Rock doctrine to this aspect of MOP's claim. The use of NOTM to acquire subsidiary rail lines which have subsequently been operated at a loss does not necessarily indicate improper action by MOP; a mere mistake in business judgment may be all that was involved. And the fact that the acquisition may have been primarily for the benefit of some part of the MOP system other than the GCL companies does not necessarily mean that the acquisition was outside the legitimate scope of the functions of NOTM, a holding company in the MOP system.

Indeed, the main thrust of Comstock's objection to this segment of the MOP claim is directed toward the entire history of MOP's management of NOTM. The thought is that the relationship of the parent and the subsidiary has been so complex and so saturated with mismanagement as to warrant subordination of the entire claim of the parent without bothering to differentiate between particular transactions. See Taylor v. Standard Gas Co., supra, 323. But the record does not support such an approach to the MOP-NOTM relationship. There have been, as we have seen, two examples of mismanagement on MOP's part that warrant the application of the Deep Rock doctrine. But those situations are separable in nature from the other transactions between MOP and NOTM. And the Deep Rock doctrine is not one that operates to bar an entire parental claim if only a separable portion of it is inequitable. It is only where, as in the Taylor case, the parent-subsidiary relationship has been so complex that it is impossible to restore the subsidiary to the position it would have been in but for the parent's mismanagement that the entire claim may be subordinated without distinguishing the good transactions from the bad. Such is not the situation in this case.

VI.

From the findings of the District Court and the uncontested facts in the record, I can only conclude that of the $10,565,226.78 MOP claim, the portion of the $2,795,000 relating to dividend advances during the period in question and the $1,261,009.84 relating to the intercompany bookkeeping transaction should be subordinated to the claims of the pledgees of NOTM stock. In holding otherwise, the District Court committed an error which this Court should not overlook.
